WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Wilson's programme of legislation for adoption by Congress during the present session has been expanded to include the disposition of the Philippines.

In addition, it has developed, he favors action by Congress looking to the eventual separation of the Philippines from the United States.

Even the Chico Trout Have Joined the Progressives.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICO, May 31.—Disgusted and disappointed anglers are returning from the trout-fishing grounds on Deer Creek and the upper reaches of Big and Little Chico creeks. Millions of young grasshoppers abound in these sections and as they are too small to fly far they fall into the creeks in such numbers that the fish get food without exertion. Trout fishing is practically abandoned.

Dr. Shaw was caught in the crowd and being judged by the company she kept, was on the point of being taken into custody as a militant.

"Don't hurt the old lady, she's an American," cried someone, who recognized her.

"I am not old," she flashed back, "and I'm not afraid."

The policeman offered his arm and Dr. Shaw accepted it graciously and off they swept to a more quiet place amid the cheers of the people.

Hundreds of Men Sent Out to Give Battle With the Cicada Pest.

Fire and Poison Employed to Limit the Range of Their Destruction.

Thousands of Dollars Damage to Orchards and Ranches in California.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 31.—In response to urgent requests from Northern California counties, State Horticultural Commissioner A. J. Cook will leave Sacramento Sunday morning for a tour of investigation into the districts visited by hordes of grasshoppers during the last few days.

Commissioner Cook said tonight that no official report had been made to him of serious damage following the visitation of the pest, but he regarded the situation of sufficient importance to warrant a personal tour of Butte, Tehama, Glenn and Colusa counties, where at present the scourge is apparent. It is likely that he will issue drastic orders today looking to the destruction of the large and increasing numbers of grasshoppers in the farming and orchard sections of the valley by the most scientific methods.

The present warm weather has had the result of hatching countless numbers of the pest and considerable anxiety is felt that if means are not taken at once to check their advance southward, the damage to crops will be large.

Farmers and orchardists in some sections have already organized squads to fight the pest with fire and poison.

MILLIONS OF THEM HATCHED BY RAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OROVILLE, May 31.—Millions of grasshoppers are being hatched on Table Mountain and the Pentz section. The recent rain, followed by the hot weather is making the plague greater than ever experienced in this section before. The olive growers are covering their young trees with sacks to protect them from the insects. The insects will probably not kill the young trees, but would retard their growth a year by eating the young shoots.

Prof. Woodworth of the University of California advises the orchardists that the best method of dealing with the insects is by means of a hopper dozer, a pan sixteen feet long filled with crude oil, which catches the insects as they advance with the wind. He also recommended the use of poison.

TO CHECK THE PLAGUE WITH FIRE AND POISON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROSEVILLE, (Cal.) May 31.—Hundreds of men will start from the vicinity of Roseville tomorrow to check with fire and poison the invasion of the pest. The past two or three warm days have hatched the grasshoppers in such numbers that there is much uneasines among the farmers and orchardists. The breeding places will be attacked in an effort to exterminate the pests.

Millions of Insects Descend on Farms Near Los Molinos—Irrigation Ditch as Barrier.

Chicago Police Are Taking Deep Breaths in Order to Fathom the Eoff Yoga Cult.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Sheffield-avenue police today began an effort to find deep and secret meanings behind the seeming simplicity of the teachings of Mrs. Lillian P. Eoff, Chicago leader of the Mazda Yoga. Cabilistic and mystic signs have been found in the flat at No. 424 Fullerton avenue, raided Thursday evening.

The police believe that behind the "deep breathing" and abstemious life advocated by the gray-haired cult leader there may be something calling more loudly for prosecution than the "hot-air baths" given men under the supervision of women attendants.

"Yoga," says the doctrine of the "Mazda cult," is a sanscrit word meaning "yoke." It signifies the yoking of God and man into a perfect being.

"No one is perfect," said Mrs. Eoff. "No one knows it all. We must learn. True living and right breathing and thinking will cure all ills. When you learn my system you will understand.

Mrs. Eoff and her woman attendant, Delia Ballard, were held in bonds of $400 each to await their hearing June 20.

CARUSO "CALLED" BY AMERICAN.

HAUGHTY TENOR MAKES HASTY EXIT TO AVOID BEATING.

Points Finger at Actress at Hotel in London and When Rebuked Shouts: "I am Caruso and I Do as I Please!"—His Secretary Creates a Scene.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Caruso, who since he has been in London for the Covent Garden season has been seen visiting the monkey house in the Zoological Gardens, narrowly escaped being beaten because of his attentions to a young American actress in the lobby of the Savoy Hotel last night. While people were pouring out of the hotel after late suppers the tenor caught sight of the actress in the company of several English people. He pointed his finger at her and cried: "You, you!" The attention of hundreds of persons was attracted by the incident, and John Wilson of New York approached the singer and said: "Caruso, you shouldn't do that."

"I am Caruso and I do as I please," was the Italian's haughty reply.

Here Caruso's secretary stepped up and began arguing loudly, and the tenor went immediately to his room. The secretary called Wilson a "liar" and shouted at him:

"If you weren't so old I'd punch your head," and gave the American a push.

Wilson, mindful of the presence of women, did not retaliate, but with other witnesses of the incident went to the office of the manager of the hotel and made complaint against the tenor.

Keefe's resignation took effect at the close of business today. Caminetti has not yet been confirmed by the Senate but it is expected that he will be confirmed early next week.

COUNT HELIE WINS HAND OF RICH MRS. LEEDS.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Count Helie de Talleyrand-Perigord has at last won the hand of Mrs. William B. Leeds, widow of the American "tin plate king," who died in 1908, leaving an estate of $14,000,000. The couple have been reported engaged several times in the last few months, but no confirmation has been forthcoming until today, when the engagement was announced.

Mrs. Leeds is a daughter of William C. Stewart, a Cleveland millionaire. She has been courted and idolized by the marriageable titleholders in Europe. Helleu, the famous artist, has declared that she possesses ninety-eight of the hundred essential points of beauty.

Count du Talleyrand is a cousin of the Duc de Talleyrand, husband of Anna Gould, and also of the Duc de Valencay, formerly husband of Helen Morton, and of the Duc de Montmorency. He is a nephew of the late Duc de Mino, whose first wife was Miss Elizabeth Curtis of New York. He is a cousin of the Castellanes and Mrs. Leeds's marriage to him would make her related to more than half the nobility of France.

UNITED STATES SENATORS, STAND UP, BE SEARCHED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The most searching investigation ever undertaken into the private affairs and business connections of a member of the United States Senate will be the outgrowth of lobby investigation which is to open on Monday before a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

While President Wilson's recent declaration that a powerful lobby is at work attempting to influence action on the tariff bill forms the basis for the Senate investigation, questions prepared tonight bsy the committee to be asked of each member of the Senate are such as to carry the investigation far outside of tariff matters. Each Senator will be required to tell under oath whether he has any interest in any matter affected by any bill now before Congress, or that has been before the Senate during his term; and whether or not he has ever tried to influence any other Senator to vote for a measure in which he was interested.

Chairman Overman of the Subcommittee expressed the opinion tonight that the committee's questions would require a statement by each Senator as to any business interests he may have that would be affected by the tariff, currency or any other legislation. Many members of the Senate are openly associated with manufacturing, trading, livestock, lumber, financial or farming corporations or interests, and under the questions of the committee they probably will be required to give any such connections in detail, if the tariff would affect their business in any way.

GALLION (O.) May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] In addition to a fine coat of wool, a ram owned by David Lynch, a farmer, has a covering of flourishing oats in his wool. Then it was rained on. Next the sun shone brightly. This continued several days with the result that the oats sprouted.

Lynch calculates that in case of drought he can save this crop of oats, since, if the rain won't come to the crop, he can move the crop to the rain.

Dawn of June Causes Unprecedented Rush for Marriage Licenses.

Some Notable Weddings Celebrated and Others on the Calendar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One hundred and ninety-nine prospective June brides were named at the Marriage License Bureau today, and the applicants swamped the four regular clerks and the three recruits. It established a record for a half day's business. Meanwhile, the preparations were making for ushering in the June season with several society weddings.

"We have issued 267 licenses in one day," said L. C. Legener, Chief Clerk, "but this beats all half-day records. In addition to the usual June wedding rush we had the usual number that could not get a license on Memorial Day."

TWO SOCIETY WEDDINGS.

Two weddings of importance in older Chicago society circles took place in the afternoon. One was that of Miss Catherine Delano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Delano of No. 510 Wellington avenue, to Alexander Galt Grant, son of Judge and Mrs. Robert Grant of Boston. The other was the wedding of Miss Susan Hamil Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Phelps, to William Zimmerman, Jr., of Kenilworth.

GRANT-DELANO.

The marriage of Miss Delano and Mr. Grant was a service at 4 o'clock celebrated at Unity Church on Barry avenue, and because of the small seating capacity of the edifice only the intimate friends and the relatives were guests. A reception was held at the family residence.

The marriage unites families of prominence not only in social but also in commercial and professional life. The bride's father is the president of the Wabash Railroad. Mr. Grant's father not only is a widely-known member of the bar, but is famed in literature. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. Hanson Pulsford of Memorial Chapel.

Miss Louise Delano, the bride's sister, was her maid of honor, and the youngest of the three sisters, Miss Laura Delano, two cousins, Miss Jean Delano and Miss Sara Delano of New York, Miss Elizabeth Gray and Miss Hildegarde Lasell of Boston, Miss Amy Walker and Miss Marion Scott of Chicago were the bridesmaids.

Patrick Grant II of Philadelphia was best man and Dudley Pickman, Jr., Augustus Hemenway, Jr., Bioring Young, Jr., Richard Lovering of Boston, Fairman Dick and Winthrop Aldrich of New York and George Jackson and Perry Dunlap Smith of Chicago were the ushers.

The bride's gown was of white charmeuse and lace and her veil was of tulle. Her maids were in picturesque gowns. Miss Louise Delano, as maid of honor, wore a flowered silk underdress with coat of pale green taffeta. Her hat was of lace trimmed with pink plumes. The bridesmaids were apricot-colored taffetta with medici collars of cream lace and leghorn hats faced with blue and trimmed with Ward roses. All of the young women carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant are to live at No. 31 Massachusetts avenue, Boston.

ZIMMERMAN-PHELPS.

The marriage of Miss Phelps, who combines two old Chicago families in her names of Hamil and Phelps, and Mr. Zimmerman was a home service at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Charlotte Lewis Phelps, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor, and Miss Ruth S. Paine of Boston, Miss Elizabeth Olcott of Duluth and Miss Helen Seymour of Hubbard Woods were the bridesmaids.

Two small cousins, Katherine and Emily Hamil, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamil, were the flower girls. Herbert P. Zimmerman was his brother's best man, and Hilmar Zimmerman, another brother and Robert Hamil stretched the ribbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman will take a western wedding trip.

UNITED STATES SENATOR WEDS.

United States Senator James H. Brady of Idaho and Miss Irene Moore, daughter of Mrs. George M. Moore of Chicago, were married last evening at the residence of the bride's cousin, Arthur L. Moore, Ravino drive, Sheridan Park. The Rev. Calvin B. Dobson of the Presbyterian Church of Highland Park officiated. Miss Edith Jayne, niece of the bride was flower girl and Prof. Henry Suzzallo of Columbia University, New York, was best man.

Miss Moore attended the University of Chicago for three years and later was graduated from the University of California.

After the ceremony, the bridal couple left for Washington and will be at home after June 15 at No. 1700 Rhode Island avenue, Washington.

Harmony.

COUNSEL JAPS TO BE CALM.

Envoys Address Countrymen in Sacramento Temple.

Declare World's Peace May Hinge on Their Patience.

Want Yellow Men to Merge With American People.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 31.—Counseling patience, urging that nothing be done that might result in conflict and expressing a belief that peace and harmony will follow negotiations now proceeding between Japan and the American government regarding the enactment of the anti-alien land law, the Japanese envoys recently arrived in Sacramento, talked to 1500 of their countrymen on the lawn of the Buddhist Temple here tonight. S. Ebarra and S. Hattori, members of the Japanese Parliament, Dr. Soyeda, representing the Japanese business men, T. Kamiya, secretary of the Brazil immigration association of Japan, and Y. Yamamoto, secretary of the Tokio Y.M.C.A., were the speakers. H. Kishi, a director of the Nippon Bank of Sacramento, presided at the meeting.

"Japanese in America and in Japan should learn to realize that the 'tooth for a tooth and eye for an eye' feeling is a mistaken policy," said Dr. Soyeda, speaking in his native language.

"A mistaken policy independent of either government or by the people of either country would result in great danger of the east and west being brought into conflict. Race hatred might be kindled and the peace of the world might be involved, if the Japanese are not patient.

"It is the duty of all thoughtful and educated people of both countries to bring the conflicting elements in this controversy into harmony. The justice, liberty and equality of the United States insures fair treatment to the Japanese.

"A Japanese who adopts this country should keep in harmony with its society and elevate himself until his race is not considered. If he does there will be no place for alien agitation. He should mould himself into the type of these people wherein he lives."

Mr. Hattori said: "Your people at home are supposing you are suffering bodily harm. I have told them that the time of individual harm is passed. You might tell them such supposition is a mistake and tell them to be patient and everything will end all right.

"We are not much surprised," he went on, "to see this agitation. Anti-Asiatic feeling has been in the air in California for years. All you people here know it. But when the affair assumes such a proportion that no individual effort will avail; when the anti-alien feeling is directed by law, it becomes a national question.

"Our government will work out the problem to the full satisfaction of all. Boycott or similar methods such as are discussed, should not be carried out. It is strongly against the principles of fair dealing and might result in increased feeling. It is the duty of every one concerned to minimize whatever feeling now exists.

"America should open her doors and welcome us. America asked us to maintain the 'open door' in Manchuria and Japan did. It is the discrimination to which Japan objects.

"The three-year clause in the land law shows how close the bill comes to violating the spirit of the treaty. It stopped at the very edge of the line. That such a law and such a clause was enacted is a matter of keen regret."

T. Kamiya said that all Japanese except those who had been able to get in close touch with their countrymen in California had been anxious about the agitation and that the delegation had been sent to comfort those who were affected by the law.

Strict attention was paid to the speakers. Applause and cheering were frequent. Throughout all the speeches the audience was orderly.

Dr. Soyeda leaves in company with Kamiya today for Lodi, Fresno, Stockton and Southern California. After inspecting the Japanese settlements in these sections he plans to return to San Francisco and sail immediately for Japan to give his opinion to the business men of Japan.

REPLY FROM JAPAN DUE THIS WEEK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Japan's rejoinder to Secretary Bryan's reply to the Japanese protest against the California alien land legislation will be submitted to the State Department early next week, according to the present plans. This was made known today, but without any suggestion as to the probable contents of the note.

There have been numerous cable exchanges between the Japanese embassy here and the Foreign Office in Tokio, necessitated by the demands of the latter for exact information as to the American national and State laws regarding alien land ownership and naturalization.

Notwithstanding the pressure from certain quarters at home, however, it is regarded as doubtful that the Japanese embassy has concluded to turn to a request for amendment of the administration naturalization laws as a solution of the present issue between the two countries.

The successful treatment by the Canadian Parliament of complaints from British Columbia of the competition by Japanese has attracted the attention of the negotiators on both sides in this country.

As the underlying principal of the Canadian legislation is separation of the two races in the interest of permanent peace, to be attained through absolute exclusion of all but the traveling and student classes, it was suggested today that a similar remedy might be found to fit the present issue in America. It was pointed out that the representatives of Japan in Canada made no objection to the Canadian legislation.

BERLIN, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Yvette Borup, classmate of Princess Luise, who was the only American invited by the Princess to the royal wedding, has decided to remain in Berlin for the festivities that will attend the silver jubilee of Emperor William's succession to the throne. She is being feted and much admired, and honors have been showered upon her thick and fast since it became known that she came to Berlin as the guest of the Princess.

Miss Borup is the daughter of an American army officer and attended school with Princess Luise in Berlin a few years ago. The two girls became chums in thoroughly democratic fashion, yet, the invitation to the wedding of the Princess and Prince Ernest August of Cumberland came as a surprise. Miss Borup received it in New York and at once engaged passage across the Atlantic to attend the festivities.

STORM SWEEPS AUSTRALIA ON DAY OF ELECTION.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MELBOURNE (Australia) May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Federal elections are being held today, but a terrific storm is sweeping the continent and as most of the telegraph wires are down the returns so far are meager. From what is known, however, it is believed the result will be defeat for labor and that the present labor majority of eleven in Parliament will be transformed to a minority of four.

There is intense enthusiasm in the city and the newspaper offices are surrounded by throngs watching the few bulletins that are posted.

At the last Australian election in April, 1910, the results were: Labor party, 44; Fusion, 29; Independent Liberals, 2. Changes since then have reduced the Labor majority to eleven.

YOUTH SOLVES THEOREM THAT PUZZLED SAVANTS.

Trisects in Practical Manner an Angle Greater Than a Right Angle and Astounds Philadelphia Professors. Boy Spurred to Achievement by Ridicule of His Classmates—Expects to Patent His Ingenious Device.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Sydney Gross, 16 years old, of No. 2335 North Seventeenth street, is a mathematical prodigy. His discovery of a practical method of trisecting an angle greater than a right angle, has started some of the most eminent mathematicians of the East and has exploded theories which have been taught to students of geometry since the science was discovered thousands of years ago. Ever since immortal mind of immortal Euclid never conceived the apparently simple invention which is the child of the brain of this Philadelphia stripling, who is a member of the Latin-scientific course in the sophomore year of the Boy's High School of this city.

Ridicule of his fellow students aimed at him when he disputed a statement of Prof. Samuel K. Brecht was responsible for the construction of the model which has caused the best known authorities of mathematics to hail young Gross as a wonder, and his invention as one of the greatest practical contributions to geometrical science ever made.

Among those eminent authorities are David Eugene Smith of Columbia University, Dr. M. J. Babb, president Middle States Mathematical Association, and a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. George Galy Chambers, Ph.D.2 of2 the2 University of Pennsylvania, all of who agreed that the only known method of trisecting an angle since 180 B. C. has been by higher curves. But this marks practical the tricesting of an angle.

It was a copper wire instrument which young Gross exhibited in the classroom some days ago. Gross said that no accurate drawings could be made. He had to measure each piece of wire and then fit all of them together, each with one end a as central pivot. The letters Gm, Hm, Tm, Vm, are all of the same size and the lines joining these lines at the circles all are the same size. The instrumnt and equal to 180 degrees when open and equal to 0 degrees, theoretically, when closed. The instrument actually is equal to 180 degrees when open, and an unknown degree when closed, because the parts cannot coincide mechanically.

The best illustration of this instrument is a collapsible elevator gate. By this method an angle can be divided into any number of unequal parts, a regular decagon, also can be inscribed within a circle by it, without the long process used in text books.

PROFESSORS ASTOUNDED.

As a consultation held yesterday, Prof. Brecht said "a search through literature has failed to find any such scheme used by previous investigators. A somewhat similar method is used under the subject of linkage to trisect an angle, but only theoretically. It has never been put to practical usage. Gross has proven that he did not read books on the subject. I have shown this invention to my colleagues and all admit never having seen such a thing before. Gross deserves to have all the glory we can give him. He has shown himself to be interested in geometry as in other instances he has constructed difficult figures in pasteboard. If Gross studied a little harder he would be exempt in geometry, most certainly, but in view of this interest I will exempt him anyhow."

Gross expects to have his invention patented as soon as it is returned from Columbia University, where Dr. Smith is examining it.

RENEW PACT WITH BRITAIN.

Bryan and Spring Rice Agree on the Terms.

Arbitration by The Hague of Minor Questions.

Diplomats Speculate on Fate of Japanese Treaty.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring Rice, the British Ambassador, late today signed a renewal for five years of the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which expires by limitation on June 4.

The treaty provides for the arbitration by The Hague court of any differences of a legal nature not affecting the "vital interests, the independence or the honor of the two contracting states," and which do not concern interests of third parties. A form of special agreement, covering the subject to be arbitrated, subject to the Senate's approval, is prescribed.

The British treaty is the fourth of the arbitration conventions to be renewed this year, the others being those with France, Italy and Spain. Diplomats here are awaiting with much interest the expiration of similar treaties with Japan and Mexico. The treaty with Japan expires by limitation on August 24. President Wilson has announced his willingness to renew it, but Japan has given no intimation of its purpose in the matter.

The renewal of the treaty with Mexico, which will expire June 27, would involve the important question of the recognition of the Huerta government, which thus far has been withheld. No hint has been given that the Huerta government will be recognized, and in announcing recently the names of the nations with which this government was willing to renew arbitration treaties, President Wilson omitted Mexico.

Other special treaties, all of which the President has expressed willingness to renew, expired in the following order: Norway, June 24; Sweden, August 18; Portugal, November 14, and Switzerland, December 23.

FAVOR TRIENNIAL PLAN.

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen Decides to Meet Only Once in Three Years for Economy's Sake.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, now in biennial session here, decided late today to hold its conventions triennially hereafter. This was decided upon after the proposition had been rejected several days ago, when it was reported out of special committee. When the question of a triennial convention was first put before the delegates many voted in the negative because there was, as they stated, no substantial reason why it should be changed. But when the committee today reported that it meant a great saving to the brotherhood the plan was immediately adopted by a vote of 3 to 1.

By this decision in the change in the conventions the trainmen follow the policy of the three other labor organizations identified with the railroad business, namely, the Order of Railroad Conductors, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. All three organizations hold triennial conventions.

The delegates today completed the adoption of the report of the Committee on Constitution and adopted the report of the Committee on General Rules.

Monday the convention will begin its third and possibly last week. The first matter on the programme will be the report of the Salary Committee. This will be followed, probably Tuesday, by the election of officers and the choice of the next convention city.

SHOOTS MINISTER DEAD.

Wife Who Is Alleged to Have Slain Baptist Divine Has Sympathy of Her Community.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JACKSON (Miss.) May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A telephone message from Montrose, Jasper county, says the Rev. George Holford, a Baptist minister, was shot and killed by his wife. The couple are said to have had frequent quarrels, and yesterday, after one of great bitterness, the minister rode away to Newton, where he purchased a shotgun and box of buckshot shells. He spent the night with a friend and rode home this morning. His wife, seeing him enter the gate with the shotgun, stepped to the door with another and fired. He died instantly. The sympathy of the community is with the woman, and at last reports she had not been arrested.

SOCIETY LADY'S PLEA.

BALTIMORE, May 31.—About 3000 advocates of equal suffrage took part in a spectacular pageant that passed through the aristocratic residential section of this city this afternoon. There was no disorder, but several policemen claimed that a prominent Baltimore society woman who is an anti-suffragette gained access to a reviewing stand and pleaded to be allowed to "throw just one lemon."

Scuttle, His Motto.

the Finance Committee; Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, Senator Lewis of Illinois, whip of the Senate, and Congressman Underwood, the House majority leader.

This conference is considered desirable because of the movement on foot among a number of Senators and Congressmen to bring about an adjournment immediately after the passage of the tariff bill.

It is proposed by these men to hasten action on the tariff so it will be in the hands of the President and approved by him before the House can pass the currency bill. It is believed the President will acquiesce in this plan, if forced to do so. Mr. Wilson, however, is proceeding on the assumption that Congress is to be here several months in connection with the tariff. While the Senate is debating this subject, he feels that the House should occupy itself with the currency.

Through joint session of the banking and currency committees of the two Houses it is his view that delay in the passage of a currency bill can be obviated.

THE PHILIPPINES.

President Wilson does not believe the questions growing out of the disposition of the Philippine Islands will arouse much contention, since the Democrats are bound in this matter by a plank in their platform. In any event he thinks one of the causes for Japanese ill-feeling will be removed if this government should act in a way which will show the world that it intends to withdraw permanently from the Far Eastern archipelago.

THE CURRENCY.

In connection with the currency, the President's letter to Senator Tillman is believed to be a forecast of the message he will read to Congress. It is as follows:

"THE WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON (D. C.) May 27.—My Dear Senator: I am warmly obliged to you for your letter of the 24th and want to say that I heartily agree with the conclusions it contains, and in which Congressman Johnson joins. This is the time to pass currency legislation, and I think we are in a sense bound in loyalty to the country to pass it, so that any attempt to create artificial disturbance after the tariff shall have become law many be offset by a free system of credit which will make it possible for men, big and little, to take care of themselves in business. I am sincerely obliged to you for your kindness in writing me.

[Signed:] "WOODROW WILSON."

TILLMAN'S VIEW.

Senator Tillman in making public the President's letter declared in his judgment it is of vital importance to the success of the Democratic party that there should be currency legislation as soon as possible. He insists the Republicans are fighting desperately with their backs to the wall with two objects in view—to retard the enactment of tariff legislation and to retard or prevent entirely any adequate banking and currency reform.

"It would be an idiotic blunder and little short of criminal if the Democrats should play into their hands," Tillman continued. "We ought to force the fighting on the tariff and drive it through the Senate under whip and spur just like it was driven through the House. We ought to begin promptly to inaugurate changes in the currency and banking laws which will make it possible for men big and little to take care of themselves in business."

Congressman J. P. Johnson of South Carolina in a letter to Senator Tillman, which the latter presented to the President and to which Mr. Wilson refers with approval, says the nation ought to have a banking saytem that will enable the government to prevent, or at any rate check in its incipiency, a monetary panic.

Johnson charges the same influences and the men behind them who made tariff revision a necessity are naturally desirous of seeing tariff revision followed by stagnation and hard times. They do not want the new tariff law to have a fair chance. He recommends that the currency and tariff bills be passed as soon as possible in order that good effects may be manifest by the fall of 1914, when the Congressional elections will take place.

SIX RED CENTS FOR ROOSEVELT.

Verdict of the Jury in the Marquette Case.

Each Party to the Suit Pays His Own Costs.

Judgment of Law on a Damaged Reputation.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARQUETTE (Mich.) May 31.—Having waived damages after the defendant had uttered a retraction, Theodore Roosevelt today accepted the jury award of nominal damages of 6 cents in his suit for $10,000 against George A. Newett. Each party to the suit will have to pay his own expenses. Judge Flannigan instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff, which they did without leaving their seats. The colonel left for Chicago and the East at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon, less than two hours after the conclusion of the case.

The climax of the case came when the defense called Mr. Newett. In his hand he carried a manuscript. Mr. Newett was well along in his reading before the colonel lost the tense look on his face at the following:

"It is fair to the plaintiff to state that I have been unable to find in any section of the country any individual witness who is willing to state that he has personally seen Mr. Roosevelt drink to excess."

At this plaintiff smiled and, rising, spoke a few words in the ear of Attorney Benschotem. The latter smiled back at him. The colonel broke into a grin again when Mr. Newett, speaking distinctly and with emphasis, said with reference to the mass of testimony adduced by the plaintiff:

"I am forced to the conclusion that I was mistaken."

The statement admitted that a search of the country had been made to investigate stories of persons who were alleged to have knowledge that Mr. Roosevelt drank to excess, but in every case the stories flattened out to mere opinion or hearsay.

The libel was published in good faith, Mr. Newett said, in the belief that it was true and proper information for a public which was being asked to vote for Mr. Roosevelt for President. That it was true the defendant said he never questioned until the libel suit was begun, and believed the assertion until the trial opened.

No demand for a retraction ever had been made, he stated, and when the bill was filed against him there was nothing left for him to do but to seek evidence and make other preparations to contest the suit.

Leaving the stand and returning to his seat, Mr. Newett looked in the direction of Roosevelt, but the latter was absorbed in whispering to Attorney Van Benschoten. The latter whispered in turn to Attorney Pound and he turned to Judge Flannigan and said:

"With the court's permission, the plaintiff would like to make a brief announcement."

The judge nodded, and Mr. Roosevelt rose. Bowing to the court, the colonel said that he would waive the matter of damages, save for the nominal amount provided by law. Speaking of his purpose in instituting suit, he said:

"I wished once for all during my life time to deal with those slanders so that never again will it be possible for any man in good faith to repeat them."

JURY CHARGED.

Speaking of Col. Roosevelt as the plaintiff, Judge Flannigan said in his charge to the jury:

"Certainly he has convinced the court, not only that he never was drunk, but that he is now and always has been a temperate and abstemious man."

At the same time the court held that Mr. Newett, in publishing the statement, was not actuated by actual ill will toward the plaintiff, and that he acted in good faith.

But, the court held, the injury to the plaintiff, had he not waived his right to damages, would have sustained a verdict in any sum up to the amount claimed in the plaintiff's declaration, which is $10,000.

As soon as William H. Matthews, a miner, 31 years old, foreman of the jury, reported the verdict as directed by the court, the court adjourned and Roosevelt stepped forward and shook the hand of each juror.

"I thank you, gentlemen, each one of you," the colonel said. "It was splendid, just perfectly splendid."

THE WITNESSES.

The first witness was Col. Roosevelt and the last one for the plaintiff was Admiral George Dewey, whose testimony was introduced by deposition. Between them were James R. Garfield, Robert Bacon, former Secretary of State and Ambassador to France; Gifford Pinchot, Truman H. Newberry, former Secretary of War; Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff; Dr. Lyman Abbott, W. Emlen Roosevelt, a cousin of the colonel; George B. Cortelyou, Dr. Albert M. Shaw, William Loeb, Jr., Jacob A. Riis and many newspaper men, each of whom testified, orally or by deposition, that Col. Roosevelt did not "get drunk" as charged in Mr. Newett's newspaper.

The libel of which Roosevelt complained was published October 12, 1912 in Mr. Newett's weekly paper, at Ishpeming, the Iron Ore. It took the colonel to task for "preaching" to others when "he himself gets drunk, and that not infrequently as all his intimates knew."

REDFIELD SEES NEW RAINBOWS.

DECLARES AMERICAN MILLS CAN COMPETE WITH FOREIGNERS.

He Proclaims a Policy of Federal Industrial Education to Offset Slash in Tariff—He Predicts Elimination of Unsystematized Management and Reduction in Taxation.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSFIELD, (Mass.), May 31.—Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce, speaking at a banquet here tonight, given by the Democratic city committee denied the connection that American manufacturers could not compete successfully abroad, and declared that on the other hand they were doing so more and more successfully. He pointed to a continuous growth in the business of American manufacturers abroad, beginning with a total of $443,000,000 in 1892 to an estimated total of $1,500,000,000 in 1913. He predicted a still greater growth with the elimination of what he termed "unsystematized management."

"A new freedom for American industries," he said was the effective test to which the Democratic party had set its hand.

"It stands for industrial education and for ederal aid to it," he added. "It stands for the reduction of the taxes, not only upon food, but upon the means of earning; that is to say, upon buildings, upon machinery and upon materials which together compose the fundamental of our industrial life. It does not stand for a reduction of wages because it knows that American econimice history has taught us perhaps its greatest lesson that the highly paid workman, well equipped and well treated and well fed is the cheapest producer in the world, else with our handicaps we should not be selling $1,500,000,000 abroad now."

Are You Drinking Pure Water?

Have You Ever Thought How Necessary Pure Drinking Water Is to Your Health?

Many people give very little thought to the purity of the water they drink. They are very careful to secure pure, wholesome food. They take pains to see that their surroundings are sanitary.

But when it comes to the matter of drinking water, they merely use what is to be had conveniently—without giving the matter any especial attention.

There is no more fertile cause of illness than impure drinking water. Disease germs are easily taken into the system this way. Mineral matter dissolved in the water is also a frequent cause of illness. And almost no natural waters hereabouts are pure.

You should drink Puritas Distilled Water. It is inexpensive and easy to get.

Pure water is "soft" water. It keeps the system sweet and clean. Our city water is "hard" water, containing considerable amounts of mineral matter. These become deposited in the body, causing kidney and rheumatic troubles.

Puritas is thoroughly distilled and aerated with pure ozone. We bottle it in clean glass demijohns. This work is so carefully done that the water reaches you with all its wholesome purity intact.

Puritas is inexpensive—five gallons cost but 40 cents delivered within the old city boundary lines.

SHE DEMANDS FEMALE JUR

Mrs. Williams Declares M Judge According to Law.

But Women Follow Dictat of Justice in Court.

Must Answer to Extortion Charge at San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because she believes that a man's judgment in a court trial involving a woman is based merely on his understanding of law and that a woman's judgment is based on her understanding of justice, Mrs. Bertha J. Williams, arrested on a charge of extortion, has demanded a trial by a feminine jury.

Mrs. Williams's arrest followed the shooting of John Jungclaus by Joseph Marcia on February 21.

Jungclaus had placed in her keeping at her home a trunk which was said to contain evidence against Nannette Robinson, who witnessed the shooting.

Mrs. Williams, who had been urged to hold the trunk until certain conditions had been fulfilled by Mrs. Robinson, refused to deliver it without payment of a certain sum of storage.

Mrs. Williams is the mildest-eyed extortionist—if extortionist she be—who ever appeared in court.

Also one scarcely expects from her radical or pronounced views on any subject.

But on man's insufficiency of judging a woman's case she undoubtedly has her own opinion.

"Men do not understand justice—certainly not the fine points of justice," she said this morning. "Women do. Men look only to the law; women to the justice—and justice and law are two very distinct things.

"I have been watching this matter for years and I think that wherever a woman is concerned in a matter of this kind, except in extreme cases, like murder trials, she does not receive justice at the hands of men.

"The trouble is that men have taken this matter of judging cases too much as a matter of course.

"They have had so many centuries of ruling in this sort of thing that the fine edge of their sense of responsibility has worn off.

"Women are new at the game. They look upon it as a solemn duty, and the giving of a really just decision will be to them a matter of conscience.

"And I think in every-day affairs women may be conceded to have more conscience than men, so why not in cases of this kind?"

Asked if this sense of responsibility in women wear off with more familiarity with the jury duty, Mrs. Williams said that she thought not.

District Court of Appeals to Decide When an Emergency Is a Legal Emergency.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 31.—The Third District Court of Appeals will be resorted to under an agreement between the State Department of Engineering, the State Controller, the Attorney General and the State Board of Control for a judicial adjudication of the question whether or not appropriation bills for State improvements and containing the emergency clause are emergencies and the funds of the appropriations are available from the time the Governor attaches his signature to each measure, or whether they must come under the 90-day period as provided in the referendum.

This action has become necessary because of the refusal of State Controller Nye to draw a warrant for a claim against the appropriation made for the purpose of maintaining a California State exhibit at the Ghent exposition.

Nye refuses to draw the warrant for the claim of the $3,372.21 on the ground that the claim and the bill do not, come under the provision of the clause in the constitution making urgency measures those for the "usual current expenses of State.

RECORD INCOME FROM ESTATES.

INHERITANCE TAX YIELDS BIG INCOME TO CALIFORNIA.

Sum Paid Into State Treasury from that Source During Past Twelve Months Exceeds Million and a Half Dollars—Rate to Be Increased by New Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, May 31.—Inheritance taxes collected by County Treasurers of California and paid into the State treasury for the support of the State government covering the year's period which ended today, amounted to $1,582,717, according to announcement of State Controller Nye. This exceeds any year in the history of the collections, not excepting the year ending May 31, 1911, when almost a half-million dollars was collected as a tax on the estate of "Lucky" Baldwin. That year the State received a total of $1,506,993.

Last year, the inheritance taxes collected amounted to $1,082,290. At the present rate of increase and with the probability that the tax rate will be raised for the coming two years, State Controller Nye believes the inheritance tax, law to be one of the greatest of revenue sources which the State now has.

Few estates paid $100,000 or even half that amount during the year past. For the most part the total is made up from smaller estates. Inheritance tax settlements are made twice a year, in December and in May, at the same time the regular county tax settlements are made.

The highest present rate of tax on estates is 5 per cent. The new law passed at the last session of the Legislature and now in the Governor's hands for approval, however, will in some instances make large estates pay 10 per cent., tax on their appraised value.

The amount collected by the State for the year just closed represents a net amount, after deducting all County Teasurers' commissions and appraisers' fees.

FICKERT PREDICTS SURPRISE.

Promises to Spring Two New Witnesses Tomorrow in San Francisco Police Graft Trial.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—The prosecution promises a surprise to the defense for Frank Esola, former police detective, when his trial on a charge of grand larceny growing out of allegations of police graft is resumed on Monday. Dist-Atty. Fickert announced today that two new witnesses had been found, who would furnish the real sensation of the trial.

The District Attorney expects shortly to affect the capture of Lelio Pellegrini, a hotel proprietor under indictment, who is a fugitive from justice. Pellegrini is supposed to possess much knowledge of value to the prosecution in the police graft cases. Important information as to his whereabouts was received today, it was said.

Meanwhile, Esola's attorneys are preparing a line of testimony to combat the evidence which Mrs. Mike Gallo, wife of a convict who testified this week for the State, is expected to give.

LUTHER M'CARTY BURIED.

Body of the Prize Fighter Who Was Killed in Canada Is Laid to Rest in Ohio.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PIQUA (O.) May 31.—Funeral services over the body of Luther McCarty, claimant of the white heavyweight championship, who was killed one week ago in a prize fight, with Arthur Pelkey, at Calgary, Alberta, were held here today.

William McCarney and Frederick Sears, McCarty's manager and trainer, respectively, were two of the pallbearers. A number of the fighter's friends attended the funeral. His father, Dr. A. P. McCarty, is grief-stricken.

Mrs. Rhoda McCarty, the widow, came here with the body. She will leave soon with McCarney for Springfield, Mo., to ask that she be appointed administratrix of the dead fighter's estate.

Springfield, Mo., was regarded as his home.

While McCarty's body laid in a chapel today more than 3000 persons viewed it.

CALL DEL VALLE TO WASHINGTON

Angeleno Slated to Succeed Henry Lane Wilson.

Appointment as Ambassador to Mexico Expected Soon.

It Would Mean Recognition of the Huerta Regime.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] R. F. Del Valle of Los Angeles, is slated to be nominated Ambassador to Mexico, to succeed Henry Lane Wilson.

This was the report today, coincident with Del Valle's arrival here. Del Valle was summoned here from Los Angeles on a wire from the three Democratic Representatives, Raker, Church and Kettner, who have strongly urged his appointment as Ambassador to Mexico to President Wilson. It was believed today that his nomination will be sent to the Senate probably early next week. The administration is reported to have accepted Ambassador Wilson's resignation, tendered when President Wilson took office. President Wilson is said to believe that conditions in Mexico have now quieted down enough to allow a change in Ambassadors. The nomination of Del Valle necessarily will mean recognition of the Huerta government, even if the State Department does not formally recognize the Mexican administration.

AMERICAN BOYCOTT OVER.

MONTEREY IS BESIEGED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The government is now exerting its utmost endeavors to avert a general uprising in the central portion of the republic, but seemingly with small success. Tonight word came that Monterey was besieged and probably would fall into the hands of the rebels before morning. The report said several Americans had been killed, but gave no names. Guadalajara, the advices stated, was to be attacked Sunday. Fighting at many points was reported, with general rebel successes and considerable loss to both sides.

The boycott declared against American merchants in Mexico City several weeks ago is practically over. The Mexicans probably came to realize that they were losing as much as the Americans, for freight receipts here, which usually run around 300 carloads daily, had declined to five or six, and there was much dissatisfaction in all lines of business. Anti-American agitation has about disappeared and American merchants report their business is showing a healthy increase daily.

GUTHRIE TAKES OATH.

PITTSBURGH, May 31.—George W. Guthrie of this city, the newly appointed Ambassador to Japan, took the oath of office before Judge Joseph Buffington in the United States Court here shortly after noon today.

MERCADO SUCCEEDS RABAGO,

Appointed Military Governor of Chihuahua—Constitutionalists Concentrate at Santa Rosalia.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHIHUAHUA CITY (Mex.) May 31.—Gen. Samuel R. Mercado, recently recalled from Parral, today was appointed Military Governor of Chihuahua State. He succeeds Gen. Antonio Rabago, who has been called to Mexico City.

Col. Romero with 1800 Federals is marching south in an effort to restore rail and wire communication along the Mexican Central railway as far as Torreon. In a fight with the insurgents under Villa, Herrera and Hernandez at Saucillo, the government reports 25 rebels killed and several taken prisoners.

The Constitutionalists are concentrated at Santa Rosalia, while the government troops are engaged in repairing burned bridges at Conchos. The government column is carrying several pieces of heavy artillery. The insurgent strength is estimated at 1400, well mounted but poorly armed men with no heavy artillery.

WITHOUT ROCKET OR LIFEBOAT.

SCHOOL EXCURSION STEAMER STRIKES HARBOR BAR.

Teachers Prevent Panic Among Terribly Frightened Children as Waves Smash Cabin Windows. Frantic Parents Send Out Tugs to Locate Craft—All on Board Saved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ABERDEEN (Wash.) May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three score members of the eighth grade of the Franklin school and the teachers had an exciting experience last night when the steamer Kennebec, on which they had taken an excursion to Westport, near the mouth of the harbor, became disabled and went on a spit near the bar. It was nothing short of a miracle that the Kennebec was not taken over the bar and sunk. Tugs in the harbor were sent and were able to take all the excursionists off and bring them to this city early this morning after an uncertain night passed nervously by all the women and children.

The Kennebec is still on the spit. She is a small excursion boat. All of the children were sick and terribly frightened. The danger of the boat's position was indicated by the breaking of her cabin windows by the waves. Only the coolness of the teachers prevented a panic and loss of life. There was not a rocket or a lifeboat on the Kennebec and no warning could be given.

It was late last night when parents became frantic and joined in an effort to send tugs to locate the missing craft.

I CURE

PILES

FISTULA AND ALL RECTAL DISEASES WITHOUT AN OPERATION

BY MY PAINLESS DISSOLVENT METHOD

I TREAT NO DISEASES EXCEPT THOSE OF THE RECTUM AND BOWELS.

For twenty-five years I have been curing diseases of the rectum and lower bowel. During that time my experience as hospital and railroad surgeon, as college lecturer and professor, has enabled me to develop a method that is superior to all others. I cure without surgery and my patients are never confined in bed and never lose a moment's time from their business.

My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic conditions in my office.

I solicit old, severe and obstinate cases of fistula, prolapsus, fissure and ulceration that have heretofore resisted all treatments employed. If you are a sufferer from rectal trouble I invite you to investigate my method thoroughly by talking or writing to any of my cured patients. If you will call at my office I will be pleased to give you the names and addresses of many well-known Los Angeles people I have cured, whom you may interview in regard to my treatment.

Read what a few well-known Southern California people have to say of my method. Many similar letters are on file in my office.

WELL KNOWN SANTA MONICA MINISTER CURED.

This to to certify that Dr. C. H. White has cured me of a distressing hemorrhoidal ailment of 25 years' duration. His method of treatment is effective, but not severe. He has the appliances, the knowledge and the skill born of many years of specializing in this fruitful source of physical disease. He accomplishes all he claims in his advertising and at reasonable expense.

I take pleasure in heartily commending the man and his methods.

WESLEY K. BEANS, Pastor First Methodist Episcopal Church, Santa Monica, Cal.
March 15, 1913.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SUPERINTENDENT CURED.

My Dear Dr. White: I am thankful for the privilege of bearing witness to your ability to treat, without pain, and with success, the delicate and disabling diseases which result from sedentary work. To all who need the services of a skillful, sympathetic and experienced specialist in your line, I heartily commend you.

Very sincerely yours,
ERVIN S. CHAPMAN, D.D., LL.D., Superintendent State Anti-Saloon League.

SAWTELLE DENTIST CURED.

For twenty years I suffered with a severe rectal trouble which was caused by being almost constantly on my feet. The pain from this affliction has at times incapacitated me from professional duties. Dr. C. H. White, with his dissolvent method, has entirely cured me, and I am as well as I ever was in my life. I desire to say to all sufferers that Dr. White is a skillful physician and is doing grand, good work for humanity in the curing of diseases of the lower bowels.

WILD STRIKE RIOT IN MILAN.

Two Passengers Killed and Others Wounded Before Troops Disperse Lawless Italian Operatives.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

MILAN, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Scenes of violence characterized the strike in Milan where thousands of metal workers and other operatives are trying to tie up all business.

Wild conflicts took place when the street car employees and those at the city gas plant refused to join in the strike. Cars were wrecked, two innocent passengers killed and many injured. Police and militia battled with the strikers for three hours and ultimately succeeded in dispersing them. The riots were only stopped when the authorities called out the military and cavalry charged through the streets. Corrodoni and Saconi, the strikers' leaders, and several of their principal lieutenants, have been arrested.

CANADA KILLS NAVY BILL.

Senate Declines to Build Ships for Britain Until People Vote Upon Question.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OTTAWA (Ont.) May 31.—The Canadian Senate at 1 o'clock Friday morning killed the government's naval aid bill to appropriate $35,000,000 for the construction of three Dreadnoughts for the British navy.

The vote was 51 to 27, on an amendment by Sir George Ross, Liberal leader in the Senate, reading as follows:

"This house is not justified in giving its assent to this bill until it is submitted to the judgment of the country."

As Premier Borden already has announced that he has no intention of submitting the measure to the country just now, the vote puts an end to the naval aid proposals for this year at least.

The bill has been before the Senate since Monday.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ethel Barrymore, in private life Mrs. Russell Griswold Colt, is in quarantine at the Minturn Hospital for contagious diseases, where she took her one-year-old daughter yesterday to be treated for diphtheria. The actress had planned to sail for Europe, June 7. Meantime, she was to appear at the New Brighton Theater. The engagement was canceled when she learned that she would not be allowed to leave the hospital until her child improves and she herself is proved to be free from diphtheria contagion.

Miss Barrymore was surprised when she was told it would be necessary for her to stay at the institution. She said she had not realized her child was in such serious condition. Today at the hospital it was said that the child was better.

Laborites Saying Insulting Things About Him.

A Strike About a Strike in the Serio-Comedy.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—All unions affiliated with the San Francisco Labor Council and whose members are now employed by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. will receive, shortly, instruction to call special meetings for the purpose of voting whether or not a second strike shal be called against the company, sympathy with the men already out on call of the Light and Power Coun cil.

Notices were sent out today obedience to a motion made la night by D. P. Haggerty, president the California State Federation Labor, and unanimously adopted the San Francisco Labor Council.

If the unions vote in favor of sympathetic strike, it will involve approximately 100,000 in the territo served by the company, which extend from Chico to Fresno.

The situation has grown comp cated, owing to dissensions within th ranks of organized labor. The Ligh and Power Council is an attempt syndicate all the unions with whi the company formerly had individu agreements. The company refused recognize the council.

Members of Electrical Workers' Local No. 6, concluded a new separa agreement with the company and members took the places of strikers. This action was indorsed by the Building Trades' Council.

P. H. McCarthy, president, Olaf Tveitmoe, secretary-treasurer the council, came in for strong criticism last night.

Edward Nolan declared that the responsible for the continuance of th strike were actuated by a desire rule or ruin the labor movement.

"I mean the powers that be in th Building Trades Council," he said.

M. J. McGuire, a member of th executive board of the labor counc said:

"Three weeks ago, P. H. McCarth told delegates that the Light a Power Council was a fizzle and wo soon blow up. I went to see Mc Carthy this week and asked him wh his attitude was going to be tow this strike. He would not give an answer. I want to say that in opinion from now on, the influe of P. H. McCarthy will not be wor more than that of a scab."

The council referred to its exe tive committee a request from th Light and Power Council that the Pa cific Gas & Electric Co. be declar unfair and boycott levied.

Sixty-third Congress.

TO TIRE OUT REPUBLICANS

Democrats Plan to Exhaus Opposition to Tariff.

Senate Committee Proposes to Raise Cotton Rates.

Turns Deaf Ear to Plea for Higher Citrus Duty.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—"Make the Republicans work," is the slogan adopted by the Democratic leaders of the Senate in charge of tariff legislation, who today predicted that the Senate would vote on the bill by August 1.

Members of the Finance Committee said that the bill would be reported to the Senate on June 23.

"We will keep the Republicans who want to discuss the bill, working, and we will keep at work ourselves from the very beginning," Senator Hoke Smith said.

"We will meet in the Senate every day at 10 o'clock in the morning and keep at work until 6 o'clock at night. That will prevent the opposition from delaying the bill by playing with it. We will tire the Republicans out of playing."

A CLOSE SHAVE.

It was made evident today that the fight among the Democrats on the wool and sugar schedules of the bill would be concluded in the caucus, and the leaders assert, the bill can be passed as President Wilson approves it. They admit, however, that it probably will require the vote of Vice-President Marshall to pass the bill, unless Senator Poindexter, the only avowed Progressive in the Senate, votes for the measure.

HIGHER COTTON RATES.

Increases in all articles in the cotton schedule that may be classed as luxuries are to be made by the Senate Finance Subcommittee, members of the committee admitted today, asserting the expensive cotton table covers, table cloths of the finer grades and tapestry articles all would be raised. One reduction in the cotton schedule will be made, the rate on cotton card laps, roping, sliver or roving being reduced from 10 to 5 per cent. On cotton yarns the duties are to be increased to 10 per cent. to be taken as the lowest rate instead of 5.

CITRUS FIGHT SETTLED.

On all the schedules the subcommittees are working industriously. The citrus fruit rate fight was said today to have been practically settled and the subcommittee will report the rate practically as they came from the House.

Senator Bryan of Florida, has introduced an amendment in the Senate raising the rates above the Underwood schedule, but this amendment will have no chance with the recommendation of the Finance Committee against it. The tariff slash in protection for California citrus fruits in all probability will be in the Underwood bill when it is signed by the President.

SURPRISE AND ROUT REBELS.

Federals Pour Deadly Fire Into Insurgents, Twenty of Whom Are Arrested by American Patrol.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAREDO (Tex.) May 31.—Federal forces numbering 250 men surprised nearly 200 Carranzistas at Columbia, 25 miles above Laredo today. They poured in upon the rebels a deadly fire from machine guns, killing twenty-eight men, wounding twenty-eight and taking 106 prisoners. Six Federals were killed. The rebel force, which has been stationed near Columbia for months, conducted a government of their own, collecting customs duties on cattle.

Federal forces under command of Col. Geronimo Villareal left Nuevo Laredo last night for Columbia, arriving at 7 o'clock this morning before the rebels realized the Federals were in the vicinity. The rebels soon became demoralized and fled. Twenty of them crossed the Rio Grande at Minerva and were arrested by the American patrols.

Sheriff Sanchez of Webb county took charge of the prisoners' arms and the men were allowed to return to Mexico. It was reported another battle had taken place at Hidalgo, twenty miles above Columbia, but this was not verified.

Later in the day the rebels were reinforced by 300 men from Hidalgo. When the fresh forces arrived, the Federals are reported to have abandoned many of their prisoners and to have returned to Nievo Laredo, Mex., leaving Colombia again in the hands of the rebels.

POISON CHARGE AGAINST WOMAN.

THREE SUDDEN DEATHS LAID AT DOOR OF MRS. BASYE.

Stepson Succumbs to Strychnine While Writing on Blackboard in Oklahoma School—Mother Says She Thought Capsule Contained Quinine—Sister Burned to Death.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DURANT (Okla.) May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Awaiting trial on a charge of having plotted the death of one of her 10-year-old twin stepsons by administering strychnine, publicly accused by her husband of having caused the death of his aged mother in a similar manner five weeks before, and charged with having burned to death her husband's little daughter in 1911, Mrs. Melissa Hawkins Attaway Basye languishes in jail at Hugo.

Except for her proud and aged parents and an elder daughter, the wife of a prominent physician in a neighboring town, the woman seems to be friendless and alone.

BOY DIES IN SCHOOL.

The death of the boy, Harry Clintin Basye, occurred two weeks ago upon the stage in the auditorium of the Boswell school and in view of hundreds of pupils and parents who had assembled for the closing exercises. A few minutes before the little fellow had asked to be excused from his room, saying he was ill and wanted to go home.

The teacher directed the lad to write his excuse upon the blackboard. While attempting to do this the boy became faint, turned and pleaded, "Teacher, please hand me a drink; I'm sick."

Before the frightened woman could comply the boy fell unconscious. He was taken to a sofa on the auditorium stage, and physicians were summoned. Two arrived too late to render aid. Both declared he had died from strychnine poisoning.

A thorough investigation was instituted. The father was summoned from his work, as was also his wife, the stepmother of the boy, from their home. Basye said the stepmother had called the boy back to the house as he started to school and had insisted that he take a capsule, saying he was not well. The boy obeyed.

THOUGHT IT WAS QUININE.

The wife admits this, but says she thought she gave quinine.

This explanation did not satisfy the father of the boy, for he remembered that scarcely five weeks previously his mother, Mrs. Jennie Campbell, aged 74, had died suddenly at his home a few minutes after having taken a capsule supposed to have contained quinine.

Some misgivings concerning the death of his 8-year-old daughter, Nannie May, who was fatally burned late in the afternoon of November 7, 1911, were also revived and intensified by the tragic death of Harry Basye. The stepmother had told that the girl fell backward into an open grate and was fatally burned.

The boy's body was removed to the family home, and at the direction of his father the stomach was removed and forwarded to the State chemist at Norman for analysis. The report verified the declaration that death was due to strychnine poisoning.

Mrs. Basye was arrested. Next day her husband caused a warrant to be issued charging her with murder. She was moved to Hugo. She is ill now.

DEATH AND SPEEDY BURIAL.

Basye's mother, who died at his home on the night of April 5, owned property at Honey Grove, Texas, and was reputed to be worth about $10,000. He is the only heir.

The elder Mrs. Basye came to Oklahoma to visit her son. Soon after, one night, she died suddenly. The death and the speedy burial caused considerable gossip.

In addition to charging his wife with the murder of his two children and his mother, Basye declares she plotted his death so she might secure his undivided interest in his mother's estate in Texas.

Mrs. Basye is of medium build, 46 years old, possessed of clear-cut prominent features, dark hair, now slightly tinged with gray, and keen, dark eyes. She is a native of Texas. Her parents live near Telephone, Texas, and her father is a planter and a man of means.

When 16 she became the wife of H. W. Attaway, now a merchant of Bennington, Okla. Five children survive. After twenty-six years of wedlock she sued for divorce alleging cruelty.

Mrs. Attaway won her divorce, and in the settlement secured $8000 in cash and property, including the house in which she and Basye have recently resided.

Cook County Establishes a Murder Laboratory.

Will Combat Use of Subtle Poisons and Germs.

Duncan McNally Appointed First Chief Chemist.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cook county now has the only officially designated chemical laboratory for the scientific study of the causes of murder connected with a coroner's office in the United States.

Duncan McNally has been appointed chief chemist for the coroner's laboratory.

"The establishment of a 'crime laboratory' in connection with the coroner's office, while a new thing in America, has been a necessity for several years," said the Coroner today. "In former years, as I pointed out to the County Board, murderers were equipped only with weapons of violence, and the pursuit of the criminal was a non-scientific work. But in recent years murder is worked by scientific means—by new and subtle poisons, by disease germs and by the use of the most modern energies and chemicals discovered. The old-time methods of crime detection and analysis are no longer capable of coping with the brains of modern criminals. No one knows how many murders are covered by physicians' certificates of death, honestly given."

Morosco Engages San Francisco Prima Donna for Leading Part in Los Angeles' Musical Play.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] San Francisco and California interest in the success of "The Tik-Tok Man" in Chicago centers in the fact that the leading role, the Tik-Tok princess, has been assigned to the San Francisco prima donna, Beatriz Michelena, as well as that other circumstance, that the production was given its first trial in California under the direction of Oliver Morosco, the young California producer. Miss Michelena is the daughter of Fernando Michelena, who some years ago was one of America's leading grand opera tenors, and, according to the criticisms from Chicago, she has been most warmly received there.

At 16, Miss Beatriz was playing the leading role in "Princess Chic," and at the conclusion of that engagement she took the part of the "Girl" in the "Girl From Dixie," under the Shuberts' management. He success in that production was so marked that she accepted a contract with Henry W. Savage in "Peggy From Paris," in the role of Peggy. She has appeared in San Francisco also in "The White Hen," "The Girl and the Baron," and a special engagement at the Savoy and MacDonough in John Palmer Slocum's "Kissing Girl."

Miss Michelena is with "The Tik-Tok Man" for a four weeks' engagement, partly because the part was written for her and partly that it is, in a way, a California production. This is her first appearance for several months, her last engagement being with the Orpheum, on which circuit she was spoken of by Polly Pry, one of New York's leading dramatic critics, as the person in whom America would find her first great, great Carmen.

She left the Orpheum to resume her studies for grand opera, and her father, under whom she has done all her training, declares that she is nearly ready for her debut, which will be made in Europe under his direction.

TO LIFT CHEST WITH MAGNET.

Capt. Whitelaw Locates Treasure Trove Off Angel Island, and Proposes to Recover It.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Having located what he believes to be the iron chest which contains $65,000 in gold ingots, at the bottom of the bay off Angel Island, Capt. T. P. H. Whitelaw, whose fame is known in the seaports of the world, will attempt to recover the fortune by means of an electro-magnet.

The safe was dumped from the hold of the steamer H. J. Corcoran, which was rammed and turned turtle after colliding with the steamer Seminole in a dense fog four months ago.

After repeated efforts, Capt. Whitelaw now believes he has located the treasure box, but owing to the depth of the water he has been unable to send a diver down to make a line fast so that the safe might be raised to the surface.

Electro-magnets have often been used in the salvage of specie, but not on this coast.

TO MARRY IN BRAZIL.

Miss Elizabeth Burke, daughter of Mrs. Katherine Sheridan Burke, No. 6235 Ingleside avenue, will leave the city within the next ten days and will sail on June 14 from New York for Rio de Janeiro, where she will be married to Philip Chapin Jones, son of the late Arthur G. Jones, on July 5. Miss Burke will not be accompanied by any member of her own family. Her chaperon will be a relative of Mr. Jones, Mrs. Ellsworth Jones of Rio de Janeiro, who has been visiting in New York and who is expected to return to her South American home on June 14.

The betrothal of Miss Burke and Mr. Jones was announced in the winter and was the result of a University of Chicago romance.

Miss Burke, who was graduated from the university in 1912, was prominent in amateur theatricals with the school and for two years was the author of the Woman's Athletic Association's annual musical comedy. Mr. Jones followed his university training with a course at the Boston Institute of Technology and later became interested in the building of electric railways in Brazil. He will meet his bride-to-be at Rio de Janeiro, and after the wedding they will go to Sao Paulo to reside.

SORORITY WEDDINGS.

The wedding of Miss Burke and Mr. Jones will mark the fourth ceremony in the Chi Rho Sigma Sorority of the university within five weeks. The first of these services was celebrated yesterday in the marriage of Miss Gladys Hallam of the class of 1910, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hallam of Riverside, to Ross O. Hinkle, now of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hinkle of Royal Oak, Mich.

The other ceremonies are to be the marriage of Miss Katherine Coburn, '13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Martin Coburn of Lagrange, to George Waring Thompson, which is to take place on June 14 at Emmanuel Church, Lagrange, and the wedding of Miss Edna Weldon, '10, daughter of Mrs. John Weldon, No. 6025 Jefferson avenue, to Leo Carter de Tray, former university of Chicago football hero, which is to be a service of June 28.

Originally, all four of the services were to have been June events, the four sorority sisters having agreed upon one wedding month. The serious illness of Mr. Hinkle's mother caused Miss Hallam and Mr. Hinkle to advance their wedding day from June 7, to yesterday, when the Rev. Dr. Hermon D. Jenkins of the Riverside Presbyterian Church officiated at a home service.

Presidio Girl Elopes With San Franciscan and Couple Arouse Alameda County Clerk and Oakland Police Judge to Secure License and Perform Ceremony.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Over at the Hotel Oakland, Mrs. John West, who was Ruth Hastings Brooks until her elopement with a grocer's son last night, received the felicitations of friends today.

At their home in the Presidio, Maj. and Mrs. William Hastings Brooks, parents of the army belle, who so unconventionally changed her name, refused to discuss the elopement or whether they had forgiven their daughter.

"I must decline to discuss the incident," said Mrs. Brooks in a tearful voice. "It is of no interest to the public. Yes, it is true, that Ruth was married at a late hour last night in Oakland."

When pressed to say that the young people would receive her blessing, Mrs. Brooks maintained a silence that appears ominous to the elopers.

Maj. Brooks is connected with the Medical Corps at the Presidio.

The young bridegroom, John West, son of James West, wholesale grocer, spoke in pitying terms of the two young army officers at the Presidio whom his bride had jilted and appeared pardonably proud that he was the victor in the three-cornered battle for the hand of the pretty Presidio belle.

"I know father is furious," said Mrs. West.

The decision to be married without the consent of the bride's parents was arrived at yesterday as they lunched together in San Francisco.

Later they met in a taxicab, in which they rode to Oakland.

The County Clerk and a police judge were roused from bed at a late hour to furnish the license and perform the ceremony.

West and his bride had known each other only one month. She is a graduate of Stewart's School in Washington, D. C.

The maroon trains with the Pacific Electric signs on them attracted a large crowd as they passed through here enroute West. The trains had no other cars but the street cars run on their own wheels and the cabooses of the Southern Pacific train crews. The first train left at noon and the second one late this afternoon.

NEMO CORSETS
Preserve your Figure Guard your Health and give you the sharp Silhouette required by the so-called "Corsetless Figure"

$3.00 No322

"Corsetless" figure—that doesn't mean uncorseted. Fact is, the so-called corsetless figure can be produced only by an especially well-fitting corset, which forms the clear-cut silhouette that makes the "corsetless" effect possible. That's wherein the Nemo, with its fine, decided lines, surpasses all other corsets.

"Reduce the hips—let the waist be what it will!" So says Fashion. The Nemo answer is gores, gussets and bands of durable Nemo semi-elastics, which give Fashion's effect more perfectly; a corset that gives you a shape—not a flimsy waist with flappy boning, nor yet a rigid box that yields you neither style nor comfort.

Faddists, and French women with forms no corset can save, may abandon corset-wearing for a time; but the American woman, with her matchless figure—never!

Years of corset-wearing have made the corset a physical necessity—an actual hygienic help, if you wear the right corset. And the woman who yields to the corsetless fad—how shall she regain her figure after the fad dies out?

Flimsy, stretchy materials and weak, ineffective boning are the refuge of manufacturers who don't know how to make well-fitting, easy corsets otherwise.

MORAL—Always wear a NEMO!

More than half a million pairs of Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets Nos. 322 and 324 have been sold since January 1—the greatest popular corset success ever attained. These models have the new Lasticurve-Back—the one big corset sensation of the season, used in several Nemo models—$3.50.

Nemo Nos. 505 and 507 are genuine hip-reducers. See those bands of strong elastic Lastikops Webbing? They give you the "corsetless" silhouette—$5.00.

BE A WISE WOMAN! Insist on the NEMO, and be sure you get the GENUINE.

BLAME IT ON HITCHCOCK.

Recent Complaints Against Postal Service Saddled on Burleson's Predecessor by Department Committee.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Postmaster-General Burleson made public today the report of a special investigation into fiscal affairs of the postal service, charging that during former Postmaster-General Hitchcock's administration, the service did not become self supporting, as was often asserted, but that in 1911 there actually was a deficiency of more than $750,000.

The report charges that "an apparent surplus was attained by unjustifiable methods of book-keeping, "and that the efficiency and morals of the postal service were sacrificed to a "ruthlessly enforced policy of false economy," that a showing of self maintenance might be made. The report attributes to that alleged condition, complaints against the service.

Mr. Hitchcock during his administration and in his reports, claimed that in the year 1909 a deficiency of approximately $17,500,000 had been eliminated entirely and that in the fiscal year 1911, a surplus of more than $200,000 was attained. The report of the "survey" made at the direction of Mr. Burleson says that at no time has there been a legitimate surplus in postal revenues since 1883, and that the Postoffice Department under Mr. Hitchcock's administration in 1911 actually was under a deficit of more than $750,000.

Just before President Wilson took office, the report says, Mr. Hitchcock filled long-standing vacancies, made postponed promotions and assumed commitments to fixed charges for long terms in such a way as to "saddle the new administration with greatly increased expense during the months, if not years, to come."

More than 100 rural mail routes were authorized in three days. The fiscal statement for 1912, purported to show a deficit of $1,785,523, but that sum, the investigators say, was understated by nearly $100,000.

Delay of promotions and filling of vacancies that lapsed, salaries might be returned to the treasury, the report says, caused dissatisfaction among employees and lowered the standard of their efficiency. Employees were transferred from other departments to the postal service, it is charged, "at salaries in excess of the entrance grade," and many certifications to the Civil Service Commission that positions could not be filled by promotion "were unjustified."

Daniel O. Roper, Joseph Stewart, A. M. Dockery, James I. Blakeslee, the four Assistant Postmasters-General, and Merritt O. Chance, chief clerk of the department, made the "survey" and signed the report.

The Progress of the Little Landers

W. E. SMYTHE.

THE old idea is that God makes worlds; the new idea, that God only starts worlds and depends upon man to finish them.

To finish the foothill region, embosomed in the mountains which lie north of the city; to develop and distribute its waters; to subjugate its soil, putting it in the highest condition of tilth and fertility; even to refashion its climate in so far as moisture, light, shade and heat enter into the question of production—this is the job reserved for the Little Landers of Los Angeles.

And bravely have they begun it.

The first word was spoken in behalf of this movement at the Woman's Club House on the evening of March 10, 1913. The House of the Little Landers opened its doors to the public on the morning of March 17.

Today the colony roll contains the names of over 200 families (about one-fourth enlisted from settlers already there) of whom about 250 individuals are now living upon the scene of operations.

Many fine streets have been opened and finished;

Tents and other temporary homes have sprung up like magic;

Permanent structures are beginning to appear:

Water distribution has followed close upon the heels of subdivision and settlement;

Experts have been engaged in various departments, and are beginning their work of instruction;

The weekly "town meeting" is already a flourishing institution;

The co-operative store has been organized with a strong board of directors, and the contract let for the construction of the building in which it will be housed;

The beautiful club-house is rising day by day, with the fireplace which is the equal, if not the superior, of any now possessed by the richest citizens of California;

And above it all two flags float in the balmy mountain breezes—the Stars and Stripes and the Flag of the Little Landers.

And yet this progress of two and a half months is but the feeble prophecy of the achievement that is certain to enrich the prosperity, extend the greatness and widen the fame of Los Angeles in years to come.

A great people and a free people—thousands and thousands—living in the midst of the noblest scenery that America possesses, with a foundation of economic independence and security, with a superstructure of refined and highly-organized social and intellectual life, is the promise of today, as it will be the performance of tomorrow.

The Rising "Temple of The Little Landers Bolton Hall"

Corner stone laid April 12th, above photograph May 28th, to be dedicated (probably) July 4th.

The Lady and the Quarter of An Acre

Miss Zoe Gilbert was for many years engaged in clerical work at La Porte, Ind. Ten years ago she forsook the office to pursue gardening. Delicate woman that she is, she found it less wearisome to work outdoors with the hoe than to work indoors with the pen.

Today she is engaged in beginning a demonstration which shall furnish an answer, so far as the life of the soil is concerned, to Olive Schreiner's argument in "Woman and Labor," about "parasitism." The answer will be that in the refined and scientific life of the soil which is the essence of "little landing" a woman may stand independently, and that one-quarter of an acre is ample for the purpose.

Her lot is 76x150. Plenty of stones were mixed with the rich earth, but under Miss Gilbert's direction those stones have been converted to useful and ornamental ends. Her chimney is a poem; her fireplace, a sonnet; her bungalow is builded on solid foundations, her cellar-way walled with masonry, her porch enriched by cobblestone artistry, the boundary of her small domain neatly walled. Now she is ready to begin.

The aim is self-sufficiency. Grapefruit for breakfast, oranges, nuts and raisins for dessert—all within reach of a slender but skillful hand. Every variety of deciduous fruit, berries and vegetables, with one-sixteenth of an acre covered by the cloth-house that says "nay" to impudent wind and predatory bird and insect, and that embraces much of the daytime heat to hold during the chilly winter nights—that is the plan. A model poultry yard, a hutch of fast-multiplying Belgian or New Zealand hares, a hedgerow of black and loganberries, a couple of stands of bees—

Really, wouldn't it take a genius to starve under such circumstances, even if every factory, store and bank were closed, with hungry millions filling the ranks of the unemployed?

Life of the Organized Community

Miss Gilbert will pay no tribute to middlemen when she buys, for she will have a store of her own, endowed with the capital and ability required to buy at the closest wholesale rates. (The Little Landers Co-operative.) And Miss Gilbert will pay no tribute to middlemen when she sells, for her own agent (The Little Landers Market) will call every day at her gate to take her fresh eggs and poultry, her little surplus of lovingly-cultured fruits, berries and vegetables straight to the consumer in town.

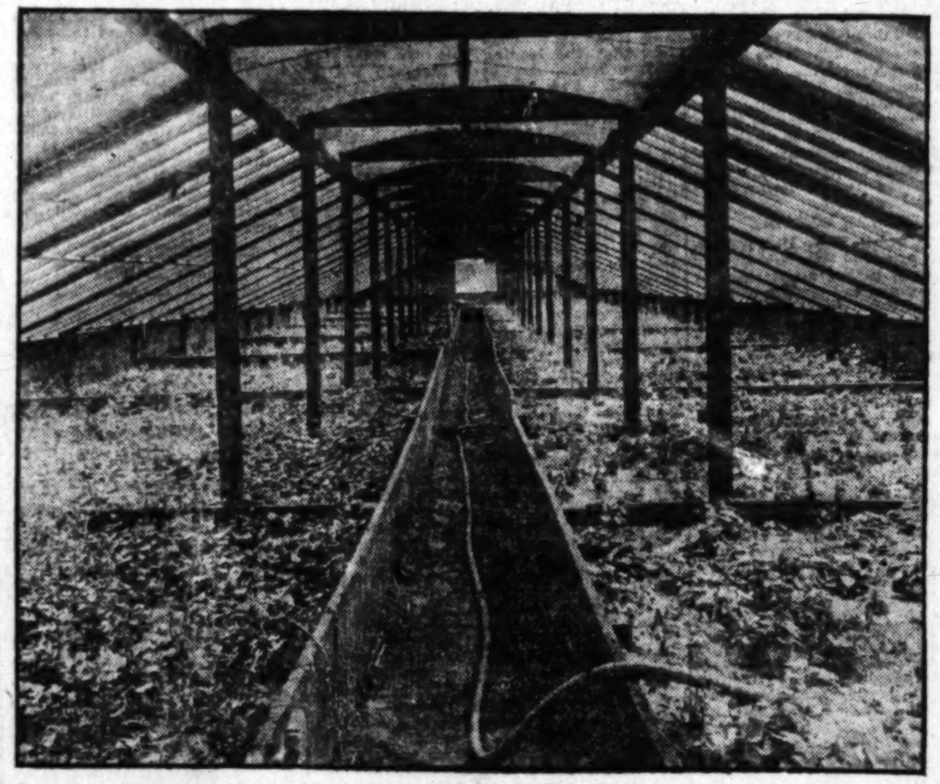
No loneliness for her, with charming neighbors on every hand, and only an hour from the great city. Oh, yes, she will go to the Fashion Show, if she wants to, to the beach, the art gallery, the theater. But she need not leave "the little lands" to find fullest satisfaction for social instinct and intellectual need.

There stands "Bolton Hall," a monument alike to the genius of George Harris, to the author of "A Little Land and a Living," and to the Little Lander's aspiration for all the higher things of life. The "town meeting," the course of lectures on Emerson (already arranged,) the weekly presentation of current events, the musical entertainments, the dance and card party (church and school, as a matter of course,) all within a few hundred feet of the bungalow which is soon to blossom with beauty and fragrance.

From her porch she looks west to smiling San Fernando and the Coast Range; south, to the green-clad Verdugos; north, to the mystery and beauty of Big Tujunga Canyon, while to the east the Sierra Madre leaps up to kiss the sky.

"The Lady and One-Quarter of An Acre"

Miss Zoe Gilbert, whose plans of "Little Landing" are described in accompanying article.



$1000 Minimum Annual Net Income from One-Nineteenth of An Acre

W. W. Burford, Glendale, raises sweet potatoes under glass, but without artificial heat. Size of house, 23½x108; cost $580; total cost of plant, including soil, fertilizer and seed, $980.

Social Significance of the Work

Now if this were only a story of Miss Zoe Gilbert it would not be worth the telling. The fate of the individual is never important. Through all the ages we have seen the individual sacrificed for the good of the social organism. The point of the story is that it is social and organic rather than individual.

What Miss Gilbert is planning to do hundreds will do in her immediate neighborhood, thousands in the Vale of Monte Vista, tens of thousands throughout the foothill region, while over the nation and the world millions will do it.

For the Little Landers movement is epochal and fundamental. It is big with the promise of social peace and human happiness.

Such a very little land, used in the right way, is essential to the welfare and security of a person or a family! And there is so much room in the world that we are using wastefully or not using at all! Why, California alone might readily support the entire present population of the United States in a higher degree of average comfort than it enjoys today.

Compare Miss Gilbert's situation with that of other American women who work for a living. Dr. Henry Smith Williams says:

"One-fifth of the women get less than $200; three-fifths less than $325; nine-tenths, less than $500; only one-twentieth get over $600."

They pay rent; Miss Gilbert has no rent to pay. They buy all they consume; Miss Gilbert will produce a very large proportion of what she consumes, and it will include a number of items that figure among the luxuries of the well-to-do. They may be discharged tomorrow; only God can discharge Miss Gilbert.

The Life of the Little Lander is the most enviable and profitable of anything open to great numbers of cultured, ambitious forehanded men and women.

WOULD CONTROL BANK DEPOSITS.

Senator Burton Pleads for Central Reserve Plan.

But Criticises Democratic Regional Proposition.

Also Denounces Compulsory Guaranty Legislation.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

YOUNGSTOWN (O.) May 31.—Senator Burton, a member of the National Monetary Commission, in an address tonight to the Youngstown Association of Credit Men, came to the defense of the central reserve association proposed by the commission in its plan for financial reform, and criticised as inadequate the regional reserve associations favored by Democrats in Congress. Senator Burton declared that all the benefits that might lie in the regional reserve plan could be found in the central reserve, as well, and insisted that only through such central, authoritative agency could stability be insured in times of financial storm. The regional plan operated with five associations, he said, probably would prove vastly superior to present conditions, but if twenty-five or even fifteen associations were created, he doubted if any benefit would ensue.

"The objections to the regional plan are in the first place that it is not truly national," said the Senator. "Separate and unrelated organizations would seek to maintain their own credit and supply their own customers without regard to the needs of others. There would be no effective unity of action in facing a financial storm.

"It has been well said that the most serious feature of every American financial panic has been the jealous and disgraceful struggle of the different localities to fortify themselves at the expense of each other, instead of working in harmony as they would under one central institution.

"All the advantages which can be obtained from the separation into different regional associations can be as adequately and far more fully secured by the establishment of branches of one central institution. Under the regional plan, in case any one bank should be in trouble, it could have ready resort to the banking resources of but a fraction of the country, while under a central association plan it would have the immediate support and backing of all the banks of the country. In times of slackness when a bank has a surplus to invest, under the central association plan it could seek the very widest field for investment, a field which under the regional plan would be very much limited. The two great objects—an adequate and elastic currency and the proper utilization of reserves—can be best obtained by a central association."

COMPULSORY GUARANTY.

Senator Burton attacked the proposal for the compulsory guaranty of bank deposits as a "tax upon well-managed institutions for the delinquencies of bad judgment, imprudence or dishonesty in the conduct of other institutions, for which they were in no way responsible and whose errors they would have no power of preventing."

He replied to the argument that under the monetary commission plan money would flow to the great centers of trade by declaring that such a flow could no more be controlled than could the tide of population or the waters of a river and that money would naturally seek places where it was in demand, no matter what restrictions were attempted. Control of deposits so that they cannot be diverted to speculative uses, he said, was necessary and feasible.

SIGNED WITH FOUR PENS.

Bryan Ceremoniously Affixes Signature to Formal Announcement of Direct Election Amendment.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—In the presence of a notable company, including many legislators who had to do with its adoption, Secretary Bryan today signed the formal announcement of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution, providing for the direct election of Senators.

Former Representative Harry St. George Tucker of Virginia, chairman of a committee in the Fifty-second Congress having charge of the first direct election of Senators resolution that passed the House; Representative Rucker of Missouri, chairman of the committee in the Sixty-second Congress which had charge of the resolution which finally was adopted, and Senator Borah, who championed the change in the Senate, were present, as was Mrs. Bryan.

Secretary Bryan used four pens to sign the proclamation. The first, which he used to write "William," went to Mr. Tucker; the second, with which he wrote "Jennings," went to Mr. Rucker; the third, with which he wrote "Bryan," he kept for himself, and that with which he wrote the date, he delivered to Senator Borah.

To those assembled, Mr. Bryan expressed his gratification at being the official to proclaim the constitutional change.

Fowler Lodges Most Cases and Collects Almost Enough in Fines to Pay for Prosecutions.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Fines imposed by the Federal Courts against "trusts" during the current fiscal year for alleged violations of the Sherman law aggregate to date $151,957, or more than three-fourths of the $200,000 originally appropriated by Congress for the year's prosecutions of combinations in restraint of trade. Most of this amount has been paid and the remainder is the subject of appeal in the courts.

The largest fines of the year in any one case were those imposed a few days ago in the so-called "coaster brake trust" case, $81,500.

Some of the fines were levied during the administration of former Atty.-Gen. Wickersham and some under the present administration of Atty.-Gen. McReynolds, but all of the cases were in direct charge of James A. Fowler, assistant to the Attorney-General, who has broken the record of all other "trust busters" of the government in the number of anti-trust cases lodged in the courts.

Opposes Proposition to Rob It of Central Pacific.

Lovett Wants to Gain Entry Into San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] If the Wilson administration, through Atty.-Gen. McReynolds, resorts to legal measures in its effect to divorce the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific in order to turn over to the Union Pacific the control of the Central, the Southern Pacific is going to combat this attempt, tooth and nail.

This much was learned today from officials in the Flood building, who are being constantly advised of the details of the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific unmerging conferences in the East. According to these officials, the Southern Pacific does not propose to give up the Central at the mere suggestion of the Attorney-General, but is prepared to expend unlimited means and energy in its effort to retain the Central Pacific, of which the United States Supreme Court made no effort to deprive the Southern Pacific in its unmerging decision.

Judge Lovett, of course, just now represents the Union Pacific, being chairman of the Union Pacific board of directors. Only a short time ago he was chairman of the board of directors of the Harriman system. Deprived of the control of the entire system and now representing the Union Pacific directorate alone, he naturally wants the Central Pacific that the Union may gain an entry to San Francisco. So sure was Judge Lovett that the Union would gain the Central without a struggle that he even vouchsafed the statement on his last visit to San Francisco that this city would be the headquarters of the Central Pacific, and that the latter road would be completely reorganized.

The State Railroad Commission called a halt on the Union Pacific's plans at that time, however, and, following the return of Southern Pacific officials from the eastern conferences, Sproule announced once and for all that the Central Pacific was to remain the Southern Pacific's main subsidiary.

When the State Railroad Commission fight was on, however, Sproule, Herrin and the rest of the Southern Pacific executive contingent were in some inexplicable position whereby they found themselves quite unable to oppose any Union Pacific plan, and they put up what was termed a rather weak affirmance of the Union Pacific's plans. Since that time, however, the fact that the loss of the Central Pacific would seriously impair the Southern Pacific's efficiency as well as its strength has apparently been impressed on them.

No satisfactory reason for their support of Union Pacific in the first legal contest has ever been made. They apparently felt that it was one of the Southern Pacific's secrets.

BLOCKED BY COMMISSION.

The Railroad Commission blocked whatever plan this secret concealed, however, and Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific board of directors, who made himself, as head of the Southern Pacific, conspicuous by his absence at the Railroad Commission's hearing here, has now come to the belief, according to Flood building officials, that the loss of the Central Pacific would be a blow to the Southern Pacific, as has been pointed out repeatedly.

Vice-President W. F. Herrin, legal chief of the Southern Pacific, has wired to Attorney C. W. Durbrow within the last few days instructions which are calculated to change the Southern Pacific's attitude. Durbrow refuses to affirm the receipt of these dispatches. He also refuses to discuss the subject in any form. Nevertheless, Herrin, it is known, is resolved, if the Attorney-General brings suit to dissolve the Central from the Southern Pacific, to contest the government's suit on the chief grounds that the United States Supreme Court made no provision for such a divorce in its dissolution decision. When the court ordered the Union and Central Pacifics to be unmerged, it referred to the Central Pacific only in that it said that it would not object to the Union taking over the Central. There was no order bearing on the Central, however, even though Wickersham and his successor, McReynolds, seem to want to construe the decision that way.

RETROACTIVE LEGISLATION.

The Southern Pacific will maintain that Congress has no right to pass a retroactive act and no power to impair contracts. The facts are that the Central Pacific was leased to the Southern Pacific February 17, 1885, for ninety-nine years. The Sherman law, under which McReynolds must act, if he will act, was passed in July of 1890. The stock ownership of the Central passed to the Southern Pacific in 1898. The main question here involved is this: If the stock ownership of the Central was obtained by the Southern in 1899, in contravention to the Sherman act of 1890, what effect does that ownership have on the validity of the lease of 1885, made five years prior to the passage of the earlier law? The facts seem to speak for themselves, say railroad men.

County Attorney Anxious to Have State Investigate Thoroughly Diamond's Repudiated Confession.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MISSOULA, (Mont.), May 31.—County Attorney Heyfron called today upon Atty.-Gen. Kelly to give him advice with regard to steps to be taken in the case of Frank Diamond, arrested after a confession which he later repudiated, declaring that he is the assassin of Gov. Meagher of the territory of Montana in 1867.

Attorney Heyfron is anxious to have a thorough investigation made and to settle all questions of county jurisdiction and because the crime was committed in territorial days, he has asked the State to intervene in any proceedings. The expense of an investigation going back through nearly a half century also makes it necessary for State action. Diamond is being held in the County Jail here.

MAY ABOLISH STATE HOMES.

KANSAS TO PAY MOTHERS TO KEEP THEIR CHILDREN.

Authorities Deem Home the Best Place for Orphans, Indigent Youngsters and Even Bad Boys and Girls, and Board of Control Proposes to Close Public Institutions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA, (Kan.), May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Kansas may abolish its orphan homes and industrial schools except for the children actually without parents, and it is proposed that in their places the State pay the mothers to take care of their own children. The State board of control, the governing body of eleven State charitable institutions, has been making a study of the orphan homes and industrial schools of Kansas and other States and the board is now ready to present a definite proposition for the use of these institutions for other purposes.

"It has been believed by nearly every one interested in social welfare that the thing to do with the children of indigent parents was to put them in a State home," said H. C. Bowman, chairman of the board of control. "There are a few bad boys and girls that have to be taken care of, but the majority of the boys and girls who become delinquent, incorrigible and later develop into criminals are the victims of environment. They have poor homes.

WANT SYSTEM CHANGED.

"We have been taking boys and girls away from their homes and subjecting them to the discipline of industrial schools or orphan homes of the State and making real men and women out of them. But we have been experimenting and investigating and the board believes this is the wrong system. The proper place for training is in the home and the proper disciplinarian is the mother. The State is interested in every boy and girl and the State must see that they are properly brought up. This board is going to the next Kansas legislature with the facts and figures to show that it will be cheaper for the State and better for the children to change the system. To maintain the orphan homes and industrial schools the State now owns, costs $5 a week for each child. That, of course, includes interest on the State's property investment. The actual maintenance expense is not quite so high, say about $3 a week.

"We propose that instead of a child being taken away from its mother and sent to a State institution, that the State pay the mother for taking care of the child.

FAVORS REAL HOMES.

"We want a juvenile officer in each county to look after the delinquent children. If the mother is really capable to take charge of a child and can give it the attention needed, to make a good citizen, then she is to be paid a sufficient amount each week to maintain those children so that she will not have to work hard and spend much of her time away from them. During school days the mother ought to be at home when the children are there to direct their play and look after their studies and discipline, instead of bending over a wash tub or sewing machine or being behind a counter.

"The probation officer is also to be required to hunt up home employment for her. If the Juvenile Court should find that the mother is not the proper person to have charge of the child, then we propose to send it to a real home somewhere in the State, not a State institution, but an actual home, where the child can have the best of care and discipline, and the State will pay the cost.

"Our plans are being worked out in detail now, and in a short time we will begin an educational campaign throughout the State to get the people thoroughly acquainted with this problem and its solution before the next legislature meets."

BIRD OF PREY HIS EMBLEM.

Bryan Apes Royalty, Going Back to Alexander the Great for Private Seal Design.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Secretary Bryan has just made for himself a private seal of which he is especially proud. It is a replica of the design on a coin that was circulated in the time of Alexander the Great, which Col. Bryan obtained while on his tour around the world. The design discloses a man holding a bird aloft. The bird is said to resemble a falcon, but Secretary Bryan, whose peace propensities are well known, insists it is a "dove of peace."

Bryan had not become the head of the State Department long before he realized the onerous task of affixing his own signature to the enormous mass of correspondence which comes over his desk. So he hit upon the scheme of a private seal and stamp bearing the words: "William J. Bryan" and his name will be stamped upon all documents and papers of a purely routine character.

Just for Fun.

COLLEGE MAIDS AGAIN TO FARE.

Pretty Gowns, Clever Roles and Beaming Faces.

Two Playlets Produced by College Women's Club.

Fund Realized to Send Girl Through School.

No magical June nights of college campus ever held half the witchery which swept the stage of the Gamut Club last night, when a brilliant score of the College Woman's Club membership invited the public to share their "Creative Evening."

Loveliness vied with talent in the clever presentation, which comprised the refreshing event, until one hardly knew whether it was the beauty of actors, singers and writers, the stunning effect of pretty gowns, or the clear merit of the productions, which gave the evening its sparkle and flooded it with enchantment and applause.

Two playlets of one act each, and four musical numbers contributed to the evening's entertainment. Both the plays and the music were written and given by the club members. As a curtain-raiser they presented "Society," written by Mrs. Edna Weh Sterrett and Miss Sybil E. Jones.

This is the story of the climber known of all women, suspected by a few men, and loved by none. The climber has a husband. Climbers are often thus incumbered, although they do not use the fact of their misfortune for advertising purposes. He is only an adjunct of the expense account.

This climber also has a daughter who is enough akin to her father to preserve her naturalness in the presence of a purely artificial mother. After a long and vain struggle, the climber sees her husband and daughter going everywhere without trying to get anywhere and the daughter tells the mother that the reason they get everything is that they want nothing.

PLAYS LEADING ROLE.

Mrs. Isabelle McReynolds Grey, in the leading role of Betty, the artist daughter, won the hearts of her audience with her finished and vivid work. At the University of California Mrs. Grey was for two years president and leading woman of the Masque and Dagger Society. Since leaving college she has edited one book of English and written another now being used in the freshman course at Berkeley.

Other members of the cast who made good were Margaret Phillipson, Edith Everett and Louise Gatch. Miss Gatch is a new member, who recently arrived from the East, being a Wellesley woman, and who won local favor this spring in the May festival at Pasadena. Mrs. Sterrett, one of the authors, is a Stanford woman and the author of "Posting for a Husband," a two-act drama which the club recently produced.

"THE CUTE FRESHMAN."

"The Cute Freshman," a college comedy in one act, by Mrs. Eileen Salyer Hitchcock, gave the audience thirty minutes of laughter. In New York a man wrote a play without an actress in it and the critics said it was like a sin without a woman. The Cute Freshman never does appear in this play nor does any one of the men who have precipitated the predicament on which the play hinges. In this play the men are in the shadowy discreet background as men should always be in a college woman's club, but it is something that they are even taken for granted. It is enough that they should be mentally tolerated as a sort of necessary evil, although they are neither to be seen nor heard. They exist for the play in a sort of hazy abstraction.

A bunch of college girls are planning to go to the junior promenade. Each of their escorts telephones that he cannot come, but that he will send a cute freshman as a substitute. In the end the distress is relieved by a confession by wire that the brave juniors are coming after all.

The college girls were Eileen Salyer Hitchcock, Elsie Wagoner, Elene Mitchell, Mary Foster, Edith Englehardt, Ella Stearns Prendegast, Mary Finch, Edith Spencer, Marion Whitney and Mrs. Gertrude Upton Bradley. They entered into their parts with the true spirit of comedyand comedy and made a decided hit. "Billy" proved to be a great fun-maker and the play closed with a bang.

The "Broken Narcissus," with words and music by Mrs. Isabel MacReynolds Grey; "The land of Right Here," "Wherefore" and "Thou Art Mint," with music by Alberta Jones and words respectively by Miss Sybil E. Jones, Ada J. Miller and Nina Updyke, comprised the enjoyabale musical programme.

The funds raised are for the scholarship fund of Miss Hazel Everts, a girl who was graduated with honors from the Glendale High School after having earned her way as a night operator for one of the local telephone companies while she devoted her days to school work. She was the star debater of the Glendale school and is specializing in English at Berkeley for newspaper work.

BIBLE SCHOOL'S CORNER-STONE.

Million-Dollar Structure Is Well Under Way.

Impressive Ceremonies on the Institute's Foundation.

Has Small Beginning in Class of Boys and Girls.

The corner-stone of the Los Angeles Bible Institute was laid at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies in the presence of a large crowd of friends. The magnificent structure is being erected at Sixth and Hope streets and when completed will represent an outlay of about $900,000. The two tall portions of the building will be thirteen stories high, and between them a great auditorium, with a seating capacity of 4500. The corner-stone, which was placed yesterday, is at the main entrance to this auditorium.

The ceremonies were directed by Rev. T. C. Horton, superintendent of the Bible Institute; the invocation was by Dr. J. H. Hunter, a member of the faculty; scripture reading by Giles Kellogg, a director.

Rev. E. P. Ryland, president of the Church Federation, delivered an address in which he expressed for all churches congratulations upon the fact that the city is to have an institution founded upon a belief in the entire truth of the Bible.

Superintendent Horton placed the following articles in the copper box, which after being soldered to make it airtight, was placed in the stone: all the newspapers of the city dated May 31; copies of The King's Business, the institute publication; statement of doctrine, circulars and catalogue of the institute; list of officers, directors, workers, and students; names of architects, builder and assistants; copy of "What the Bible Teaches," and a copy of the Schofield Reference Bible.

Lyman Stewart, president of the institute, after delivering an address, placed the box in the niche prepared for it, with a trowel placed mortar under the huge stone which was then lowered into place by the block and tackle which held it.

Dr. R. A. Torrey, dean of the institute, delivered an address upon the general work of the institution, in which he declared that it is founded upon a belief in every book, chapter and verse of the Bible. The closing prayer was made by Rev. A. B. Prichard, vice-president. The Institute quartette sang several numbers and the assembly several hymns.

The corner-stone is a piece of gray granite in the form of a Maltese cross, and bears the following inscription: "Dedicated unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood. A. D. 1913."

The following constitute the board of directors: Lyman Stewart, Rev. A. B. Prichard, William Thorn, J. M. Irvine, Giles Kellogg, Robert Watchorn, S. I. Merrill, H. A. Getz, E. A. K. Hackett, R. A. Torrey, T. C. Horton.

The institute is unique among the Bible schools of the country. Its growth has been phenomenal. From a day class of a dozen five years ago it has grown to a class of over 100 students.

The institute has ten departments with a force of thirty-two workers. In every department there is the evidence of devotion to a great purpose. The workers and students are going to churches, schools, hospitals, jails, to the streets and offices and shops, and are proving the practicability of an aggressive, sane effort in personal evangelism.

The need of a large plant for the conservation of the work became evident several years ago and the foundations of the building now laid are a prophecy of the great work to which the institute has been called.

It had its origin in a class for young men organized seven years ago by Superintendent T. C. Horton, known as the "Fishermen's Club," and a class of young women, organized by Mrs. T. C. Horton, called the "Lyceum Club." These classes, meeting at night, have been instrumental in reaching hundreds of young people.

The institute has had a widespread influence upon the Christian life of the young men and women of the State. The calling of Dr. R. A. Torrey last year as dean of the school has brought to its working force a great Bible instructor and successful leader. The directors plan for great conventions and conferences in the new auditorium and hope to have the leading preachers and teachers of the world giving messages from its platform.

It is expected that the new auditorium will be ready for occupancy in the early fall, though the entire structure will not be completed by that time. The fifth anniversary of the institute will be celebrated this afternoon in the First Methodist Church, when Dr. Torrey will deliver an address.

READY TO GO AHEAD.

Permit Issued for Construction of Eight-story Loft Block on South Broadway—Large Contract Let.

The largest permit granted during the past week by the building department was that for the construction of the $225,000 Isaacs Bros. block on the west side of Broadway between Seventh and Eighth streets. The structure, a perspective of which recently appeared exclusively in The Times, will be eight stories in height and of reinforced concrete construction. It occupies a ground area of 120x140 feet and is of Gothic design.

The Richards-Neustadt Construction Company, which is building the Isaacs block, also has been awarded the contract for erecting a five-story reinforced concrete loft structure projected by Mrs. Magdalena Sabichi for the site at Nos. 753-59 South Los Angeles street. Plans for the building were drawn by Morgan, Walls & Morgan and these call for a structure 116x140 feet in size and costing in the neighborhood of $120,000.

TRACT OPENED.

Edwin G. Hart, manager and general sales agent for the North Whittier Heights subdivision, reports that about 1500 persons attended the formal opening of that property to the market during the past week. Over one hundred realty men were present. A feature of the entertainment programme was a rodeo participated in by a band of cowboy riders. Those present also enjoyed a barbacue presided over by Jose Romero.

Laying the corner-stone of the Los Angeles Bible Institute.

The foundation of the great reinforced concrete structure, which will cost almost a million dollars, yesterday received the copper box containing articles that may only again come to light as ancient history. Center, Lyman Stewart, president, laying the stone; left, Rev. T. C. Horton, superintendent; right, Dr. R. A. Torrey, dean.

Party wishes to place before a few of the select an opportunity to see and secure an ART TREASURE of priceless value.

RINGS APPEAL TO GET VOTES.

Conference Committee Shows Great Confidence.

But Insists that Everybody Must Cast Ballot.

Wilmington Enthusiasts Put Up Bustling Front.

Declaring that the time has come when the voters of Los Angeles must go to the polls and insure a common-sense, economical, efficient management of the city's business the Executive Committee of the Municipal Conference last evening issued a ringing appeal for a united support of John W. Shenk, Albert Lee Stephens and the entire Conference Councilmanic ticket.

"John W. Shenk is going to be elected Mayor on Tuesday next," confidently declares the statement. "There is only one possible way to defeat him, and that is for citizens who favor his candidacy to neglect their duty by not voting.

"Just as important as the election of an efficient, capable Mayor is the election of an efficient, business-like Council to support his administration, aid in shaping sound municipal policy and see that it is carried into execution.

"Under our new charter amendment, each Councilman will be practically the head of a department. We must have in these positions men of experience, business ability and executive capacity.

"The Municipal Conference has indorsed for Council seven candidates. They are J. S. Conwell, F. C. Langdon, H. Z. Osborne, John W. Snowden, H. F. Vollmer, F. J. Whiffen and Alexander MacKeigan.

"Vote for these seven men and two others of your choice. The election of these candidates insures a common-sense, economical, efficient management of the city's business, with the maximum of results and the minimum of useless oratory, frivolous legislation and grand-stand playing.

"What is the use of the election if we put back into office all the members of the present Council who are standing for re-election?

"Do not single-shot for any one Council candidate you may wish to render special aid. Vote for nine. Single-shotting or voting for any number less than nine is wrong in principle, and it is unpatriotic. In the present campaign, if practiced, it will certainly result in the election of two, and probably three Socialist candidates for Council.

"Elect Conwell, Langdon, MacKeigan, Osborne, Snowden, Vollmer and Whiffen and let us enter upon two years of municipal progress, activity and accomplishmtnt. We have had enough of talk, delay and inefficiency.

(Signed)

"EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,

"Municipal Conference of 1913.

"Louis W. Myers (chairman,) Dell A. Schweitzer, Stoddard Jess, Russ Avery, F. W. Braun, James A. Anderson, Charles G. Andrews, George H. Black, Louis M. Cole, H. H. Cotton, J. W. Carrigan, J. M. Elliott, W. W. Mines, M. J. McGarry, Meyer Lissner, E. A. Meserve, Bradner W. Lee, Marshall Stimson, R. A. Collins, Mrs. Oliver C. Bryant, Mrs. Oliver P. Clark, Mrs. Mary S. Gibson, Mrs. George Goldsmith, Mrs. John S. Myers, Mrs. Andrew S. Lobingier, Mrs. Mathew Robertson, Mrs. J. B. Stearns, Miss Alice J. Stevens, Mrs. R. H. F. Variel and Miss Helen Wisler."

"SHENK WILL WIN."

Meyer Lissner, chairman of the Campaign Committee, expressed his satisfaction with the situation last night and declared that in his opinion Shenk is as good as elected, if the vote can be brought to the polls, and to this end elaborate plans have been laid.

"Election prognostications by campaign managers are usually hot air," said Lissner. "I could give figures, columns of them, but I prefer to let the other side do the figuring while we saw wood. This much is certain. Shenk has been gaining and Rose steadily losing during the past week. Rose's alliance with McCarthy was the last straw—the thing which brought thousands of waverers to Shenk and took away from Rose thousands of others upon whom a great light dawned.

"Now it is only a question of getting out the vote. The Shenk majority is there. It is up to the friends of decency to register their verdict."

WILMINGTON IN LINE.

A Shenk meeting under the auspices of the Municipal Conference was held yesterday afternoon at No. 310 Canal street, Wilmington, where Mrs. C. H. Eubank, assisted by a number of leading women of Wilmington, had the arrangements in hand. Shenk was the principal speaker and the candidate's strength in the harbor boroughs was revealed in the frequent applause which greeted his remarks. Shenk discussed the harbor work, and declared that his policy as Mayor would be to proceed with the development and hasten results rather than spend his time in talking about what ought to be done.

"I know," he said, "what ought to be done, and I also know what ought not to be done. I will see that the right thing is done, and I want the people of Wilmington in matters affecting the interests of the community to advise with me all all times."

Mrs. Edgar German presided at the meeting and telling speeches were made by Mrs. German, Marshall Stimson, Miss Alice J. Stevens and others. Upon Mr. Shenk's return to the city at 5 o'clock he addressed the women's meeting arranged by Mrs. Brainerd at the Alexandria. In the morning at 8:30 he talked to a large and interested crowd at the municipal market and concluded a strenuous day by addressing four Municipal Conference meetings in the evening.

FOR A CLEAN CITY.

WOMEN IN EARNEST.

The women of Los Angeles demonstrated yesterday that a political meeting is not a tea party, simply because it is held in the parlors of a big hotel. They also proved that they are as much in earnest about political issues even if their meetings take on a social aspect as they would be if their gatherings were held in some cheerless hall.

More than 500 persons attended the reception for Shenk, held in the Alexandria ball-room yesterday afternoon, with Mrs. Edward Rankin Brainerd as hostess, under the auspices of a committee of fifty women which is headed by Mrs. Edward C. Bellows and working with the Municipal Conference. From a purely political aspect the meeting was one of the most favorable expressions yet made in favor of Shenk as opposed to an open town.

Mrs. Bellows presided and the principal speach was made by Mrs Shelly Tolhurst, who spoke with eloquence and candor of the issues at stake and she was interrupted again and again by enthusiastic applause. Mrs. Tolhurst declared that this fight for the mastery of Los Angeles is only the beginning of a campaign to secure control of all of California before the opening of the fall in 1915.

As far as public ownership is concerned this city has taken its stand, the speaker declared. It is for justice and fairness to the power companies and their bond holders, but while the city is willing to wait long and patiently, it looks eventually to the certain control of the public ownership of its utilities. John W. Shenk understands the city's wishes in this respect and is pledged to follow them. He understands how dear to the city is its magnificent enterprise, the Owens River Aqueduct, which winds like a trail of glory and like a shining wordless poem over 225 miles from the greenest hills of the world through its fairest valleys to the city beyond compare, and he will protect the interests of this city in that splendid project.

After briefly discussing the business reasons for the election of Shenk as Mayor, Mrs. Tolhurst took up the social evil and delicately, yet cadidly, went to the heart of this difficult subject, mercilessly flaying all those who would advocate segregation, or any other compromise with white slavery. Mrs. Tolhurst's speech was followed by remarks from Clifford Howard, Mrs. Bellows and others. Afterwards there was a social hour.

MINISTERS' CANDIDATES.

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Ministerial Campaign Committee has issued the following statement and appeal to the voters of the city:

We gladly recognize the high degree of educational efficiency in our public schools along many lines, and have no desire to reflect in any way upon the qualifications of the teaching force as a whole.

We believe there should be no sectarian or anti-religious teaching in our public schools, and we protest against that spirit in teaching which would weaken the reverence or undermine the faith of the child.

We believe we have a right to inquire into the personal habits of those who conduct our public schools, as the directors of a bank have a right to protect their financial interests by inquiring into the personal habits of those to whom they entrust their business. Because, therefore, of the power of personal example, we protest against cigarette smoking and drinking of intoxicating liquors on the part of certain of our educational leaders.

We believe in the use of the public schools as social centers, but are opposed to their use for promiscuous and public dancing as indorsed by the present Board of Education, as undemocratic, and intellectually and morally detrimental to our young people.

Since the present Board of Education has taken no action defining its attitude on these questions, and is not disposed to correct the evils which are known to exist, we believe the election of the seven following persons would be for the best interests of the childhood and youth of our city. We urge upon all to vote for the following:

H. W. Frank, Mrs. Hester T. Griffith, James M. Guinn, W. Scott Lewis, John J. Steadman, Frank I. Wheat, and Mrs. Emma J. Wolfe.

[Signed] J. A. Geissinger, pastor University Methodist Church; Charles Edward Locke, pastor First Methodist Church; William Horace Day, pastor First Congregational Church; Russell F. Thrapp, pastor First Christian Church; J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor Temple Baptist Church; F. M. Larkin, district superintendent of Los Angeles district, Methodist Church; J. C. Pinkerton, pastor First United Presbyterian Church; C. E. Cornell, pastor First Nazarene Church; Edwin P. Ryland, pastor First Methodist Church, Hollywood, and Edward Campbell, pastor First Presbyterian Church. Committee for Ministerial Association.

[It was a great mistake for this committee to recommend Mrs. Wolfe. She is a Socialist of the extreme type, a friend of Darrow and the McNamaras. Editor of The Times.]

OF ALL NATIONS.

A Rose mass meeting for foreign-born citizens was held last evening in Turner Hall, No. 321 South Main street, under the direction of Max Binheim. John Luckenbach presided, and besides Police Judge Rose the speakers included H. Loewenthal, Max E. Socha and John Castera.

THE LAST WORD.

Three hundred district managers and precinct workers met at Municipal Conference headquarters last evening and listened to some straight talk on organization and vote-getting. There was plenty of enthusiasm and a feeling of optimism throughout the meeting which presages the success of the Conference ticket on Tuesday.

CLOSING THE CAMPAIGN.

The Municipal Conference closed its speaking campaign with four big street meetings last evening in the southeastern part of the city. Shenk and several Councilmanic candidates addressed these meetings and the candidate for Mayor evoked applause with every mention of his stand on the issues of the campaign. The meetings were at East Adams street and Central avenue, Compton avenue and Thirty-eighth street, Compton avenue and Fiftieth street, and Central avenue and Fifty-fifth street. The last meeting to be addressed by Shenk will be held in his home precinct at Turquoise street and the Pacific Electric tracks tomorrow evening at 7:30.

SHENK THE MAN.

AS OTHERS SEE HIM.

I favor Mr. Shenk for Mayor, for the reason that I believe him to be a man of integrity and honor, who will keep his word in using his influence to abolish the white slave traffic and whisky, which if accomplished will make Los Angeles an ideal city. Mrs. M. F. Price, No. 4704 South Bonnie Brae street.

HE KNOWS HOW.

I am for John W. Shenk, because he has been intimately connected with and efficient in the management of the city's problems incident to its development of the aqueduct and the harbor. D. Dain L. Tasker, No. 1275 Bellevue avenue.

AN EFFICIENT OFFICER.

I favor John W. Shenk, because I believe that he will capably and honestly administer the affairs of this city in the best interests of all. J. M. Elliott, No. 914 West 28th street.

STANDS FOR THE RIGHT.

I am glad to support John W. Shenk for Mayor. I favor the element and the issues he represents. Mr. L. A. McClure, No. 2637 Dalton avenue.

EFFICIENCY ASSURED.

I favor Mr. Shenk because he is much better acquainted with all the works of the present administration, and in a much better position to carry the different propositions to a successful finish than his opponent. George C. Flint, Wilmington, Cal.

HIS CLEAN-CUT VIEWS.

He is clean-cut in his views of city policy. He has a clean record as a public officer. He has a good reputation as a private citizen. He has the courage to stand for the right as he sees it. He has a practical and intimate knowledge of the city's needs and of the city's resources. He has both the capacity and the willingness to work. Melville Dozier, No. 825 West 11th Street.

SHENK IS ASTUTE.

From a personal knowledge of him extending over some years, I know how absolutely astute he is, how impossible it is to successfully misrepresent affairs to him, to make him believe bad motives are good ones, or vice versa. He never lies, and yet, is courteous when he cannot agree with you. Charles Wellborn, County Courthouse.

I shall vote for John W. Shenk for Mayor because he is not only thoroughly honest and capable to perform the duties which the office will require of him, but also because I believe his experience as City Attorney and familiarity with all the various departments of our city government, his independence of character and freedom from unholy alliances make him an ideal Mayor who will give us our ideal administration. Last but not least, he is a cultivated, scholarly gentleman, a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan University, a man whom the people can trust and of whom every citizen of this beautiful city will be justly proud. S. P. Mulford, 615 Van Nuys building.

John W. Shenk is a man whose mental balance is as pronounced as are his upright principles. His years of training as City Attorney will enable him to fill the office as Mayor. His firm belief in doing unto others as he would have others do unto him will make him false to none and fair to all. Abbie L. Greene, No. 1200 West Twenty-ninth street.

A SUNDAY NIGHT RALLY.

The Los Angeles Advanced Protective League, which is out for Shenk and Stephens, will hold a public meeting at Blanchard Hall at 7:30 this evening. Col. George N. Black is to be the principal speaker, and musical features will provide an added inducement.

AUTOS ARE NEEDED.

J. S. Colwell, manager of the automobile department at the Municipal Conference headquarters, has issued the following statement.

To automobile owners:

The response to our request for automobiles to be used on election day has been prompt and generous, and we desire to express our appreciation.

We are, however, in need of many more automobiles for election-day use, and earnestly urge all who can do so to make use of their cars on that day to carry voters to the polls.

Notify the headquarters—phones Broadway 6464, Home 60583. Or you may take your automobile into your home precinct for at least a part of the day. It is extremely important in the latter hours of the day to see that all voters who desire to vote are taken to the polls. Please help in this work.

Neighborhood Meetings.

A neighborhood meeting for Precinct No. 147 was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Chase, No. 1521 Van Ness avenue. Mrs. W. C. Tyler spoke on behalf of the Shenk candidacy.

A WARNING

A great injustice is being done not only Luther Burbank himself, but the general public which is being imposed upon by individuals and companies offering for sale cactus which they claim to be the Burbank Spineless Cactus, and by stock jobbers trading on the Burbank name. It is our duty to warn innocent purchasers against all these men and propositions. We particularly call your attention to the half-wild, thorny cactus sold under the Burbank name. It is neither BURBANK nor SPINELESS cactus.

The Luther Burbank Co. is the sole distributor of the original Luther Burbank productions and you can only be sure of obtaining genuine by seeing that the Luther Burbank Seal accompanies every purchase you might make. It is YOUR protection.

The Luther Burbank Company has NO AGENTS, NO REPRESENTATIVES. We have our own branch office in Los Angeles at 402 Van Nuys Building.

Luther Burbank's Spineless Cactus is of vital importance to every farmer.

—because it will grow with but 3 to 6 inches of rainfall a season—and you know what this means in the light of the comparative drought of the last two seasons.

—because it will produce 100 tons of forage per acre per year without irrigation.

—because of the wonderful increased milk flow that follows its feeding to your cows.

—because it will grow in any land where any forage will grow.

The Luther Burbank Company is the sole distributor of the Burbank Horticultural productions and from no other source can any one be positively assured of obtaining the genuine Luther Burbank Creations.

They have treated over 100,000 cases in the past twenty years—an experience rarely ever granted any specialists—and have gleaned therefrom information that is invaluable to sick people. They would not attempt to treat Scarlet Fever or Diphtheria at any price, not because they don't know how, but because they have not given it the thought and constant study that other doctors have, and, in short, it is not in their line of specialties. Every moment is given to studying CATARRH, CHRONIC and NERVOUS DISEASES. There is where they excel and there is where they can serve you better than most any one else. Don't be a permanent invalid.

Drs. Shores know what causes Catarrh. They know how to cure it. They know what causes Stomach Trouble. They know how to CURE it, instead of merely relieving it. NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

MILLIONAIRES HAVE TROUBLES.

Oak Knoll Crowd Trying to Usher in Millennium.

New Police Chief Takes Charge This Morning.

General Manager McMillan Gladdens With Promises.

PASADENA, June 1.—Since the millionaires of Oak Knoll organized the Oak Knoll Improvement Association and grappled with some of the difficulties that beset them troubles have multiplied.

They are now in a fair way soon to have the unsightly poles removed from their part of the city and the wires put in conduits, and yesterday their negotiations with the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation over new gas mains was brought to a conclusion, but the third matter they have in hand, the prevention of the ruination of the scenery on picturesque Canyon drive, is keeping them in hot water.

Until a few weeks ago they had but one target on which to direct their broadside and that was the city of Pasadena. They sought to persuade the City Council to cease dumping brickbats into the stream that flows along the road and to have the superintendent of streets repair the road itself. Now the road has become the boundary line between Pasadena and the recently-incorporated town of San Marino, and they are referred first to one municipality and then the other. When in desperation they appeal to the county they are told that the county no longer has jurisdiction in the matter.

"We don't know what to do," said A. M. Drake of No. 1270 Hillcrest avenue last night. "Some of the Pasadena Commissioners have been out here looking at the road, and we are in hopes that something will be done pretty soon."

This little stretch of country lane, which is one of the prettiest spots in or near Pasadena, is the pride of Oak Knoll. It loops down into a hollow, from which nothing of the city is visible, and where there are many trees with heavy foliage and a babbling brook winding in and out among them. Residents of the neighborhood determined that they would permit nothing to be done that would make any inroads on its pristine beauty, when the creek rose and washed out the banks and the city dumped several loads of broken bricks in to repair the damage.

A delegation of Oak Knoll residents appeared before the City Commissioners yesterday and stated that a compromise had been effected between themselves and the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation by which they would accept a high instead of low-pressure system, and the Commissioners granted the company permission to lay the pipes. Four-inch and two-inch mains will be put in.

CHANGE TODAY.

W. S. McIntyre, the new Chief of Police, will assume the duties of the office this morning. Former Chief of Police William H. Wood closed his incumbency last night and turned over the affairs of the office to his successor. He will leave at once for El Centro, in the Imperial Valley, where he has made arrangements to engage in the real estate and insurance business.

"I don't know whether I have done best to leave Pasadena or not," he said last night, "but I must go where I can better myself, and I believe that property values are going to soar in the Imperial Valley. It looks to me as if there is going to be a tremendous increase in real estate sales throughout Southern California and in this part of the State particularly."

McIntyre said last night that he would have nothing to say of any contemplated changes in the work of the police department at the present time.

"If any changes are made it will be later," he said. "For the present things will go on as they are now going."

Three other city officials besides former Chief Wood went out of office yesterday as the result of the recent change of municipal government and the coming in of a new administration. They were William H. Reeves, who for eight years had been City Electrician, and who is succeeded by Fred Vore; Building Inspector W. S. C. Stevens, succeeded by John H. Simpson, and City Attorney James S. Bennett, succeeded by John Munger.

TO BEGIN WORK SOON.

The Board of Trade yesterday made public a letter written under date of May 29 to William F. Knight, now president of the organization, formerly chairman of the Transportation Committee, by J. McMillan, general manager of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, bearing on the proposed new line between this city and Los Angeles. The communication reads in part:

"We believe—in fact we know—that the people of Pasadena are anxious for such improved service and are going to do everything in their power to aid us in performing such service, and if we can receive as liberal treatment from other city and county officials having jurisdiction in such matters in the direction indicated we should by this new route be able to give a passenger service to satisfy the most exacting demands. We have the rails and ties; in fact, I believe that practically all of the construction material is on hand, and as soon as certain matters with which you are familiar are cleared up in a way satisfactory to all concerned this new construction and reconstruction will doubtless be proceeded with without delay.

"At any rate the construction of the double track link between Ramona Junction and Shorb Station and the southern city limits of South Pasadena can be proceeded with without delay, as, so far as I know, there is no impediment in the way of perfecting plans to that extent at least.

"If no impediment is placed in the way we expect to see this in the very near future the fastest double track interurban line serving the population of two large cities anywhere on the Coast."

CITY BRIEFS.

In order that the chances of a woman's being elected to the Board of Education next month might not be jeopardized by having too many candidates in the field, there having been three, Mrs. Lauretta Barnaby yesterday withdrew in favor of Mrs. S. W. Odell. Charles R. Burger yesterday entered the race.

Resolutions of condolence to the bereaved of those who lost their lives in the Long Beach disaster were adopted yesterday by the Pasadena Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Rev. E. Arends, who recently was called to the pastorate of the Evangelical St. John's Church of this city, will preach his first sermon there this morning.

The winning of a game over Glendale by the Pasadena High School baseball team yesterday at that city puts the local team in line for championship honors. Glendale and Pasadena now both have a game. Whichever wins the next game to be played will play the Long Beach High School for the championship.

PALMS WOMAN SLAYS HERSELF.

Despondent Because of Long Illness She Fires Bullet Into Her Brain. Inquest Will be Held.

PALMS, May 31.—Mrs. D. D. Hill, aged 36, who resides at Fourth and Eucalyptus street, killed herself shortly after 12 o'clock today by firing a bullet from an old army Colts revolver into her brain. She was despondent from long illness. The body was taken to the Finch undertaking parlors at Sawtelle, and the Coroner, who has been notified, will make an inquiry.

Mrs. Charles Claybourne, a sister of Mrs. Hill, has been nursing her for many months. Several times, it is stated, Mrs. Hill has threatened to end her life. She found her husband's pistol in a bureau drawer while Mrs. Claybourne was out of her room for a moment today. Mrs. Claybourne heard a shot, hastened to the chamber and found her sister expiring on the floor. She leaves a widower and LONG BEACH MAY RAZE AUDITORIUM BUILDING.

LONG BEACH, May 31.—A pile of new lumber lying on Seaside boulevard directly in front of the auditorium gave rise today to the report that the city contemplated repairs, but the Mayor and Board of Public Works gave prompt denial, saying the lumber had been intended to enlarge the stage for commencement proceedings of the grammar graduates next Friday. It has been lying there for a week but in the excitement of the days no one apparently gave it any thought until today. Mayor Hatch and President Craig, on whom will rest the burden of the future of the ill-starred building, said today that no active work of repairs or demolition will be undertaken until it has been surrendered by the District Attorney, who took control of it in the name of the county last Saturday and placed it in charge of members of the State militia who are standing regular guard about the death pit. When the grand jury has taken action relative to fixing the responsibility of the disaster and has again turned over the building to the city the Council will probably take immediate action as to its future. There is a strong feeling throughout the city that the building should be razed in conformity with the recommendation of the Coroner's Board of Inquiry which reported that it was unsafe and advocated its condemnation. It is doubtful even if reinforced and strengthened that any considerable crowd could even again be induced to enter within its walls.

Fourteen years ago today Miss Alice Darling was wed to Warrtn Letts in Evansville, Ind. Today the bodies of Mrs. Letts and two of her children were laid to rest side by side in Signal Hill Cemetery, while hundreds of friends who knew them back in the old home and as many who became friends after their removal to Long Beach six years ago, mingled their tears with those of the bereft widower and remaining boy. It was a pathetic close to last Saturday's tragedy when mother and children went down in the death pit. The funeral services were held at the First Christian Church and the three caskets placed in the chancel were viewed by hundreds before the services began. The caskets were literally buried in floral tributes of friends and relatives. The services were conducted by Rev. F. M. Rogers and a male quartette sang three selections. Chief among the mourners were the two Sunday-school classes to which Dorothy and Harold belonged. Twenty-four pall bearers accompanied the bodies to the cemetery, six were men who carried the casket of Mrs. Letts, six boys were bearers for Harold and four for Dorothy, with eight honorary bearers, all girls for Dorothy.

With reports available from but half of the districts into which the city was divided for relief-fund contributions, and these showing subscriptions of about $10,000, the relief committee was unable today to make a full estimate of the money that will be required for relief work and it is generally thought that the election to be called to vote a special tax will carry its original estimate of 20 cents on the $100 valuation which will produce about $60,000, a sum not regarded as too much as the committee proceeds in its work of investigation. This is due to the nature of the injuries of a majority of the list of 200 victims, 70 per cent. of whom have bruises and broken bones, requiring medical attention and constant attendance of nurses. Over a dozen calls for physicians came in to the committee today, due to the fact that the day of the accident many of the injured were treated by volunteer physicians who came from other cities. They returned home a few hours later and the people whom they treated thinking they were regular relief doctors, waited until now for their return.

The names of two additional injured persons became known yesterday. One of these is Mrs. Catherine Piper, who is now at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ines B. Glahn, No. 326 West Avenue Fifty-three, Los Angeles. The other is Mrs. Mary Goodwin, No. 322 West Avenue Fifty. They were together in the crash, and were much bruised and lacerated, the former the more seriously. Both are out of danger.

With no mercenary object in view but merely to get opinions as to the city's liability, in order to guard against the persistent work of unscrupulous claim agents and shyster attorneys, the city's legal department is fortifying itself with opinions from other members of the fraternity, especially from those who have made a specialty of the claim branch of law. One opinion has been received and another is expected next week from O'Melveny, Stevens and Millikan. That received from Anderson and Anderson covers the question from both sides and is favorable to the city. The principal point hitches on whether or not the maintenance of the auditorium is a governmental function, such as applies to the care and maintenance of streets, alleys, City Hall and library. The city's plea would be that one of the governmental functions of Long Beach is the entertainment of visitors, that the auditorium was built to provide a place for their amusement and that it is not run for profit or as a revenue producer.

San Pedro.

WILL PROSPECT FOR PETROLEUM.

Doheny Acquires Acreage for Oil Development.

Means Expenditure of Many Thousands of Dollars.

Engineers Prepare for Cutting Down Timms' Point.

SAN PEDRO, May 31.—While no one connected with the deal will talk about it there is rumor in circulation that behind the sale of the big 19,000-acre Palo Verdes ranch to E. L. Doheney, the millionaire oil man of Los Angeles, were the oil indications of the ranch. If this be true San Pedro may see oil rigs instead of concrete mixers begin the pioneer work of development and well drillers and not real estate agents and sidewalk and curb makers.

Indications of asphaltum and oil around San Pedro have been generally seen by the old timers here for years. On the Palos Verdes ranch there are half a dozen outcroppings of oil shale and asphaltum scattered on all sides of the big hill back of town. Even in the outer harbor oil shale encountered in dredging operations has indicated oil and asphaltum.

Several years ago a local company was organized to prospect for oil on the Dodson ranch after the discovery of oil indications, while boring for water in the south part of town. Failing to secure an oil lease, however, the promoters dropped the work. About two years ago the Bixbys put down test wells on the ranch near Redondo Beach without success, but did not go deep.

Doheney commands enormous capital. If it is true that he bought the ranch with the intention of prospecting for oil it will not be surprising to see more money spent for oil rigs and drilling within a short time than subdivision expenditures would amount to in years. If the old theory that the big hill back of San Pedro is the center of oil deposits at great depth the development incident to the production would mean a thousand times more to San Pedro than the mere subdivision of the ranch as real estate holdings.

TO CUT TIMMS' POINT.

Engineers in the Bureau of Harbor Improvement here are busy making plans for the work of cutting down Timms' Point, which will be the center of activities as soon as the money from the recent bond issue is available.

The plans include a railroad from this point to the 146-acre tract in the outer harbor just inside the breakwater and dump cars to carry the dirt away. Permission has been given by the government engineers to make a fill on the area without the necessity of building a bulkhead.

Congressman Stephens has also secured permission to build a railroad across the government reservation. In order that this might be done Senator Hewitt secured the passage of a bill at Sacramento authorizing the city to make an exchange of ground with the government.

Two steam shovels from the aqueduct have been standing on a sidetrack on the Huntington Fill for several weeks ready for work of taking down the bluff owned by the city to the level of the fill. All the land east of Beacon street and south of Fourteenth will be taken down.

This will mean that San Pedro street as it is improved at the present time will be no more. In place of the present improvement, plans have been drawn for a viaduct from the foot of Fourteenth street by which teams may get out onto the Huntington and Miner fills.

This viaduct leading to Fourteenth street and Pacific avenue will afford the only means of approach for automobiles until the sea level road along the front is completed. This cannot be completed untill the condemnation suits against the Southern Pacific are settled and the cut through Nob Hill is made.

INJURED AT PLAY.

South Pasadena Youngster Falls From Playground Apparatus and Is Seriously Hurt—Short News Stories.

SOUTH PASADENA, May 31.—Yesterday morning, Wesley Merriman, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Merriman, No. 1011 Park avenue, fell from the top of the apparatus at the Marengo-avenue school grounds, a distance of twenty feet, and escaped with a broken wrist and several bruises. His condition is satisfactory, as no internal injuries have developed. He was walking along the framework, slipped on the damp wood and lost his balance. He was picked up unconscious and carried into the schoolhouse, where he was revived.

Merriman declares his intention to start a petition to have the High School apparatus removed from the school grounds, as this is only one of several accidents that have occurred since it was installed at the South Pasadena schools. Several Southern California cities have abandoned the use of high scaffolding and slides, because of danger to childish lives and limbs.

South Pasadena is to be connected with Los Angeles and Pasadena by a boulevard without any grade crossings, according to the decision of the City Council of Los Angeles. The City Attorney was instructed to prepare the necessary ordinance of intention for the opening of Griffith avenue, between Avenue Twenty-eight and Avenue Fifty-seven. This boulevard will then run on the east side of the Arroyo Seco and running into Pascadero Monterey in this city.

Annual reports for the work done in the last year were read yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Women's Improvement Association, and they showed that the club had been planning all the year for the clubhouse which is now a reality. Mrs. C. B. Ingram, the secretary, outlined the work of the club toward this object, and also told of the many interesting meetings that had been held this year. The programmes have been varied in character, and although many outside speakers gave talks, the meetings in charge of the local women of the club, were considered fully as instructive. Mrs. Fred C. De Lano, the treasurer, showed that the finances of the club were in the best possible condition. From contributions and activities of the Ways and Means Committee, of which Mrs. W. F. Axtman is chairman, more than $2000 has been raised, and although the expenses of the year have been unusually heavy, the club ends the year with $2,127.22 in the treasury. The Philanthropy Committee, of which Mrs. George C. Bush is the chairman, reported that it had sent 200 pairs of bed shoes, each of which contained a box of candy, to the County Farm at Christmas time, and that at the time of the burning of the Oak-Hill orphanage, it had helped on the relief work and contributed clothes.

WANTED TO AND DID.

Ed White Talks Impudently to Judge Chesbro and Gains the End Desired.

SAN PEDRO, May 31.—Ed White apparently wanted to break into jail this morning and was accommodated with a 15-day sentence by Judge Chesbro. Last night John Kern was arrested and got a fine of $5 for disturbing the peace.

White came around early this morning still drunk and insisted upon seeing Kern. Sergt. Smith sent him away and threatened to lock him up if he returned. The third time he came back after having been threatened with arrest he became very abusing and used vile language.

After a hard struggle he was locked up and taken before Judge Chesbro on a charge of drunkenness, still protesting loudly and vigorously.

"What is your business, Mr. White," asked the judge when the man was called.

"Well, that's none of your business," retorted White. So White got to see his friend Kern after all. Judge Chesebro found him guilty after hearing the officers.

The two men were handcuffed together and sent to Central Station. They left the station happy and laughing. Police officers say they are identified with the I.W.W. movement here.

NEWS REPORT

San Bernardino.

POLICE CHIEF TAKES CHARGE.

San Bernardino in Hands of New Official.

Dirt Will Fly on Upland-Fontana Line.

Matches Cause Fire in Heavily-Loaded Truck.

SAN BERNARDINO, May 31.—Without formal ceremony, the change in the police force occurred tonight at midnight. At that hour the new Chief, F. W. Seccombe, and his staff of officers took over the guardianship of the city, Chief Mespelt and his helpers retiring.

Seccombe has had experience both as an officer and as Chief two years under Mayor Hanford some years ago. He announces that he will endeavor to place the police department on a high plane and it is understood he will seek to have it placed under civil service. Mespelt, who has been at the head of the department for two years, has made a good record. Under his regime the redlight district was closed up and has remained closed. Several of the old patrolmen will remain with the new administration.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

The second San Bernardino victim of the Long Beach disaster has succumbed, little Margaret Reed, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Reed. She was 13 years of age and greatly beloved by all who knew her. The other victim was Mrs. Fannie P. McGehee, and the latter's daughter, Mrs. M. A. Pace, is still in a critical condition, though hopes are now being entertained for her ultimate recovery. The mother of the Reed girl was also seriously hurt, but will recover.

DIRT WILL FLY.

While the formal ceremonies attending the actual commencement of work on the Pacific Electric line between this city and Upland will occur at Fontana next Saturday, camps the coming week will be established by Grant Bros. just west of this city at Fontana and at Upland.

As soon as word is received that the formal ceremonies have been completed, dirt will begin to move at all three points and the construction of the line rushed with all possible speed. The heaviest work on the line is just west of this city, where large cuts and fills must be made.

MATCHES CAUSED IT.

Matches packed inside of household goods being moved from this city to Downey on the J. W. Sellers auto truck for L. W. Hatch, caused a fire which destroyed the greater portion of the goods. The drivers discovered the fire after it had gained good headway, several miles west of this city, and in spite of their efforts, the major portion of the goods was burned, though the truck was not badly damaged.

ASSISTANT DISMISSED.

Aid to Postmaster Duckworth at Anaheim Files False Charges Against His Chief and Head Falls.

ANAHEIM, May 31. — Postmaster J. W. Duckworth has dismissed Deputy Postmaster Elmer Imus, following receipt of a letter from the First Assistant Postmaster General at Washington, D. C., authorizing the action. Imus has been employed at the local office for the past five years. His dismissal comes as a result of false charges filed against Postmaster Duckworth, and which were made the subject of an investigation by an inspector who was here two months ago. The inspector had Imus before him and obtained from the latter an affidavit setting forth his reasons for making the charges against Duckworth. The inspector forwarded the affidavit to Washington and the letter from the First Assistant Postmaster General follows along the routine of official business.

Postmaster Duckworth said today that the first that he knew of any charges being preferred against him by his deputy was when a postoffice inspector entered the office two months ago. The charges filed against him were shown to him, and were immediately denied. A two-days' investigation by the inspector sustained the postmaster of official administration of the office having been found to be accurate and perfectly proper. No action was taken looking to the dismissal of his deputy by the postmaster until the report of the inspector could be forwarded to Washington.

AWAKES CAUTION.

Since the terrible calamity at Long Beach many here have been awakened to the necessity of safeguarding the people who congregate in public places, and it has been decided to request the City Trustees to appoint an inspector to investigate the buildings here, and especially the Opera House where all the large crowds gather. This building has been looked upon by many for the past seven years as unsafe but is the only building in town that will accommodate big crowds. It is 24 years old and it has been predicted that if crowds continue to gather there it will fall. Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of this city were among the injured when the Long Beach tragedy occurred. They were among the first to reach the locked entrance to the auditorium. The ends of the flooring where Mr. and Mrs. Miller were standing held, but they were unable to maintain their footing and slid down the concave planking into the awful pit of death. They are now lying at the Seaside Hospital at Long Beach seriously injured.

FROM FIFTY APPLICANTS.

Santa Barbara Board of Education Has a Wealth of Material From Which to Select Superintendent.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] From a total of fifty applicants the Santa Barbara Board of Education this afternoon elected Prof. Edwin R. Snyder, superintendent of the city schools. Prof. Snyder is now assistant superintendent of schools of Fresno. He was chosen by the local board on the recommendation of California's two big universities. The salary of superintendent was raised from $2500 to $3000 and Prof. Snyder was elected for four years. He will take the place of F. L. Fultz, resigned.

When the cruiser South Dakota sailed this morning for San Diego she was minus one of her crew, who deserted the ship and has so far escaped arrest. P. Badillo, who unwittingly assisted in the desertion, was turned loose by the police this morning after a night spent in jail, having been given a 90-day suspended sentence.

Badillo has the sailor's uniform, but he is shy his own suit of civilian clothes. The sailor has it, wherever he may be. The sailor and the civilian swapped clothes in a saloon last night. The man from the South Dakota said he wanted to have a little fun around town and that he would be hampered if wearing his service uniform. He persuaded Badillo to loan him his suit for a while and the change was made. The sailor departed and Badillo waited patiently for his return, anchored to the bar of the saloon. While he was waiting Badillo drank freely and when midnight came he was not sure whether he was a sailor man or land lubber, but certain that navigation was very rough.

Officer Newman arrested him. He sobered up during the night and told his story today. The name Scott appears in the sailor's uniform and it is believed that is the name of the deserter.

RECEPTION FOR LEO.

United States Marshal Leo Youngworth of Los Angeles, Potentate of Al Malaikah Temple of the Shriners, and a party of Los Angeles Shriners arrived in Santa Barbara in an automobile this evening.

As soon as local Shriners received word of the coming of Mr. Youngworth and party they arranged an informal meeting which was held in the Masonic Temple tonight. About forty or fifty Santa Barbara Shriners greeted the Potentate of Al Malaikah Temple.

PROBATIONER CAUGHT.

Frank Lang, alias Gordon, who was arrested last night by railroad policeman Beck, will be returned to Los Angeles where he probably will be compelled to serve a sentence for burglary. Gordon was tried for burglary last Tuesday and placed on probation, one of the conditions being that he remain in Los Angeles unless being granted permission to leave by the court.

He was caught last night with Charles Davidson "beating it" north on a Southern Pacific train. Both men were arrested. Davidson was sentenced to twenty-nine days in the County Jail by Justice of the Peace Shoup this morning, while Gordon is being detained pending word from Los Angeles.

WOMAN WANTS DAMAGES.

San Diego Man Caused Her Arrest and She Seeks Twenty Thousand Dollars Balm.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, May 31.—Mrs. Mazie Stebbins Taylor of Napa today filed suit for $20,000 damages against R. H. McGinness, alleging that he had maliciously caused her arrest and incarceration in the County Jail for one day as the result of a dispute over property.

She was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace by tearing down trespass signs put on the property by McGinness.

The damage suit was filed less than two hours after the dismissal of habeas corpus proceedings to prevent the undersheriff of San Diego county from turning Mrs. Taylor over to the Sheriff of Napa county, who is here to take her North to answer to an indictment returned five years ago charging forgery. Mrs. Taylor will be taken to Napa tomorrow morning. Dr. R. F. Taylor, her husband, from whom she has been separated five years, will assist her in fighting the forgery charge in Napa, according to a report received here today.

NORTH FOR REPAIRS.

SAN DIEGO, May 31.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Five destroyers, three submarines and the tender Alert of the submarines, are speeding northward from San Diego to San Francisco today. The destroyers are the Paul Jones, Stewart, both in need of repairs as the result of recent accidents, Preble, Whipple and Truxton. The submarines are the F-1, F-2, and F-3, recently placed in commission, and among the largest in the navy. The destroyers are to return the latter part of June for battle practice. The submarines are to be docked at the Mare Island navy yard for repairs and it is expected will be away from San Diego, their home station, for several months. Among other things, new gyro compasses are to be installed.

ONTARIO BRIEFS.

ONTARIO, May 31.—Fire of unknown origin shortly before noon today destroyed 125 tons of hay and threatened the lives of several hundred head of cows at the plant of the Ontario Dairy Company on South Euclid avenue, resulting in a loss to the company of more than $3000. Although the Ontario fire department made a quick run, the flames in the dry hay had gained such headway that it was practically impossible to save it.

At the annual meeting yesterday of the stockholders of the Ontario Cemetery Association, J. T. Morris, J. B. Draper, Jackson Deets, Joseph Dundas and G. P. SCHOOL MAKES PROGRESS.

State University Representatives Praise San Jacinto Instructors and Will Give It Higher Rank.

SAN JACINTO, May 31.—With the end of the school year at hand, the topic of conversation among tax payers and parents for the past few days has been the success of the grammar and High Schools during the past year. In the High School the improvement has been marked, and inspectors from the State University have been impressed with the efficient work done and have so expressed themselves.

The San Jacinto school will likely take its place among the accredited schools of the State during the coming year. Next year the High School attendance should be nearly double the present enrollment. A supervising principal for both the High School and the grammar school will be favored. Such an arrangement would do away with the present position of grammar school principal, placing both schools directly under one head.

NEWS BRIEFS.

This week F. B. Record purchased the old G. M. Green homestead from the widow, Mrs. Martha Green, for a consideration of $5000; $2500 cash and a house and lot on Topeka street valued at $2500. The Green property consists of thirty acres of land, improved with house, small family orchard and artesian wells. The late G. M. Green bought the property more than twenty-five years ago, coming to the valley with his family among the first settlers.

The petition of E. T. Tanner has been acted upon with favor at Washington and as soon as his bonds are approved he will succeed G. B. Hannahs in the local postoffice. Mr. Hannahs has assumed the management of Idyllwild for the coming summer.

Extension of the lighting system for the city has been in progress for the past week by the Southern Sierra Power Company, and soon all the principal streets will be lighted. Since obtaining its franchise that company has continued to improve the local lighting system until the city now has an all-night and all-day service.

Monday was a day of misfortune for trainmen on the local branch of the Santa Fe. In the local yards the freight engine went off the track while switching, the accident being caused by spreading rails. Preceding this trouble, the freight was delayed between Winchester and Menifee for several hours when the wheels of a freight car failed to hit the rails after an unusually high bounce over the rough road bed. An extra train and crew cared for the passenger traffic for the day, while a wrecking train from San Bernardino put things in shape along the spur.

COMMAND HIGH PRICES.

Anaheim Growers Are Receiving More for Fruit Than at Any Time Since Groves Were Planted.

ANAHEIM, May 31.—Valencia orange growers will net in the neighborhood of $3.75 per box this year, or about twice the amount that was received last season. This was the statement of Manager George Maxfield of the Anaheim Mutual Orange Growers' Association yesterday. Present prices for the company's fruit range from $5.25 to $4.50 per box, f. o. b., Anaheim, and after deducting costs of picking and packing, growers will receive $3.75 per box net. This is the highest price that growers have ever received for fruit since the orange idustry was stared.

The Anaheim Mutual is shipping out at present, six cars of first-class Valencias per week, and Manager Maxfield states that probably three or four cars a week will be shipped out for the next month, and then the packing-house will shut down for a few weeks, reopening later to pack the remainder of the crop, which will until that time, remain on the trees. The association will ship sixty cars more of Valencias for the season.

The Anaheim Fruit Association is also working on Valencias and has shipped out twenty-five cars to date, making a total for the season of 140 cars of this fruit. Manager Sandilands stated that the fruit of the association's brand is bringing the highest price in years, and the present outlook is brighter for growers who suffered sligh frost damage.

New markets have recently been opened up in St. Louis and other eastern cities, and the demand for the Mother Colony brand of Valencias is growing constantly. It is believed that still higher prices will be received for the roduct than is at present being obtained for the Anaheim Valencias. Some growers will hold the fruit with this expectation.

SUGAR BEETS.

The Anaheim Sugar Company has started to work on its plant for the disposal of its waste water, which is to be located east of the factory, near the Santa Fe Railroad tracks. With its completion, the factory waste water problem will be settled for all time and the residents near the factory are at ease as to the odors that may arise from the waste water. The system as it is being worked out, consists of thirty-six beds, into which the waste will be turned in rotation, filling each and then going on to the next. In this manner the water will be taken care of and will sink slowly into the ground, being used for irrigation purposes near the coast.

The entire apparatus will be completed before the opening of the beet sugar campaign in July. The sugar company is repairing the factory and will install a pulp dryer. Field reports show that the beet crop gives indications of being a fine one, and the amount of beets to be worked by the local factory will be 25 per cent. greater this year than last.

ESCONDIDO BRIEFS.

ESCONDIDO, May 31.—James Frazier, an aged man, a pioneer rancher of the Escondido country, dropped dead while at work in the dooryard of his home in Palomar mountain yesterday. A Coroner's inquest, held last evening by County Coroner Bell, found that death was due to natural causes. The body will be buried on the mountain by the side of the body of his mother. Frazier, whose age was about 70, has lived on the mountain a quarter of a century with the two maiden sisters. The sisters have done most of the ranching, Frazier having been occupied with the trucking to and from market.

The Ministers' Association favors the holding of the union Sunday evening midsummer meetings in Grape Day Park, which is wired for electric lights and other conveniences. The plan is to hold the meetings in the park the last two Sunday evenings in July and on all the Sunday evenings in August.

Mrs. Cora Melton has bought out the W. H. Anderson cafe. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will remove to Utah.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of permitting agents, newsboys and dealers to return unsold copies of its issues. Neither does it misbrand or predate its editions, or inflate its circulation by printing more copies than are actually necessary to supply its patrons.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and superior in every respect to that of any other newspaper in Southern California.

BRIEFS.

Special announcement—The principals of the Girl's Collegiate School, Miss Parsons and Miss Dennen, have been strongly urged to inaugurate college work. In conformity with the expressed desire of students now in the school they therefore offer for the year 1913-14 a freshman college course in English, mathematics, history and a foreign language. Students will be thoroughly prepared for examinations necessary for entrance to the sophomore class of any college. They also announce the reintroduction of eighth-grade work, a year preparatory to the regular academic or high school courses of study. This year is especially interesting and important in its relation to subsequent work. The attention of parents is therefore directed to it.

The organization will be assisted by Mrs. Emilie Cole Ulrich, soprano, and Gustav Ulrich, 'cellist. Several members of the orchestra will be heard in solo numbers.

Will Repeat Camp-fire Pageant.

The great success that attended the production of "Any Girl," a camp-fire pageant by the girls of the Y.W.C.A., has induced them to repeat the picturesque play tomorrow evening. One hundred girls, nearly all of whom are employed in the department stores of the city, take part in the pageant, which is a demonstration of the widespread Camp-fire Movement.

Despondent, Then Dead.

Charles Seneva, No. 719 East Fifth street, was found dead in his bed at his residence yesterday morning with a bullet wound through the head. He was a stranger at the rooming-house. For several days he had appeared despondent. He had threatened to end his own life, according to other roomers.

Death of Aged Minister.

Rev. John Jacob Spicker, a retired Methodist minister, aged 82 years, died yesterday at No. 3713 Trinity street. He came here two years ago from the East. Mrs. Spicker and several grown children are living. The funeral will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Salem German Methodist Church of which he was a member. Burial will be in Inglewood Cemetery.

About 100 former residents of Vineland, N. J., held a picnic in Echo Park on Friday. Speeches were made by J. C. Sherer of Glendale, retiring president; M. F. Sawyer, Riverside; A. B. Owl in New Store.

The storeroom at the northwest corner of Fifth street and Broadway, occupied by the Owl Drug Company for fifteen years, is vacant today, for the goods, equipment and force will move into the new Title and Guarantee building on the southeast corner of Fifth and Broadway, diagonally across the street, and will be ready for business Monday morning. The new quarters will be occupied for six months until the building to be erected on the old location is completed.

In New Uniforms.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has refitted its messenger force of 150 with new uniforms throughout. A somewhat radical change has been made from the old-style garments, since the red soutache trimming has been done away with. The new uniforms are a dark navy blue, with light blue trimming. The coat bears a chevron of light blue with the letters "W.U." on each sleeve. They are also equipped with military collars, with the same inscription. The caps are also trimmed in light blue.

Leaves Deputyship.

Frank W. Blair, for several years a deputy in Dist.Atty. Fredericks's office, left yesterday to enter private practice. He has devoted most of his time while in the county service to trying important cases in the criminal departments of the Superior Court. He has established a record for convictions according to the judges under whom he has prosecuted several hundred cases. The reason for leaving is that the new charter does not allow the deputies to conduct a private practice.

LONG BEACH THIEF CAPTURED TRYING TO ESCAPE.

Robs Safe and Then Steals a Couple of Automobiles in Effort to Reach Los Angeles—Tells Police of His Checkered Career—Short News Stories.

LONG BEACH, May 31.—Deserted by the fickle goddess of fortune after he had made a "touch" from a hotel safe, Al Watt was arrested by the police shortly after midnight and is locked up awaiting a hearing on a charge of robbery.

Watt is a friend of E. H. Sullivan, night clerk at Hotel Alexander and loafs around the hotel when his friend is on watch. Last night he was making his usual visit when a call took Sullivan away from the office for a few moments. When he returned his friend was gone and so was a roll of $54 from the cash drawer. Sullivan notified the police and a search was begun for Watt, who in the meantime had gone to a local electric garage and hired a rig and skipped out. He got as far as Twentieth street and Locust avenue when the machine went bad. Watt jumped a passing car and coming back to town secured another machine and again started for Los Angeles, but at State and American his electric again failed. Nothing daunted he walked back to the garage and demanded a third machine. Meanwhile inquiry had been flashed and the night garage man under pretense of talking to the boss, went to the phone and notified the police. Watt grew suspicious at the delay and started away but was met at the door by the police and taken in custody.

When first arrested Watt claimed that the theft was a frame-up between himself and Sullivan, by which Watt during his friend's absence was to cop the hotel roll in the safe amounting to $900 and skip to Salt Lake City, where he would be joined by Sullivan and a division made of the loot. Later in the day, however, he admitted the tale was false and gave the police a story of his life, which shows that since he was 13 years of age he has spent half of his life in prison. According to his story he was born in Sallislow, Okla., 24 years ago and is a nephew of Jeff Watt, Governor of the Cherokee Nation in 1894. His parents died when he was five years old and when 13 he was given a five-year prison sentence for deadly assault. Since then his life has been one continual war on the law. He is also a deserter from the army and navy. Most of his terms in prison have been for murderous assault. Last year after he had been captured with the Wyckliffe outlaws in Muskogee, Okla., he decided to reform and coming west made his home with an aunt, Mrs. Bagwell at Riverside, but he had a fight with a Japanese and had to leave after pawning the Oriental's gun.

A. B. Hammond, president of the Hammond Lumber Company, who arrived yesterday to look after the progress on the finishing touches to his new steamship, the Edgar H. Vance, today announced that he has appointed Capt. C. J. Boutteillier of the General Hubbard to the command of the new steamer. Capt. Boutteillier has been in charge of the Hubbard for fifteen months and has just returned from a trip to Alaska. F. C. Fox, chief engineer of the Hubbard, is also transferred to the Vance. Capt. Delegar, first officer of the George W. Fenwick, another of the Hammond boats, will succeed to the command of the Hubbard.

A permit was taken out today for Edward Tisnerat's seven-story concrete apartment-house to cost $126,000, on the bluff west of Hotel Virginia. This made May's building permits total $496,223, the second largest month's record in the city's history. Two hundred and twenty-one permits were issued during the month, making a total of 1171 permits for the five months of this year of a contract value of $2,164,76[illegible] as against 725 permits for the same months last year with a total value of $1,174,223.

The morning train from San Pedro on the Salt Lake stalled at the Alamitos avenue curve this morning owing to the breaking of a part of the mechanism of the locomotive. The train was laid out until a switch engine came up from San Pedro and hauled the damaged train to Los Angeles. The damage was slight and no one was injured.

GREEK FISHERMEN DESPERATE

Ocean Poachers Try to Ram a Vessel Which Accidentally Picks Up a Net Set in Defiance of Law.

AVALON, May 31.—Because he had picked up a set net which had become entangled in his propellor while fishing near Goat Harbor, Capt. C. Paradis of the Audrey N., was deliberately rammed by an unknown fishing launch containing three Greeks and it was only by holding the lawbreakers at bay with a rifle that Paradis was able to land his angler, W. Collins of Los Angeles at Avalon after an exciting race.

The unknown launch followed the craft Audrey N. until it was almost within sight of Avalon. Mr. Collins stated that the pirate boat was painted grey with dark blue freeboards and carried no name or home port. Immediately after the fish and game wardens were notified several fast launches were sent in pursuit.

For several weeks Greek fishing launches and Japanese fishing launches have been obtaining their catches for market purposes illegally. The net taken by Paradis measured 800 feet in length. Each evening some twenty or thirty fishing launches put into the port to wait for an opportunity to drop their nets into some quiet bay around the island. Twenty Japanese fishing boats were counted in Avalon Bay this morning waiting for an opportunity to start out on an illegal hunt for the Catalina fish.

TURN BACK THE VICIOUS SAN FRANCISCO RAIDERS.

THE boldness and effrontery of the political raid of the McCarthyites of San Francisco upon Los Angeles have become so apparent that our people are thoroughly aroused. They will not brook this interference by the crowd of trouble-makers who have done so much harm to San Francisco. The thing to do is to turn out en masse next Tuesday and turn the raiders back by such a decisive majority that they will never show their heads here again.

The assault of McCarthy and Harriman must be repelled by the defeat of Rose, the McCarthy selection, and the election of Shenk and of the Municipal Conference ticket for the Council. That is the situation. No voter can afford to be indifferent to it. We of Los Angeles are hopeless cravens if we permit this discredited San Francisco crowd to come down here and dictate terms to us. The thought of it is enough to make any self-respecting citizen's blood turn to fire.

He's Your Candidate.

FROM THE RANGE TO THE MAYOR'S CHAIR.

Sterling Qualities that Make Shenk Successful as a Pioneer in the Imperial Country Eminently Fit Him to Become Chief Executive of the Great City of Los Angeles—And He's Still Going Up.

IT'S rather a long step from riding range over an Imperial ranch to the executive head of a great metropolis, but it is the step likely to be taken on Tuesday by the brilliant young head of the Municipal Conference ticket. When Los Angeles made its first experiment in municipal ownership eleven year ago by acquiring a water system, a young man was ranching and cow-punching over in Imperial county that he might earn money enough to see him through the law school at the University of Michigan.

This young man is now candidate for Mayor of Los Angeles and when elected will not only have authority over the water system, but over the great aqueduct with its electrical power promise, and the harbor development which is to mean so much to the future of Los Angeles.

The way upward has not been on a downy bed of ease, but has been won thus far by the application of the same species of industry and effort which he put into raising cattle, and harvesting alfalfa to get his school money.

Seven years ago his rapidly-developing professional ability brought him into the city's law department at the first rung of the public-service ladder. He worked hard at the job, and was advanced to the post of assistant to Leslie R. Hewitt, and when Hewitt retired from the office in 1910 Shenk was elected by the City Council to fill the unexpired term. The following year he was the nominee on the anti-Socialist ticket and was nearly elected at the primary. In the December election his majority was 35,000, since which time he has been the legal adviser of the municipality.

WORK AND STUDY.

In this seven years he has won for himself the enviable reputation of a lawyer whose opinions are "court proof." This reputation has not been attained by any other means than painstaking study of long hours over the questions presented, and a judicial poise of mind with which he is gifted. Shenk's opinions imply certainty even before the courts have made them certain.

In this service he studied with the same thoroughness the machinery of municipal government and reached the conclusion that it can be made efficient through properly-directed "team work."

Because of his familiarity with the scope of municipal activity, and his uniform good judgment shown in his own sphere, he was asked to become the nominee of the Municipal Conference for Mayor.

Work, hard work, has been the key to his advance. From the time he milked cows to get his first money to go to the Omaha High School, he has not been free from the grind. At the Ohio Wesleyan he managed the baseball team, played when there was no better substitute, and used every honorable means to keep his head above water.

He might have been a year ahead of schedule in practicing law in Los Angeles but for the outbreak of the Spanish War. The first call of President McKinley found him mustered

WHERE'D THEY GET IT?

The Transportation Problem.

RELOCATION OF TRACKS REMEDY FOR CONGESTION.

Public Utilities Engineer Further Recommends Union Station, Elevated Connection Over Alameda Street, the Extension of Sixth Street to Boyle Avenue and New Thoroughfares in Northeastern Section.

CHARLES K. MOHLER, railroad engineer for the Board of Public Utilities, discussed in detail the more intricate phases of the transportation problems of this city at the City Club luncheon at the Angelus yesterday. Natural and artificial barriers form the chief obstacles to expeditious traffic, he said, but changes can be made to obviate at least a part of the delay.

The re-location of tracks in the business district, bridges and short elevated lines, new thoroughfares in the northeastern section, extensions of streets now crowded and closer regulation over all transportation companies were advocated in his recommendations, which are as follows:

"That the railroad terminal situation be taken up and given thorough and comprehensive study with a view to the rearranging and relocation of main lines where necessary. That all useless and duplicated spur tracks and sidings be eliminated. That the city take an active and aggressive part in the plans of railroad terminals and their ownership.

"That the three interstate roads, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroads, all be brought together in a union station. It is believed the re-arrangement would best be about as follows:

UNION STATION PLAN.

"Use the site of the present Arcade Station for the union station, bring the Santa Fe and Salt Lake roads in over elevated tracks of the Southern Pacific Railroad from the junction of the connecting line about Alameda and Twentieth street to the union station, say on Central avenue, between Fourth and Sixth streets.

"From Fourth and Alameda streets build an elevated connection to meet the Santa Fe line at about First street. This portion to be built and owned jointly by all lines. From about First street and Santa Fe avenue, the Southern Pacific Railroad, bound to and from San Francisco, to use the

SUNDAY BEER SALOON LICENSES SUSPENDED.

FOR FIVE full days beginning this morning no liquors may be sold at the places of Frank E. Zucca and John Vergano, Nos. 405 and 423 North Los Angeles street, respectively. This is a punishment inflicted by the Police Commission yesterday on these two restaurant keepers for having sold beer without meals.

The charges against Zucca and Vergano, who were operating plain Sunday saloons, were filed with the Police Commission after The Times printed the facts two weeks ago regarding conditions there. The hearing of evidence was abruptly stopped on the day of the Long Beach disaster that the Mayor might go to render help in this emergency. The final testimony was introduced yesterday morning.

It was admitted that the cases of Vergano and Zucca were similar in all respects, and according to Zucca's own statements, large numbers of men visited his place on Sunday and were served lunch which they did not touch, merely to get beer.

"It has been shown that lunch was brought without any request for a meal for the customers, and that after the lunch was served they could have as much liquor as they wanted," said Commissioner McDill.

"It looks to me as though, especially in the Zucca place, a restaurant is run simply as a subterfuge for a Sunday drinking-place. The proceeding is simply one to provide for liquor selling. I believe a suspension of the permits would be a good lesson for these men and also a warning to other restaurant men that they must strictly obey the law."

After a general discussion, Commissioner Akey moved for a suspension of the two permits for five days. McDill wanted a ten-day suspension, but finally agreed to the first proposition, and the commission so voted unanimously.

Afterward the commission discussed the need of changes in the restaurant liquor laws. The Mayor and Commissioner McDill expressed themselves in favor of restricting the serving of liquor with meals to definite hours, especially on Sundays.

"I believe that such a rule would stop at least one-half of the drunkenness at restaurants on Sundays," declared the Mayor. "My experience of over four years on the Police Commission has convinced me that one liquor-selling restaurant is worse than three saloons for making drunks. I think the Juvenile Court judge and the probation officer will tell you that many of their cases originated in the liquor-selling restaurants."

The commission may recommend meal-hour liquor restrictions to the Council.

Fair Pilgrim Plans to Bring Convention Here.

Southland a Leader in This Masonic Order.

It is altogether likely that another convention will be added to the long list already scheduled to be held in Los Angeles in 1915. This one will be something entirely out of the ordinary, none of its kind ever having been held on this Coast, or indeed west of Chicago—the White Shrine of the World, a Masonic order to which women are eligible, under certain conditions. First, they must be either the wives, mothers, widows, sisters or daughters of Master Masons and in order to become a member of the White Shrine one must first be a member in good standing of the Order of the Eastern Star.

There are but 60 White Shrines in the whole world, and but two west of Chicago, one in Denver, organized within the past year, and the one in Los Angeles which was organized just seven years ago last month by Mrs. Allie A. Lambert, who went to Lansing, Mich., and was made a member of the White Shrine there, and then returned to form the Los Angeles White Shrine which now numbers 175 members. Mrs. Lambert was its first High Priestess.

The White Shrine of the World meets this year in Columbus, O., opening next Wednesday and continuing in session till June 6. Yesterday the Queen of the Los Angeles White Shrine, Mrs. Henry Parlee, left for Columbus. She has kept the real object of her visit a profound secret from her friends and her sister members of the Shrine, but she goes to Columbus with but one idea—and that is to bring the White Shrine of the World to Los Angeles for 1915.

HEALTHY CUSTOMS BUSINESS.

Local Collector's Receipts Increase Over Corresponding Period of Last Year.

The May receipts in the office of the Collector of Customs indicates a healthy increase, as compared with the corresponding period last year. The figures were $75,034.63 for May, 1913, with $48,687.29 for May, 1912, and $45,300.34 for May, 1911. The prospects for June are also excellent, as it is known that a number of foreign ships are en route to this port, some of them loaded with more than the usual percentage of dutiable goods.

Beginning with July 1, when the new consolidation arrangement provided for by an order of President Taft goes into effect, making Los Angeles the principal port of entry and headquarters for the Collector of Customs, the receipts will all be credited to this city, and there will be a big boost. Under that order the jurisdiction of Collector Pendleton will extend from Santa Barbara down to the boundary line of Mexico.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mrs. John Howes Gage, No. 746 Bryan street, last Sunday, when Miss Gertrude Warren, daughter of Mrs. D. Warren, became the bride of Arthur Elmer Gray, a brother of Mrs. Gage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. Sedweek in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. They are spending their honeymoon at Coronado and upon their return will make their permanent home in this city.

HERPICIDE CO.

You will often see a man who fulfills your ideal of a man in almost every particular. He may have a good head, fine physique, perfect manners, an interesting personality and bear himself with the distinguished air of a gentleman. His linen is immaculate and his clothes faultless as to cut and material. But all the pleasant first impressions are ruined when you discover the collar and shoulders of his coat covered with loose hair and flakes of dandruff.

This is an indication of personal carelessness, not to say uncleanliness. You feel like telling him to get a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, and if you are a real friend to him you WILL tell him. This remarkable remedy would in a short time remove every trace of dandruff from his head, stop his hair from falling and prevent him from becoming bald. Baldheaded men always look old, whether they are or not.

Dandruff is due to a germ which causes the scale-like accumulation. Newbro's Herpicide, used intelligently, checks this accumulation, prevents the hair from falling out and stops that frightful itching of the scalp almost instantly. It has a most delightful odor.

Herpicide is the Original Remedy that destroys dandruff. There is nothing in the world just like it, nothing that is "just as good."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

into Co. K, Fourth Ohio Volunteers. He served under Gen. Miles in the occupation of Porto Rico and was mustered out honorably in January 1900. Then he went back to the Ohio Wesleyan to finish his course.

While California labor started him in law at Ann Arbor, house painting, paper hanging, and other work sustained him through the two years' course. When he finished and came to Los Angeles, he had just enough money for opening an office and beginning his life work.

Now, in the vigor of manhood, splendidly equipped for the duty ahead of him, he looks upon the task in the new spirit of service with honor. To advance the city's great projects, to make every dollar buy a dollar's worth and to make every department efficient, will be his compensation.

He is cool, of executive temperament, a doer of things, and the inspirer of others. He is sure of himself, after proper precaution and investigation, and he makes others follow his motto: "Be sure you're right, then go ahead."

HOME LIFE IDEAL.

In his home life he is playmate of his only son, Sammy, not yet 2 years old. About the only thing that separates him from attentiveness to duty are home and golf—the latter less than the former. He married Lenah R. Custer six years ago and they have a cosy little bungalow, at No. 1317 Alpha street, which is in Precinct 455, Sierra Vista—the Omega of all the precincts.

In social affairs he has membership in the Union League Club, and the San Gabriel Country Club. Fraternally, he is a high-degree Mason, and is Past Master of South Pasadena lodge No. 267. He is a member of Los Angeles lodge of Elks and of the Beta Theta Pi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities.

In national politics he is a Republican. In religion he belongs to the faith of his father, Rev. John W. Shank, who is a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In all these things, and at all times, he is genial, wholesome, and quick to find the light of humor in what appears the darkest and is always ready to generously help whosoever is in doubt or distress. Optimism lightens his hard labor just as his home and his fraternities soften its rigors. This is the man who offers his services to the people of Los Angeles next Tuesday.

CORPORATION TAXES.

Payments Being Made to the Collector of Internal Revenue—No Refund on Income Levy.

The payments of corporation tax due any time before June 30 are being made at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue and the May receipts show that condition of affairs. The figures for the month just closed were $90,404.14 as compared with $87,840.92 for May, 1912, and $67,155.10 for the same period in 1911. It is estimated that there will be an addition of about $150,000 collected this year on account of the corporation tax, the total of which will aggregate about $400,000.

There is an idea abroad that when the income tax is collected there will be a refund of what has been paid on account of corporation tax, but this is incorrect, say officers, so far as the present collections are concerned, as the sums now due and payable are on business transactions by the various corporations during 1912.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Board of Public Works is disturbed because it has not received the resignation of S. A. Jubb as chief engineer, Bureau of Harbor Improvements, and if this is not forthcoming tomorrow, the board may ask for it. Jubb has been appointed assistant harbor engineer and will be under the direction of the Harbor Commission.

The Budget Committee decided yesterday that it can only allow the health department an appropriation for the next fiscal year of about the same amount it has had this year, although Health Commissioner Powers pleaded for more money to carry on his work.

A contract was awarded to the Alta Planing Mill yesterday by the Board of Public Works for the erection of transit shed No. 1 on the Mormon Island wharf. The contract is for $48,178, exclusive of the doors.

Citizens of San Pedro petitioned the City Council yesterday for the creation of a large sewer district to provide an adequate sanitary sewer system for lands south of the reservation.

A dairyman who refused to live with his wife because of dissensions and a legal technicality, was persuaded by the court yesterday to remarry the woman who had lived with him as wife, and to try to remake a home.

At the City Hall.

RESIGNATION IS NOT FILED.

BOARD OF WORKS AWAITS THIS ACTION BY JUBB.

Commissioner Handley Suggests that if Desired Document Doesn't Appear by Tomorrow Engineer of Bureau of Harbor Improvement Be Requested to Furnish Same.

Esprit de corps in all departments under the supervision of the Board of Public Works is to be encouraged by that body, and it will henceforth frown frigidly upon attempts of subordinates to take action on matters official without due consultation with their superiors.

The board has two distinct sore spots just now, appertaining to this subject, one of these being the action of Tunnel Engineer Tuttle in ordering a substitution of materials in the Hill-street tunnel without notifying the City Engineer or the board itself; and the other is the action of S. A. Jubb, engineer at the harbor, in demanding that he be made Assistant Harbor Engineer without having consulted with the City Engineer on this step, and his refusal to take a civil service examination to which he agreed when he took the position, according to statements of members of the board.

It is probable that Tuttle will receive an official reprimand from the Board of Public Works, no matter what may be the outcome of the various tunnel investigations now in progress. This much was intimated by members of the board yesterday when they were discussing these subjects.

As to Jubb, his resignation as chief engineer, Bureau of Harbor Improvements, is expected—and desired. Although the last day of the month arrived yesterday, and Jubb was appointed by the Harbor Commission two weeks ago to the new position, provided by the charter, of Assistant Harbor Engineer, Jubb's resignation of the former position did not appear before the works board.

The board wanted yesterday to know why Jubb has not resigned as its employee. His attitude in overstepping his superior, the City Engineer, in presenting the application for his appointment to the new position was discussed and members of the board took the stand that such an act is not conducive to proper department discipline, and should be frowned upon. Commissioner Handley suggested that in case Jubb's resignation does not reach the board by tomorrow, it be demanded by the board. All three members of the board took exception to Jubb's declaration that he would not submit to a civil service examination when, so they allege, he had agreed when he accepted the position, to take such an examination.

Under the new regime, Jubb will be under the direction of the Harbor Commission and in charge of harbor work, although the City Engineer will be ex-officio head of that department. The salary ordinance for this position does not become effective until June 21. As the Board of Public Works has direct control of the expenditure of the money remaining under the old bond issue, it has instructed Assistant Engineer Vincent to sign the requisitions, etc., this giving Jubb a smart slap.

It was reported at the City Hall yesterday that the examination called by the Civil Service Commission for the position of Chief Engineer, Bureau of Harbor Improvement, has been abandoned.

Budget Committee's Troubles.

It's day after day of trouble with the Budget Committee of the City Council just now. With the task of lopping off more than three million dollars from the department estimates, in order to make them fit the city's income for the next fiscal year, the committee is bumping up against protests from all sides.

Yesterday was Health Commissioner's day, and at the conclusion Health Commissioner Powers retired with the knowledge that he must get along for the ensuing year with about the same appropriation he has had this year.

Representatives of the nurses' work of the Los Angeles Settlement Association appeared before the committee and urged that provision be made for increasing the pay of the district nurses, which it is proposed to turn over to the Health Department in connection with a Bureau of Nursing; but they received small comfort. The committee is willing to make provision for the salaries of nurses on the present basis of payment and for this to be handled by a sub-commission, under the health department, provided this does not entail additional expenses in the way of clerk-hire, etc.

Transit Shed No. 1.

The contract for the construction of transit shed No. 1, on the Mormon Island Channel wharf was awarded by the Board of Public Works yesterday to the Alta Planing Mill for $48,178. This includes all materials except the metal doors, which will be advertised for separately.

Full Area for Sidewalks.

In connection with the improvement of Moneta avenue, from Thirty-sixth Place to Slauson avenue, the Moneta-avenue Improvement Association has petitioned for a sidewalk in the full area between the curb lines. The City Engineer is preparing the plans in accord with this request, with an exception clause providing for the saving of such portions of existing cement walks as is practicable.

Boulevard Improvement.

The City Engineer has recommended to the Board of Public Works that he be allowed to proceed with the improvement of Hollywood boulevard from Normandie avenue to Maubert street and to present the ordinances for the necessary sanitary sewers that must go into the street before the paving is undertaken. There are opening and widening proceedings under way to make this boulevard 100 feet in width; but the City Engineer proposes to pave a strip 22.5 feet wide on either side of the Pacific Electric right of way. When the street shall have been widened to 100 feet, this will give a fifteen-foot sidewalk on each side of the street. He recommends that the work be not delayed on account of the opening and widening proceedings.

Keep Tab on Assessments.

Several weeks ago a strong effort was made at the City Hall to secure the adoption by the City Council of a resolution that would require the City Engineer's department to send postal card notices to each property owner whose property was affected or likely to be affected by the application of assessments, when petitions were filed or action begun for such improvements as would entail the formation of assessment districts.

Such a resolution was finally recommended by the Streets and Boulevards Committee, but the Council sent it to the City Attorney for an opinion as to certain legal phases, and this report has not yet been made. Meantime a new plan has been evolved by private parties to handle this situation, which has been a cause of much complaint among property owners who find that they are subject to assessments of which they had no knowledge until the time for collection arrived. W. C. Lewis, for more than seven years a newspaper reporter at the City Hall, has established a "Tax and Assessment Bureau" whereby he proposes to keep all property owners, who list their parcels of land, notified as soon as a street or public improvement is started that is likely to affect their properties. The owners are kept informed of each step in the proceedings, so that they may make protest at the proper time if they so desire. Lewis declares that this bureau is not intended to stand in the way of public improvements, but to give the property owners timely knowledge of proceedings that may involve their property in assessments, and that such a situation will allow a true representation of the wishes of a majority of the property owners regarding any certain improvement.

Big Paving Contract.

The Board of Public Works yesterday awarded to the Fairchild-Gilmore-Wilton Company the contract for the improvement of East Eighth street, from Main street to Central avenue, for $57,276.66. The time limit for the completion of the work is 150 days. This includes paving with asphalt, granite block gutters and cement sidewalks. The next lowest bidder on this work was the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, its bid being $57,301.15.

Will Place Rip-Rapping.

The Russell-Green-Foell Company was given a contract by the Board of Public Works yesterday for the placing of rip-rapping at the Water-street wharf at Wilmington. This will require the placing of 4700 tons of rock for which $2.20 per ton is to be paid. The contractor is to assume all responsibility for placing the rock.

Make Informal Inspection.

William Mulholland, chief engineer of the Los Angeles Aqueduct; A. B. Benton, president of the Architects' and Engineers' Association, and Octavius Morgan, of the Building Ordinance Revision Commission, who have been selected by the Board of Public Works to make an independent investigation for the board on the substitution of materials in the lining of the Hill-street tunnel, made an informal inspection of the work yesterday afternoon. They will take up their formal work during the ensuing week. The Council Investigation Committee will resume its hearing of the statements of experts in the Council chamber tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Ask for Sewer District.

A largely-signed petition from San Pedro property owners was filed with the City Clerk yesterday, asking the City Council to provide an adequate sewer system for that portion of the harbor town lying south of Hamilton avenue and the San Pedro reservation. This will require the creation of a large sewer district.

FLOATING HEART-STRINGS TIED INTO NEW KNOT.

Broken Home Mended When Court Rules that Remarriage Unite Pair Who Were Separated by Technicality and Dissensions—Widow Appointed Administratrix.

"I have offered to marry her more times than I have fingers and toes," declared Joseph W. Furnivall to Judge Monroe yesterday. "There is nothing doing now."

"Why won't you marry her now?" asked the court.

"Because she hurts my manhood," was the reply.

Furnivall is 57; his wife, Emily, is 43. Both are English. They were married in 1905, and have two girls, who were in the courtroom when their father was heard on a charge of failure to provide. Humor and tragedy stalked through the case. Furnivall believed he had a legal right to marry, and when Mrs. Furnivall discovered the final decree of divorce granted him from his first wife had not been signed and told him about it, he ordered her to clear out.

She cleared out, but found it difficult to make a living for herself and the two girls. Judge Monroe thought Furnivall ought to pay $20 a month for the support of his daughters.

"I can't do it," he said. "I don't intend to be a white slave for the balance of my life."

The court dug into matters. He found that Furnivall owns many acres and conducts a dairy. The dairy produces about $300 a year. The family had been living on this before the tragedy crept into their lives.

"Now tell me the real reason why you two can't live together," he asked Mrs. Furnivall. Then it came out. She said her husband wanted to force upon her the children by his first wife. She said she would not stand for it. Furnivall retorted that the children were grown up and self-supporting. All he required of her was to be nice to them when they visited him.

"The only thing for you to do is to marry this woman," said the court.

"I lived with that woman, and you didn't," retorted Furnivall.

"You married her, and I didn't," responded the court.

"Will you go home?" Furnivall asked the woman.

"Yes," she said, "provided you keep your first family away. They make life miserable for me."

The upshot of the drama was that the court proposed to the wife: "Get a license and marry over again," he suggested. "See," he continued, "even your daughters are pleased." In truth, happy smiles chased over their little faces.

"Take her by the arm," Furnivall was directed. He did so, but Mrs. Furnivall drew back, returned half way up the aisle as though to ask the court something, changed her mind, and left the courtroom with the bridegroom. Later they returned and were married by Judge Monroe, who gave them his blessing. Bailiff Lips, Clerk Hughes and Deputy District Attorney Selph witnessed the happy nuptials.

COURT NAMES WIDOW.

ANDRADE ESTATE RULING.

The legal fight between Mrs. Guadalupe Blinn, widow of Guillermo Andrade, and the latter's five children and two grandchildren over the appointment of an administrator was settled yesterday when Judge Rives named Mrs. Blinn administratrix. She will proceed at once to administrate the great estate which has an approximate value of $8,000,000.

Andrade died September 17, 1905. His principal holdings were in Sonora, Mex., consisting of more than 200,000 acres. At the time of his death the property was worth $2,000,000, but since then the increase in value has been enormous and is now considered worth many millions more. The value placed by the heirs is from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000, depending upon the determination of the revolution in Mexico.

Andrade's children by a former wife desired the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank appointed administrator. Mrs. Blinn represented by Attorney Kase, filed her petition and the contest was been waged for months. The court held that the widow had the best right and did not agree with the heirs that she would not properly represent their interest in the estate.

There have been five distribution aggregating $200,000. The children participating with the widow are Albert, Edward and Mercedes Andrade, Eloisa Tait and Carmen Banuet.

MUST KEEP PROMISE.

DRESSMAKER WINS SUIT.

Margaret Rose, a fashionable dressmaker, who accompanied Mrs. Frances B. Moore to Europe at her request on the understanding that she was to receive $5000, or its equivalent in a house and brought suit because, she alleges, the agreement for not fully kept, obtained judgment for the full amount in Judge Childs's court yesterday.

Mrs. Rose went as a companion to Mrs. Moore and testified that while Mrs. Moore paid her a portion of the $5000, she defaulted on the payment of stocks and Mrs. Rose advanced $2000 to her to cover the money due.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

SLICED TO A THIRD. The city will pay $8500 for land condemned on Pasadena avenue between Marmion way and York street, judgment for that amount having been given by Judge Wilbur yesterday. The suit was against L. M. Wherrit and others for a triangular strip which the owners valued at $20,000. It is the intention of the city to do away with the death curve at that point and also to establish a comfort station on the land.

SUES COUNTY CLERK. A suit filed by George M. and Evelyn Pender yesterday alleges that County Clerk H. J. Lelande, with utter disregard for the laws of the State and for the purpose of oppressing the plaintiffs so that they could not appeal an action against S. E. Cohn which was transferred to San Francisco for trial, sent the papers to that city, notwithstanding notice of appeal had been filed. Lelande is charged with wanton recklessness in the matter and the Penders ask $10,000 damages.

RACES DIDN'T MIX. Deputy County Attorney Selph was made trustee yesterday for money deposited by Frank Dutra in a savings bank to cover a payment of $3 a week for the support of his child. Dutra is a Portuguese, his wife is English and it was a matter of racial difference with the couple which finally landed the husband in the failure to provide court. He had known her just two weeks before the marriage. The court advised them to get together.

OIL LANDS HEARING.

Southern Pacific to Present Motions Tomorrow Asking to Dismiss Bill of Suit.

It is expected that the first hearing in the litigation of the United States against the Southern Pacific to recover millions of dollars worth of land patented to the corporation under a law of Congress will be held in the United States District Court tomorrow morning. Motions of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to strike out certain portions of the bill of complaint for impertinences, to dismiss the bill and for a further and better statement of the claim will probably be argued. It is possible the matter may be allowed to go over because of the illness of J. W. McKinley, one of the leading counsel for the railroad.

This particular case involves the disposition of 12,956,415 acres of land that it is charged have been sold by the Espee or its predecessor in interest, and deeds have been executed purporting to convey all of the sold land in separate tracts to more than one hundred persons and corporations. The crux of the government contention is that the lands were mineral in character (having oil) and are therefore, within the excepted provision of the land grant, signed by President Cleveland July 10, 1894.

In addition to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the defendants are the Kern Trading and Oil Company, Associated Oil Company, Southern Pacific Land Company, Central Trust Company of New York, Equitable Trust Company of New York, St. Paul Consolidated Oil Company, Zier Oil Company, Fresno-San Francisco Oil Company, Penn-Coalinga Petroleum Company, Coalinga Pacific Oil and Gas Company, Commercial Petroleum Company, Aztec Oil Company, Guthrey Oil Company, Confidence Oil Company, Maine State Oil Company, Associated Pipe Line Company, Section Seven Oil Company, C. F. Iredell, L. L. Briner, Julius Fried, J. J. Vincent, G. E. Shore, Oren G. Myers, W. S. Porter, O. Schibner, C. A. Murdoch, George W. C. Baker, W. W. Machem, M. L. Woy and M. Madsen.

Reinforcements.

DIVORCE COURT GETS THIRTEEN.

LUCK ASSIGNS HOODOO NUMBER TO THE SPLIT-UPS.

Coming of Six New Judges Requires Rearrangement of Designations for All Departments—Work Piled Up Far Ahead Awaits Arrival of Help from Governor.

In preparation for the six new judges to be appointed by the Governor, the judges of the Superior Court are renumbering the courts in numerical order. There are twelve apartments and four extra sessions court-rooms. Departments Three, Seven and Ten are on the fourth floor of the Courthouse; Two, Four and Five are on the third floor; One, Six, Eight and Nine occupy the eighth floor of the Hall of Records, and Eleven and Twelve are in the Hall of Justice.

Confusion results from the present haphazard system of numbering the departments, and the confusion is worse when extra sessions judges sit. It is rarely that two or more outside judges are not holding court here. Lawyers and witnesses require guides to locate for them the departments where they have been summoned. To obviate this it is proposed by Judge Hauser that the courts run from One to Eighteen in regular order. In the allotment so far arranged, Judge Monroe, who conducts the divorce and failure to provide courts, has drawn Thirteen.

Another innovation proposed is to have one department devoted to hearing motions. Under the present system every civil court sets aside Monday as law and motion day. The result of this is that the attorneys find themselves in the position of being in two or more courts at the same time. They must be present when their cases are called, and many of them have cases in several courts.

The proposed new law and motion department will devote itself exclusively to hearing motions during the week. This will bring all the lawyers together in one department, who have motions to be heard and obviate the feverish skirmish from court to court, as is the case at present.

The immense increase of business in the courts has resulted in piling up 600 cases which will be unloaded largely on the six new judges who are expected to take the bench in the fall. The dockets are set ahead as far as September, which means that no new case can be heard until that time. Every judge is working up to his limit. In fact, the work here is so heavy that it has become a difficult matter to obtain outside judges to help out. They are the busiest courts west of Cook county, Illinois.

In figuring up the percentage of work done, Secretary Noel discovered that 21 per cent. of the civil business, aside from the Probate Court, is transacted by Judge Monroe in Department Six. He begins the day's work at 9 o'clock, sometimes earlier, and works until 5 and often later. His motto is, "The more the merrier."

The presiding judge finds the work piling up. This office is held by Judge McCormick, who divides his time between the bench, trying cases, the County Hospital three days a week, trying insane actions, now averaging fifteen a day, and signing orders in chambers. Judge Willis, in Department Eleven, is making a world's record disposing of cases. So as to cut down the great lead new business has gained, every judge takes one case after another. It is nothing unusual to try two jury cases and sometimes start a third in one day.

TENDS TO LOWER PRICES.

Growing Competition in Local Banana Market Results in Increased Receipts.

Competition is now the watchword of the local banana market. This is a reversal of conditions a few years ago when the Fruit Dispatch Company, the local branch of the United Fruit Company, was practically the only factor in the shipping trade. At present no less than four concerns are bringing in the fruit from the Central American banana plantations, and occasional consignments from Mexico lend a tinge of variety to the market.

Some dealers predict that fifty cars of bananas will be received this week, and with such large receipts the chances are the market will be overloaded with the fruit, despite the continued good demand. It is not improbable, therefore, that a descent in the scale of prices may be evident.

The supply has been very good the past week and prices range form 3½ to 4½ cents a pound, depending to an extent on the quality of the fruit. At about this time it is usual for the demand for bananas to begin to show a falling off, owing to the receipts of local California fruit. Peaches, plums and apricots generally prove the most competitive.

Abusive Husband Fined.

H. C. Sparks, arrested a few days ago on complaint of Mrs. Eugenia Hubbard, who said he had come to her home and choked her because he was jealous, was fined $30 in the University Police Court yesterday, despite the failure of the complaining witness to prosecute. Mrs. Hubbard appeared in court but was loath to say anything against the man whose arrest she had brought about. Police Judge Williams expressed the opinion that if there was sufficient cause to justify a warrant in the first instance there was reason for punishing him.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—For the time being all is well between the city and the United Railways. How long the pleasant relations will last no one can say. The Supreme Court has made it possible for the municipal cars as well as those of the corporation to run to the ferry. A long-suffering public feels thankful to the high tribunal.

The trial of Detective Esola on the charge of grand larceny is in full blast. The attorney for the defense gives the jurors to understand that his client is being persecuted in order to advance the political fortunes of Dist.-Atty. Fickert. Already there are intimations of jury tampering. Fickert is sure that he will convict and the trial bids fair to end soon.

The grand jury has disbanded and a new one is soon to take its place. Secretary Morris Levy was presented with a suit case as a reward for his services. Grand Juror Hutchings objected to whitewashing the police department and said that it was no more efficient than its chief. Police Chief White seems to think that this is a doubtful compliment.

The rumor will not down that influences are at work in Washington to oust Postmaster Fisk. There are many deserving Democrats who would like the job. Fisk himself is not worried over the situation but just the same he manages to keep two eagle eyes on the doings at the national capital.

The Merriam divorce trial is marking time, awaiting the appearance of the gallant Maj. Clarence Murphy. He cabled from somewhere at the other end of the world that he would come and testify to the platonic nature of his attentions to the defendant. He is on his way. He will be cordially greeted by the defense and he may be warmly received by Capt. Merriam.

Impressive services were held by members of the Bohemian Club when scattering the ashes of Joaquin Miller at the Heights in the Piedmont Hills. One of the poet's verses set to music and adapted to the occasion was sung as follows:

"Yon mellow sun melts in the sea,
A somber ship sweeps silently
Past Alcatraz towards Orient skies,
A mist is rising to the eyes.
Good by, Joaquin; good by, Joaquin;
good night, good night."

According to Millard Dusbury the police made an awful mistake. They arrested him for holding up Matt Sparkman and taking $2000 worth of jewels away from him. The accused man says that the gems were his. Apologies are now in order and next time the officers of the law will be more careful when high financiers take revolver in hand and collect their own.

Two prominent Japanese were here with some good advice. They were T. Kamiya, chief secretary of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. J. Soyeda, a leading financier. They scoff at the idea of there being any war over our recent anti-alien legislation. They also advise their countrymen here to trust in the fairness of the United States.

The City Engineer has reported that there are wells within the city limits capable of furnishing nearly 12,000,000 gallons of water daily. He urges their development. The latest offer of President Bourn of the Spring Valley is to sell the city his distributing system. After that he departed for Europe.

District Attorney Undecided About Presenting Consideration of Long Beach Disaster to Grand Jury.

Though the grand jury was in session yesterday, Dist.-Atty. Fredericks did not ask that body to begin a hearing covering the details of the Long Beach disaster. From the legal aspect it is evident that the District Attorney does not believe such a course advisable unless demanded by the residents of the stricken city.

The grand jurors looked over the scene of the accident early last week but it is believed that many of the members are adverse to a long session such as consideration of the terrible catastrophe would require. The question will be settled in a few days.

THE GENUINE ARTICLE.

One may now meet the Heavenly Twins in the flesh. The Hammersley sisters of New York have inherited $20,000,000 apiece.

THE REAL REBELLION.

Union bands refused to play for the veterans of the Grand Army at San Diego. The unionites are the only unreconstructed rebels in America.

TOO ACTIVE.

Pupils in the public schools at Salt Lake City have become ill from eating the corners from the covers of their books. Little bookworms should not be so literal.

QUITE AMERICAN.

Arizona is still able to walk to the bar and order its poison. Phoenix has survived the prohibition election without prohibiting. They are lucky to escape the drug-store brand.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

A rat built its nest in an electric plant at Orland, Cal., and shut off the light and power service for an hour. Investors in the enterprise should feel secure. Rats always desert a failing craft.

POOR BUT RESPECTABLE.

Rector's restaurant has gone into bankruptcy with not much to show for a big indebtedness. We have always heard of threadbare gentility and now we have a living example of it. Rector's is fashionably poverty-stricken.

PLENTY OF LAWS.

If the people of Los Angeles are not good it is not the fault of the several City Councils of the past, which have provided 27,000 ordinances to govern the conduct of our residents. Angels should not require so much discipline.

GENUINE DISTRESS.

In a motorcycle race at Pasadena a rider was thrown and his clothing was so badly torn that he demanded an ambulance in order to have himself removed with dignity. His extravagance was entirely justified. A man's modesty should always be worth the price of a taxicab.

BLESSED ARE THE POOR.

An attempt is being made at Washington to have model homes built for the indigent classes. We do not think this should include Congressmen, but it probably does. We will have no quarrel, however, if the poor succeed in securing model homes. Heaven knows the rich seldom have them.

CHASING TROUBLE.

Previous to the re-arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst and the renewal of the hunger-strike programme, a plot was discovered to carry off that vigorous personage by aeroplane and deposit her beyond the reach of the law. But if the authorities really had knowledge of such an attempt, why on earth—or rather, why in the air—didn't they offer every facility to the daring aeronaut? Aeroplanes are sometimes more fatal than forcible feeding. Anyhow, Mrs. Pankhurst is the sort of woman better lost than found.

FINGER MARKS.

Great hopes have been fixed on the Bertillon system for identifying and convicting criminals. Yet in Paris lately several burglaries have taken place, and in every instance on the scene of the robbery the police have found the same finger marks. So far the burglar has not been arrested.

After all, to catch a thief is still the old problem of the centuries. The knowledge that all the burglaries in a neighborhood are the work of the same criminal doesn't help much as long as the criminal is still at large.

That the French burglar was so free with his finger marks proves him, however, to be a dangerous character with a fine contempt for scientific detectives. Otherwise he would have worn gloves. A mouse-trap must have a good spring as well as the right brand of cheese.

EUGENICS AND INDUSTRIALISM.

There is a member of Congress from Illinois by the name of Buchanan. God only knows how he came to be elected, for surely no such comprehensive and far-reaching ass ever before achieved a seat in the national House of Representatives. He made a speech the other day in which he mixed up labor-unionism, a protective tariff, Socialism and eugenics in an olla podrida of rhetoric that would suit the palate of a lunatic. He said, among other things, "It is an insult to the intelligence of the representative trades-union men in this country to leave the impression that they are in favor of a protective tariff or that they are under the impression that a protective tariff ever has, does now, or can benefit the wage-workers of the country." He said that the Republican party has "destroyed the working people of the country physically and mentally." He indorsed the statement of one Dr. M. G. Schapp, professor of neuropathology, that "industrialism is the principal cause of the filling of jails and insane asylums, the killing off of one-third of all babies in the first year of their lives and the restricting of other births."

"Degeneration and race suicide," quoted Congressman Buchanan approvingly, "increase with industrial supremacy, and the stress of modern competition is the cause of much of the insanity." "Employment and the almost ceaseless activity demanded of all classes in efforts to retain their positions are leading causes in the breakdown of mental health."

THE REAL ISSUE.

We shall probably never know whether the hire of the hundreds of autos, and the brass bands, and the voices of the soap-box orators, and the placards that adorn the fences, urging the unwary to vote for Rose, costing thousands of dollars, are paid for out of some private bank account or out of the treasuries of the San Francisco labor unions which are subject to the drafts of McCarthy. But we shrewdly suspect that ultimately they will be paid for by the taxpayers of Los Angeles, if by chance the combination of Socialists, and anarchists and labor unionites, led by P. H. McCarthy of San Francisco, shall, through the apathy of citizens who fail to go to the polls, result in the defeat of Mr. Shenk and the Municipal Conference candidates for the Council.

It is a shameful thing that the real issue before the people next Tuesday is whether Los Angeles shall pass under the influence or political mortgage of McCarthy, the labor-unionite boss of San Francisco, with the inevitable consequence of a depleted treasury, an increased tax list, a disgraced reputation, a smirched public credit and domination by a San Francisco ring so rotten in lack of principle, and so rapacious in their exactions as to make Tammany a Sunday-school in comparison—or integrity and efficiency in the conduct of public affairs, and industrial freedom, and exemption from the rule or influence of the baffled San Francisco bosses shall triumph.

No Republican, no honest Democrat, no Progressive and no home-owning Socialist need hesitate, or doubt where his duty lies. If he is opposed to dynamiting, and arson, and boycotting and picketing, and a reign of disorder, graft and anarchy, and conditions that would reduce the value and salability of real estate, and check progress, and put a blight upon our growth and prosperity; if he is in favor of honest and economical administration of municipal government, he will go to the polls early on Tuesday, vote for Shenk and Stephens and the Councilmen nominated by the Municipal Conference, and roll up a majority that will advise the country that Los Angeles is not to be exploited by the San Francisco raiders, and that will tell McCarthy to return to the industrial hell that his ilk have created in San Francisco and notify him that he cannot create another hell here.

An article printed on Page 8, Part III, contains a typographical error in the name of the editor of the Graphic. The blunder will be obvious to the average reader, who will readily understand what name was meant by the writer.

SECRETARY REDFIELD'S BLUFF.

"Should any manufacturer reduce wages on the excuse that the reduced tariff made it necessary, or close his factory or curtail operations giving a similar reason, Secretary Redfield will act. He will act under the direct orders of President Wilson."

This announcement comes from Washington, so the manufacturers of this country would better make up their minds to keep their factories moving, whether they pay or not.

But if it should happen that, because of tariff changes, manufacturers find it impossible to keep the wages of their employees up to the present pitch, or to keep their factories in operation, and close their doors, what difference will it make if Secretary Redfield does act?

There is no law in the land to compel a man to do business if he doesn't want to do it. Neither the President of the United States nor Secretary Redfield will be able to force manufacturers to keep their factories running if they desire to shut them down.

"If the factories are closed, and if wages are reduced," says Congressman Underwood, "the people shall know the reason why." It will hardly be necessary for Mr. Underwood to give the reason to the people. They will, in all probability, know more about it than Mr. Underwood himself, as they did in the low-tariff years, '93 to '96.

If the factories close for any reason, Mr. Underwood's explanations to the people are not going to bring them bread and butter, or even bread without the butter. Mr. Underwood can't take the place of the factories as a blessing, neither can President Wilson.

HOW WILL YOU VOTE ON JUNE 3?

There is no disguising the fact that the real governing power of Los Angeles is its City Council. A Socialist Mayor would be bad enough, but a Socialist City Council would be far worse. The City Council controls all disbursements by voting appropriations. Ninety-five per cent. of the city revenue is contributed by about 75 per cent. of our registered voters, of whom not 5 per cent. are Socialists. Shall we—the other 70 per cent.—put our property (the taxes we pay) out of our own hands and let it be disbursed at the sweet will of the Socialist minority?

The trouble is that, under one of the amendments recently voted into our city charter, the Council, whoever we may elect, has the authority and power to engage the city in almost every kind of business. Just now all the talk is about municipal distribution at retail of electric power (when we get it—a long time ahead yet;) but, under the charter amendment referred to, the City Council, if so disposed, could immediately make the city a peddler, storekeeper, manufacturer, and a lot of other things, to the detriment of existing business and to the large private capital engaged therein. Don't forget that it is existing business, based on private capital, which now pays the larger proportion of city and county taxes. Don't forget, either, that if a Socialist majority (only five out of nine) should control the City Council, action in several (if not many) ways under the amendment will be taken, even though that action will cause the city to lose money, not only in the operation of the business, but also, and very heavily, by loss of taxes in the depreciation of tax-paying private properties. Socialist experimenting in municipal ownership has always caused heavy direct and indirect losses and always will. That is why Milwaukee, after losing a million dollars in but little more than a year, voted out its Socialist city government, root and branch. Schenectady is going through similar agony and will do likewise in November next. Butte and Berkeley also turned the Socialists out the very first opportunity they got.

In view of the costly Socialist experiences referred to and the "votings out" is it for us of Los Angeles to invite a similar costly experience by voting Socialists into civic power on June 3 next?

If the Socialists obtain control of the City Council and the city cash-box, the city's loss, which would really be our loss, will be heavy, and we shall only have ourselves to blame. If a business man votes for a Socialist as City Councilman he is doing his best to commit business and financial suicide. If a wage-earner votes for a Socialist as City Councilman he is doing his best to destroy his own pay envelope, with the possible loss of his hard-won home by mortgage foreclosure.

If any voter, for any reason, votes for a Socialist as City Councilman he is doing his (or her) best to make his own tax bill larger.

How will you, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Voter, vote on June 3? That is a question of vital interest to yourself, and the answer rests entirely with yourself. Will you vote for Socialism, danger, blundering and more (still more) taxes, or will you vote for security, economy and efficiency?

Joe Scott deserves defeat. He never should be elected to the School Board. The ministers do right in opposing him.

HERO WORSHIP.

They are telling a pretty story—those solemn journalists of Fleet street—of a princess and a soldier that brings a whiff of old-time romance into the formal life of modern royal households. For a moment the spirit of Shakespeare must have smiled among the oaks of Windsor, over a dramatic scene such as the master-poet loved in life to depict.

It was a bright May morning, hawthorn in full blossom, yellow laburnum hanging in festoons, and all the other usual accessories. Princess Mary of England, a quiet maid of sixteen uneventful summers, was walking in the park near the banks of the historic Thames; she was dreaming dreams and weaving romances.

Father and mother were far away across the German ocean, wedding guests at the nuptials of her royal cousin, Luise. The little English school-girl was for a brief time unchaperoned, free to live in temporary reality life as she had pictured it from the dashing romances of Dumas, Stevenson, Hope, and Harding Davis.

Down the green sward through an avenue of flowering chestnuts strode the martial figure of the great Lord Kitchener, grizzled and bronzed, burdened with the cares of an empire. For this grim, practical man of the camp and the council chamber was the dream hero of the timid girl, still puzzling over Caesar's Gallic Wars and stumbling through the "Maiden's Prayer" and "Hearts and Flowers" on her father's pet piano.

The old warrior, the hero of Khartoum, the reorganizer of Egypt, holding in his grasp the destinies of India, had obeyed the summons of the girl-princess, anxious to weave him into a childish fairy tale—the last role, probably, he ever expected to fill.

Of all the court etiquette drilled into her pretty head by her conventional instructors, she only recalled one detail, because that detail was the only one that interested her. No one of less than royal rank, she had been told, was allowed to propose for the hand of a princess. Therefore, she argued, in such affairs of the heart the princess must take the initiative. She took it.

For a long time she had secretly worshiped her hero; now at last she had the chance for which she had been longing. Pa and ma were far away—the dragon of convention had been transported to Berlin. So the shrinking maid of 16 tackled the hardened hero of 60 and asked him for his hand in marriage.

As a foil to the fiery courtship of the Lady Anne by Richard III, Shakespeare could have made an exquisite historical scene of the wooing of Gen. Kitchener by the modest Princess Mary. No dramatist could ask for a more attractive theme. London journalism simply gives the bald outlines of the episode and adds that when the British general later on informed the King of the last blushing honor bestowed on him, the King laughed heartily. But Queen Mary was furious. It must be sad to have no sense of humor.

And the poor little princess was sent back to her governess, her Latin verbs and her "Maiden's Prayer." Her literature, we understand, is to be more strictly censored in the future. We prophesy, however, that the Princess Mary will be heard from some day, unless her spirit is stifled by formality.

MEDALS AND MOTTOES.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." The medal and motto manufacturers of London, according to the press dispatches, are in sight of substantial dividends, and if the militant suffrage war continues will ere long become loathsome capitalists.

Medals inscribed "For Valor," which cost nearly 4 cents to manufacture and which sell for $1.50, are pinned to the breasts of militant suffragettes who have committed arson or who have forcibly denuded anti-suffrage government officials of their raiment.

Hunger strike medals costing 6 cents to make sell for $2.36 each and are worn by ladies who will never eat much of anything until they shall be members of a voting phalanx of women.

"Fed by Force" medals costing 8 cents to make are sold for $5. They are certificates that the wearer has had unwelcome food forced down what is vulgarly designated as her "gullet." "Grille brooches" are accorded only to those who have poured sulphuric or nitric acid into government letter boxes. These cost 18 cents and sell for $10.50 each.

A few feminine heroines wear all four of these emblems at a cost of $19.36 for the lot, which cost the manufacturers the odd 36 cents. These heroines have oxidized letter boxes, have fired empty buildings, have helped divest Chancellor Lloyd George of his unmentionables, have endured the pangs of hunger and have had soup-filled silver tubes thrust down their pretty throats, all to promote the cause of votes for women.

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

It's no use loafing in the summer, unless you know just where you'll eat when Wintertime, which is a hummer, ships in some specialties in sleet. 'Twere better far to work like others, endure the backache and the yoke, the toil that galls, the heat that smothers, than face the winter season broke. There is no bread on earth that's sweeter than bread that's earned by sweating men; and happiness pervades the eater who knows he owes no man a yen. No use to talk of big achievements you contemplate in days to come; they all will end in dark bereavements, your schemes will all be out of plumb. No man who does things advertises his plans ahead for many moons; he gets to work and draws the prizes, and lets the talker take the prunes. To get to work—that is the motto each man should in his bonnet paste, if he would own his yacht or auto, and have a cash belt round his waist. It is no use to wait on others to do what you should do alone; just glance around—all men and brothers have chores and troubles of their own. Be active, brave and self-reliant, and show all men, the sky beneath, that you're no weakling, but a giant, with crimson whiskers on your teeth.

FIELDS'S LOBSTER PARTY.

[June Lippincott's:] Lew Fields, the comedian, while playing an engagement in Chicago not long ago, gave a dinner to a party of friends.

Broiled lobster was served as one of the courses, and one was brought on minus a claw.

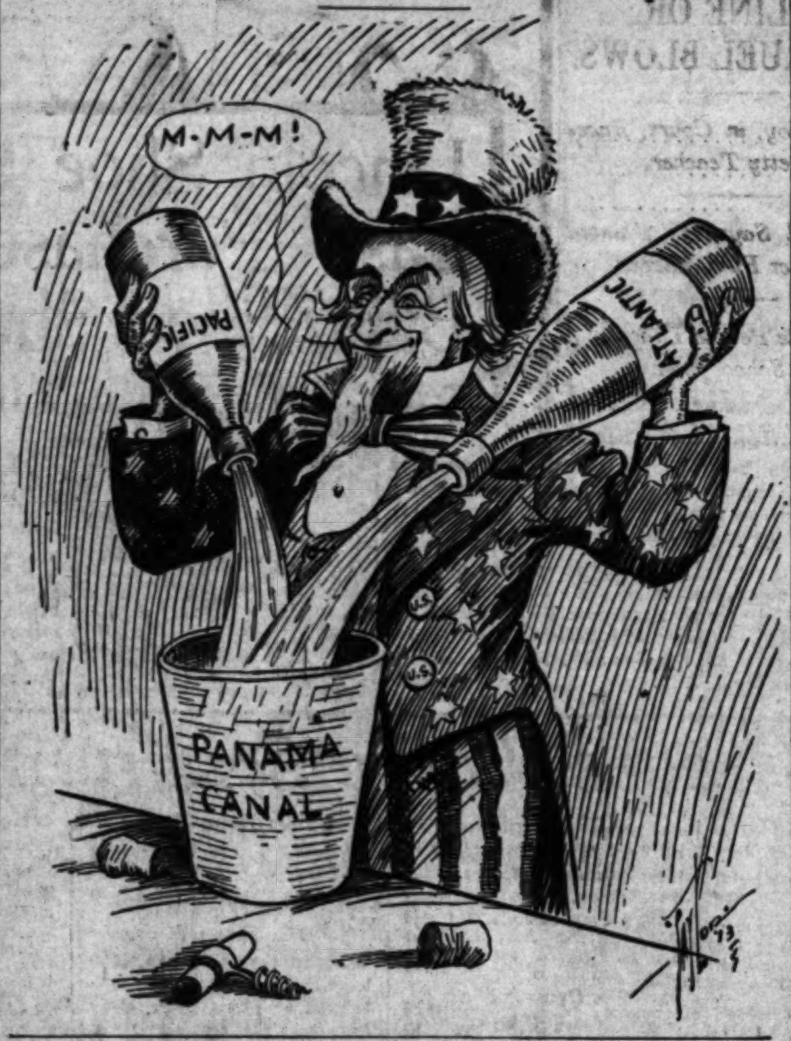
Mr. Fields immediately called the waiter and said:

"What do you mean by serving an imperfect lobster?"

"Excuse me, sah, but Ah didn't think you'd 'ject to a little thing like dat. Fact is, these heah lobsters got to fightin' in de basket, and this one lost his claw," said the waiter.

"Take this lobster out immediately," replied Mr. Fields, "and bring me the winner."

A Mixture That Will Be Popular.



STATE SOCIALISM A FAILURE.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

The industrial revolution which the nineteenth century witnessed, brought with it the locomotive and the modern railway. Since the last part of the '60's to the present time industrial changes have been rapid all over the civilized world, but more especially in the United States. Within this period the steam railways in this country have grown from 35,000 miles to more than 240,000; the population has just about doubled; national wealth has increased fivefold; wages have more than doubled per capita and railway rates have enormously decreased. Not only do the privately-owned railways of this country give the best and cheapest service in the world, but they pay the highest wages. The figures given herewith show that state-owned railways are far behind in these respects.

Illustrating the great decrease in the charges for American freight transportation the fact can be noted that the decrease in freight rates from 1890 to 1903 saved to the people $181,642,964. And a further saving from the latter year to the present time amounts to more than $100,000,000 annually. In 1870 the freight rate per ton per mile was 1.889 cents; in 1880 it was 1.23 cents; in 1890 it was .941, and at present it averages only .76 cents. Thus it will be seen that American freight rates are less than half what they were forty years ago, yet during that time the wages of railroad workers have increased more than 75 per cent. Can any government-owned railway anywhere show such a splendid record? Not a single one.

Right now our privately-owned railways are transporting beef from Chicago to Boston, a distance of 1000 miles, for 2 cents a pound; eggs are carried from the Middle West to the New England States for 1½ cents per dozen; it costs but 1 cent to transport a pair of shoes from Boston to Chicago; it costs but 30 cents to ship a barrel of flour from Chicago to Boston, and but half a cent a pound to carry butter, lard, cheese, etc., a distance of 1000 miles. Rates for similar service on the Socialist or government-owned roads of Germany are from two to three times as much. The average freight rates on the socialistic railways of Europe are from 1.30 to 1.42 cents per ton per mile, against but .76 cents in this country of private-owned, non-socialistic railways. Had our freights last year been at socialistic rates our total freight bill would have been $4,000,000 a day more for each of the 300 working days, or $1,200,000,000.

The charge is often made that the railways of this country are over-capitalized, that a large part of the stock represents water, and from this the Socialists further charge that a 4 or 6-per-cent. dividend really represents 8 to 12 per cent. Although wages for construction work are 200 to 300 per cent. higher here than in Europe, yet our railways are capitalized at less than half that of the Socialist railways, as the following table will show—compare the figures carefully:

	Capitalization per mile.
Belgium, state-owned	$167,898
France, state-owned	143,053
Holland, state-owned	137,103
Austria, state-owned	110,475
Germany, state-owned	104,725
Switzerland, state-owned	104,256
Russia, state-owned	76,095
Hungary, state-owned	64,888
United States, privately-owned	61,369

The above table is for the year 1903, and is an absolutely fair comparison. It completely refutes the Socialist charges referred to.

Why is railroad capitalization per mile so much higher under Socialist ownership and operation than under private ownership and operation? The answer is easy. Under private ownership, says Mr. Gordon, and as a railroad man he knows, there are few leaks, little waste and most efficient organization and effort. Under state ownership and operation there is always waste, inefficient work, and a general don't-care spirit. That is also true of all Socialist city governments wherever tried—Milwaukee, Berkeley, Butte, Schenectady, for instance.

In the ten years from 1897 to 1907 the wages of American railway workers increased 19.5 per cent., and since 1907 those wages have been further increased by more than 15 per cent. Since 1907 both freight and passenger rates have decreased.

In the ten years from 1897 to 1907 the average price of farm crops rose from .85 to 1.37, price current (see labor bulletin No. 77.) During this ten-year period freight rates decreased from .798 cents to .759. Passenger rates decreased from 2.02 cents per mile in 1897 to 2.01 per mile in 1907, and a further reduction since then to 1.96 cents per mile. During this time the cost of coal has increased $1 per ton, average; rails costing $18.75 per ton in 1897 averaged not less than $28.50 per ton in 1912. And a locomotive that cost $10,181 in 1897 cannot be bought for less than $14,250 at this time. Do the glib advocates of Socialist (or government) ownership of railways ever think of these things—these increased costs?

If we take the entire American railway capital, net, we will not be able to find a single year from 1885 down to the present time when as much as 6 per cent. in dividends have been paid in any one year, and some years the dividend has averaged less than 4 per cent.

To repeat; although coal and everything that the privately-owned railways of this country buy, including labor, costs more today than at any time during the past twenty-five years, yet both passenger and freight rates have been materially reduced. The same cannot by any means be said of the Socialist (government-owned) railways of Europe.

Socialism in theory may be attractive, but Socialism in practice is costly, inefficient, unprofitable and disastrous. It is a failure.

Tariff Vs. Beet Sugar.

LOS ALAMITOS, May 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] At this writing the latest phase of the sugar question is the ironbound agreement which it is asserted has been entered into between President Wilson and the Ways and Means Committees of both houses, that they will make no change, whatever, in the sugar schedule as passed by the House.

While manufacturers must go to jail if they cut wages, closed factories have not thus far been prohibited.

The present retail price of sugar in Washington is 4½ cents a pound, the lowest in the history of the country. A cut of one-half of a cent a pound in the retail price of sugar would mean a saving to the people of about $35,000,000 annually, but granting that they could buy sugar at such a figure, there must be set down the loss of $52,000,000 in public revenue, and the wiping out of an industry in which over $175,000,000 of American capital is invested, and which has added hundreds of millions of dollars to the agricultural wealth of the country, which viewed from a purely economic standpoint is it a "boon" to free sugar worth all it would cost? I am very far from admitting in the foregoing that taking the tariff off would actually give us cheaper sugar. The only thing that we can be absolutely sure of is that it would destroy the domestic industry, as those engaged in that industry would not dare to take the enormous financial risk involved in the possibility of facing both a bad crop season and a demoralized selling market. With the domestic industry out of the equatio it is easy to see what might happen.

There are about 1,600,000 tons of sugar produced now in the United States. The sudden cessation of this production would very likely produce a temporary shortage in the world's supplies of sugar and in that event the price would go soaring. That is precisely what happened in 1911, when there was a partial sugar crop failure in Germany and a somewhat light crop in Cuba. It was the marketing of the domestic cane and beet sugar in the late fall of 1911 that sent the price down nearly 2 cents a pound in the course of a few weeks. It is only reasonable to assume that except for this competition the eastern refining interests would have maintained the price of sugar at the exorbitant figure which the people were compelled to pay for it during nearly all the previous summer and fall. Indeed, it would have been in their power to put up the price to a still higher figure. In this instance the lower prices maintained by the domestic sugar industry saved the consumers of the country millions of dollars.

I noticed the other day an interview with the president of one of the principal eastern refining concerns in which he frankly stated that free sugar would undoubtedly have a disastrous effect on the domestic cane and beet sugar industry, but, curiously enough, he carefully refrained from saying one word about the permanent reduction in the retail price of sugar which we are promised as a result of the free trade policy which is to sound the death knell of the domestic sugar industry. His silence on this phase of the subject was significant, almost as significant as was his confidently-expressed opinion that the passage of the House tariff bill would permanently eliminate the domestic competitive industry.

No one is foolish enough to claim that even the present sugar schedule affords the slightest shelter to any offensive combination of the beet sugar industry. Indeed, it is only since the development of the beet sugar industry that competitive conditions in the sugar trade have been established in this country. Before that time the powerful Havemeyer-Arbuckle-Spreckles refining interests had absolute control of the American sugar market and the one formidable competitor in the great Middle West is the competition of the domestic beet sugar produced.

The only certain effect of free sugar would be to give to these interests complete control and regain the American market, enabling them to put out of business every domestic producer.

Thus, instead of legislating to destroy monopoly, the Democratic majority in the House would actually restore it. That is why all the big refining interests are lined up for free sugar. It is possible there would be times under a free trade regime when the people would pay a slightly lower price for their sugar, meantime not only putting into general bankruptcy sugar manufactories, but annihilating prosperous western agricultural interests.

At the expiration of three years the new tariff schedule suggests that the domestic sugar industry submit to competitive conditions under a reign of absolutely free trade. This means that at the end of three years the industry will be left in a situation where it must either be run at a loss or go out of existence because there is not a single beet or cane sugar producing concern in the country that can make a penny of profit with Cuban raw sugar supplied the New York refiners around 2 cents a pound.

In Michigan, for instance, the beet sugar mills pay the farmer an average price of $2.80 for each cwt. of the extractable sugar in the beets, that is to say the cost of sugar content of the Michigan beets at the point where the process of manufacture begins is 80 cents more per cwt. than the cost of Cuban raws to the refiner at the seaboard.

It is idle to suppose that any increased efficiency of factory management could in the three years overcome this handicap. Is it then "competitive" or a confiscatory tariff policy that would deprive the domestic sugar producers of the right to live?

In the President's message he distinctly advised against "cutting at the roots of what has grown up among us by long process and at our own invitation." This language gives a positive rebuke to those who would put sugar upon the free list. It can be confidently affirmed that if any industry was ever established in the United States at our invitation, beet sugar was that industry and at our invitation. "It exists today upon the strength of the government's express invitation, and that invitation cannot be withdrawn without leaving a stain upon the national honor."

"Painted Innocence."

RIVERSIDE, May 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Good for Bur[illegible]. That last paragraph "Painted Innocence," is a perfect exponent of the whole matter. Where is the innocent girl of today? Dead, or unborn. Every school girl of any age over 10 to 12, knows about as much as her mother does, and so, when temptation comes her way it is with eyes wide open that she plunges into the pit of destruction. Although it is lined with flowers, like the grave, it is in reality. But whom are we to blame for such a state of affairs? The mothers. Let me explain what I mean. On a crowded car at Christmas time a mother and daughter stood—the mother a worn, delicate woman, loaded with parcels, to her shoulders, in a shabby old suit of five years old fashion; the daughter, a pretty girl of 16 or less, in everything up-to-date, cheap, of course, but very stylish, carrying a pair of gloves, to judge by the size of the only parcel in her hand. A young man rose and offered the girl his seat. She sank into it without even "thank you" and kindly invited her mother to hold on to the back of it, which the poor woman could not do, as her arms were full. This girl was a mere school girl, not earning the clothes she wore. It was easy to see who pinched and went without to enable the girl to make a "swell" appearance.

On the city streets I have seen girls of 13 years old, leering at boys a few years older, who seemed disturbed, and kicked the curbstone, not having anything to say apparently, both with their school books in their hands. Do away with mixed schools! Let the girls be girls and not flirts, and let the boys leave off their rings and pumps, etc., and be young men, and the foundation would be laid for a better class of students. There are no young people nowadays; they are blase at 17. Instead of the ridiculous dress of the school girl of today, more fit for a dance than the schoolroom, let a universal uniform be worn, all alike, rich and poor, pretty and homely. Do the cadets at West Point think their uniform a reproach to them? No. They are proud of it. Why not every other school in the land? Surely, if the young woman who is going her first "hell trip" would read "In the House of Bondage" and see the awful end of such things, she would pause and consider. Such a book will not hurt the morality of "young America" today.

A WOMAN WHO LOOKS ON.

Haines Reed, Socialist.

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the election for city officials in December, 1911, there was general alarm lest the Socialists might capture the government and paralyze the progress of this community for years to come. In this emergency the non-Socialistic votes got together and placed a ticket in the field which won by a handsome majority. Among the officers elected were nine members of the Council, each one supposed by the voters who elected them to be free from the taint of Socialism. No sooner, however, was this supposed anti-Socialist Council organized than it was found that one of the members, namely, Haines W. Reed, was seemingly all but in name a full-fledged Socialist. As far as I can learn he gave no intimation before the election that he sympathized with the red flag, but all his actions since he took the place have indicated that to be the case, and he is again up for the same office. Municipal ownership of everything under the sun has been the special "bug" on the Reed brain, and he has a record of the most persistent obstructionist tactics to carry his point. I suppose that almost all of our citizens want municipal ownership of certain public utilities as rapidly as possible, but the sane element is opposed to the idea of mortgaging everything the city has and piling up a gigantic city debt to make the present high taxes more unbearable.

The Socialists and Reed and E. T. Earl, however, want the city to pile debt upon debt, bond issue after bond issue, until, if only one-half of their fantastic notions were carried out, our taxes would be about $10 on the $100—provided any one could be found to buy the bonds.

Reed has steadily opposed and obstructed, in the Council, any improvement in the city which he imagined night in the dim and distant future be done through his pet fad of municipal ownership. About 5000 people in the vicinity of South Main street, south of Jefferson, wanted and absolutely needed an extension of a street car line on South Main street. The street railroad company did not desire to build, but finally agreed to if the interested citizens would consent to pave the street free of expense to them. This the citizens decided to do and the franchise went before the Council. Because the franchise did not conform to some of Reed's notions of municipal ownership he fought and opposed this franchise as long as he could, but it was finally passed. He was willing to have thousands of people inconvenienced to any extent, and left without decent street car accommodations for years to come, rather than that his pet notion should be disturbed.

This is only one of many of Mr. Reed's obstructive tactics. It is indeed fortunate that the city, ten years ago, did not have a Council of Reeds or Reed sympathizers. If so Los Angeles would still be only an overgrown village.

The citizen who wants to see Los Angeles continue to grow and prosper in the future as it has in the past should cast his ballot against Haines W. Reed and all of his ilk.

Railroad Signals.

LOS ANGELES, May 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Residence property, as can be learned by inquiry among owners, has depreciated in value from 10 to 20 per cent. since the four-track system was built. I have yet to learn of one owner registering a kick against the railroad. Every sane man knows that the railroad is a good thing. But the point raised is whether or nor the placing of a noisy bell in addition to the present wig-wag system of signaling in use at grade-crossings would have any good effect on the number of fatalities arising from crossing accidents, and the residents object to the bell-ring almost continuously day and night.

A man would have to be deaf, dumb, blind or drunk to "absent-mindedly" meander on a four-track railway where between 500 and 600 trains run daily, and in spite of the warning signal.

By what process of reasoning does Mr. Humphrey come to the conclusion that the mere ringing of a bell would save human life when the people (some of them) pay so little attention to the signals already there and which they cannot very well fail to see.

DISCIPLINE OR CRUEL BLOWS?

Beaten Boy, in Court, Faces Pretty Teacher.

Wee Lad Says He Fainted Under Punishment.

Miramonte People Take Sides in School Row.

That sides have been taken in the school row at Miramonte where two of the teachers are accused of treating one of the pupils with undue severity was evident when the case was brought to trial in Justice Reeve's court yesterday. Friends of the teachers sat on one side of the room and glared at the supporters of Mrs. Clara Ayres, who says her boy Theodore was brutally treated.

The cross-examination of the boy, who was the first witness, lasted so long that Justice Cassidy of Watts, sitting for Reeve, continued the matter until Saturday. This day was fixed upon as an accommodation to the teachers.

The defendants were Herbert L. Campbell and Miss L. E. Estes. The latter, a very pretty girl, attracted much sympathy from the men present. One man declared when a photographer was trying to secure a picture of Miss Estes that he "would plant his fist on the nose of any photographer who tried to take his picture." When the photographer proved to be something above medium stature, the pugnacious stranger subsided.

FOUR SWITCHES USED.

Theodore told Deputy District Attorney Shannon that he is 11 years old. He said he didn't know how much he weighs. He appears to tip the scales at about fifty pounds. He looked very tiny as he sat on the edge of the witness chair, his big, blue eyes staring fixedly at the questioner.

"Don't be afraid," said Shannon with a friendly smile. "Just tell the judge all about your punishment as though you were talking to your daddy."

Theodore swallowed a lump very hard and, twisting around, looked the genial young jurist square in the eyes. He never swerved from his story even under a harassing cross-examination.

"I took a piece of paper from a girl in the drawing-class," said he. "Miss Estes told me to come up to the desk. I sat there and then went back to my own seat. Then she told me to stay after school. She came into the room with about four switches."

"What kind were they?" inquired Shannon.

"They were wood, but they hurt something awful," said Theodore. In his own boyish way he explained that the girl teacher hurled him to the floor when he resisted and that she rained blows on his shivering, thin shoulders after making him take off his sweater.

WELTS ON SHOULDERS.

"I crawled under a desk. Then Mr. Campbell came in and held me while Miss Estes whipped me some more," said the witness with an apparent lack of emotion. "My knees got weak and I kinder sank on the floor. I went to sleep. When I woke up Miss Estes was trying to make me drink some water."

This was the way the lad explained his first experience in fainting. Justice Cassidy requested the boy to expose his back. Though the punishment was inflicted eight days previously, a number of slender yellow marks striped his shoulder.

Humane Officer McLaughlin, who will be a witness later, stated that when he observed the boy nine distinct welts could be seen across his neck.

The lawyer for the two defendants will try to show that the boy was unruly and deserved punishment. Deputy District Attorney Shannon stated to the court, the question to decide is whether the defendants administered excessive punishment, considering the boy's tender years and evident frailness.

"FORWARD, MARCH!" SLOGAN OF SHENK.

BY JOHN W. SHENK.

STAND UP for Los Angeles! Stand up for her progress and prosperity, for her well-being and good order, for her growth and her greatness.

There should be nothing the matter with Los Angeles. Her destiny is visible, her future secure. Only it rests with us to persevere unfalteringly in the work of upbuilding. This is no time to be distracted from the main purpose by political dissension. We are all one people, capable of virile self government, with the instruments in our hands to hasten or to retard the inevitable era of municipal supremacy. We are still sowers and builders and sure harvest and full structure will be ours only as a reward for persistent, united, community endeavor. The "stick-together" spirit has made us and by it we will hasten the days when the burdens will be light and the compensation sure.

We can and must make the Owens River water and aqueduct power a boon to pay for themselves; we can and must build the greatest harbor on the Pacific Coast; we can and must push onward with municipal improvements, with home building, with industrial development, with civic despectability and humanity. We can and must add 50,000 to our population annually before 1920, and we must use the advantages of water, power and harbor to establish the industries to keep them.

Is not all this worth our deepest concern, above and beyond mere political ambition?

I believe so. Mine is no doubtful optimism, no chimerical fancy. It is true and buoyant confidence and has led me to hope that I may have an honorable part in the march of progress.

I think I have described the hope of every good citizen of Los Angeles—and the promise, too. Do those who look to the future with such confidence want an administration that has the indorsement of McCarthy, who humiliated San Francisco—an administration that would have to struggle against itself to resist the "open town" element that elected it?

Do those who see our great future want new and untried men, whose sphere of activity has been distant from the practical business problems in municipal government, chosen to take charge of our great enterprises? Would they make such a choice in their own affairs?

They will answer next Tuesday, and I have little fear of the answer. Experience with the people of Los Angeles has fortified, not weakened, my confidence in their good sense and civic loyalty. To them I look for a vindication of our city, a rallying at the polls to sustain the forward columns of progress, and an emphatic declaration against every element that would cause our great city to take a backward step. Let the sensible people of Los Angeles rally to the polls.

AND WHAT HAPPENED? POSTERS WITH A "STING."

That the Rose Campaign Committee has been stung to the quick by Municipal Conference posters calling attention to the fact that P. H. McCarthy of San Francisco was a worker in the Rose campaign, and has endeavored accordingly to suppress this information by unfair means, was the charge made by Meyer Lissner, chairman of the Campaign Committee of the Municipal Conference, at a meeting held last night at Thirty-fifth and Normandie. It was a Shenk meeting, the speakers being Mr. Lissner, W. E. Easton and George W. Albright.

"Judge Rose's Campaign Committee," said Mr. Lissner, "have seen the hand-writing on the wall. When we put up posters calling attention to the P. H. McCarthy's participation in the Rose campaign, the judge's men were furious.

"In the first place, Judge Rose had placarded all the dead walls in town with his own posters. He had no more right to this space than anyone else. It was open to anybody.

"When we sent out posters referring to McCarthy's activities, the Rose managers tried to prevent their posting. We instructed our man to use only half the space, leaving the rest to Judge Rose.

"The Rose Campaign Committee agreed with the Municipal Conference Committee to share the space, half and half. Our men used our half of this space, putting up the McCarthy posters.

"This medicine, however, was too strong for Rose's men, they knowing that the load of McCarthyism is too much for them to carry. They were stung to the quick.

"So, on Thursday night, under cover of darkness, the Rose people sent out a gang and pasted Rose placards over all the McCarthy paper. They worked in the manner of sneaks, as might have been expected.

"The whole city now knows, however, about the arrangement between the Rose managers and P. H. McCarthy. Rose's campaign has blown up. The judge faces certain defeat. McCarthy proved too much."

CANTRELL ON THE NEW DEAL.

Former Socialist Chief Points Out the Dangers.

Perils in the Agitation of the Class War.

BY EDWARD ADAMS CANTRELL.

(Former State Organizer of the Socialist Party of California.)

LOS ANGELES, May 31.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Since beginning the publication of these letters in The Times, many criticisms, favorable and unfavorable, have come to me. There is one criticism, the full meaning of which it would be well for the people of Los Angeles to understand.

One of Job Harriman's chief lieutenants has said, "Every Socialist in Los Angeles knows everything Cantrell has said, but they are not going around telling everybody about it." Now suppose we take this man at his word. Of course, strictly speaking, we will have to discount his statement about 75 per cent. It cannot be said that every Socialist in Los Angeles knew the things I have related, but it can be said that many of the party leaders knew. I have purposely confined myself to things which I knew they knew, so that there could be no denial of the facts from them, and there has been no denial. In this lies a condemnation more sweeping than anything I can now say.

I have been asked how any man or woman of any degree of intelligence can condone the conduct and methods I have described. With some it is a matter of sect or class psychology, with others it is a matter of taking advantage of this class psychology to further individual interests.

THE M'CARTHY DEAL.

The Harriman-McCarthy-Tveitmoe political deal, the McNamara dynamite conspiracy, the Darrow bribery incidents, the support of Harriman by the Socialist leaders—all these things were done in the name of working-class interests. By juggling with the shibboleths of the class movement, such as "class solidarity," "our class," "our men," "our interests," a certain element in the Socialist movement has been brought to the point where it is willing to say, "you may use dynamite, you may kill, you may destroy, you may lie and perjure yourself, you may do anything to protect our men, our class, our interests." When some of us declare that such things do not mean working-class interests, but working-class disintegration and degradation, we are expelled from the organization and denounced as traitors to the working class.

DANGEROUS DOMINATION.

The Socialist party organization in this city is dominated by this kind of an element. There are men and women on the Socialist ticket, who, under ordinary circumstances could be trusted. But they have succumbed to the domination of the Harriman crowd. If they should get into office they would still be dominated by this crowd.

There is a clause in the party constitution that reads as follows:

"Any member violating the laws and principles of the organization . . . or if elected or appointed to a political office and failing to obey the instructions of the party organization . . . may be suspended or expelled by a majority vote."—Article II, Section 3, Constitution of the Socialist party, Los Angeles county.

BOSS CONTROL.

The purpose of this clause in the constitution is to give the organization complete power over all members of the Socialist party elected to any office. The following affidavit will make this still more clear:

> H. Hume, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:
> That he has read the above constitution of the Socialist party for the county of Los Angeles, State of California, and that he was county secretary of said party when said constitution was adopted, and that Article II, Section 3, has not been changed, and is now in full force and effect and controls and intends to control any official that may be elected or appointed to public office who may be a member of the Socialist party, and the said such control of such officer by the Executive Committee of the County General Committee is absolute and without appeal.
> [Signed] H. HUME.

This was subscribed and sworn to before a notary, August 14, 1912.

In order that there may be no question in the enforcement of this party rule, it is the custom of the party to require each candidate for office to sign an undated resignation which is held by the secretary of the Executive Committee. If a candidate is elected, and at any time fails to obey the instructions of the party, the resignation is dated and the official recalled. If he fails to recognize the jurisdiction of the party he is expelled from the organization.

The Executive Committee of the Socialist party in Los Angeles consists of Job Harriman, M. E. Johnson, C. F. Grow, Stevens, Gray, Zahn, Shaffer, Shields, Locke, Wilhite, Ramage—but one man on the entire committee, who is not completely dominated by Harriman.

IN OTHER CITIES.

In this connection, I mention the experience of a member of cities in the Middle West. At the big election of 1911, some thirty-five or forty towns and small cities elected Socialist Mayors or Councilmen.

More than twenty of these officials were recalled before the end of the first year. It became almost a national scandal in the party. One prominent writer in the party has written an article suggesting that steps be taken by the party toward the official education of Socialists in office.

Whether Los Angeles wants to try this sort of an experiment remains to be seen. With some of us, it seems that the important thing is for the Socialist party to do its educational work before putting anyone in office. This should be its mission, and if it fails to do that, it will go down, as it will deserve to go down.

AN APPEAL FROM AND TO WOMEN.

To the Women Citizens:

The franchise brings with it duties and responsibilities which must be met spuarely and honestly.

We must accept our financial responsibility and pay our part of the campaign expenses.

In this respect we have, thus far, made a bad showing, expecting the men to bear the full and heavy burden.

Let us think about this, and use our consciences.

The women should subscribe $5000 to the Municipal Conference in the next two days.

This is our debt. Let us pay our share at once.

Let us take or send whatever we can afford, to the Municipal Conference headquarters, 740 S. Broadway, be it one dollar, or hundreds of dollars.

Make checks payable to F. W. Braun, Treasurer.

We want a moral city, so we must accept our own moral responsibility.

We are Voters.

What are our principles worth?

MARY S. GIBSON.

Chairman of the Woman's Conference Campaign Committee.

POLITICAL TIPS.

[Washington Star:] "That means good-by to the Bull Moose party," remarked a Democratic Senator when the test vote was announced in the Senate last week, by which, with the aid of a Progressive Republican, the Democrats defeated the effort for open committee hearings on the tariff bill. He went on to explain his remark in this wise: "The next campaigns, Congressional and national, will be fought out on the tariff. If our tariff legislation works out in its practical business effect, as we believe it will, we will win and remain in power. The Democratic party will be the exponent of a low revenue tariff. The old line Republicans will stand for a protective tariff. If business goes wrong under our new law, the old line Republicans will benefit. Therefore, it looks to me as if the fight must of necessity be between the high and low tariff men. If such is to be the issue the Bull Moosers have no goods to offer. On the tariff question they are neither flesh, fowl nor good red herring. They will be shooting at the sky, calling attention to a lot of progressive principles for which we already stand and for which we stood long before the Progressives tagged on, while the country will be talking tariff and the two old parties will be lining up the voters."

Speaker Clark appears to be getting a cold hand from the President. Up to the present time every man that the Speaker has recommended for a Federal appointment has been turned down by the administration. The impression was recently given out that Bryan and Clark had buried the past, but the former is believed to be opposing Clark's indorsements of office seekers.

The Democratic members of the Senate object to publishing a list of all witnesses, importers and manufacturers who have appeared before the committee constructing the tariff bill. Such a refusal looks as if importers and free traders had been accorded about everything they want in the matter of reduced duties.

A new method has been inaugurated by the Senate for settling the question of confirmation or rejection of any of the President's appointments, that of arbitration. Instead of the members listening to long arguments upon the niceties of census taking while considering whether W. J. Harris of Georgia should be confirmed as Director of the Census, it was agreed to submit the matter to arbitration and vote on it on June 25.

The Republican National Committee has found itself in the peculiar position of having no rules for its government. A search of the records of the national convention revealed that when the majority and minority reports were submitted to the convention, a motion was made and adopted that both reports be laid on the table. In the subsequent excitement of the proceedings no one apparently thought anything more about the matter and they are, to all intents, still on the table. The National Committee will therefore work under the rules of 1908.

Gov. Sulzer of New York appears to have become badly mixed up in an endeavor to have his own way regardless of the Legislature. He was determined to have John Mitchell for State Commissioner of Labor though the Senate twice rejected the appointment. Finally the Governor made Mitchell commissioner as a recess appointment, but Atty.-Gen. Carmody has rendered an opinion that the appointment is invalid. The department is thus without a head, nor does it have a first deputy labor commissioner, and it rests with the second deputy labor commissioner to reorganize the department, which includes the naming of many officials at large salaries. The Governor made a similar mistake regarding his authority to appoint a chairman and one other member of the Public Service Commission, so that the problems of that department will have to be solved by three, instead of the regular five members that should comprise the commission.

The information was recently given out from the White House that Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky would decline to let his name be presented for action as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. If this were so it would be a victory for the President over Speaker Clark, whose friends have put Johnson forward for the position. Mr. Johnson denies that he has withdrawn, though he has never sought the position, but as he has been endorsed by his own State delegation and has votes enough on the committee to make him chairman he does not see any sense in the rumor from the White House.

Chief Justice Frank B. Dunn of the Illinois Supreme Court, in an address to the law students of the University of Illinois a few days ago declared that the recall of judicial decisions would destroy the independence of the judiciary and put a new scheme of government in operation.

"The proposed recall of judicial decisions" he said, "would eliminate every constitutional limitation established for the security of the citizen. Nothing could be more inconsistent with the fundamental theory of the Constitution. The great fundamental principles of freedom are above majorities, for they represent years of growth in freedom and are rights which every majority must respect

DARKNESS AIDS FLY-BY-NIGHTS.

Midnight Meanders Mingle Trunks Before Dawn.

Special Gangs of Movers in Class by Themselves.

Theatrical Folks Not Alone Sleepless Prowlers.

Trucks that pass in the night!

You have seen them, piled high with chattels, along about that dread hour of lateness when the lights are winking out along the fronts of the vaudeville houses and the bibulous ones are beginning to hang on the bar by the top buttons of their vests.

These trucks, rumbling along the otherwise quiet streets, making raucous the time apportioned to sleep, are the in hoc signo of a civilization that, in the words of Ecclesiastes, has "sought out many inventions." They are the outward manifestation of an inward hurry, a feverishness to flit hence while the god sleeps who apportions profits.

Among the transfer men, these traffickers of the darksome hours are known as "fly-by-nights." It is a term applied neither in opprobrium nor scorn, rather is it a title of respect with those who manhandle your lares and penates, for those who flit by night pay therefor to the tune of day rates—doubled.

But of those who flit by night, the more numerous are they who migrate between the dusk of Saturday and the dawn of Sunday, and most numerous of all are those who trek when "the clock has striken twelve."

MOSTLY PROPER.

These last are the true children of an age that has bred prophets of small patience—a generation owing allegiance to the cash register. They are proper men, most of them, though here and there is to be found one with a sort of have-tried-two-bottles-of-your-medicine-and-have-been-benefited look about the eyes who has subterranean reasons for a desire to greet the sun in unaccustomed haunts. These last are few, however.

It is much cheaper to pay rent than move by night.

"How many persons move Saturday nights?" was the question put yesterday to the head of a local transfer concern.

He turned to his ledger, did a bit of figuring, then announced that in ten weeks his concern had moved twenty-six persons, corporations or firms on Saturday night—fifty-four truckloads in all. He then went on to say that his concern moves about 10 per cent. of those who move by night.

First place in the list of movers he gave to cigar store owners, second to barbers. In fact, as he outlined it, they are the true peripatetics in the night-moving line. To short leases he attributes this condition of affairs.

Further down the list, but contributing about 50 per cent. to the truck total and thereby to the profit side of the transfer company's ledgers, are what he was pleased to call the "twenty-footers," a reference to the street frontage usually monopolized by these concerns. Prominent among these are small clothing concerns, buyers of bankrupt stocks of which they hope to turn into money in thirty or sixty days.

THEATRICAL, TOO.

The theatrical folk, by and large, however, are the true patrons of the night-moving forces of the transfer companies. Not the vaudeville folk, for most of them have only a few trunks, but the "legit," the companies that carry all the way from one carload to ten and fifteen carloads of scenery and properties.

Scarcely has the tumult and the shouting died behind the footlights of the modern theater on a Saturday night; scarcely have the foremost of the parquet patrons reached the lobby, than there descends on the stage blue-shirted men, who, in less time than it takes to tell it, have reduced a woodland scene or a drawing-room setting into a heterogeneous collection of dabbled slabs. Other men grab these on the fly, as it were, and transfer them to the waiting wagons.

Many times the company that closes here at 11:15 o'clock on a Saturday night must open with a Monday matinee in San Francisco, perhaps in a city even farther north. It is a matter of hurry to catch the train. As a result, there has been built up in every theatrical city of the first importance a corps of experts in transferring theatrical scenery. This city has such a corps or rather a local concern has such a corps, and this company moves every large theatrical company that comes here.

Trained packers are also in demand by the business movers, particularly those concerns that move fragile stuff. Every local transfer concern has trained packers. Their services are always in demand.

BUSINESS HURT BY REVOLUTION.

EL PASO DEALERS FAVOR PEACE AT ANY COST.

Morse's Comeback of Local Interest—Catalina Rate Case Hearing Wednesday—Local Party Returns from World Tour—Other News Notes.

That El Paso is complaining of business depression due to disturbed conditions in Mexico is the report of District Passenger Agent Brandt of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, who returned last week from a ten day inspection tour which took him as far as San Antonio.

"El Paso, as everyone knows, is the trade gateway to a good part of Mexico," stated Brandt yesterday. "Naturally, a good part of the wholesale and retail business of that town has been built up around the Mexican consumer and when there is trouble in Mexico, the El Paso wholesalers and retailers are the first to feel the effect.

"In talking with El Paso business men I found a general unanimity of sentiment that strenuous measures in Mexico are now in order if the turmoil is ever to cease. They said that their agents in Mexico report that the country is so broken into factions that only intervention by some strong power or the efforts of some master's mind, like that of Diaz, can bring peace out of the turmoil."

Speaking of Arizona and New Mexico, Brandt stated that there is as much optimism in those States as in Southern California and that faith in the future is rampant. He pointed out that Yuma is optimistic, as 25,000 acres of land has just been added to the irrigated total contiguous to that city, while Phoenix is seeing thousands of acres of desert reclaimed through the operation of the Roosevelt dam.

Owns Yale and Harvard.

Charles W. Morse's re-election as president of the Hudson Navigation Company, a position from which he was deposed in 1910, following court proceedings which landed him in the Atlanta penitentiary, is of particular interest on the Pacific Coast as Morse is the owner of the Yale and Harvard, the steamers operated by the Pacific Navigation Company, and claiming this city as their home port.

Whether Morse's "come-back" will affect the status of the suit now pending for the return of these vessels to the Atlantic seaboard whence they were sent following the throwing of Morse's affairs into receivership is problematic. Generally speaking, local shipping agents are of the opinion that the boats will remain right here, as they are making money in the service between this port and San Francisco.

Hearing of the complaint of J. H. Miller and E. Donaldson against the Wilmington Transportation Company regarding rates between Catalina and the mainland will take place before Commissioner Thelen of the State Railroad Commission in San Francisco Wednesday. The complainants allege that the rates are too high for the service performed.

The next hearing of the commission in this city is set for June 9, when the joint committee on inductive interference will sit at 10 a.m., in the Supreme Courtroom to hear initial complaints.

A feature of their trip was automobile tours of Europe, Ceylon and India.

FOR NEW STEEL SIPHON.

Material to Be Rushed From the East to Replace Rock Conduits at Sand Canyon.

Chief Engineer Mulholland received advices from Leetsdale, Pa., factories yesterday that the steel for the new siphon at Sand Canyon will be shipped within two weeks. The railroads have made special arrangements to get it through in a hurry so that it should arrive here in ten or twelve days after shipment. Men are at work preparing for the siphon construction and there will be no delay in replacing the rock conduits with steel.

The failure of the rock work to stand the severe test of the full flow of the aqueduct was due to a form of work that was recommended for universale use where ledge rock occurred at the sites of siphon crossings. Mulholland did not approve of the design and confined the form of structure to a single siphon, where the rock was sounder than at any other point on the aqueduct.

All the other siphons are constructed of steel and have been long since tested completely with absolutely satisfactory results. The damage, in amount, will result in a loss which equals one-eighth of one per cent. of the cost of the aqueduct, so that it cannot be regarded as calamitous.

ROCK ISLAND COMING SAYS RAILROAD CHIEF.

THERE WILL be another great railroad into Southern California by 1915—and it will be the Rock Island.

This assertion has the backing of a railroad general manager who is in a position to speak with authority, but for obvious reasons does not wish to be quoted.

"I have it from one close to the Rock Island management that surveys have been made from Tucson to San Diego and that an announcement of the proposed work will be made shortly," stated this man. "The backers of the new road are the Reid-Moore and Phelps-Dodge interests, controlling the Rock Island and the El Paso and Southwestern systems.

"You will have observed that Rock Island and El Paso and Southwestern officials have been paying numerous visits to the Southland the past few months. One of them, Vice-President Ridgway of the Rock Island operating department, spent a month here, or rather, divided his time between this city and San Diego.

"In interviews these officials were innocuously quoted as here to secure business and to tighten traffic relations with the Southern Pacific. They were within the facts in making these statements, but they effectively concealed the important fact that they have an important extension about ready for announcement.

UNITY OF INTERESTS.

"I wish to make one thing plain, however, and that is, that the Rock Island is not the owner of the El Paso and Southwestern. In fact, it is the other way about. The Phelps-Dodge interests, with James J. Douglas, are the owners of the last-named road. They are also heavy stockholders in the Rock Island. This, of course, means a unity of interests between the roads; a closeness of relations that in effect makes the El Paso and Southwestern merely an extension of the Rock Island.

"When the new road is built I am safe in saying that the money will come from the Phelps-Dodge and Douglas interests. They financed the El Paso and Southwestern extension into Tucson, and they will finance it beyond, particularly as the Tucson-San Diego extension will open up country in which they have mining and smelting interests.

"Just between you and I, I do not believe that the Spreckles road will form any part of the new line. In fact, I am in possession of information that leads me to suppose that the surveys lead due west from Tucson, then dip below the border into Sonora, then across into Lower California, and enter San Diego from the south. This is a country of great resources—you all know what the Mexican end of the Imperial Valley is—and is now nearly without railroad mileage."

Within the past few months there have been recurrent rumors that the Santa Fe or the Southern Pacific would join hands with the Rock Island in this Tucson-San Diego extension. These rumors have been denied time and time again by officials of the two roads, from Presidents Sproule and Ripley, down.

In fact, they have been laughingly denied, as the spectacle of either one of these railroads assisting a competitor in getting into Southern California is one that appeals to the railroad man's resibilities. The Santa Fe particularly, has always been the independent among railroads. It has always steered clear of entangling alliances and has made money thereby. As for the Southern Pacific, affairs of that road will probably be in statu quo for some time to come, owing to the dissolution through which it will be deprived of the support of the Union Pacific and the Harriman backing, both of which have been wonderful aids to the road. In other words, the Southern Pacific will have to effect its own fortifications and see to their adequate manning, lest some of the lucrative business it is now handling is stolen by competitors, who in many cases can give rather more satisfactory handling than the Southern Pacific, divorced of the Central Pacific, which last now seems probable.

THEY HAVE THE MONEY.

That the Rock Island-El Paso and Southwestern interests have the money to build the Tucson-San Diego extension is obvious from the financial standing of their backers, as well as from the fact that the financial rating of both roads is in the A-1 class.

As local railroad men see it, San Diego will not long remain the terminus of the Rock Island. This city is the metropolis of the Southland, the banking center and the tourist capital. It will be the eventual terminus of the road, giving this city not only additional connection with St. Louis and Chicago, but also with Memphis and the entire South, the first over the Rock Island's own rails, the second through the close community of interest between the Rock Island and the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, perhaps better known as the Frisco system.

REFUSE TO YIELD.

Squatters Said to be Still Contending Against Government in Decision Favoring Homesteaders.

A coterie of "squatters" from the Palo Verde Valley, Riverside county, are again making trouble among the entrymen whose right to holdings have been confirmed by the Secretary of the Interior, and the Federal grand jury will begin an investigation in regard to conditions there next Tuesday.

Last fall William B. Edwards, Robert L. Culpepper, C. E. Wells, William Wells, Ben White, John McLaren and Oscar Clayton were arrested on complaint of Rev. Patrick H. Bodkin, charging conspiracy to oppress citizens of the United States in the exercise of their constitutional rights, and the whole party was lodged in the County Jail. A few days later, with the promise to Assistant United States District Attorney Robinson hat they would cease their warfare involving threats to continue to hold the land that had been awarded Bodkin, the men were released on their own recognizance and allowed to return home.

Ever since such action by the District Attorney, information has been coming continually to the effect that the same men have continued to threaten and oppress Bodkin and other settlers, the legality of whose entries have been passed favorably upon by the highest authorities in Washington.

It is claimed that Edwards is the leader of the turbulent element and that he has insisted that his squatator rights are paramount. It is stated that meeings have been held in the schoolhouse, where addresses have been delivered by Edwards counseling resistance to the government in its effort to dispossess the squatters.

Complaints have been so numerous that Acct. Dist.-Atty. Robinson has determined to bring the matter to the attention of the Federal grand jury, and indictments may follow the investigation of the situation. Every opportunity has been given the malcontents to avoid prosecution, but they have not taken advantage of them.

JUNK THE QUERY.

The grand jury met yesterday to hear more evidence concerning H. L. Varey and his method of dealing with local junk dealers. The witnesses were heard and adjournment taken until tomorrow.

Political Tips.

The only defense of these principles of freedom declared in the bill of rights is an independent judiciary.

"Danger of the abuse of the power of government always exists even when the sovereign power is the people themselves. Kings are not the only tyrants, and there is no greater despot than a majority which rules as it pleases without regard to justice or the rights of the minority. The men who framed the Constitution knew that the tyranny of monarchy was not greater than the tyranny of an unrestrained majority."

Gov. Goldsborough of Maryland does not believe in putting his State to the expense of an unnecessary election, the amount of which would approximate $200,000, just for the election of a United States Senator, and he will therefore not call for an election this year, which means that Senator Jackson will retain his seat until the next Legislature adjourns, at which time Senator Jackson's term expires by limitation. The next Legislature will elect a Democratic Senator. The effect of the seventeenth amendment comes up in this Maryland case, good constitutional lawyers declaring that after this amendment goes into effect no Senator can be elected until the Legislature of his State has complied with the Constitution in providing the method of election.

Has the United States government the constitutional right to compel all of the corporations of the country to become income tax collectors without so much as reimbursing them for the financial loss that will result by reason of the expense necessarily incident to compliance with the provisions of the Underwood bill? asks the New York Sun. Under the language of the bill whenever a person's income from a corporation exceeds the exemption such corporation is made liable for the tax and is required to render a return of the portion of the income from which the "normal" tax of such persons has been withheld. The corporation, acting as the collecting agent of the government, must, in its return to the government, state the name and address of such person, deduct the tax from the amount due from it to him, and pay the tax to the internal revenue collector. In the case of large corporations there will be a great many returns, deductions and payments that will be required because of amounts due for salaries, dividends, interest on bank and other loans, as well as on bond indebtedness. That the government expects this to be so is evident from the fact that this provision is inserted in the bill. The expense incidental to this will in many cases be considerable.

It is not expected that Senator Root will be a candidate for re-election in 1914 if he will have to enter a political scramble for the nomination and then stand the direct election contest. If he retires from the Senate it will be a further evidence of the tendency in recent years for men of brains and ability to leave public life rather than undergo the misrepresentations and abuse that are heaped upon them.

BURKE'S Dry Gin will agree with you. It is pure and wholesome and an excellent stomachic.

Scaled Like a Fish

Mr. P. J. Weimer of Pennsylvania, a sufferer from Eczema, writes:

"I scaled like a fish—had two doctors but got worse all the time—after using only three bottles of D. D. D., I can truthfully say I am cured."

This D. D. D. Prescription is a mild wash scientifically compounded from wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients which penetrate to the disease germs. This cooling wash destroys the germs and throws them off, leaving the skin smooth and healthy.

Remedy for Congestion.

Santa Fe line to about the crossing of North Broadway.

"There is already a connection between the Salt Lake and the Southern Pacific at Alhambra street, just east of the river in the southeast angle. Another connection in the northeast angle would allow a north and east movement without passing over to the west side of the idustrial district.

"A bridge over the Los Angeles River should be constructed some place between Second and Alhambra streets so as to carry the Salt Lake route back to its own lines, and form a route for the Southern Pacific trains to and from the East. A short connection east of the main river from the Salt Lake at Barranca street (just beyond the Santa Fe) to the Southern Pacific just north of the river crossing, made mostly along the river bed owned by the city, would complete the route. That re-arrangement would leave the district west of the river practically free of main line tracks from First street to North Broadway.

"The Pacific Electric Railway might be brought in on an elevated structure alongside the steam roads from Aliso street to the union station. These same lines from the south might be brought in over Central avenue, or alongside the steam road elevated structure to the union station.

REMOVALS AND CHANGES.

"Main line tracks of the Southern Pacific should be removed from Alameda street from Fourth street to about Alpine street. Central avenue should be widened north of Second street and carried diagonally into Alameda street in the vicinity of Market street.

"All of the main-line tracks and crossings of the Southern Pacific should be removed from North Main street.

"Santa Fe avenue might very well be continued north along the railroad right-of-way or as nearly so as advisable, to about San Fernando street.

"The main tracks of the Southern Pacific should be removed from Alhambra west of the river, and this street opened up as a thoroughfare. In addition, suitably-improved roadways should be provided on Alhambra street outside of the Southern Pacific tracks east from the river to the intersection of Mission road.

"Mission Road would be properly improved and a suitable connection provided for reaching it other than by Macy street alone.

"Sixth street might to good advantage be cut through from where it now stops at the Santa Fe tracks, to a junction with Boyle avenue at the angle and depression opposite Hollenbeck Park. That would give a direct low grade line to reach Stephenson, Boyle and Chicago avenues.

"Los Angeles street should be widened and straightened where necessary, and supplied with tracks to relieve the over congested tracks on Main, Spring and Broadway.

"An adequate number of both north and south and east and west streets should be opened through the "closed" section between the River, Macy and North Main streets.

SYSTEM INADEQUATE.

In explanation of his statement that the street system is inadequate and is responsible for many interruptions, Mohler said:

"The business section has developed in a north and south direction mainly along an axis of four streets, Main, Spring, Broadway and Hill. By drawing an east and west line through the north end of the business district, say at the intersection of Main and Temple streets, the area of the city is almost equally divided, (excluding the shoe-string strip and the harbor cities.)

"The west side of the business district is hemmed in by the natural barrier of a hill for nearly a mile. This barrier turns eastward at the north end and brings three of the business streets, Hill, Broadway and Spring, to a termination as normal traffic outlets. By "normal traffic outlets" is meant one used for both vehicle and car traffic, and without abnormal grades or tunnels.

"At the south end of the business district between Ninth and Eleventh streets, three of the main business streets, Main, Spring and Broadway merge into one. This one outlet is only one hundred feet wide, and Hill street ends a little farther out.

"The first normal outlet to the west is Seventh street, which very fortunately is wider than the other east and west streets through the business section. While Seventh street is not colored yellow on the map, it is still an interrupted and otherwise not a normal street. It ends on the west at Catalina street, and has a bad grade west of Boyle avenue.

"Sixth street, while running through, has a jog and steep grades a short distance west of the business district, and ends at the River on the east.

"To the east there are no abnormal obstructions, but most of the streets are narrow, crooked, and broken by off-sets. North of First street there are no east and west streets crossing Main street without off-sets.

ARTIFICIAL BARRIERS.

"In addition to the natural barriers and the bad street system, there exist artificial barriers of far greater importance, if anything, than those just mentioned. I refer to the absolute closing of the entire river valley, the flat land, from Main street east to Workman street, for nearly a mile and a half, to through north and south communications.

"The condition within the area bounded by Macy, Aliso and Main streets, and the River, is almost equally as bad. The natural barrier of the hill comes down almost to Main street from the west between Macy and Aliso streets, and is directly opposite the artificial barrier and at the dividing line previously referred to, passing through Main at Temple.

LOCAL CAR LINES.

"If you want some bywords for the situation in which Los Angeles finds itself today, they can be supplied. The features of the local transportation system (the yellow cars) are that: In the southern end of the business section there is a carline on every street. In the northern end every carline is on one street. The restricted portion is at the center. There is one small opening through which traffic can filter a grain at a time. As a matter of fact there is not a single normal street outlet from the business section to the north, northeast and northwest.

North Broadway makes a roundabout detour and is reached by turning off from Main street or pass through a tunnel; north-bound vehicle traffic on North Main street has to cross the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad three times at grade, while the south-bound crosses twice, and is crowded over to a narrow roadway to share space with a single track car line on which north-bound cars run against traffic.

A little over half a mile farther out the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway is crossed at grade west of the river, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad east of the river. In addition to that, the Southern Pacific Railroad through trains make two movements over the portion of the line on Alameda street.

"The local city transportation system, not to mention the interurban lines, can be arranged to give much better service to a union station than is can to serve a number of scattered and unrelated stations, and is of greater importance than generally appreciated.

"The location at Alameda, between Fourth and Sixth streets, is just off from Seventh street, which is a wide street and the first to pass through the business district to the west without serious obstacles. On account of general traffic conditions, it is perhaps better to have a depot a little off from a main axis thoroughfare rather than directly on it.

NEW THOROUGHFARES.

Important streets which should be open and uninterrupted terminate about as follows:

"Los Angeles at the Plaza, San Pedro at Aliso, Central at Jackson, Alameda at about Alpine, and Santa Fe at First. North Main, while continuing through, is obstructed with the barriers previously referred to, and in addition changes its direction about 90 degrees and becomes an east and west street, forming the northern boundary of the closed section, and terminates at Mission road.

"All of these streets should be either continued through or connected up so as to form normal through or parts of uninterrupted avenues of through communication to the north and the west.

"By removing all of the main tracks and such of the spur tracks as are not actually needed to serve industries west of the river between Fourth street and North Broadway, street traffic would be relieved of a vast amount of needless interference.

"There is a popular impression that subways are the ultimate, if not the ideal, remedy for evils that neglect and lack of forethought have brought upon us. Can we not, no, must we not, plan and build our cities so that we are not compelled to resort in any great degree to this method of providing means for communication?

"The time usually taken to decide upon and actually construct subways and their great cost, is really discouraging. How many of us realize that subways cost from fifty to one hundred times as much as the same amount of trackage on the surface. One mile of double track subway in Washington street, Boston, cost considerably over $8,000,000. A mile of single track surface line in a paved street will cost from $30,000 to $50,000, while one mile of single track in subways can be expected to cost not much less than $2,000,000."

JUDGMENTS AFFIRMED.

Supreme Court Rules in Claim Cases, One for Attorney's Fees, Another for More Money.

The Supreme Court has affirmed the judgment of the Superior Court of this county in the action brought by George F. Zimmer against Mary Woodman Kilborn in favor of the plaintiff for $500 for attorney's services rendered by J. L. Murphey, Murphey & Schmidt, and Murphey & Poplin. Zimmer appeared in the case as assignee of the claim.

The Supreme Court also affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the same case, on appeal by the plaintiff from an order denying his motion to set aside the judgment in his favor for $500, and enter another judgment based upon the verdict of the jury for the amount set out in the complaint. It was alleged by the plaintiff that about $3000 was due on account of professional services.

NEW CHARTER FOR COUNTY.

Goes Into Effect Tomorrow at Board Meeting.

Changes Will Be Gradual, Says District Attorney.

Employees to Be Selected by Civil Service.

The new county charter will become operative at noon tomorrow. An ordinance covering the many details made necessary by the change has been prepared by Dist.-Atty. Fredericks and Deputy Hill, who attends to the civil business of the Supervisors.

After the ordinance is approved it must be printed for fifteen days. The county will probably not be fully operated under the charter provisions before July 1.

The changes will be gradual. In fact the charter does not materially affect incumbents. There are several technicalities that must be worked out by the District Attorney's office. For example the charter provides that beginning November, 1914, the Supervisors shall have their salaries raised from $3000 to $5000 a year and thereafter devote all their time to the business of the county. The terms of office of Supervisors Butler and Manning do not expire until December, 1914 and those of Supervisors Pridham, Hinshaw and Norton until December, 1916.

Undoubtedly there is some way of getting around this apparent difficulty but even if the Supervisors hold over until the expiration of their terms, the work of reconstructing procedure in the county government can be accomplished without friction.

ITS PROVISIONS.

"The county charter is much like freeholders' charters of cities," explained Deputy District Attorney Hill yesterday. "This county will have its own constitution and far greater powers than ever before in regulating its own affairs.

"It enables the Board of Supervisors to fix the compensation of officers, assistants and deputies. The charter, however, provides that the offices of Assessor, District Attorney, Supervisors and Sheriff shall be elective. All other offices are appointive.

"In the District Attorney's office, one chief deputy, one other deputy, three detectives and a secretary to the District Attorney are to be appointed by the incumbent. The assessor can appoint his own celef deputy and the Sheriff his under-sheriff. Other positions will be under civil service, the employees to be selected by the commission."

The charter is the expression of the will of the people and not a legislative enactment, explained Deputy Hill. He believes the county ordinances will fit in with the State laws without conflict and that the public will not realize the change.

UNDER CIVIL SERVICE.

When the County Civil Service Commission is selected by the first of July, a new system will be in vogue for selecting employees. Instead of depending upon the friendship of individual officeholders the clerks, accountants, deputies and so on will be selected from the eligible list. Whenever there is a vacancy, the Civil Service Commission will select one of the first three in standing.

The commission is to consist of three members, one from the three existing parties. This may mean one Democrat, one Republican and one Progressive, if the latter party is officially recognized. Some go as far as to say the charter enables the Supervisors to appoint a Socialist, a Prohibitionist and a Social Labor representative, but this is considered an extreme construction of the county constitution.

The elective officers, the Assessor, District Attorney, Sheriff and Supervisors, will serve for four years beginning with the expiration of the terms of the incumbents. Of course, the salary of the Supervisors is already fixed as it would be manifestly inadvisable to allow a body to fix its own compensation. But it can fix the compensations of all other officers.

SUPERVISORS' POWERS.

The Supervisors will in the future appoint the County Clerk, Recorder, Coroner, Surveyor, Superintendent of County Schools, Tax Collector and Treasurer. There are a number of new positions created by the county charter.

Among these will be a county counsel to look after the legal business of the county. At the present time he is always a member of the District Attorney's staff. There will also be a public defender to represent persons unable to retain counsel; a registrar of voters, a superintendent of charities and the Civil Service Commission.

Other county offices to be filled by the Supervisors include Health Officer, Law Library Trustees, Horticultural Commissioner, License Collector, Live Stock Inspector, Probation Committee, probation officers, Public Administrator, Purchasing Agent, Road Commissioner.

Supervisor Pridham, who is chairman of the board, consulted with Capt. Fredericks yesterday. He explained that the changes in administration will be so gradual that the public will not notice the change. He said there are some points to be worked out by the board.

PLANS JURY QUIZ.

Special Investigation of Alleged Mistreatment of Patients at Sanatorium Promised by Deputy Joos.

Deputy District Attorney Joos, who has been investigating charges preferred against the manager of the Canyon Crest Sanatorium, Glendale, stated yesterday that a number of witnesses have been subpoenaed who may go before the grand jury.

While Dr. C. G. Manger, Nurse Lillian E. Peer and Matilda Hallberg are to be tried in Justice Forbes's court tomorrow afternoon on a charge of battery, the Deputy District Attorney believes a grand jury investigation will be the only way to get facts concerning the general treatment of patients. He has secret information, he says, which is sensational.

"TIMES" COOK TO REOPEN

AFTER AN intermission of four weeks, The Times Cooking School will reopen tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when Mrs. Haffner-Ginger hopes to see a large number of her old friends and many new ones in the audience.

As warm weather approaches the average housewife feels that domestic cares drag somewhat with the lure of all out-doors about her. Especially does this apply to cooking. The jaded appetite in the spring is not always easy to please and fresh, crisp dishes are in demand in place of the hot and heavy foods that are appropriate to the winter menu. LA PARISIENNE IN HER BOUDOIR.

WHERE MAN MAY NOT INTRUDE HIS PRESENCE.

Milady Disports in Her Boudoir, Where She Displays the Supreme Luxury of Modern Negligee—A Local Exhibition of Fine Feminine Frillery.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

At a private view yesterday I was given a peep at the very latest mode in feminine finery from Paris, in the way of boudoir luxuriousness in lingerie. "Dress rehearsal," it was called, but it was in truth undress.

A private view this will remain throughout the entire time of its display, so far as the masculine world is concerned, although tomorrow morning and throughout the entire week, feminine Los Angeles may gaze and gaze its fill, at the wonders of boudoir apparel shown in that big store which always has the ultimate in such garmenting.

Something entirely novel in displays is this matinee of "robes intimes" as fair Parisians are wont to call all the filmy so-called "dress" of boudoir use, if one might employ the word "use" for that which is in reality less utilitarian than simply beautiful. Yet, after all, if beauty be not use, we might all be clad in sackcloth, or in the undressed skins of beasts.

The boudoir scene, set in matinee for rehearsal yesterday, pending the public exhibition, was one in which the most attractive of settings was employed as a background for pretty models and their bewitching attire.

The presentation opens with a bedroom scene, the habitation of two pretty girls who are disclosed in the repose of the last "forty winks," each reclining in her white-enameled bed, and surrounded by the luxurious appointments of a well-furnished sleeping chamber. Rose in its most delicious rosy shade is the color selected for the scene. Rose carpets, draperies of rose, hangings of the same delicious shade, rose in the accessories of the twin toilet tables and rose throughout in the dressing of the beds, and when it comes to that, rose in the lingerie and the robing of the pretty maidens who form the principal figures in this scene intime.

Opening sleepy eyes, the two girls are at once attended by their maids, who prepare them for the morning bath.

The utmost luxury of sleeping gowns and caps are doffed for the kimono, which is worn away to the bath, whose luxuriousness is but guessed.

Returning, clad in bathrobes—and one may never have guessed that such sack-like garments could be so graceful until they are presented here, in rosy, falling lines—each girl loiters for a moment before her dressing table, giving her hair a deft pat, placing a dab of powder here, and in fact, lounging according to her own manner of employing the first moments

"TIMES" COOKING SCHOOL TO REOPEN TOMORROW.

AFTER AN intermission of four weeks, The Times Cooking School will reopen tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when Mrs. Haffner-Ginger hopes to see a large number of her old friends and many new ones in the audience.

As warm weather approaches the average housewife feels that domestic cares drag somewhat with the lure of all out-doors about her. Especially does this apply to cooking. The jaded appetite in the spring is not always easy to please and fresh, crisp dishes are in demand in place of the hot and heavy foods that are appropriate to the winter menu. In recognition of this fact, Mrs. Haffner-Ginger will give especial attention to summer dishes and summer soft drinks.

Package of Tea Free.

Everyone who attends the cooking school lecture and demonstration tomorrow will receive a souvenir packet of one of Mrs. Haffner-Ginger's favorite brands of tea together with instructions how to prepare it.

Everyone knows, who has given the subject any thought, or who has experimented, that a hot drink or a hot bath is cooling in summer time if properly taken.

Drinks Hot, Dinks Cold.

Tomorrow, therefore, the cook lady will demonstrate how cooling a cup of hot drink may be and all the beverages on the menu will have their cooling qualities extolled.

Some months ago, soon after The Times Cooking School opened, a large number of recipes for preparing tea and coffee were printed in this department but none of them have yet been demonstrated by Mrs. Haffner-Ginger. She will turn her attention to this subject tomorrow. She knows how to brew French drip coffee and Vienna coffee, Turkish coffee and Brazilian coffee, Java coffee and cafe au lait; iced coffee and coffee ice, cafe frappe and coffee parfait, coffee junket and coffee Bavarian cream, coffee cake and coffee jelly—and just plain coffee. In short this coffee cooking expert knows how to prepare this delicious beverage in all languages, latitudes and styles.

Then there's tea—that cup that cheers but does not intoxicate. You've no idea how many styles there are in tea. There's Russian tea and tea frappe, tea julip and tea punch, and spiced tea and tea plain. Come along and see how many brands Mrs. Haffner-Ginger can show you.

Some Dietetic Dishes.

Mrs. Haffner-Ginger will have an assistant in the person of her daughter, Miss Mabel Haffner, who has just graduated from the domestic science department of the Santa Barbara State Normal School under the direction of Miss Ednah Rich, who has made famous that institution.

Miss Haffner will take up especially the dietetic features, covering food values and their proper application and assimilation to various environments and conditions. An important feature of this part of the programme will be the preparation of lunches adapted to children who must take their mid-day meal at school. Also the dietetic values of luncheons for laboring men and workers of different degrees and varying conditions. This will be of exceedingly practical value.

Feeding the Sick.

Another new feature to be introduced by Miss Haffner will be the proper diet and care of the sick and the management of the sick-room, which has been included in the curriculum of her domestic science training at the Santa Barbara institution.

Preparations have been made to accommodate a large company of women tomorrow who will doubtless be eager to resume the pleasant afternoon cooking matinees which were so popular during the spring months.

ALFALFA FOR BREAKFAST.

Agricultural Expert Says It Has Great Food Value for Man, Bird and Beast.

Alfalfa is rapidly climbing the ladder of fame in the vegetable kingdom. It has risen in importance by having descended from the hayloft to the breakfast table.

Already alfalfa has graced the table at a number of brilliantly-appointed banquets. The prophecy is made by Levi Chubbuck, an expert of the Department of Agriculture, who is registered at the Hollenbeck, that the plant is likely to become a staple breakfast food.

The adaptability of this first cousin to red clover is truly remarkable. It seems to take kindly to the coaxing of the experts. It has become customary to associate the green, waving fields of alfalfa with the irrigating ditch.

Experimenters are having success now in developing a strain that withstands the drouth of the arid regions. Now they are seeking to adapt it to the cold climates—to make it withstand nipping frost, ice and snow. Chubbuck says that progress has been made in this direction.

"Alfalfa is good food for all classes of live stock," Chubbuck said. "It makes cows give more milk, makes the pigs grow and raises the egg-laying records of the hens.

"The thing that makes alfalfa great is its large quantity of nitrogenous matter. The cheese in milk, the 'white' of the egg and the fiber of flesh is composed principally of nitrogenous matter. That explains why alfalfa is important as a food."

WORLD PORT HERE.

Los Angeles Harbor Will Some Time Be Crowded with Shipping of Many Nations.

In a message to the Committee on Foreign Trade of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, read yesterday, John Barrett, secretary of the Pan-American Union, says this city has an extraordinary opportunity for development of a large exchange of foreign trade, to become not only a most important port of export but of import.

"I would advise," he said, "that your Chamber of Commerce get into closest touch with all the countries, ports and commercial organizations of the countries bordering upon or tributary to the Pacific Ocean, Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile. You should do everything you can to ascertain exactly the trade environment, as it were, and trade conditions of these countries and cities, and, in turn, to get them interested in you, and to bring their representative men to Los Angeles.

"It is entirely wrong to assume that the development of this remarkable West Coast, as a result of the opening of the Panama Canal, will bring benefits principally or alone to the Atlantic and Gulf ports of the United States; both the direct and indirect benefits which will come to Los Angeles and California are even greater.

"Why should not the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce do that which the Boston Chamber of Commerce has just done upon the suggestion of the Pan-American Union—get up a special excursion of its very best men to visit Latin America?"

PARISH GUILD.

The Parish Guild of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral will serve a hot luncheon next Thursday at the Parish House at 12 o'clock. Later, the ladies will have an apron sale.

La Parisienne in her boudoir—the morning frills.

A private peep at the latest in feminine finery just brought to Los Angeles.

Attractive.

LA PARISIENNE IN HER BOUDOIR.

WHERE MAN MAY NOT INTRUDE HIS PRESENCE.

Milady Disports in Her Boudoir, Where She Displays the Supreme Luxury of Modern Negligee—A Local Exhibition of Fine Feminine [illegible].

BY OLIVE GRAY.

At a private view yesterday I was given a peep at the very latest mode in feminine finery from Paris, in the way of boudoir luxuriousness in lingerie. "Dress rehearsal," it was called, but it was in truth undress. A private view this will remain throughout the entire time of its display, so far as the masculine world is concerned, although tomorrow morning and throughout the entire week, feminine Los Angeles may gaze and gaze its fill, at the wonders of boudoir apparel shown in that big store which always has the ultimate in such garmenting.

Something entirely novel in displays is this matinee of "robes intimes" as the Parisians are wont to call all the filmy so-called "dress" of boudoir use, if one might employ the word "use" for that which is in reality less utilitarian than simply beautiful. Yet, after all, if beauty be not use, we might all be clad in sackcloth, or in the undressed skins of beasts.

The boudoir scene, set in matinee for rehearsal yesterday, pending the public exhibition, was one in which the most attractive of settings was employed as a background for pretty models and their bewitching attire.

The presentation opens with a bedroom scene, the habitation of two pretty girls who are disclosed in the repose of the last "forty winks," each reclining in her white-enameled bed, and surrounded by the luxurious appointments of a well-furnished sleeping chamber. Rose in its most delicate rosy shade is the color selected for the scene. Rose carpets, draperies of rose, hangings of the same delicious shade, rose in the accessories of the twin toilet tables and rose throughout in the dressing of the beds, and when it comes to that, even in the lingerie and the robing of the pretty maidens who form the principal figures in this scene intime.

Opening sleepy eyes, the two girls are at once attended by their maids, who prepare them for the morning [illegible]

The utmost luxury of sleeping robes and caps are doffed for the negligee, which is worn away to the bath, whose luxuriousness is but hinted.

Returning, clad in bathrobes—and one would never have guessed that such [illegible] garments could be so graceful as they are presented here, in trailing lines—each girl loiters for a moment before her dressing table, giving her hair a deft pat, placing a dab of powder here, and in fact, arranging according to her own manner of employing the first moments of what may turn out to be a busy day.

Now comes the dressing for the morning hour, which is as important to the girls as is any throughout the twenty-four. With deft, accustomed fingers the maids assist in robing each lady fair with the multifarious articles which form the underclothing of the modern miss. The knickers and chemise of finest woven silk, the hose of like texture and the ribbon "mules," corset which is taken from its resting-place upon a bag upon the bed, the brassiere and camisole, and last and if not the least—at least as little in effect as is anything else of all this filmy and exquisite pretense of dress—one by one is each article added to the sweet nothingness which comprises the boudoir attire of girls of high society.

Attired in all the daintiness of this boudoir frillerie, and joined by other girls (staying presumably beneath the hospitable roof of the modern home, a part of which is disclosed in the bedrooms of the girls) a most animated scene occurs when the girls have morning coffee, chatting in a group, sipping as they pantomime, and "telling fortunes" from each cup as it is emptied. You feel the confidences exchanged and in fact, the scene, as well as the garments shown, takes on the true meaning of the French name given to the gowns—"robes intimes."

One by one the girls depart, leaving but two who read the morning mail, chat and finally withdraw, leaving the room to the one who is that day to become a bride. Her maid appears, carrying the wedding finery, and now begins that ceremonial which is an important part of the wedding day—the dressing of the bride.

Of course everything now donned is white, from the filmy silken underwear to the outer gown, which is the last word in bridal costuming.

While the maid prepares her mistress for the ceremonial a voice from near the scene explains some of the intricacies of modern fashionable dress—the proper wearing of the corset, the adjustment of the lingeries, the posing of the bridal veil, and just how the folds should fall before the "words are said," and after the bride emerges, how the filmy fall of tulle should be deftly removed from before her blushing features.

The closing scene is a tableau in which are shown eight pretty girls in rose-colored silk pajamas and wearing boudoir caps.

Throughout this pretty performance, during which is presented the very latest mode in garmenting for the morning hours, there is only the most dainty and charming presentation of those alluring accessories which make the modern girl the most attractive of all the ages.

The surroundings are the most refined and the materials shown are the best and most expensive of their kind. The furnishings of the room, the toilet articles, the cosmetics, the perfumes, the shaded lamps and candles—all are artistic and refined. There is, in fact, a lesson in the presentation of this intimate scene, a lesson which should impel any self-respecting girl or woman toward the adoption of self-respecting and pretty garmenting, in the privacy of her own quarters, as well as upon the street or in society. It is a lesson which many need to learn, even those whose means for expenditure upon such articles is far from limited. And while all may not perhaps attain to the luxuriousness of silks and crepe de chines, all may at least be clad in pretty and tasteful daintiness in those hours of repose at home.

All this week the public—the feminine public—of Los Angeles, will be permitted to feast their eyes upon these pretty scenes, as is elsewhere announced.

DEATH OF WILLIAM D. RHOADES.

The death on May 1 of one of the old residents of Los Angeles, William D. Rhoades, is announced. Mr. Rhoades was proprietor of the Sierra Madre Villa Hotel in the early days, and this hotel became famous, not only in the United States—but in foreign countries, as well. Mr. Rhoades came to Los Angeles in the early '70s and resided here until ten years ago, when he moved to San Francisco, where he spent the last years of his life. He leaves two daughters, Anita and Emma Rhoades, and two sons, F. C. Rhoades of Los Angeles and W. L. Rhoades of Seattle.

White Shrine.

woman of charming personality and delightful address, and when she takes the floor at that Columbus convention, clad in her regal robes as Queen of the White Shrine of the Golden West, to plead for Los Angeles as the meeting place in 1915, it goes without saying that she will win hands up. She is a member of the Friday Morning Club, a charter member of the Dickens Fellowship was first president of the Wilshire Sunshine Society and is a popular speaker before the Parent-Teacher Associations where she has appeared on many occasions.

Within the past year she has been called upon repeatedly by this organization to substitute for some speaker and has always been ready on the spur of the moment. She is a delightful reader and entertainer and when she turns loose her eloquence on that Columbus convention they'll think Los Angeles is the only place on the map. "I shall not leave the floor," she says, "until I get the consent of the Shrine to come here," and she is armed to the tips of her pearly teeth with potent reasons why the convention should assemble here, and with temptations galore in the way of entertainment.

HIGH IN MASONRY.

Mrs. Parlee is accompanied on her journey to Columbus by her husband and by Minnie F. Jordan, High Priestess of the Los Angeles White Shrine. Mr. Parlee stands high in the Masonic order; he is a Knight Templar and Shriner; Past Patron of the Halcyon Chapter of the Eastern Star and Past Watchman of the Shepherd of the White Shrine of Los Angeles.

As soon as the convention concludes its sessions in Columbus the Parlees will proceed to Boston to help celebrate the fifty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. Parlee's parents, which occurs June 10, and which will be attended by the seven sons and daughters, all of whom, with the exception of the Parlees, reside within an hour's ride of the ancestral home in Boston.

Before returning to Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Parlee will visit Washington and call upon Congressman Stephens who is a master Mason. While in Boston Mrs. Parlee will visit the Dickens' Fellowship, which, by the way, is the first one formed in the world, even England being slower to honor her favorite son than wide-awake America. After Boston beat her to it England organized a Dickens Fellowship Club and the Los Angeles branch is the third chapter to be formed.

CONTRACTION IS APPARENT.

Bank Clearings for Past Two Months Do Not Show Usual Increase, Compared With Other Years.

Despite tight money and dull speculative business conditions, bank clearings of this city continue to maintain a high average. With the exception of February, which was of course a short business month, the monthly total has been more than $8,000,000 over the $100,000,000-dollar mark attained for the first time in the history of the city the latter part of last year. It is significant, however, that clearings are not showing the increase usual at this time.

Clearings the first five months of this year exceed those of the corresponding period last year by $57,077,460, and of the corresponding period in 1910 by $146,401,544. It is worthy of note, however, that the increase of some $57,000,000 over last year for the four months' period, compares with an increase of more than $89,000,000 for the same period last year over 1911. It may be concluded from this that there has been some contraction in the growth of business.

The statement for the first four months of 1911, 1912 and 1913 makes an interesting exhibit, as follows:

	1913.	1912.	1911.
January ...	$111,587,308	$ 92,808,787	$ 73,778,348
February ...	98,676,477	87,270,976	65,654,406
March	108,214,680	96,342,804	79,082,557
April	110,197,062	97,430,822	73,430,922
May	108,809,058	99,052,310	82,500,422
Totals ...	$527,485,006	$470,107,606	$381,083,552

Even a hasty study of the statement will reveal the fact to which some significance may be attached, that clearings have not shown their usual increase the past two months. In 1912 April's total was nearly $5,000,000 larger than January's, and May's nearly $7,000,000 larger; in 1911 the total was $6,000,000 larger in April and about $9,000,000 larger in May than in January, 1911; while in 1913 April clearings are more than $1,000,000 less than in January, 1913 and the May total nearly $3,000,000 less. The decline is not as great as might be expected, considering the dullness of speculative conditions and indicates in a degree the substantial character of Los Angeles' growth.

WOOLLY ONE TAMED.

Cowboy Surrenders to Policeman Who Finds Him Hiding In San Pedro Lumberyard.

Despite his alleged threats to die fighting if an attempt to arrest him were made by the police, Bob Syler, cowboy and motion-picture actor, wanted in connection with the recent assault on Patrolmen Hatch and Stiles at Edendale, was arrested at San Pedro yesterday by Patrolman Jaggers.

The cowboy, who is charged with beating Patrolman Hatch and disarming him, submitted to arrest without trouble and was found to be unarmed. The revolver taken from Hatch at the time of the conflict between the officers and a bunch of cowboys of which Syler is alleged to be the leader, was returned to the patrolman Friday night.

Syler was found hiding in a lumber yard at San Pedro. The police believe he was planning to escape from the country on an outgoing steamer. He will probably be charged with assault with a deadly weapon and if possible a more serious charge will be placed against him.

The assault at Edendale was the culmination of a series of "run-ins" between the police and the motion-picture cowboys, who make Edendale their headquarters.

MAN AND MONEY FOUND.

R. J. Burkett, charged with having stolen $250 from Mrs. E. D. Christie, No. 355 Wall street, was arrested yesterday at Redondo Beach by Detectives Browning and Bowe and most of the money was recovered in a cigar store, where the accused man admitted having secreted it. He had spent about $35. He is held at the Central Station.

Two wonderful characters in "Everywoman,"

The epoch-making symbolic play which begins an engagement at the Majestic Theater Monday night. Above is "Nobody" as presented by H. Cooper Cliffe, while below, a marked contrast, is Everywoman, played by Adele Blood. Claim is made for her that she is the handsomest woman on the stage today.

The Week.

NOTABLE ATTRACTIONS IN THEATERS THIS WEEK.

AT THE Majestic Theater tomorrow night Henry W. Savage will offer for the first time in California the dramatic spectacle, "Everywoman," the most notable success of the amusement world for many seasons.

The story of the play appears in another column on this page.

The title role is played by Adele Blood, said to be one of the most beautiful leading women of the stage, and the leading male role, Nobody, is performed by H. Cooper Cliffe, a distinguished English actor, the creator of the role.

There are thirty-seven speaking characters in the play and a symphony orchestra to interpret an ambitious score written by George Whitefield Chadwick, dean of the New England Conservatory of Music.

Mission Play.

The "Mission Play" by John Steven McGroarty closes its season at San Gabriel tonight. The matinee at 2:30 and the evening performance at 8:15 will terminate a remarkable run of thirty-three weeks with 402 presentations in a playhouse nine miles from a theater center.

With the exception of a few minor changes the cast has remained the same throughout this season's run. Benjamin Horning, in the role of Fra Junipero Serra, and Lucretia Louise del Valle, as the Senora Josefa Yorba, have never missed a performance, and at each presentation they gave the best that was in them in the interpretation of their respective roles. The same may be said of their support.

In the dual roles of the "Fighting Friar" and Ubaldo, the Mission caretaker, Louis Morrison, proved himself deserving of the reputation of being one of the best character actors on the American stage. Chris Lynton, as Don Gaspar de Portola in the first act and Father Palou in the second act, will long be remembered for his excellent interpretation of those historical characters.

Charles Wheelock, as Capt. Rivera, the Comandante of California, and Leonard Rowe, William Weatherby, William Whiteman, as Catalonian soldiers, and C. Milton Ross, as Corporal Jose, ably interpreted their respective roles. Frank Staples has endeared himself to everyone in the character of Father Fernando, a Franciscan friar. Otto Lederer, as Capitajeno, chief of the San Carlos Indians, Charles Marriott, a veteran English actor, in the role of Father Caralier, Patrick Rafferty, as Father Alfonse, the choir leader, John Fenton, in the dual parts of Father Calzada and Sancho, a San Juan neophyte, and E. A. Pyke, as Father Dumetz, have played their parts exceedingly well.

Earnest Harris, as Vincenze, and Kenneth Mitchell, as Ubaldo, an Indian youth, are deserving of high praise. Jane Rupple, as Anita, and Corinne Crockett, as Juanita, played their parts intelligently.

A great deal of praise for the splendid staging is due Harry R. Haskins, stage manager, who, under the dramatic direction of Benjamin Horning, produced the fine lighting effects and the well-balanced ensemble.

Mason.

Beginning Monday night at the Mason Operahouse the marvelous $100,000 moving picture films are to be shown here of a trip through the Hawaiian Islands, with features never before attempted.

Wonderful Drama.

STORY OF "EVERYWOMAN" IS SYMBOLIC OF LIFE.

THE dramatic spectacle, "Everywoman," which opens at the Majestic Monday night, announced as a modern morality play, was the work of Walter Browne, a New York newspaper writer, actor, soldier of fortune, who had lived in almost every corner of the civilized world during the course of his erratic career. The story of the production of the play on the evening of the very day upon which he died served at first to call attention to an unusual dramatic novelty which at once sprung into sensational success.

Browne admitted that he got the inspiration for his play from the ancient morality play, "Everyman," which was performed throughout America a few years ago by a band of English players under the direction of Ben Greet. In view of the success of his piece and the many burlesques upon the idea it is remarkable that someone did not earlier seize upon the plan of modernizing the morality.

The morality play, let it be understood, was the form of sermon physically illustrated which was used by the church in the sixteenth century to drive home a lesson of the brevity of life, the fickleness of all things mortal, and the certainty that death in the end is the fate that awaits each and all. Produced before a modern audience it had the effect of an unexpected cold bath. The audience left the theater surcharged with gloom.

THIS PLAY MODERN.

"Everywoman," on the other hand, is a play upon a fantastic idea. It is light, whimsical, witty and absolutely modern in treatment. It teaches a lesson, it is true, but it is left to the judgment of each spectator as to just what that lesson is, for it never preaches. Its greatest charm is in its absolute simplicity.

Every character is labeled. You know upon its entrance whether it is good or evil. There is no doubt, or speculation. Virtues are shown in their brightest colors and vices in somber hues. Through it all there stalks a strange, mysterious character, Mephistophelean in appearance, but moral in his admonitions, called Nobody. He is something between a warning and a pun. He warns and he puns, but he is always serious, and while the audience laughs at some of his lines, the moment they do so they feel that they have been guilty of irreverence.

IS SYMBOLICAL.

Everywoman is the title of the principal character in this unusual play. Literally speaking, she is the sum of modern young woman, endowed with beauty, wisdom and grace. The scene is the present. The audience is given a glimpse of her summer garden, redolent with flowers, and behind a vista of beautiful landscape, shrubbery where birds are chirping on a beautiful spring morning with all nature glad. The orchestra plays an invocation to spring, while in the rear are seen a score of pretty maidens in Grecian draperies, posturing to the music. Among these graceful female figures, three are easily recognized: Youth, Beauty and Modesty, the handmaids of Everywoman.

Here, be it understood, is the first step in the symbolism in which the play abounds. Youth is a young girl, but she symbolizes Everywoman's youth; Beauty is a beautiful girl, but she symbolizes her beauty, and Modesty is a sly creature, quiet and retiring, but she symbolizes Everywoman's modesty. To thoroughly appreciate the aim of the author the audience must consider these three characters, not as separate entities, but as the integral properties of Everywoman. This idea once established, and the stinging logic of the morality is sent home with tremendous force.

ENTER NOBODY.

Everywoman enters and greets her companions, lovingly placing her arms about them. She addresses them affectionately, when she spies the tall, angular, monkish figure of Nobody, who is regarding them. His presence chills her, but summoning courage she advances upon him and orders him from her house. He goes, but not until he has thundered at her majestically these words:

Special Drawing Class to Exhibit.

"You'd scarce expect one of their age, much less twenty of 'em, to do the things that special drawing class is doing at Olive-street school.

"Zims" and Dan Beards and Davenports, Rose O'Neills and Rosa Bonheurs, hitherto "mute and inglorious," but doubtless in the future to grow famous. I found them gathered in one corner of a big classroom the other day. There, grouped around their models, on the model stand, three youngsters were posing for the big exhibit poster. They were sketching away for dear life, in pencil and charcoal. The special class is to exhibit its work next Thursday and Friday, and Miss Mary Morse, the drawing supervisor, and Miss Blanche Bostwick, who have charge of the work, show you a wealth of posters, in colors, in charcoal, clever landscape bits, cartoons, human figures in picturesque foreign costumes, and likenesses of all the animals under the sun..

Arthur is a little blond fellow with an ethereal face, who sketches animals cleverly. He was working on a bear the day I called, which he had sketched at the zoo the day before. In fact, he spends his spare time mooning about the zoos, studying and sketching the wild animals! He has done a lion very well indeed.

Ethel, 14 years old, is especially good at portraits and has the faculty of limning a likeness in a few delicate strokes. Martha means to be a portrait painter some day, and will study in Paris.

Mary is good at landscapes, and was working on a fascinating little sketch of road and river and tree when I saw her. Leah takes every spare moment she can find, sketching in the mountains and fields.

Nellie is an embryonic Rosa Bonheur, and her horses, from the Arabian steeds to the big heavy sort, are marvels.

Frank is to be a cartoonist and was bending his curly head over a Roosevelt sketch when I entered.

Pauline wants to be a magazine illustrator, and is original in her ideas.

Perhaps the most interesting figure is little Cleo, a beautiful deaf and dumb child of about 11, who has an extraordinary talent for sketching everything that comes within view of her pretty, wistful brown eyes. With the hearing of beautiful sounds denied her, she makes up in seeing beautiful things; with speech as a means of expression refused her, she finds expression through her deft fingers.

"Very little copying is done," said Miss Morse, "and that only to train in technique. The children draw from models; we have had some Russian, Chinese and Spanish models to sketch from; or they draw from memory, or do their sketching outside of school. Next year we shall take trips to mountains and seaside for the benefit of those who are making landscape their specialty."

The pupils range from 10 to 14 years old, and only the very talented ones are admitted to the classes.

Mrs. Adams Fisher to Return.

An interesting letter from Mrs. G. Adams Fisher, teacher of Spanish at Manual Arts High School, but absent in Chile on a year's leave, recites some interesting experiences in Santiago.

Mrs. Fisher says there is a great field in South America for young people well prepared in Spanish. "I want many of our youth to come to South America. It is a great and wondrous land, an open, untried field for the right sort; the wrong sort is not wanted nor needed. Let them come young and free, strong in body, brave in heart, fearless and willing, ripe in the mellow language of Spain, and there is a big place to fill in this vast continent, a place for girls and boys alike. The country needs them, and they can achieve great things, but they must bring the equipment or they would better stay at home."

Schools Hold Sunday Exhibits.

A unique departure from old custom was the holding open of school exhibits on Sunday last at Belvedere, Seventh-street and Staunton-avenue schools. This was done largely for the benefit of the fathers of the children and who could not come during the school day.

Historical Living Pictures.

Historical living pictures are something of a novelty in the schools. The children of Harengo Heights gave a beautiful display last Friday evening. The effect was greatly assisted by the scenery painted by Mrs. C. D. Stephens, a talented artist of the district, while W. R. Browning deserves great credit as stage manager.

The pictures represented scenes from American history, beginning with Columbus, including the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, Indian scenes, Priscilla and John Alden, Washington at the Delaware, Betsy Ross, and ending with California and her big horn of plenty. Mrs. Carrie Rapp, eighth-grade teacher, read historical sketches and appropriate poetical selections.

Hostetter-street School.

"A live picture!" gasped a small Mexican boy, Thursday afternoon, as he left Clune's moving picture show. He was one of the Hostetter-street school pupils, who lived in a grading camp out there, and who had never seen a moving picture until he viewed them in company with his class and teacher, when his Latin nature just spilled over in enthusiasm. The management of the theater kindly donated seats for the youngsters through a performance.

Gates-street School.

Gates-street school held an exhibit on May 29, of gardening, cooking, sewing and woodwork. The Parent-Teacher Association held a reception for the patrons of the district, and served refreshments.

Macy-street Trade School.

Dainty gowns, useful wrappers, pretty lingerie, tailored shirtwaists, chairs, tables, bookcases, hatracks, all these, the handiwork of the boys and girls of Macy-street trade school will be on exhibition, June 9, 10 and 11, from 9 o'clock to 4:30 o'clock, and will be sold on Thursday and Friday of the same week.

Hoover-street School.

Hoover-street school, with its genial corps of teachers, was at home to visitors on Thursday. The rooms were prettily decorated, the drawing and manual work of the children was exhibited, and in the afternoon a delightful programme of folk dancing and songs by the different grades was given.

Memorial Day Observed.

Memorial Day was observed in all the schools with appropriate exercises.

At Polytechnic High the play "Gettysburg" was given, with a competent cast. At Gardena Agricultural High patriotic songs were sung, and Principal Lillard addressed the school on "Loyalty and Patriotism."

At Los Angeles High School Col. Steadman addressed the school in the auditorium. He paid an eloquent tribute to the nation's honored dead, and then, coming down to the present, spoke of the High School cadets. "Far better peace than war," he said, "but if the nation's honor is in question, then I know these High School cadets would fight for her—and I'll be with 'em!"

At Euclid avenue Dr. W. C. Shelton made an address to the children on "Our Old Soldiers." The children paid a pretty tribute to the memory of the late Maj. E. B. Powell, Civil War veteran, who spoke to the children last Decoration Day, but who died during the past year. They carried a memorial offering in the form of a large bouquet of white roses to his old home, presenting them to Mrs. Powell, who was deeply touched at the remembrance.

Second-street school observed the day with an interesting programme. The first grade gave a playlette, and tots of the second grade gave a very pretty flag exercise. Tubal Cain and Mary Moran gave a duet, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground." Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg was recited in unison by the whole school, at the close of the programme.

Wadsworth School.

The Parent-Teacher Association will hold its regular meeting June 4. Mr. Bettinger will speak, and the pupils will be heard in songs and orchestra numbers. Arrangements will be made to hold an entertainment about the middle of June, to pay for the school's victrola.

Manual Arts High.

The music department gave its first opera, "An Oriental Courtship," on Wednesday afternoon, and repeated it Thursday evening. The opera is an arrangement by Miss Mary Esta Grove of Gaul's cantata, "Ruth." The music proved to be tuneful, while the stage effects were brilliant.

The part of Ruth, the Moabitess, was taken by Thelma Robbins, while Rachell Kimball had the role of Naomi. Orphia's part was taken by Vivienne Suman. Glen Meneley was in magnificent voice for the role of Boaz. Langdon Smoad and William Street, good actors with fine voices, represented the reapers. Others assisting were Lawrence Tibbett, messenger and binder; Helen Meyers and Edna Worman, the Israelitish maidens. Hazel Christian, Gladys Bowman, Gladys Mathoson, Juliet Griswold, Susie Paramore, Edith Aldrich and Anna Russell were maids of honor. A large chorus represented citizens, reapers, binders and gleaners.

Much credit is due the domestic science department for its contribution in the way of costumes. With the scenery, the lights and the varied colors of the oriental garments, most brilliant effects were produced. Needless to say the orchestra assisted in making the performance a success.

Visitors' day drew its hundreds to the school. Parents and other relations, friends and those interested for various reasons, crowded the auditorium and visited the classrooms and shops. The school was decorated to greet the crowd; pupils and staff in good team work decorated the halls and rooms, served as guides through the buildings, explained the work, took part in the programme and otherwise tried to show the citizens something of what the school stands for and what it is doing.

The decorations were abundant, tasteful and effective. Each class year had its own color, so there was variety while the competition between the years resulted in an abundance of flowers.

The result of the debate with Santa Monica puts Manual in the second place among the High Schools of Southern California. Manual lost by two points. Miss Theresa Goss takes the gold medal, and Ray Vandevort surrenders his right to the tie for the silver medal. A large crowd of our students went to the beach city to hearten our debaters, while the auditorium at home was well filled.

Word has been received from Adolph Schneider that he has passed the physical examinations, and is now regularly enrolled as midshipman in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Mr. Schneider, it will be remembered, was the only High School student in this district who passed in the severe competitive entrance examinations given in April. He received the appointment from Congressman Stephens and was ordered to Annapolis at once. His success in passing the physical test is the last preliminary step, and he is now started on his six-year course. The United States not only gives its midshipmen a fine education with tuition, board and lodging free, but it also pays for transportation to Annapolis, and gives each cadet $600 a year for incidental expenses. The appointments are very desirable, and while Manual Arts is sorry to lose Mr. Schneider from its A-11 class it is justly proud in that he won the prize on his scholarship.

Hollywood High.

Visitors' day, observed Thursday, was one of the most successful since the custom has been instituted in the city schools. A large crowd of parents, relatives and friends swarmed the grounds and buildings all day. All classes were open and were well attended. Interesting exhibitions of the domestic arts, of the crafts and of drawing were given in the Household and Fine Arts building. In the Science building special experiments on pure and impure foods were made. The boys of the mechanics building and of the horticultural class displayed the work they have accomplished this year, and explained their methods. Students ushered the visitors over the grounds. At 1 o'clock a special programme, carried out in every detail by the students, was presented in the Auditorium. Lynn Nichols, '14, played an original flute solo. The school orchestra also played a march of his composition. Ray Feeman, of the college class, read an original story. John Hilington delivered his oration, entitled "Clean Life a Factor of Success." James Candee presented a song composed by Harry Beardsley. Florence Campbell sang an original lullaby. The A9 gymnasium class gave a flag drill.

The faculty oratorical cup was won by Miss Vivien Gardner, a senior, her oration being "The Probation Work of the Juvenile Court." The contest was held in assembly Monday. Competing against her were Fred McMullen, a sophomore, his oration being "Our Country's Achievement," and Marion Smith of the senior class, delivering an oration on "Civic Liberty." All three orations were well delivered and carefully written.

A co-operative association to assume charge of the sale of the High Schools and students' products at the municipal market was organized last week, with a membership of twenty-five. Ira Hoke was chosen manager and Jack Whitney treasurer.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

It is estimated that Mrs. Susan Eaton of Madison, Me., who celebrated her 85th birthday last week, has made more than 500 quilts. During the past winter she has pieced three quilts.

Elder J. W. Harding, who is believed to be the oldest minister in Kentucky in point of service, celebrated recently his 90th birthday anniversary. He has been a minister in the Christian church for seventy years and goes regularly to Jefferson county, even now, to occupy the pulpit in a country church.

Rev. David J. Higgins, over 90 years of age, has made application for admission to Hamline University, Minnesota, to complete a course for the degree of doctor of philosophy. In a letter to President Kerfoot of Hamline, Mr. Higgins says that, in spite of his advanced age, his interest in philosophical matters has never diminished and he desires to continue his researches, especially in the line of the philosophy of religions. He holds now both bachelor's and master's degrees and also the honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

Abraham Wilcox of Ft. Worth, Tex., formerly of Kalamazoo, Mich., native of Devonshire, Eng., is active at 112 years of age and he hopes to visit Los Angeles and San Francisco during the Panama Canal exposition in 1915. He fully expects to be able to do it. Few men forty years his junior look younger. His face is not deeply lined and he is far from feeble. His vision is clear. He has been a great walker all his life and he still walks two miles every day. He drinks a glass of beer every day and says it does him good, but he doesn't smoke. He gave up smoking thirty years ago when physicians told him it was killing him.

Grandma Sarah Todd of Eugene, Or., aged over 103 years, is the oldest home department member of the Christian denomination in America, and is believed to be one of the oldest Sunday-school pupils in the United States.

Thomas Ziegler of York Springs, Pa., who is 86 years old, cast his first vote at Carlisle, and it was for James Polk for President.

MEN AND EVENTS.

Irvine Twombly of New York, president of the Aeronautical Society, will aeroplane as a sport during his summer vocation. He has already built his hydro-aeroplane, providing plenty of room to take Mrs. Twombly and the two children along with him on short flights.

Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, who has been refused reappointment as postmaster at Gainesville, Ga., has been offered a position in the postoffice at Clarksburg, W. Va., by Col. Albert E. Boone, the postmaster, who was a former Union soldier. If she accepts her salary will be $3600 a year.

Postmaster Harry M. Martin of Shelbyville, Ill., has resigned because he has become "wearied of his exacting official duties." He has been postmaster for fifteen years and has nearly two years more before his present term expires.

William Schnarr of St. Charles, Mo., and a younger brother, Carl, met for the first time in their lives the other day in St. Louis. Carl is 53 years old. He arrived from Germany for a six-week stay with relatives. William left Germany a year before Carl was born.

Nicholas Roemer, a printer of Manitowoc, Wis., has just completed forty years of boarding with one family. When he came to this country in 187 he began boarding with the Hoyer family, at the rate of $3 a week and this rate has never been changed. During the forty years he has paid $6264 for board.

Charles M. Schwab is having a private railroad car built for him in South Bethlehem, Pa., to cost $135,000. Interior of solid mahogany.

John Rennie, oldest purser of the Atlantic, has ended his sea career after traveling 2,604,000 miles by water. He has crossed the equator 420 times and has been at sea for forty-seven years. Rennie is a native of Scotland and during his career has been purser on some twenty steamships. His last trip was made on the Lamport & Holt steamer Vasari, which recently arrived at New York from Buenos Ayres.

Dr. Anne F. Reis, a young woman of Ogden, Utah, was lately chosen as City Physician and quarantine officer. She has done work that qualified her for the position. For instance, she once rode seven miles on the cow-catcher of an engine to overtake a man who was supposed to be suffering from smallpox.

Notable Attractions.

Among the many wonderful features is the Volcano of Kilauea, hundreds of feet in height with dizzy cliffs, forming a portion of the walls of a great pit, while the great floors below spread out like the trouble surface of some black sea, unrelieved by either foliage or lighter color.

There is the world-famed Hawaiian Luau, the native floral custom at departure of ships, the original native Hula Hula dance, the native pictures showing the daughters of Hawaiian warriors in their native dress, and scenery never before produced.

The wonderful pineapple industry from the picking of the green fruit in the fields to the shipping at long distances to America, showing 100,000 cans exported daily; the king of all industries' in the Hawaiian Islands, the sugar-cane growing, and showing the largest plantation in the world; the surf-board riding, Hawaii's leading sport.

J. M. Barrie's famous fantasy, "The Admirable Crichton," in which William Gillette scored such a notable success on the American stage, and which has since proved one of the most popular stock company offerings the American stage has known, will this week be given a truly elaborate production by the Morosco Producing Company, beginning with the usual matinee today.

William Desmond will have the best role he has enjoyed since coming to the Morosco Theater in the part of the butler, Crichton, created and played in England by H. B. Irving, Jr., and in America by William Gillette, while Frances Ring returns to the Morosco cast in the role of Lady Mary Lasenby.

Burbank.

The Burbank stock company will this week offer for the first time in the entire West Frederic Chapin's recent New York farcical success, "C.O.D."

"C.O.D." will commence with the matinee today and if the reputation the piece bears as a funmaker may be taken as any criterion, the Burbank Theater will be crowded at every performance with happy, delighted throngs, who will find three solid hours of merriment in the troubles of three young couples who proceed, during their summer vacation in the Catskill Mountains, to get mixed up in a most unusual and amusing manner.

The production of "C.O.D." will employ the services of every member of the Burbank organization, including David M. Hartford, Forrest Stanley, Grace Travers, Selma Paley, Beatrice Nichols, Morgan Wallace and the other favorites of this company.

"C.O.D." is one of those light, laughable plays that is distinctly fitted to the talents of the Burbank company, while it is also an unusually attractive offering for the summer months.

Lyceum.

The great success of Kolb and Dill's fine revival of "Lonesome Town" has proved such an attractive offering and the demand for seats for the first week's performances has been so uncommonly heavy, that the German comedians have decided to extend their engagement at the Lyceum for one more week.

The second week of "Lonesome Town" will begin tonight. This will positively be the farewell week and from all indications it will prove the biggest of the present local engagement of these fine funmakers.

Orpheum.

Lydia Barry heads the Orpheum bill this week with a bunch of new and exclusive songs, another bunch of new and exclusive gowns—slashed and tight-fitting, to set off her perfect figure. Don, the chatty canine, he is German, and highly educated, is on the bill. He is handled by Mme. Haberlein and introduced by Loney Haskell, who is something of a monologuist himself. Don says some dozen or so words in good plain German.

The sketch of the new bill is "Billy's Tombstones," almost a classic, presented by Edgar Atchison-Ely and his company.

The dainty Curzon sisters, in their thrilling "human butterfly" act, swinging by their teeth as they dance on thin air, are the sensation in the new bill; fat Ben Linn, late of the "Pianophiends," but now also going it alone, sings and tells jokes, and makes mirth of his elephantine proportions; Teschow's cats, the Arnaud brothers, in their unique fiddling acrobatics and bird duet, and Julius Steger and his company in "Justice" making up the remainder of the bill.

Empress.

The famous Joe Boganny troupe of comedy acrobats, recognized the world over as the greatest organization of whirlwind acrobatic funmakers the stage has ever known, will be the particularly attractive feature of the fine new Sullivan & Considine bill opening at the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon.

What should also prove one of the distinctly bright spots on the new bill will be the musical skit, "Just Because," which will be offered by Fred Holmes and Lulu Wells, two exceptionally clever young people who recently left the cast of Lew Fields' "The Never Homes" company to enter the ranks of vaudeville.

Roland West's tabloid drama, "Trapping Santa Claus," is another new offering that while it always affords splendid entertainment for the grown-ups, also provides an exceptionally good feature for the little folks.

When it comes to breaking up a happy home via the crockery route, Major and Ray are the hits of the vaudeville world. As comedy jugglers and crockery demolishers of the funniest type they stand alone in their profession and provide fifteen minutes of fast fun that never fails to delight vaudeville patrons.

Joe Kelsey, with his original songs and fast patter talk, and another new feature, besides the always enjoyable comedy motion-pictures, will complete one of the finest bills throughout that has occupied the Empress stage in many months.

Pantages.

"Heart Throbs of a Great City," a realistic playlet by Walter Montague, is featured in the Pantages announcements for the week starting with Monday's matinee.

The act carries a cast of nine, with a special stage setting showing the interior of a San Francisco police court, a very realistic representation that might stand equally well for Los Angeles as for San Francisco. The characters are all types, and the story is taken from the daily routine of the "justice mills." There is said to be abundant comedy of the M Quad type, and pathos is not lacking in the portrayal. The sketch is abreast with the times, for one of the principal characters is the woman officer of the Good Government League, whose duty is to visit the courts in the interest of that organization. The climax of the act is reached when the judge, on perjured evidence, is about to sentence a young girl on a charge brought against her by a man who is later proven to be a "white slaver."

Bob Albright, known to vaudeville fame as "the Male Melba," needs no introduction.

Maidie de Long, described by the eastern vaudeville critics as "the baseball bug," is all of that, and then some.

Joseph Callahan presents "Pages from History," in the form of tableaux of great men of all nations, but especially of our own country.

Also promised are Elsie Kramer and company in an acrobatic and gymnastic act, and Harlan and Rollison in a musical novelty. The always-popular Animated News pictures are an exclusive first-run feature of every week's show at Pantages.

"The War God."

The first reading in this City of Israel Zangwill's great play, "The War God," will be given by Rabbi Isadore Myers at the Gamut Club Auditorium Thursday night, June 5.

Those who remember Dr. Myers's splendid addresses before great audiences during the suffrage campaign, when he drew from the beautiful Jewish writings to prove the justice of woman's demands for enfranchisement, and those who have heard him interpret Zangwill's tremendous sociological study, "The Melting Pot," will not want to miss his reading of the tremendous argument for peace, "The War God."

John S. McGroarty, author of the "Mission Play," will preside as chairman, and Mrs. Emma Porter Makinson, dramatic soprano, will sing.

"The War God" presents the strongest theory that exists as a means of annihilating war. The play possesses an intense quality and radiates brilliant phrasing. Dr. Myers will give a complete characterization of the entire play.

Hamburger's Arrow.

"The Children of St. Anne" is the two-reel feature at the Arrow Theater, fifth floor, Hamburger building, for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. It is the story of the parish of St. Louis on Bayou Lombre, produced by the Majestic company, in which a starving boy becomes a great artist through the kindness of wealthy people. He falls in love with their daughter, but forgets her in the dissipations and idleness of his artist's life.

She, however, cannot put him out of her memory and when he has sunken into desperate poverty brings him back to happiness for herself and him, the children of St. Anne. Two other films are shown—"A Texas Feud" (Reliance) and "A Modern Snare" (American.)

Clune's.

At the Clune theaters next week two exceptionally big film productions are to be shown for the first time on the Pacific Coast. At Clune's Fifth-street Theater "Love and War in Mexico," as the title implies a Mexican war drama of more than usual interest, will be exhibited in conjunction with an entirely new bill of first-run pictures, vaudeville acts and illustrated songs. It is a two-reel Lubin production and is one of the most pretentious of the films that have been written around the recent revolution in our sister republic.

At Clune's Broadway Theater, "The White Slave," or "Way Down South Before the War," is the thrilling two-reel Vitagraph attraction secured for the first three days of next week.

Tally's Broadway.

Sidney Drew, the well-known actor, has joined the Vitagraph company of New York, the largest motion-picture-producing company in this country, and his first picture, "The Still Voice," will be shown at Tally's Broadway Theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Such an actor should guarantee a splendid picture.

What is said to be the funniest comedy ever filmed also will be on the Monday programme. Alkali Ike is always a laugh producer and in this latest effort, "Alkali Ike's Misfortunes," he is positively a scream. A Biograph drama with the usual clever acting and interesting story, and the new Pathe Weekly, complete the bill. Messrs. Blanchard, Ross and Procter, the favorite trio of vocal soloists, will again harmonize, singly and collectively.

Mozart.

"Atop of the World," that most delightful excursion to the Far North, portraying faithfully the wonders, picturesque grandeur and scenic beauty of the frozen regions, will be featured at the Mozart Theater all this week, beginning with matinee today. These pictures are wonderfully interesting. Life in Alaska and Siberia, and studies of the inhabitants and natives of this little-known country, is a liberal education in itself. Scenes of the faithful dogs used in carrying provisions, mail, etc.; battles with polar bears, walrus hunts, Eskimo villages, the home life of the Eskimos and their customs, are all views of surpassing interest and novelty.

This Week.

CALLENDAR OF MUSICAL NEWS.

NEW DEPARTURE IN THE GRAND OPERA PRODUCTION.

People's Chorus Programme at Memorial Praise Service at Auditorium—Ellis, Orpheus and Lyric Clubs Recitals—Ohlemeyers' Band is Coming.

BY HECTOR ALLIOT.

Following many rumors as to the choice of director for the Chicago Grand Opera, it is officially announced that Cleofonte Campanini, the eminent musical director, has been selected by the organization to fill the place left vacant by Andreas Dippel.

Since it is probable that Campanini will visit the Coast and give us two or three weeks of grand opera next spring, it is interesting to note that the first artist engaged for the coming season is the celebrated tenor, Alessandro Bonci. It is assured that Mary Garden, Titta Ruffo, Caroline White, Jane Osborn-Hannah, Jennie Dufrau, Mme. Claussen and Dalmores, the tenor, will be re-engaged.

The season will be of twenty-five appearances in German, Italian and French grand opera.

An admirable innovation will be the presentation of grand opera in English on ten Saturday nights, at popular prices.

Anticipating other efforts in the same field, the directorate of the Chicago Grand Opera offered at the annual meeting a prize of $5000 for the best American opera by an American composer to be presented during the season 1914-1915.

In New York the plans for popular grand opera presentation have finally crystallized. Milton Aborn and his brother, Sargent, well and favorably known for many years as successful managers of light opera companies, have cancelled all their engagements and accepted for three years the direction of the Century Grand Opera Company, the new popular-price venture, in elaborate productions.

A remarkable statement made by Milton Aborn, as he accepted the position of director, is worthy of special mention.

"We do not believe in the star system," he announced, "and do not propose to observe it at the Century. Artists of stellar magnitude will not be featured by us. Our aim is excellence in the ensemble and not in spots."

A more admirable policy in the much-abused field of opera stars could not be imagined. The days are passed when an artist of extraordinary merit, surrounded by weak and inefficient associates, could long remain a theatrical success.

People's Chorus.

National and patriotic music will be rendered at the Auditorium this afternoon by the People's Chorus.

The orchestral numbers announced will be omitted owing to the length of the programme.

Ray Hastings, at the organ, will assist; Madame Ulrich will be the soloist.

The occasion will be a vocal memorial praise service.

A chorus of 250 voices will sing "Tenting Tonight."

Fred G. Ellis, baritone, will give the solos to the "Star Spangled Banner" and the big chorus will unite with the orchestra under the baton of Eduardo Lebegott to give a programme which shall be a splendid example of patriotic and inspiring melodies.

Ellis Club.

The Ellis Club, oldest of the singing clubs of the city, under the direction of Prof. Poulin, will be heard in their closing programme at the Auditorium Tuesday evening, June 17. The concert date was changed from June 24 so the club could secure a large representation of the Symphony musicians for the orchestra which they are using in connection with their chorus and soloists.

Ohlmeyer's Band.

The Arab Legion of Honor of Al Malaikah Temple has arranged with the Ohlmeyer management for a series of promenade concerts to be given on the afternoon and evenings of June 16 and 17 at Shrine Auditorium. One afternoon is to be devoted to a symphony programme, the other three events to be popular concerts. The Ohlmeyer band, a musical organization which now through the energetic efforts of its manager and conductor is well established, brings to us the only California director who has been classed by the eastern critics as next to Sousa and Victor Herbert.

The organization is headed by such soloists as Franz Helle, for nine years with John Philip Sousa, who is considered the only flugel horn soloist in America. John Hughes, whose splendid work with Innes is well remembered, is the solo cornetist, and Ross Millhouse, who was with Sousa's band, occupies a similar position.

Miss Blanche Lyons will be the soprano soloist. Popular prices will prevail.

Turnverein Germania.

The annual Sangerfest of the local Turnverein Germania will be presented on the night of Saturday, June 14, at the Auditorium, including the active section, consisting of the young men of the Germania, the young lady's class and the singing section of the senior class, numbering over 125 members. This entertainment is for the purpose of assisting these representatives to attend the Denver-Bundesturnfest, which is to be held in that city on June 22.

The concert and choruses are under Prof. Henry Schoenefeld, director of the singing section. This will be a gala night for those who are interested in this character of local entertainment.

Orpheus Club.

The fourth and last of the Orpheus Club series of concerts this season will be given under the direction of Joseph Dupuy at the Auditorium, June 9. A modern programme has been arranged.

Lyric Club.

On Wednesday evening, June 11, the Lyric Club, composed of 150 of the leading soprano and contralto voices of the city, will present their fourth and last concert of the year at the Auditorium. IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Brig.-Gen. Frederick A. Smith, just retired from active service, is an old Indian fighter. He served in campaigns on the western frontier in Arizona, the Dakotas and Nevada. Later he served in the Philippines and in Cuba. He was in command of the Fifth Brigade, Second Division, at Galveston, recently.

Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, whose home is in Council Bluffs, Iowa, is one of three surviving army corps commanders, the other two being Gen. Sickles and Gen. James H. Wilson. Gen. Dodge is the last surviving general commander, however, having been in command of the Army of the Tennessee and of the Department of Missouri. He was major-general at the age of 32 years, reaching this rank in 1864. At that time, he says, he had in his command a brigadier-general in command of a brigade who was barely 22 years of age.

Upon the announcement of Mayor-elect F. N. Vaughan of Amboy, Ill., that he would serve without pay, the City Council passed an ordinance abolishing the payment of any salary to the Chief Executive.

Dr. Jacob W. Bolotin, who has just been appointed attending physician at the tuberculosis hospital of the Dunning Asylum, Chicago, is not only blind, but is the first blind man who has ever taken the full course of four years in medicine and passed the present Illinois examination for medicine and surgery. He is only 25 years of age, but has examined 3500 patients at the municipal tuberculosis hospital in the last fourteen months. His diagnosis is made wholly by touch. He can give the exact temperature by feeling the skin, an exact pulse without the aid of a watch. At 14 he graduated from the Illinois State Hospital for the Blind, and traveled over the country selling typewriters, finally earning enough money to enable him to study medicine.

Maj. Robert Wilson McClaughry, one of the best-known criminologists in the United States, and probably better informed on prison affairs than any other man in the country, has resigned as warden of the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth. He is 74 years old, and except for the time he spent in Chicago, where he was connected with the police force, he has been engaged in prison work almost continuously since 1874. For fourteen years he was warden at Joliet, for three years superintendent of the Industrial Reformatory at Huntington, Pa., and later superintendent of the Illinois State Reformatory at Pontiac. Known as "the humane warden," he put prisoners upon their honor to observe the rules, a policy that succeeded.

Robert A. Taft, son of the ex-President, will practice law in Cincinnati after his graduation this spring from the Harvard Law School.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

Prof. R. B. Wylie of Iowa City is to head an expedition to investigate the plant life of Alaska.

Arthur Eddington, recently appointed Plumian professor of astronomy and experimental philosophy at Cambridge, in succession to Sir George Darwin, was senior wrangler in 1905, and soon afterward became a Smith prize man, being elected to a fellowship at Trinity College. He is at present chief assistant at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, who has just retired, has been associated with Princeton since 1881. He has been placed on a pension of $3000 a year, but will continue to act in an advisory capacity to the board. Dr. Patton is a native of Bermuda, born

After serving half a century as a professor at St. Stephen's College Annandale, Dutchess county, New York, and three times during his term acting as warden of the institution, the Rev. Dr. George B. Hopson will retire at the end of the college term next month. Dr. Hopson is 75 years old. The retirement of Dr. Hopson will be observed by the college faculty, which will hold a golden jubilee.

Dr. Edwin F. Smith, plant pathologist in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, recently declined a $10,000 position with the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research to retain one at $4000 with the government. He attracted attention by his investigations in the comparative study of plant diseases in their relation to man and beast. Dr. Smith is 59 years old, a native of Northern New York and a graduate of the University of Michigan. He has been an expert pathologist of the Department of Agriculture since 1886. He holds international distinction among bacteriologists and is the author of important books on such subjects.

Prof. John Bassett Moore has been almost overwhelmed by the work he has found it necessary to do since he entered the State Department as counselor at the beginning of President Wilson's administration. Prof. Moore has shown himself to be a man of almost unlimited capacity for industry. In addition to his lecture courses at Columbia University, he has been occupied in the preparation of two monumental digests for the use of the State Department, and he has also edited the letters and addresses of James Buchanan. In Prof. Moore's two earlier services in the State Department, the first having been when Thomas F. Bayard was Secretary of State and the second at the time of the Spanish War, he mastered the archives of the State Department. There is certainly no other man of his time, and possibly none of any time since the republic was organized who has obtained such encyclopedic knowledge of the history of the State Department and of its archives.

If He Were Only a Relative.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] An official of one of the departments at Washington says that while going to his luncheon one afternoon he saw a military funeral passing down Pennsylvania avenue. As the pageant passed the official was standing on the curb, hat in hand, and noting with interest the reversed arms, the flag-draped coffin, and the riderless horse behind, when some one touched him on the elbow and said: "I hope you'll excuse me, boss, but would you min' tellin' me whether the dead soldier was anythin' to you?"

"Why, no," answered the official, smiling in spite of himself, as he turned and beheld a solemn-looking old darky of perhaps 60 years of age.

"Excuse me again, boss," continued the negro, "but you kinder looked that sorry I thought mebbe he was somethin' to you."

"He was a brave soldier," answered the official.

The darky said nothing for a moment. Finally, with a sigh, he added: "Wouldn't it be gran', boss, mournin' fer a man like that, s'posin' he was somethin' to you?"

Story of Everywoman.

"There shall come a time when thou, deserted by Youth, forsaken by Beauty and with Modesty forgotten, shalt know that Nobody is thy friend—a time when, worn and weary with worldly cares, thou shalt love Nobody. To thee a time shall come when at thy cry for help, for comfort, Nobody shall come—when thine aching head shall lie on this breast, when Nobody shall brush thy tears away!"

FLATTERY APPEARS.

His words frighten her, but she tries to make light of them, and, summoning her companions once more, she jests of Nobody's warnings. With Youth, Beauty and Modesty beside her, her unrest vanishes and going to her mirror to admire her face and form, she is startled by a strange apparition which appears there.

The surface vanishes and in the mist that replaces it rises the splendid figure of a man dressed as a courtier, in satin and velvet, who bows before her. Recovering from her astonishment, Everywoman demands his name and the reason of his visit. In honeyed words he announces that he is Flattery and that he comes as herald of King Love, who would have Everywoman as his queen.

He commands her to go forth into the world and seek this king, who, on being found, will place her beside him upon his throne. He disappears, and Everywoman, charmed by the seductive tones of his voice, can think of nothing else. She is filled with unrest. She announces that she will go at once to find this king, to reign beside him forevermore. She will start at once. But where?

SEEKING FOR LOVE.

From her inexperience she asks her companions where Love may be found. One of them advises her to try the playhouses of the great cities. Modesty beseeches her to abide at home and forget the mad quest, but the words of flattery linger like the memory of sweet music in Everywoman's ears and she announces that she will at once set out upon a pilgrimage to find King Love and that her three companions may go with her.

Youth and Beauty are overjoyed at the prospect, but Modesty pleads with her in vain for her to remain in her home.

As she starts to go, Truth, who is garbed as a witch, hobbles upon a crutch, and carries a nine-lashed whip, appears. She is followed by her son, King Love, in simple attire. He loves Everywoman and pleads with her to listen to him, but Flattery appears again in her mirror and, blinded by the sight of him, she cannot see King Love. In vain he urges her, but she heeds him not, and Truth leads him disconsolately away.

SHE BECOMES ACTRESS.

The scene changes to the stage of a metropolitan theater. It is morning and rehearsal time. Several months have elapsed and Everywoman still seeking King Love, has become an actress and plays a leading role. She has won success. Thousands have applauded her; she is surrounded by suitors and flatterers, but there is hunger in her heart and the love she sought is still unfound.

Bluff and Stuff, vulgar, coarse theatrical managers, are computing their profits and discussing ways and means to make more money. They call a rehearsal of the chorus and after they have put them through their paces they demand the principals, but none are there. Then Everywoman arrives and in her train, Wealth, a multi-millionaire, and Witless, a nobleman, who fondles her dog. She ultimately dismisses them and learns from Youth and Beauty, who are now members of the chorus, that Bluff and Stuff have offered violence to Modesty, and that she has disappeared.

LOSES MODESTY.

Note again the symbolism. Everywoman, worldly-wise from her contact with the stage, has lost her Modesty. Conscience, her maid, sings to her, but there is sadness in her heart. Youth, however, tells her that she suspects the actor, Passion, is really King Love. At this her heart is cheered, and a smile lights up her face. If Passion is, in truth, King Love, her pilgrimage is over.

Suddenly she hears a voice outside. It thrills her strangely. Alone upon the stage she sinks upon a rock, near swooning with joy at the prospect that seems to await her. Passion enters, his face masked. Everywoman, her hands clasped in ecstacy and anticipation, looks upon him. His form is pleasing and as he lifts his voice in song she feels that her hour of joy has come. He embraces her, kisses her, and she receives his advances wonderingly, half-puzzled, half-unconvinced. His arms are about her and his lips upon hers.

She abandons herself to his caresses, convinced that he is in truth, King Love, when, from a rock upon the stage she hears the plaintive voice of Modesty bidding her a last farewell. It arouses her. She demands that Passion remove his mask. He refuses, and she tears it from him to find in him only a false and hideous thing which she has mistaken for King Love.

"Thou art only decked out to strut and fret thy hour upon the stage, and pose and prate—and when thy part is played, thy mischief done, to vanish and be seen no more. Be gone!" she thunders, and Passion skulks away. Moaning, she sinks to her knees with Conscience tenderly comforting her.

SUMPTUOUS SCENE.

The third act takes place in Everywoman's sumptuous apartments in the city, where, as the toast of the hour, the petted favorite of the clubs, the adored of the men-about-town, she gives a supper to the men and women of her world. It is long past midnight as the curtain rises and discloses a scene of lavish beauty. In a gilded room a table is set with gold and cut glass, served by powdered servants, the air redolent with the perfume of rare flowers.

One by one, to the music of a haunting melody, the guests arrive. Everywoman, gorgeously gowned, sits among her guests, while wine bubbles, laughter becomes boisterous and voices maudlin with drink. Wealth sits at Everywoman's right; Witless at her left; Age attends upon Youth; Bluff upon Greed; Stuff upon Self; Puff, the press agent, upon Vanity.

Beauty is ill and cannot sit at the table and is attended by Conscience. She smiles wearily at the witticisms which are directed against her, but the life she has been leading, the late hours, the suppers, the wine and the life of alleged pleasure, has wasted her body and she feels her life slipping away. Again note the symbolism. It is not the character, Beauty, but the attribute, beauty, which Everywoman is about to lose.

The merriment waxes high, the corks are cannonading from the bottles as overworked Grovel and Sneak, the servants, supply the roistering guests. Everywoman feels the enthusiasm of the moment. Wealth, sitting beside her, murmurs in her ear; Witless in a vapid way pays her court, and her guests grow ever more hilarious. They sing and jest and shout as Conscience bends low over the prostrate form of dying Beauty. Everywoman is crowned Queen of the Revels. She mounts her glittering table, sparkling with diamonds, wearing a gown a princess might envy, and the men, some of them stupefied with wine, bow down and worship her.

BEAUTY EXHAUSTED.

Worn out from the evening of dissipation, Everywoman bids her guests depart, and one by one they go as the clock strikes five. Youth sinks down exhausted, but Wealth, who covets Everywoman, and has heard that she seeks king love, lingers, to her unseen. She bids Conscience disrobe her and bring her the gown of purity she wore when first she set forth upon her pilgrimage.

Conscience leaves the room to fetch the gown, when suddenly Everywoman discovers the presence of Wealth. She demands by what right he intrudes, and he pleads his suit, naming the priceless gifts he will bestow upon her if she will be his. He demands that she bring with her also Youth and Beauty, and she scornfully refuses him, ordering him to leave. He turns to Youth, who sleeps, and to Beauty, whose flickering life is going out, and she haughtily commands Conscience to show him the door.

Grovel and Sneak throw open the shutters, and the light of day comes in upon the scene and falls upon the white face of Beauty, pale as a lily. Beauty is no more. Suddenly Everywoman realizes what has happened. With a cry of horror she rushes to the couch, throwing herself upon the prostrate form, covering the lifeless lips with kisses.

"My Beauty gone!" she shrieks. "No, it cannot be true!"

She struggles to her feet and staggers to a mirror. As she stares into it her face takes on a look of abject horror, for there, within the glass she sees a hideous face—the face of Truth.

With a wild cry she rushes to the table, seizes one of the champagne bottles and hurls it into the mirror; then, as the glass is shattered, she turns and throws herself into the arms of Wealth and leads him a wild, Bacchanalian dance as the rays of the morning sun light up the scene of the orgy.

NEW YEAR'S EVE.

As the curtain rises upon the fourth act we see Nobody wandering down Broadway, New York. It is midnight on New Year's Eve and pandemonium reigns. Snow is silently falling. Mingling unseen among the crowds he pauses finally before a richly-lighted restaurant where mirth and gayety are rife. Wealth, Witless and others are supping there as the old year goes out and the new year comes in. Surging along Broadway are a clamoring lot of students, mingling with the flotsam of the pavement, scarlet women, knaves, rogues, pickpockets, young men sowing their wild oats and old men harvesting theirs.

ENTER VICE.

Tripping along in most fantastic garb comes Vice, a young woman who would lead the way to destruction, and she is followed by a motley mob, all shouting and holding high carnival, and, as they disappear and the street is cleared, Everywoman appears, dragging her tired feet along. Her clothes are shabby, her face emaciated, her form bent, and she leans heavily upon Youth, the sole companion left her. Youth, too, is wan and complains of weariness.

Everywoman pauses before the richly-lighted restaurant and discovers Wealth supping within. She is cold and hungry, and the warmth of the room reminds her of the days when she was fortune's favorite. She still seeks Love, but, with Modesty and Beauty lost to her, the way seems to lie through Wealth and his influence, and she recalls the promises he made to her when she was the toast of the town, and she resolves to see him.

Youth tries to dissuade her but she will not listen to her, and as Youth urges her further to give up the project she turns upon her and berates her. Youth is amazed at Everywoman's attack, but she, herself is weak and worn and suddenly there stands before her Father Time in long, flowing gray beard, who beckons to her that her hour has come. Slowly, amid the falling snow, Youth follows Time away and disappears forever.

SPURNED WEALTH.

Everywoman, lurking near the restaurant, finally sees the doors thrown open and Wealth, smoking a huge cigar, with a contented and well-satisfied air, appears upon the threshold. He is followed by the satellites and harpies by which he is surrounded, who cheer him on his way. He has paid the score and with a parting cheer the merry-makers go on their way leaving Wealth to take his carriage and depart.

It is Everywoman's opportunity to address him and she accosts him. He lifts his hat politely, not recognizing her at first, nor the lowly state to which she has sunk. She addresses him, reminding him of his promises, but he brushes her aside. With neither Youth nor Beauty he will have none of her.

He starts on when suddenly Vice in flamboyant postures greets him. He does not know her but she assumes familiarity and goes off on his arm, throwing backward to Everywoman a discordant laugh of triumph.

Standing forsaken and alone Everywoman suddenly sees approaching four acolytes followed by four men bearing a bier upon which lies the body of Youth. Charity, in white robes, leads the little procession, chanting the solemn measures of a hymn—Conscience, robed in black, following. As they pass there falls upon Everywoman the full bitterness of her calamity and sinking in the snow she appeals to heaven and asks whether there is not in the whole world help for one fallen as she is.

NOBODY'S HOUR.

"I cry for help. Who will answer?" she pleads.

As in fulfillment of his own prophecy there suddenly stands before her the cowled figure of Nobody. Tenderly he bends to lift her but she shrinks from him.

"I hate thee!" she shrieks. "I hate Nobody! Help! Help! Is there no other help, no other hope for Everywoman?"

Then she hears a comforting voice, appealing for Charity. She turns to discover the old hag, Truth, whom she had met in the first act. But somehow there is a sweet relief she had never before known in the tones of Truth. She rushes to her embracing her, holding the bent form against her in the wildness of her joy. Then for the first time she looks into the face of Truth. And lo! a miracle has happened for Truth is no longer ugly, but wondrous fair. Kissing her she seeks to lean upon her, and Everywoman, taking up the burden of her life, passes, down the now deserted Broadway under the falling snow, hand in hand with Truth, crying aloud:

"Charity! Charity for Everywoman!"

HOME AGAIN.

Truth leads Everywoman back to the hearth she had deserted when she set out upon her vain pilgrimage in search of Love, and there upon the hearthstone, in yeoman's attire, reclines a man. It is King Love, who during all the long months of her absence has kept her house in order awaiting her return. She looks into his face and realizes for the first time the sanctuary of her heart. In his arms at last she hears a tapping at her shutter and opening it wide there enters sweet Modesty who has returned to reside with her forevermore. Evrywoman's joy is complete. Truth blesses her; Modesty nestles beside her; and stalwart King Love places his strong arms about her. But dawn approaches. Everywoman, hand in hand with Modesty, mounts the stairway to her chamber above. As they ascend her eyes dwell lingeringly upon her King, who winds his arms fondly about the shoulders of Truth, his mother, as he leads her out in the night.

The fire dies low upon the hearth when the tall, gaunt form of Nobody is seen to enter. Out of the solemn, peaceful stillness, his voice is heard, something mysteriously like malicious humor in his tones.

"The quest is ended," he says. "This is the cue for Nobody to bid adieu. But first he'll ask you in the author's name, be merciful, be just, be fair to every woman—everywhere! Her faults are many. Nobody's the blame!"

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

When Champ Clark was a young lawyer, out in Louisiana, Mo., Old Man Burwell, as he was known, ran a grocery that served as a forum where young and old might meet and talk politics. Old Man Burwell didn't like to stop talking politics to sell sugar or other commodities, and his grocery did not prosper as it might have, but he had a lot of influence politically. He could tell three months in advance who would be elected Sheriff and the vote he would receive.

When Champ Clark got it into his head to run for Prosecuting Attorney Old Man Burwell helped him. Young Clark might have been elected anyhow, and then again he might not. At any rate, he appreciated Old Man Burwell's help, and never forgot it.

Not so long ago he received a letter from one of his old neighbors, containing gossip of old-time acquaintances, and one bit of news it contained was that Old Man Burwell had met financial reverses and was having all kinds of hard luck.

With the note from back home still in his hand, the Speaker seized a check book and signed his name to a slip for enough to take care of Old Man Burwell for awhile, and dictated a letter to his secretary.

"And," he admonished his secretary, "don't tell my wife about this. She might think it was extravagance."

Anthony Tekulve, a street worker in Cincinnati, did a most heroic thing a few days ago, in order to rescue a 2-year-old child from death. While the child, Anna Siebling, was playing in the street, her foot slipped and she fell into a catch basin. The only way to rescue her was for a person to crawl through 100 feet of sewer pipe, which Tekulve did, and after a terrible strain brought the child to the surface, where she was soon revived.

The Rest and Holiday Home for Working Gentlewomen, established by Mr. and Mrs. J. Kennedy Tod at the Villa Lilliteia, Biarritz, has now nearly its complement of inmates, and these speak in the highest terms of its comfort and the benefit they derive from the restful life there. A great many callers have recently been shown over the establishment by Miss Clarke, the superintendent, who is at all times delighted to receive them. The garden is one mass of flowers and fruit blossoms just now, and the grounds, which are tastefully laid out with shrubs and groves of pine trees, are a model of neatness. The home is proving a splendid success.

Hon. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia has recently given $25,000 to the Young Women's Christian Association of that city for the purpose of erecting a building for the Young Women's Christian Association for Colored People.

The heirs of Charles Schoolhouse of New York will respect an oral request of his and will pay from the estate $1000 to each of ten public institutions in which he was interested. The institutions are Montefiore Home, Mt. Sinai Hospital, German Hospital, Hebrew Orphan Asylum, Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews, New York Skin and Cancer Hospital, Hebrew Technical Institute, Educational Alliance, Blythedale Home for Tubercular Children and the New York Society for the Ruptured and Crippled.

Cats and other animals had a friend in Miss Caroline G. Ewen, who died last month in New York, for in her will she directed that her whole fortune of $500,000 should be used to promote the comfort of these creatures. In her will she justified her action by stating that her relatives, whom she named, had been previously provided for from other sources and therefore did not need anything from her estate.

Frank McWilliams of Everett, Mass., a brakeman on the B. & M. road, had a narrow escape from being hurled to death at the Oak Grove station when he jumped from the top of a moving freight train to save a small girl from being killed by the Haverhill express.

The child was crossing the tracks and the train on which McWilliams was working came into the station on the inbound track. The girl stood on the outbound track waiting for the train to pass and failed to note the approach of the outbound express. McWilliams, who was riding on one of the cars, cried to the child, but she failed to hear.

The screech of the whistle on the on-coming express confused the child and she remained motionless. Realizing that unless he moved instantly the child would be killed, McWilliams jumped from the top of the freight car on which he was riding to the ground. He luckily dropped within a few feet of the frightened child and regaining his feet swept her from the tracks as the express whirled past. McWilliams fell on the platform with the child clasped in his arms.

OVER THE SEA.

The Prince of Wales will conclude his university education at Magdalen College, Oxford, at the end of the present term.

Princess Mary, King George's only daughter, who is 16 years old, is said to be an amateur stenographer.

Prince von Donnersmarck, said to be the wealthiest man in Germany, will pay a "war tax" of $2,540,000 on his fortune, which is estimated at $63,000,000.

Ernesto Nathan, the Mayor of Rome, threatens to resign, ostensibly because he needs rest. It is said, however, that the real reason is the differences among the revolutionary Socialists and the Republicans. Efforts are being made to persuade him not to retire.

Patrick MacGill, assistant in the Royal Library at Windsor Castle, has risen from a railroad navvy or section hand through his own efforts and has gained considerable notice as a poet. He was born in the North of Ireland, and at the age of 15 left home and wandered through the big industrial centers of Scotland, working at anything he could find to do. With little education, he set about educating himself, and within five years had gained a knowledge of Latin, Greek, French, German, Spanish and Italian. While employed as a railroad hand he issued a little book of verse, "Gleanings from a Navvy's Scrapbook." Later he went to London and tried his hand at journalism.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

Mrs. Morris H. Turk,

Wife of the junior pastor of the First Congregational Church, who gave a delightful travel talk before the Women's Work Society of that church last Thursday.

CLUBS are closing in rapid succession and the round of luncheons, teas and farewell functions is well-nigh dizzying and quite beyond the possible personal attention of any one club woman. The merry month of June promises as many more entertainments of a similar character for the two largest clubs, the Ebell and Friday Morning, always keeping well up to the end of June, closing this year on the 28th and 27th respectively. Many of the smaller clubs closed last week—notably the Highland Park Ebell, the Ruskin Art, the Cosmos, the Hollywood Woman's Club and all the sections of Ebell.

Cosmos Club Closes.

Shakespeare's heroines walked and talked on the stage of Ebell clubhouse last Wednesday afternoon when members of the Cosmos Club, Shakespeare section, impersonated fair "Rosalind" and tragic "Lady Macbeth" and "Olivia" and the rest. The scenes were short and exceedingly well staged and presented under the direction of Mrs. Zella Zee Dodge.

There was first a scene in the forest of Arden with Mrs. Marie Ross as Rosalind and Mrs. J. G. Moodie as Celia. Tragedy alternated with comedy and the second scene was that of "Juliet," impersonated by Miss Ethelyn Hunkins, and the nurse, splendidly portrayed by Mrs. A. C. Hummelbaugh, the incoming president of the club. A scene from "Twelfth Night" followed with Mrs. G. H. MacGinnis as Viola and Mrs. W. F. Anderson as Olivia.

Mrs. Jervis W. Wetherbee in the sleep-walking scene of "Lady Macbeth showed fine dramatic talents and Mrs. R. C. P. Smith as Portia and Mrs. J. H. Bean as Nerissa presented the final scene from the "Merchant of Venice."

After the entertaining programme the outgoing president, Mrs. William Reeve, installed the incoming officers, Mrs. A. C. Hummelbaugh, president; Mmes. Dodge, G. M. Giffen and J. Clark, vice-presidents; Mrs. J. W. Wetherbee, recording secretary; Mrs. W. F. Anderson, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. T. S. Lewis, treasurer.

Just previous to the installation ceremonies, Miss Celia Katze, in behalf of the members, presented the outgoing president, Mrs. Reeve, with a beautiful brooch set with a diamond and pearls and an exquisite jewelled hair ornament as a testimonial of affection and gratitude to her for splendid services as presiding officer during the past two years.

A social hour over the teacups closed the club year most delightfully.

Ruskin Art Club Closes.

The reciprocity tea and entertainment given by the Ruskin Art Club last Thursday afternoon called out a large attendance with many representatives from out-of-town clubs. The dramatic rendition of "Jeanne d'Arc" by Mrs. Southwick, wife and co-instructor of the president of the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston, was a tremendous attraction. With a delicate discrimination and nicety of sentiment, Mrs. Southwick had arrayed herself in a charming gown in exquisite shades of lavender and purple—just the colors of the lilies of France, the queenly fleur de lis—and she looked like a slender human iris as she stood before her audience and told in graphic style the story of the girl savior of France.

The tearooms were charmingly decorated with roses and lilies and the outgoing and incoming presidents, Mmes. W. S. Bullis and George Sinsabaugh, respectively, divided honors as hostesses while the tea tables were presided over and refreshments served by representatives of the past and present directors of the club.

The last meeting of the club was held the preceding day with Mrs. D. C. Barber in charge of the programmes. Miss Lulu Rublo spoke of Louis XI of France as Dauphin, telling of his early characteristics, his literary talents and quiet tastes.

Mrs. J. W. Hendrick then gave the history of his reign—noteworthy in so many respects—and followed the development of his interesting but none too admirable character. Mrs. T. M. Walker closed the lesson with an account of the impregnable fortress of Plessis-les-Tours, in which the fear-haunted Louis spent his last days. Mrs. Walker gave also a brief backward glance over the year's study, noting that in the reign of Louis XI were to be found the germs of the greatness of modern France.

Shakespeare Section Closes.

The Ebell department of Shakespeare held its final meeting of the club year last Tuesday morning. Mrs. North, instructor of the section, presided, and a programme of active readings from "Romeo and Juliet," "Love's Labor Lost" and "A Winter's Tale" made up an interesting entertainment. Mrs. Charles Stavnow as Juliet and Mrs. Ross Byron as the nurse, acquitted themselves well, and the court scene from the "Winter's Tale" was delightfully given by Mrs. Charles S. Hall as Leontes, Mrs. Fred S. Lang as Hermione, Mrs. William Lane as Paulina and Mrs. Phoebe Houghton as the court officer. The sheep-shearing scene from the same play was presented by Mrs. G. B. Logan as Perdita, Miss Mary Dickson as Florizel, Mrs. E. E. Smith as the singing peddler and Mrs. W. H. Mayne as the clown.

A luncheon followed, in charge of Mrs. Charles S. Anderson. The tables were beautifully decorated with the dainty Cecile Brunner roses and maidenhair ferns with pretty pink baskets and place cards adorned with the head of Shakespeare in medallion. During the luncheon a group of songs was delightfully rendered by Mrs. Katherine Kimball Forest, readings by Mrs. G. B. Logan and, as a finale to the fine programme, Miss Margaret Tuttle gave several fancy dances, accompanied by her mother at the piano.

Mrs. William L. Jones, president of Ebell, and Mrs. Thomas B. Stowell, general curator, gave appropriate toasts. Mrs. W. H. Mayne, the retiring curator of the section, spoke of the pleasant years she had spent in the department and paid special tribute to her assisting officers, Mmes. N. H. Eckley and Henry Levison.

Dominant Club Closes.

The last programme of the season of the Dominant Club, an organization of seventy-five professional musicians, will be unusually good, it is promised, and will come off next Saturday afternoon at the Ebell Clubhouse. There will be a trio by Miss Winifred Ballard, Madam Elsa von Grof-Menasco and Julius Seyler; songs by Miss Blanche Ruby and Mrs. Gertrude Ross at the piano; a chorus of mixed voices, "May Day," directed by J. B. Poulin, with Mrs. Ross and Kathleen Lockhart at the piano, and a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Cohen.

Hollywood Club Closes.

A year of splendid work in the Woman's Club of Hollywood and eight years of happy and successful club life were brought to a brilliant close Wednesday with a birthday banquet at Hotel Hollywood. An elaborate and delicious repast was served at small tables surrounding two large center tables, at which were seated the old and new officers and boards, the toastmistress and the after-dinner speakers. The table decorations were Shasta daisies, blue larkspurs and superb white Canterbury bells. On the president's table reposed a beautiful birthday cake, iced in the club colors and crowned with the club initials and dates. At the proper time, with a "wish for a new clubhouse," the eight lighted candles were neatly extinguished by what a witty ex-president denominated "a long blow, a strong blow and a blow all together," the president cut the cake and a slice was served to each guest.

Mrs. Cassius Smith, the charming and efficient club president, who was unanimously elected to succeed herself, then took up the review of the years' work. Interesting reports from the retiring officers and department heads, Mmes. B. W. Harper, M. E. Eldridge, J. F. Redhead, G. H. Given, A. L. Leonard, A. H. Gurney and H. L. Knox, were enthusiastically received.

The newly-elected officers and board were then presented to the club by the president. These are: President, Mrs. Cassius Smith; first vice-president, Mrs. H. T. Wright; second vice-president, Mrs. Jacob Stern; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. G Greenwood; recording secretary, Mrs. L. W. Burdette; treasurer, Mrs. Jay Herrington; board, Mmes. J. F. R head, Will Thilenius, L. Frank Ba
Guy Hinckley and J. R. Hubbard.
Mrs Harry Bentham was then troduced as toast-mistress and serv up a Shakespearean menu full of and wisdom.
Mrs. Eleanor B. Jones spoke t quotation from "A Winter's Tale
"your free undertaking cannot m a thriving issue"—and dished much encouragement to club wo ers.
Mrs. Cornelius Cole discoursed
"How the world wags," from "As Y Like It." It no longer wags, opined, but whirls, to ragtime mu and the tune of modern follies dress and amusements.
"That I might be young Cupi fiery shaft," from "A Mid-Summ
Night's Dream," was the subject
Miss Anna Hoff's remarks. She voked Cupid's darts upon the present who appeared to have caped his arrows, and the breathed a concerted sigh of re that there would be no more me ings until after June, and its m trimonial dangers is past.
Mrs. Gustave L. Ditzer respond to a quotation from Measure f Measure, "If our virtues did not forth of us, 'twere all alike as we had them not," and exhorted h hearers, after the fashion of a ce tain rural English minister, to "Ha
'igh."
"Learn to jest in good time. Th is a time for all things, from Comedy of Errors," was the the of some delightful nonsense by M E. C. McCullough.
From "Merry Wives" Mrs. Ra
Burdick chose a quotation, "T world's my oyster, which I w sword will open." However, if M
Burdick were writing Shakespeare t day she would write it, "the worl my rose, which I with love w open."

Mother's Marks in Sewing.

I have been let into a secret th is really too delicious to keep to m self. You know the girls in our pu lic schools are obliged to take up d mestic science along with their ot studies. Now it so happens, that so girls have no more aptness for se ing than others have for music mathematics, and thus it happ that mother is worked in to help the puzzled and distressed school come straight, and frequently it

I met one of these mothers l week and she had several puckers her otherwise smooth forehead as ripped out Susie's amateur stitc and tried to straighten the crook seams.
"Poor child," she sighed, "sh takes it from me; I never was mu of a dressmaker and Susie sim hates it, and the worst of it is th she gets such low marks because h mother's work is so poor. Yes, it's standing joke in our household," sighed, "about 'mother's marks' sewing."

Midsummer Night's Dream.

DANCE TANGO IN MOONLIGHT.

Lawn Parties All the Rage Among British Nobility.

American Hostesses Entertain London's Exclusive Set.

King and Queen Draw Line on Charity Requests.

BY LADY MANWARING.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

LONDON, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Moonlight lawn dancing parties are commencing to be quite a thing among country family hostesses. One of the most interesting functions for next week will be a midnight ball on the great lawns of the Wigtonshire estate of the Countess Estairs, whose guests will include the Countess Tormy, daughter ofthe Grand Duke Michael of Russia, the Duchess of Manchester and the Duchess of Marlborough. The Tango is to be danced by professionals, the house guests of the Countess rounding out this number. There are to be absolutely no illuminations or lights whatsoever except that furnished by the good Scotch moon, but the Scotch moon is, in early June, a rather dependable lady and given aclear sky, the Wigtonshire party is expected to be quite an event.

IN HER MOTHER'S SHOES.

One of the most delightful of the season's social functions was the dance given by Lady Petre for her daughters, the Misses Barbara and Clara Petre, at No. 42 Grosvenor place. Lady Petre is a daugther of the late Mrs. Cavendish Taylor, once a famous American hostess in London, and she has her mother's talent for entertaining, her dance in Great Stanhope street last year being one of the most enjoyable of the pre-Easter season. Her only son, Lord Petre, is to be married in the summer to Miss Kitty Boscawen, daughter of Mr. John and Lady Margaret Boscawen, and a niece of Lord Falmouth, and an extremely pretty and charming girl of two-and-twenty.

AN AMERICAN HOSTESS.

Mrs. Charles Lawrence has returned from the Riviera to No. 38 Eaton square, where she and her husband, a younger brother of Lord Lawrence, give the most delightful of dinner parties, at, which are always very interesting people. Mrs. Lawrence, an attractive and highly cultured American, has, however, other interests besides society, spending time in charitable undertakings, in particular the Royal Hospital for Incurables, at Putney. Charles Lawrence elected for a commercial career after leaving Marlborough, is today an authority on railway matters. Though a busy man he finds time for golf and other pursuits, and the autumn usually finds him in the Highlands. He was born in India, and is third son of the famous Sir John Lawrence, the first Lord Lawrence, the hero of the Punjab, and later Viceroy of India.

Windsor folk are not very likely to support the women's suffrage movement just now, for they are all (metaphorically speaking) sitting in ashes at the closing of the State apartments when the weather is so delightful calling everyone into the open. The worthy Mayor has approached the castle authorities, and done his utmost to persuade them to allow the famous rooms to be shown to the public; but the Lord Chamberlain is obdurate. Those of us who love the castle, and take a pride in its unique treasures, think his lordsip is quite right; the irreparable damage that a suffragette hammer might do in five minutes among those priceless objects of art and relics of British national history is not to be lightly risked.

Lord Weardale, who has been touring in the United States in connection with peace centenary celebrations, has the distinction of being wedded to a Russian lady. Lady Weardale has been twice married, her first husband being Count Tolstoy, who was a diplomat and quite a different person, of course, from the famous Russian author who bore the same name and title. Lord Weardale is 65 years of age, has no heir, so that it is likely that he will be both the first and last holder of the title. There is another peerage, however, and a much older one, in the Stanhope family, for the Earldom of Stanhope, which was created nearly two centuries ago, is at present held by Lord Weardale's nephew.

DRAWING ON ROYAL PURSE.

The very generous way in which their Majesties have been encouraging public charities since their reign began has had one inconvenient result. In the old Victorian days the sovereign was disposed to limit her benefactions to certain classes of public work, and it was tacitly left to the then Prince of Wales to dispense royal patronage to other departments. Under the Edwardian regime both these channels of generosity flowed into one broad stream, and Queen Alexandra made it her private concern to supplement these official gifts by an amount of personal beneficence whose extent is even now hardly realized. But nowadays the outlets for charity have become so wide and varied that King George and Queen Mary have added to their alms list scores of enterprises which were undreamed of before. Girls' clubs and play centers, boy scouts and public school missions, and a host of other projects find a willing ear in the royal family to their appeals. The keeper of the privy purse has found it necessary to lay down a wholesome rule in these maters to relieve the King, who cannot possibly do for one what cannot be done for all, and as the public at large has not yet learned where to draw the line.

KILLS TUBERCLE BACILLUS. MAKES HEARTS IN OYSTERS.

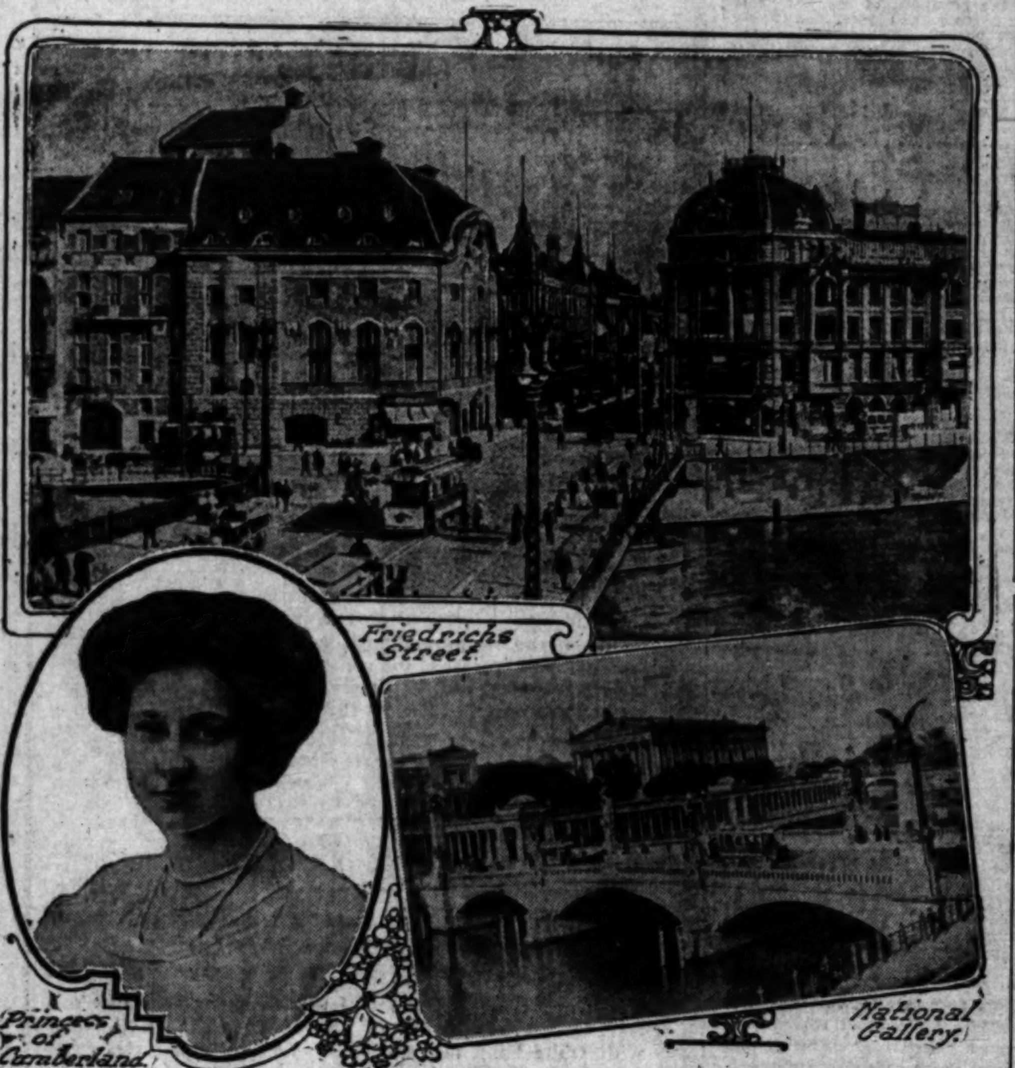
PARIS, May 31.—The eminent physiologist, Prof. Raphael Dubois, of the University of Lyons, has concluded a series of experiments demonstrating that the micrococcus which causes the formation of hearts in oysters is fatal to the tubercle bacillus. Prof. Dubois does not wish either to draw conclusions or to make predictions as a result of his experiments, but hopes that the discovery may aid in the extermination of tuberculosis.

Paeans of Praise for "Kaiserstadt" by Visiting Hosts.



Echoes of the royal wedding.

The thousands of visitors who are leaving Berlin after coming here to view the magnificent pageant of the wedding of Princess Victoria Luise, to Prince Ernest August of Cumberland, are enthusiastic in their praise of the Kaiserstadt and its government. It is declared to be not only the cleanest but also the most beautifully built city in the world. Two characteristic views are given above, the one on top, of the Friedrich Strasse, the main business thoroughfare, bisecting the city, and the other of the bridge over the Spree not far from the imperial castle, with the National Art Gallery, with its superb Greek outlines, looming up in the background. The picture of Princess Luise is the latest of the royal bride, and is said to be an especially good photograph.

KAISER'S SILVER JUBILEE BRINGS AMERICAN GIFT.

[BY CABLE AND FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE OVERLAND TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] A fortnight hence Berlin will be en fete with the presentation of gifts and congratulatory addresses to Emperor William in celebration of his twenty-fifth anniversary as Kaiser. Among the addresses in which the greatest interest is taken is that of the Germans in America containing several thousand names, couched in language which has gone right to the heart of his Imperial Majesty. The Kaiser has personally expressed to the American Ambassadors his satisfaction that the memorial fund collected by the American committee is to be devoted to a commemorative hospital. He believes in useful memorials. He is a thorough spug (member of the society for prevention of useless giving,) and he is taking proper means to express to the subscribers through official channels his gratitude to them for their generosity.

NEW DIPHTHERIA SERUM.

Details have not been published of the new diphtheria serum of Prof. Behring, who announced at the Medical Congress at Wiesbaden last month that he had discovered a meth of of producing prolonged immunity from the disease by the injection of a serum of diphtheria poison and antidotes.

The discovery appears to be considered by the medical faculty as a highly important development, which may possibly affect the whole method of treatment in cases of infectious diseases. By vaccinating horses with the poison from diphtheria bacili Prof. Behring obtained a secondary poison which contains its own antidote. This, injected into human beings produces a slight, non-dangerous, feverish reaction, but renders the patient not only immune against immediate infection during a diphtheria epidemic, but also maintains is value for a period of a full year.

Prof. Behring reports over 100 successful vaccinations, and all the vaccinated inmates of a hospital where diphtheria raged were immune throughout the epidemic. The treatment is expected to be valuable in schools and hospitals, especially lying-in hospitals.

Importance attaches to the fact that Prof. Behring's method renders harmless the so-called "germ carriers"—persons who are always infectious though they have recovered from the disease.

RAILS AT KAISER.

A good story is being told just now of how the Kaiser brought down on his head the imprecations of a worthy Berlin chemist whom he "called up" in the small hours of the morning. His Imperial Majesty was anxious to witness an early morning march of some troops, and to see without being seen himself. Having risen betimes, he went out and peered about in the gray twilight for a coign of vantage. The balcony of the chemist's shop seemed just the thing, and so the Kaiser rang the night bell. Presently a head incased in a night cap appeared from an upper window. "Who's there, and what in the name of thunder do you want at this time of day? Is somebody dying?" "I am Wilhelm," replied the Kaiser, "and I want you to permit me to come up to your balcony to witness the troops." "Wilhelm, indeed!" exclaimed the irate chemist; "but there are hundreds of Wilhelms. What's your surname?" "Hohenzollern," came the reply. The chemist's confusion can better be imagined than described.

HELPING A DRESSMAKER.

A habitue of the German court tells how an ex-dresser in the royal establishment set up as a modiste in Berlin. The Kaiserin wished to give her a start, and ordered a dress to be made for herself. In spite of this being carried out in a manner which proved conclusively that the ex-dresser was not a born dressmaker, the Empress insisted that Princess Louise should also extend her patronage. Consequently this was done, and though wearable, the garment was not a triumph of the dressmaker's art. The Princess refused to be seen outside the palace in the costume, and when a photographer obtained a permit to the royal grounds he took a photo of her in the unfavored dress. When the proofs were submitted the Princess ordered the plate to be destroyed. However, the one-time royal dressing maid had the honor of making one of the Princess's "going away" gowns for the recent wedding. Whether or not Her Imperial Highness will ever wear it is another matter, but she is an economical young woman and will doubtless put it to some use.

AN UNKNWOWN QUANTITY.

The Crown Prince of Germany has been married some years, and is the father of a family, but even now those who know say that except for his wholehearted love of sport he is what the Germans call an "unbeschriebenes Blatt"—an unknown quantity. But what his people have gleaned as regards his tastes and character is, however, entirely in his favor. He selected a charming wife in the smart and pretty brunette Duchess Cecilie of Mecklenburg. And his sturdy sons give strength to the succession. Then his kindness of heart is proverbial, and his battalion in the Guards are much devoted to their leader. By the way, the Crown Prince is in real fact the most American German alive. He has introduced polo, hockey, baseball, football and rowing into the Fatherland, and there can be no doubt but that he is personally responsible for the fancy for outdoor life which has of late grown up among the younger set of upper-class Germans. And he has popularized yachting and riding, and now has his own racing stable.

World's Leading Feminists Take Part in Debate.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt Will Wield the Gavel.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] That will be a wonderful gathering of women at Budapest on June 15 when the first session of the Congress of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance is called to order by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

Women who are leaders in every profession and in every line of endeavor, and from practically every civilized country in the world will be present, and will take an active part in the proceedings.

The committee of Hungarian women who will look after the congress is typical of the broad character of the feminist movement, the world over.

At the head of it stands the Countess Jska Teleki. She is a novelist, and in her the suffragists honor one of the most devoted pioneers of the movement. She concentrates her social activity on equal rights for women and her two homes, one in Budapest, the other in Tatrarfured are propagandist centers for the aristocracy, both of birth and culture. Then there is Vilma Glucklich, vice-president of the committee, and one of the founders of the Woman Suffrage Association of Hungary. She is a teacher of mathematics and physics, and was the first woman student of philosophy after the university was opened to women. Special reform through education is her aim and she is, especially an advocate of the idea of preparing parents for their duties.

GO TO NOBILITY.

For another vice-president of the committee, the Hungarian suffragists went again to the ranks of the nobility, choosing Countess Illona Haller. Besides being vice-president of the committee she is president of its subcommittee on Finance. Her Varium et Mutabile.

WILLFUL ENGLISH BEAUTY RUSTICATED BY FATHER.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Hon. Frances Fitzalan-Howard, a beautiful English society girl of 21, has been rusticated by her father and is spending a lonesome time reflecting on the penalty of having her own way, for having three times turned down Albert Leigh Bennett, a persistent suitor, in a manner which would lacerate the feelings of any suitor.

Her father, Lord Howard of Glossop, made up his mind that she should marry the young man, and the Hon. Frances made up her mind she wouldn't, although three times she accepted him, the preparations for the wedding all being made and the date set and invitations sent out. Three times Miss Howard at the last minute turned the zephyr of coquetry upon her betrothed by saying "I will not marry him."

So her father, a kinsman of the Duke of Norfolk, England's premier duke, has sent her from his town house, No. 13 Rutland Gate, to his seat, Glossop Hall, Derbyshire, where she will have time to reflect that young Bennett's persistency at least deserved to be rewarded. Of him his friends speak most highly.

Grand Nephew of Noted Poet Is a Good Southpaw.

French Steerable Balloon Takes Initial Trip.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

PARIS, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Baseball has now been adopted by most of the progressive schools and colleges of France and we are just now looking forward to the world's series as it is on the Seine. The Ecoles Pascal is now running at the top of the intercollegiate division and the team representing the cadets of the army is likely to meet it in the final tournament.

Thousands were gathered recently on the diamond of Bagatelle in the Bois de Boulogne, when the Lycee Condorcet nine, captained by the M. Jacques de Saint-Maurice, met the Pascal nine, captained by M. J. Coudert, who has been one of the pioneers of the French student ball bugs. The Pascal lads slammed the Condorcets over the green for 17 to 8 runs. A feature of the playing was the pitching of Gervais la Fontaine, a grand-nephew of the poet, who is quite a southpaw man in France.

KEEP DUELS SECRET.

The president of the Cercle Hoche, the Duc Decazes, has sent a circular to the members of the club, in which they are requested to give their word not to permit of the publication of any interview or note respecting any duel in which they may be concerned as principals or seconds before the duel actually takes place. Certainly there is a suspicion abroad that many duels are merely an ingenious form of advertisement. A recent meeting has, by chance or design, been pretty assiduously ground-baited in the public press. Further, though the place of the encounter was supposed to have been kept secret till the last moment, the windows and park of the little Chateau d'Orly were graced by an audience which, in quality at least, would not have been unworthy of a first night at the Francais.

In connection with the suggestion of the Duc Decazes, one paper imagines the following telephonic dialogue between two prospective principals: "Hello, old chap, the seconds say that we are not to have only a single 'par' in the papers," whereupon the old chap answers, "Then it is not worth while fighting."

NEW STEERABLE BALLOON.

Another new French steerable balloon of large cubic capacity, the Commandant Coutelle, constructed by the Societe Zodiac, made its debut in the air recently. It left its shed at St. Cyr with eleven persons consisting of two pilots, three machinists and six passengers on board, and went through evolutions at a height of some 500 feet for a period of one hour.

The Commandant Coutelle has a capacity of over 90,000 cubic feet of gas. It is only half the size of the great Zeppelins, yet it is believed to be more workable and practical. It has two motors of 200 horse-power each, and will probably be the fastest French airship in actual service in the army. The Clement-Bayard firm, however, is constructing a semi-rigid steerable balloon at Lamotte-Beuil, which will have a cubic capacity of 180,000 feet, and will therefore rival in size the rigid Zeppelins. It is expected to be completed in time for the autumn maneuvers.

OLD AGE IN MAN.

Prof. Armand Gautier has made a scientific study of the causes of old age in man. He has discovered that the most flourishing condition of manhood is when there is a mysterious "fluor" in the body. This "fluor" is especially evident when men and women are in their prime. It is manifested chiefly underneath the skin, at the roots of the hair, under the teeth and under the nails. The presence of this "fluor" is a precious vital asset to the body, and what scientists ought to study is the means of preserving or increasing it. The moment that men and women find their "fluor" diminishing old age comes on. But it seems that we might all be rejuvenated if we could only find the principle that would restore the "fluor." Prof. Metchnikoff some years ago advocated thick or sour milk. If we take some of it regularly when we feel our health diminishing, we might recover some of the lost mineral, and become fluorescent, which is only a synonym for flourishing.

DISAGREES WITH PUBLISHER.

M. Gustave Charpentier, whose "Julien" is now being presented by the Opera Comique, seems to have disagreed with his publisher. "Julien," accordingly, will not be published by the same firm that brought out "Louise." But "Julien" is a sequel to "Louise," not only in the story—Julien is, of course, Louise's lover, come back to the stage—but also in the score. That is to say, I presume, that many of the themes of "Louise" reappear in "Julien."

Now comes a nice point which the composer's discarded publisher is said to be raising. He argues that the copyright of the score of "Louise" belongs to him, that the score of "Julien," which M. Charpentier has sold to a rival publisher, contains many themes and long musical phrases already found in "Louise" and, therefore, constitute an infringement.

This is probably the first time that such a musical quarrel has arisen. When a composer has invented a leitmotif and put it in the score of a work which he has sold to one publisher, is he or is he not at liberty to use this same leitmotif in a second work, the sequel to the first, which he sells to a second publisher? If Wagner had sold "Das Rheingold" to one publisher and the rest of the "Ring" to another, would the first publisher have been entitled to prosecute him because, for instance, he had sold to the second publisher the motif of the curse of the "Ring," which he had already sold to the first publisher with the "Rheingold?"

STRANGE STORY OF PARIS.

Recently towards evening a little band of policemen carrying long ladders and headed by a commissary and a justice of the peace marched down the Rue du Parc at Versailles. When the procession reached No. 31 three ladders were placed against the windows of the second story and three policemen mounted rapidly. Meanwhile commissary and justice disappeared into the building.

What was the meaning of all these precautions? Had yet another bandit been tracked to his lair in this quiet and eminently respectable street? The theory was untenable, especially as the police had left bombs and bucklers behind. Besides, everyone in the quarter knew that the building was occupied by "Gens comme il faut"—entirely respectable tenants. But what everybody did not know was that the occupant of the flat in the second story had remained behind barred doors and shuttered windows for seven years. The proprietor of the building knew it, and it was he who had called in the police to compel his tenant to open her doors.

It is a strange story. Seven years before Mlle. Clementine Lerat, for that is her name, lost her only sister, with whom she had lived for forty years. Her grief must have affected her mind, for when she returned from the graveside she bolted the door of her flat, closed the shutters of the windows, even blocking their interstices with black paper, emptied her lamps of oil and threw away her matches. From that day onwards she lived in darkness and in solitude. The only visitor for whom she unbarred the door was a fellow-tenant who kept a grocer's shop in the basement. Three times a month this lady, Mme. Cochon, was permitted to pass a supply of tinned provisions through a small window. In the same way she was handed, four times a year, a check payable to bearer, which she had to cash.

Dhen the police, after demanding entrance in the name of the law and receiving no answer, broke in the door, they found the old lady dying—alive, but feeble. The room was indescribably dirty. Everywhere were piles of tins, still redolent of their contents—sardines, herrings and so on. On the carpet were the dead bodies of two cats, which lay as they had fallen several years before. Feebly protesting against the outrage, Mlle. Lerat was taken to the hospital, bathed and put to bed. Inquiries are being made for relatives of the old maid, who is reputed to possess considerable wealth, including a fine property at Chesnay.

ITALY TO BUILD GREAT AIR FLEET.

EVERY CITY IN KINGDOM IS RAISING FUNDS.

Under Secretary of War Says It Is Ultimate Ambition of Kingdom to Control Aerial Navigation, and Strong Corps of Experienced Aviators Is Being Organized.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

ROME, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Italy's plans for the creation of a huge aerial fleet were announced in the chamber Tuesday by Signor Mirabelli in the presence of a crowded assemblage of deputies. "Our ambition," said the under Secretary for War, "is ultimate control of the air. Whether this is to be realized depends upon the Italian people themselves."

A very satisfactory report was presented as to the construction of new planes and dirigibles and the increase of qualified airmen. The aerial corps is to be divided into three classes:

1. Army aeronauts actively engaged at each division headquarters.

2. A reserve of graduated army air men ready for service with the colors when called upon, and,

3. A volunteer force to be composed of young men taught by military instructors and giving one month in each year to war exercises.

Signor Mirabelli stated that the War Department is now engaged on a bill which is shortly to be offered in the chamber and which will completely reorganize the volunteer system. The volunteer section of the Royal Aerial Corps will be properly provided for in this measure.

In almost every city in the kingdom generous subscriptions have been made to increase the fund for the building and manning of a great national aerial fleet.

BAR OFFENSIVE SONGS.

Germans Have Two Effective Organizations Cultivating Taste of People for Clean and Fine Ideals.

BERLIN, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Two effective organizations for coping with offensive songs in Germany are the "Wandervoegal" and the "Association for the Prevention of Obscenity." The former is an organization of young people, who take long walks and camping trips and sing together, not only keeping alive the German love for singing, but also instilling in the future citizens a taste for clean songs.

The Association for the Prevention of Obscenity works with the police and through its large membership is able to detect the first appearance of objectionable songs, pictures and literature. It started the movement for children's reading-rooms, since adopted by the Berlin city administration and it has also placed automatic machines selling good literature at the railroad stations. Pastor Bohn, secretary and treasurer of the association, says the great problem is not suppression, but the changing of the public taste.

"Germany," he said, "has been visited in the last ten years by a scourge of immoral books, pictures and songs, which, through the efforts of the association, have practically disappeared. But victory is far slower in the matter of changing the deep-seated desire of the public for questionable things. We believe that greatly improved moving picture shows, strictly censored cabarets and numerous clean burlesques, coupled with greater facilities for coming in touch with the finer things of life, will finally win the fight."

KAISER VERSUS CARNEGIE.

Berlin Papers Compare German Ruler With Steel King and Make Peace Talk Prophecies.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

BERLIN, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] Reports that Carnegie will talk peace plans with the Kaiser are accepted with reserve by the press, although there is a possibility that this may be the case.

It is known that the Emperor contemplated delivering a peace sermon at the wedding feast, and many think that he only deferred this to the coming feasting in the belief that it would be more appropriate if uttered during the days set apart for felicitations in his own honor.

Several newspapers devote columns to comparisons of Carnegie's and the Kaiser's wealth and personal character.

An Exposition of Midsummer Millinery

—A truly remarkable showing of white Milans, satins, lace hats and that adorably fetching and altogether "different" novelty, the gingham hat. A galaxy of styles.

—The white Milans are in many smart, new shapes trimmed with breasts, wings, paradise, clever effects in white gros grain ribbon. Facings of white crepe or maline give a soft and becoming finish. The hats of satin, plain or figured are delightfully new and destined to a wonderful vogue. They are in sailor, poke, bonnet and mushroom shapes and trimmed with a fancy feather, a spray of paradise or a single American Beauty rose.

—One chic satin model is a shepherdess shape with soft crown and a narrow brim with one spray of paradise poised on its edge. Enchantingly dainty and particularly well adapted to afternoon and evening wear are the lace pokes, trimmed, perhaps, with a ribbon bow in the back and one tiny French rose on the edge of front brim. A gingham hat that attracts more than passing interest is in Delft blue-and-white checked pattern, small mushroom shape trimmed with white embroidery and one rose. Worn with dainty summer frocks the effect is irresistibly captivating! Prices $7.45 to $17.50.

Trimmed Hats at $15.00

—Chic small and semi-large street and dress hats and the picturesque larger styles softly veiled in silk chiffons, crepes, malines and laces and charmingly adorned with fashion-favored flowers, wings, fancy feathers, plumes and paradise. The quality of materials, the styles and the savings will win your hearty approval! There's just the right style for every facial type.

Trimmed Hats at $7.45

—Milans, hemps, azures and Neapolitans in all the wanted shapes and expressing the season's newest, cleverest ideas in their trimmings. All the popular shades are included and the much liked black-and-white combinations. One striking model is a white azure poke faced on the upper brim with black satin. Trimmed with a white satin cord and two small side poised wings.

BISHOP WHACKS KING AND LORD

Declares Royalty Out of Joint With the Times.

Insists That Republic is Only Logical Government.

Lloyd George Places Nest Eggs in Alien Baskets.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal [Wireless] Line Overland to The Times.]

LONDON, June 1.—[Special Dispatch.] Bishop Welldon, Dean of Manchester, has practically informed the King and the Lords of Parliament that they are dead, out of joint with the times, that there is no true government in Europe outside of France and Switzerland. He did not include Portugal, but he did say, beating the pulpit desk with his active hands, that a Democratic government is the only possible form of government at the present day. The only one that is in keeping with the will of Almighty God. "I believe," said the bishop, "from the heart out in the equality of all men. The church is too smug, and too self-indulgent to have time for even a tear for the poor man's misery. Oh! for another Paul or Peter, the hermit, to preach crusade among the so-called Christians."

CALLS OFF WEDDING.

It has been definitely decided by the immediate relatives of Princess Indira, daughter of the Gaekwar of Baroda, that her marriage to Prince Jitendra, brother of the Maharajah of Kuch Behar, shall not take place. The marriage was twice postponed. The last time from May 5 and there were numerous explanations and denials, but at last the truth has come out. It was not a question of caste. It was a matter of morals. The Princess's relatives are unwilling to go into detail, but they make no bones about the statement that the marriage is definitely off.

The Maharajah (Gaekwar) of Baroda, is a well-known Indian ruling chief, and is one of the only three persons among Indians of rank entitled to a salute of twenty-one guns. He succeeded to his title in 1875, and is ruler over an area of 8099 square miles, and a population of well over two million souls. His name will be familiar to most people in connection with an incident at the Delhi Durbar, when it was alleged that a slight was offered to King George whilst a number of Indian chiefs were rendering homage. The Maharajah of Kuch Behar, the brother of the intended bridegroom, holds a position entitling him to a salute of thirteen guns. He succeeded to his title in 1911. He is at the head of a district comprising 1307 square miles, and governs about 592,952 people. Both Princess Indira and Prince Jitendra are well known in this country, the former having stayed here on many occasions with her parents. Prince Jitendra, who was then residing in Rochester gate, had a receiving order in bankruptcy made against him in 1911, but the debts which were only small, were paid in full, and the order was rescinded. One of the Prince's sisters, Princess Pretiva, married a year or two ago Lionel Henry Mander, a nephew of Sir Charles Mander.

KING PREPARES FOR RACES.

The King's famous cutter, Britannia, which has been undergoing repairs and alterations, is to be fitted out at once for the racing season. The Britannia is to be ready by June 10, and will be used for cruising. She will also compete in a number of handicap races during the forthcoming season. When in commission again the Britannia will be in thorough trim, and but for the raised bulwarks and new deckhouse will look very similar to the Britannia of old, which so often carried the late King Edward's flag to victory. In addition to a complete new suit of sails and boom, the Britannia is to have a new topmast, bow-sprit, and spinnaker boom. She is commanded by Capt. J. R. Carter of Cowes, son of Capt. John Carter, who was her skipper in her racing days. The Britannia was built at Glasgow in 1893, her designer being the late G. L. Watson, a celebrated builder of boats.

HAS NEST EGG ABROAD.

Most of Chancellor Lloyd George's little nest-eggs are said to be in alien baskets; while King Alfonso's savings (estimated at twenty millions) are in British funds, "in case things should go wrong in Spain." It is hard to think of two more illuminative instances of the paramount importance of "investing abroad."

EXTRAORDINARY LAWSUIT.

What the judge who tried the case described as the most extraordinary suit ever heard in an Indian court of law has just been concluded in the Madras High Court. The claimant was a lady, who says she is the widow of a rich Turkish merchant, who died in Madras about seven years ago, by name of Haji Mahdi Baghdadi. Mahdi left a will bestowing the whole of his great fortune in charity, and the estate was taken over by the Turkish Consul, with the intention of carrying out the wishes of the deceased. Before the prolonged legal proceedings necessary for doing so could be completed, however, the Consul's possession was disturbed by the arrival of a man from Bagdad who claimed to be the brother of the heir of Mahdi, and in order to avoid further litigation the Consul made a compromise by which the newcomer received two-thirds of the estate, the rest to go in charity as directed in the will.

All that took place three years ago. Now, however, there comes on the scene this mysterious lady. Her story in court was that she had left her husband in order to go on a pilgrimage to Mecca, and incidently to see her sick mother at Jedda. She and her mother left Jedda together to go to Mecca, but when they had gone only ten miles the mother died and the plaintiff herself fell ill. Giving up the idea of going to Mecca, she returned to Bombay, where she lived for two years with her brother, without hearing from her husband at all. Then, hearing of her husband's death, she came to Madras and filed the present suit.

In accordance with Mohammedian custom the lady was borne into court in a closed palanquin. The defendant urged that she was a mere imposter, that Mahdi never had a wife, and that the whole story was a concoction from beginning to end. Moreover, counsel for the defense averred that he knew who was in the palanquin, and could produce witnesses to prove who she was. Accordingly two women residing in the town looked into the palanquin as it stood in the courtroom and at once recognized the occupant as a woman well known in the town.

The marriage certificate put in by the plaintiff was closely examined by Judge Wallis and declared to be a forgery, and the suit was dismissed with the remark quoted above.

Found at Last.

QUIVERA CITY SITE LOCATED.

REMAINS HAVE BEEN FOUND ON LOUP RIVER, NEBRASKA.

Ruins Extend for Several Miles and Indicate a Once Enormous Population, With Gold So Plentiful as to Have No Comparative Value.

[New York Sun:] Western archaeologists, headed by Dr. Robert F. Gilder of Omaha, have at last succeeded in locating the exact site of the ancient city of Quivera, for which Coronado and the old Spanish conquerors searched so diligently and fought so valiantly, and during the coming summer a party of archaeologists and scientists will make excavations and explorations, which are expected to throw considerable light on the people of the kingdom whose location has been in doubt for 400 years and more.

The ruins of the ancient city skirt the Loup River in Nebraska for several miles, and according to those who have visited them the population at one time must have been enormous. While it has been known for a number of years that Quivera was located somewhere in Nebraska the exact spot had not been definitely settled. That doubt is now removed, however, and the coming summer will see a corps of archaeologists and trained scientists at work on the remains left behind by the natives of the city, whose former existence has ever been denied by many historians.

Nebraska is generally looked upon as a country comparatively new to white men. Nevertheless eighty years before the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock the fauna and flora of Nebraska had been written about by a white scientist; eighty-seven years before Hendrik Hudson sailed up the Hudson River a party of white men floated down the Platte; sixty-six years before the English located in Jamestown and Capt. John Smith found undying fame with Pocahontas, white men and Indians were on the best terms on the Nebraska prairies.

These early white men came to Nebraska seeking the city of Quivera, where gold was supposed to be so plentiful that it had no value. They found yellow corn instead of the yellow gold and they went back home in disgust. But they left their footprints behind them and these have been traced back to the very city to conquer which white men marched more than 1000 miles, enduring all manner of hardships, and then marched back again.

Twenty-five years or so ago, near Riverton, Neb., a farmer dug up an ancient saddle stirrup. It was so strange to him that he sent it to the State Museum. There it was recognized as being the exact counterpart, both in shape and material, of those used for centuries by Moorish horsemen and Spanish knights errant. It had been made on a blacksmith's anvil, of iron or steel, and the blows of the hammer were yet visible. Constant use had worn a small hole through the center. It is eleven inches long, four inches wide, and weighs one and three-quarter pounds.

The finding of the ancient Spanish stirrup revived the old story of the early Spanish expeditions to Nebraska and so stirred the souls of Nebraska archaeologists that James W. Savage made a personal trip to Madrid for the purpose of delving into the records in the Spanish court archives concerning the expeditions of Coronado, Castenada, Penalosa and others to the kingdom of Quivera. As a result of years of research Mr. Savage gave the following summary of his reasons for locating Quivera just north of the Platte River, in Nebraska:

"Quivera was situated northeasterly from Santa Fe. It was distant from the latter city 800 or 900 miles. It was north of the fortieth parallel, the southern boundary of Nebraska. It lay north of a wide but fordable stream."

All these conditions and others as well are fulfilled of the Platte. And now the archaeologists have discovered along this very stream the remains of a city of immense size. The scientific expedition which is now outfitting will delve into the ruins of this great city, which was discovered and described by the historian with the old Penalosa Spanish expedition in 1662.

In tracing the line of march of Penalosa it was found that a second old Spanish stirrup, a perfect match for the one discovered in Nebraska, had been found near Junction City, Kan. This was sent to the Nebraska State Historical Society.

In Mr. Morris's collection, said to be the best and most complete in the world, there are two pieces of a suit of armor which was found in the southwestern part of Texas some years ago. In the armor was the skeleton of a white man. Archaeologists have claimed that the finding of the two stirrups and the suit of mail all bear out the words of the historian of the Spanish expedition who went with Penalosa from Santa Fe in 1662.

In describing the city of Quivera the Spaniard wrote: "This was one of the cities of Quivera. It contained thousands of houses, mostly circular in shape, some two, three and even four stories in height, framed of a hard wood believed to be black walnut and skilfully thatched. It extended along the river for more than two leagues, at which distance a third stream flowed into the second. Beyond this the city again stretched out for many leagues."

The "seven cities of Cibola" and the "Kingdom of Quivera" have long been thought to be myths and inventions of the minds of the early Spaniards themselves. But so far as Quivera is concerned recent years have shown the ancient story to be correct. The city itself could not be located, although it was believed to be in Central Nebraska, somewhere along the Platte River. Recent discoveries, however, now place the site north of the Platte River along the banks of the Loup.

From the ruins of old Quivera Mr. Gilder and his associates hope to secure such evidence of the customs, habits and home life of the inhabitants that much light will be thrown upon the earliest people known to have lived in the country between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains.

LINK TARIFF WITH PANAMA.

French Protest Against the Underwood Tariff Act.

Assert Most Favored Clause in Treaty is Violated.

Object to Showing Books to American Officials.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

PARIS, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] In the opinion of John Barton Payne of Chicago their may be grounds for a serious international controversy in the clause of the Underwood tariff bill, according a 5 per cent. reduction of duty on all goods imported under the American flag.

"The French assert that this violates the most favored nation clause of our commercial treaty," said Mr. Payne today. "I would have to study the matter carefully before expressing an opinion on this point. The whole question of such discussion in favor of American shipping links naturally with the Panama Canal tolls controversy and should be settled on similar lines."

Mr. Payne's attention was called to the protest which the French Ambassador will file in Washington against this caluse and also against the new reductions requiring French exporters to show their books to the American customs officials. The Chicago lawyer also was shown the following paragraph in Le Journal:

"The consequence of such procedure is easy to guess. It means delivering our trade secrets into the hands of our competitors and would simply kill commerce. An equitable solution must be sought in the interest of both countries, but time presses. The tariff bill has been voted upon by the House of Representatives and is now before the Senate where the protectionist element is strong and where respect for international agreements is not always manifested."

"The regulations complained of," said Mr. Payne, "have arisen only because of the frauds of the foreign merchants. I myself have bought many articles in Paris. It is common for a dealer to say, for instance, 'The price is 500 francs ($100,) but I will gladly make the bill out for 300 francs ($60) so as to reduce the duty.'

"Personally, I cannot see that the regulation requires the disclosure of trade secrets. It is simply an effort to ascertain the actual price paid. Undoubtedly, it would be hard to insist that the French merchants show their books if they were not inclined to do so, but they would find that their customers themselves requested it and then they would comply gladly.

"For example, you import goods billed at $800 and the customs experts value them at $1000. You protest that you actually paid only $800. If the merchant of whom you purchased the goods will show his books to the United States Treasury agent in Paris, well and good; otherwise, you will be obliged to accept the estimate of the customs experts.

"Hence, when you buy, you will stipulate with the merchant that he must show his books on demand. The whole affair is not nearly so intricate as it appears and the difficulties cited by the French are largely imaginary."

JAPANESE HEALTH RULES.

Formulated by the Government and Distributed Among the People in Pamphlet Form.

[Boston Medical and Surgical Journal:] The Japanese government has issued a pamphlet containing rules for health for free distribution among the people. The Post-Graduate quotes some of them:

"First—Spend as much time out of doors as possible. Bask much in the sun and take plenty of exercise. Take care that your respiration is always deep and regular.

"Second—As regards meals, eat meat only once a day, and let the diet be eggs, cereals, vegetables, fruits and fresh cows' milk. Take the last named as much as possible. Masticate your food carefully.

"Third—Take a hot bath every day and a steam bath once or twice a week if the heart is strong enough to bear it.

"Fourth—Put on roughly-woven underwear (cotton fabrics are preferable) and clothes, a comfortable collar, light hat of any material and well-fitting boots.

"Fifth—Early to bed and early to rise.

"Sixth—Sleep in a very dark and very quiet room, with windows open. Let the minimum of sleeping hours be six or six and one-half hours, and the maximum seven and one-half hours. In case of a woman a rest of eight and one-half hours is advisable.

"Seventh—Take one day of absolute rest per week, on which you must refrain from even reading or writing.

"Eighth—Try to avoid any outburst of passions and strong mental stimulations. Do not overtax your brain at the occurrence of inevitable incidents or of coming events. Do not say unpleasant things, nor listen, if possible, to disagreeable things.

"Ninth—Be married! Widows and widowers should be married with the least possible delay.

"Tenth—Be moderate in the consumption of even tea and coffee, not to say tobacco and alcoholic beverages.

"Eleventh—Avoid places that are too warm, especially steam-heated and badly-ventilated rooms."

Interesting Foreign Bits.

[Chicago Daily News:] A peculiar and barbaric marriage custom of the Kabyle women of Africa consists in the martyrdom of the bride, who, clad in her wedding finery, stands through an entire morning against a pillar in the village square. Her eyes are closed, her arms pressed to her sides and she has only the narrow base of the column for a foot! Meanwhile a ring of villagers criticize and comment on her appearance.

Chinese have obtained water through the means of artesian wells for over 1000 years. One of the most famous wells in existence is that of Grenelle in the outskirts of Paris, where the water is brought from a depth of 1798 feet. It yields 516½ gallons of water a minute. A well in China was sunk to the depth of [illegible] feet in the 70's.

In America is used the thermometer of Fahrenheit, a German; in Russia, that of Leslie, an Englishman; in France, that of Celsius, a Swede, and in Germany they use that of Reaumur, a Frenchman.

New Era.

RESTORE TRANQUILLITY TO PEARL OF ANTILLES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAVANA, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The inauguration of Gen. Mario G. Menocal as President of Cuba has allayed the strong political feuds of the Pearl of the Antilles, for the time being, at least. For the first time in years, no insurrection or sanguinary fray is reported from one end of the island to the other. Mrs. Menocal is equally popular as her husband and her social reign is already a brilliane one.

G. Menocal was born in 1866, in Matanzas province. At an early age his parents moved to the United States, where he was educated. He attended the military college of Washington, where he obtained the rank of captain. From there he went to Cornell University, where he graduated as a civil engineer.

Upon leaving Cornell, he went with his uncle, Aniceto G. Menocal, chief of the engineering staff which made the survey of the Nicaragua Canal, and worked with him. He returned to Cuba as an engineer for a French company, which projected the construction of a railroad from Santa Cruz del Sur, to Camaguey. While making the preliminary studies at Santa Cruz, he joined the revolutionary forces as a private and by merit rose rapidly until he became general of division. His military record was brilliant.

In 1899 he married Miss Mariana Seva, an accomplished musician and brilliant social leader. In 1903 he was appointed by President Palma a member of the commission which successfully negotiated the loan of $35,000,000, the proceeds of which were used to pay soldiers of the army of liberation.

In 1906, he took an active part in the deliberations of the veterans to restore peace without the necessity of a second American intervention. In 1908, he was a candidate for the Presidency, but was defeated. He was elected on November 1, 1912.

Famous Women.

family is an ancient one, but she is a leader of the suffrage movement and devotes herself exclusively to the work of gaining economic and political equality for women. Still a third vice-president of the Executive Committee is Rosika Schwimmer, the acting vice-president, author, and journalist, one of the first in the Hungarian women's movement, and really the leader of its political side. As a lecturer, she has carried the feminist message all over Europe.

Mrs. Victor Molnar de Kaposis, a woman who, as the head of a great business, plays a part in the commercial life of the Hungarian city. She was the first woman candidate for election to the Chamber of Commerce, and missed election by only a few votes.

ON INTERPRETERS' COMMITTEE.

Hilda Behr is secretary of the Committee of Interpreters, and Aranka Balint, teacher at the High School of Commerce for Girls, gives her services as president of the Committee on Excursions. She is one of the leaders in the women-teachers' movement, which obtained women's representation on the school board of Budapest.

Mrs. Berta Engel, president of the local group of the North Hungarian branch of the National Suffrage Association, is another business woman who is a devoted worker for the suffrage cause, and serves the Executive Committee. She is the manager of her own factory, and her business transactions are conducted on a large scale. Crossing back into the ranks of the women of leisure, the suffragists chose Mrs. Jane de Lanczy as president of the Committee of Festivities.

Art does not go unrepresented on the committee. Comtesse Katinka Pejacsevich, who from the beginning has been an enthusiastic partisan of the woman suffrage question, is at the head of the Artists' Committee, and has engaged for it the interest of her own large circle of friends and followers.

The medical profession has a representative on the committee in Dr. Charlotte Steinberger, first woman physician in Hungary, and first woman specialist employed at the Royal Hungarian Workmen's Institution.

These are simply types of the women of Hungary who will greet the women of the world.

GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE.

Wife Charges That Husband Was too Mean to Keep Light Burning When He Kissed Her.

[New York Tribune:] A novel way for a married man to solve the high cost of living problem is to avoid maintaining a home, leaving his wife to live with her folks and he remaining with his people. That is what Edward Miles of Jersey City did, his wife, Elizabeth, of Bayonne, alleges in her proceedings for divorce.

They were married in 1898 and parted two years later. She declared he never supported her, only kissed her in the dark, and his idea of having a good time with her was when he called Sunday evenings and took her out for a walk.

She even charges that when he invited her to have an ice cream soda he always first got the nickel from her. His meanness, she averred, was shown only to her in that he stayed out at nights and that his bank account, started in 1898, had reached only $349.54, including interest, twelve years later.

The husband insisted that he had supported her and that he had paid her doctor's bill. She admitted he had paid the physician, but insisted the reason she required the services of the medical man was that she had not had enough to eat. The case is before Judge McDermott of Jersey City, who has directed the lawyers to file briefs.

WHY IS THE NIGHT DARK.

Dr. Frank W. Vrey Discusses the Question and Apparently Believes It Is a Change of the Ether.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] It never is absolutely dark, of course, but on a moonless night, the star shine is so faint that one is not far astray in saying that it is comparatively dark. But why? Why is not the sky at night a blaze of light? What has happened to the light of these millions of stars that so little reaches us? The problem of the reason why it is dark at night is one of great difficulty.

Reducing the question to its simplest terms it must be stated that photographs have shown that there are galaxies of stars and myriads of huge nebulae. It is true that a point-source of light diminishes in brightness as the square of its distance increases, but, as Dr. Frank W. Vrey points out in a recent analysis of modern astronomy, in the case of nebulae, which cover an apparently large surface, the angular area diminishes in the same proportion, so that this faintness is equalized. The distance of the stars is not enough to account for the faintness of their light.

If distance is insufficient, it is clear that the ether must in some way stop the light. If it does so, the very fact of stopping uses the energy of the light and converts it into something else and makes the ether hold in suspension these particles. Dr. Vrey suggests, and with a closely reasoned argument and wide mathematical generalizations, that here is the birth of matter. "Creation," he says, and one cannot forbear to quote him, "is not the bringing forth of an infinite number of dead structureless particles, sent out as a set of miserable waifs at some indefinitely remote epoch and left to clash without guidance, without purpose. Creation is perpetual." The origin of life is not discussed in this connection, but if the true origin of matter can be put in as sample a fashion as this, it is not such a far step to the discovery of the relation of the forces that move the world of living things, in that strange billion miled region of space filled with that strange substance, ether, of the presence of which we are unaware save that it filters only a little of the starlight through and gives the dark for sleeping.

[Portland Oregonian:] The latest of the numerous attempts to construct water boots for walking on the water is credited to a German cabinet-maker. He has experimented on Lake Ammer, in Bavaria, and has walked across the lake—about two miles—in two hours. The propelling device is a series of three paddles, mounted on hinges on the side of each boot. A sliding mechanism causes these paddles to give a forward motion, like that of skating, as the foot is moved, an upright stick on each shoe steadying the walker.

STRAUSS VISITED BY "CLEOPATRA."

Gets New Music Theme from Mysterious Woman.

Trick Shown on Film Fails in Vienna Restaurant.

Bulgaria - Roumania Treaty Public in Bucharest.

BY EMIL ANDRASSY.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Overland to The Times.]

VIENNA, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] While the composer, Strauss was sitting in his music-room a few days ago playing over some fugitive scores which he has contemplated including in his next opera, a young, dark, gypsy-looking woman burst in upon his reverie exclaiming:

"I am your heroine. Yes, yes, I am Cleopatra. The asp did not kill me at all. He simply sent me into a deep, long sleep and the noise of the guns near the Nile awakened me. I heard someone playing your Salome in the garden at the hotel and it overjoyed me. I made up my mind I would give you preference over all other composers. See me! Am I not beautiful? I am Egypt herself."

At first Strauss was too amazed to form any opinion of his visitor. When he recovered his wits he was divided between the opinion that the young woman had been drinking something stronger than water or that she was an escaped lunatic.

"And then," he says, telling the story, "she sang Saint Lucy. What a voice. It was delicious, ravishing, wonderful! What was it she sang? I could not give a name to it. This was how I took it." The great composer sat at his piano and played an air more beautiful than his gorgeous "Blue Danube" or the waltz in "Elektra." "That is her Romanza," he said. "And the girl," I asked. "I have had her put in a sanatarium," said Strauss. "Her mind has evidently become weakened by long meditation over Egyptian stories and her great love for music. One day she will be a great star."

Inspired by a film showing how an artisan family got a free meal by taking a sardine, the only food in the house, and inserting it in a sweet omelette at the end of a restaurant dinner for which they had no means of paying, thus persuading the restauranteur to avoid scandal by not asking for payment, a young Viennese made a bet with some friends that he would win $250 in one evening by a similar trick.

He went to a restaurant, ordered hash, and "discovered" a rag in it. He demanded compensation, otherwise he would create a scandal. Instead, however, of getting money he was arrested, his friends having won the bet by telephoning to the restaurant information of the intended trick.

The Vienna police have suspended the film which suggested the trick on the ground that it is an incitement to dishonesty.

The text of the agreement between Bulgaria and Roumania, who demanded territorial "compensation" for leaving Bulgaria free to deal with Turkey alone in the war, is published in a telegram from Bucharest.

Roumania obtains the Bulgarian frontier town of Silistria and all its fortifications, together with all the land within nearly two miles of the forts. In addition, Roumania receives a considerable strip of territory from Pofina on the River Danube, to the Black Sea at Cape Sabla. Thus, in the general redistribution of territory in the Balkans, Roumania secures valuable increases without the loss of a single life.

BERLIN, May 31.—The Executive Committee of the German Iron and Steel Manufacturers' Society has voted against representation at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. The reason given for this action was that the committee considered there had been toomany expositions recently, and saw no advantage in exhibiting in the United States.

FRIEND OF LABOR RESIGNS.

Lord Justice Farwell, Whose Taffvale Decision Enjoined Strike Pickets, Leaves the Bench.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, May 31.—The Rt. Hon. Sir George Farwell, Lord Justice since 1906, has resigned. Justice Farwell, as justice of the high court, was author of the famous Taffvale decision in 1900.

The dtcision in question enjoined the general secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants and the organizing secretary from watching the Great Western Railroad stations with the view of inducing non-unionists to refrain from taking the places of the Taffvale strikers. This judgment was extended against picketing during strikes, an injunction being placed on the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants on the ground that trades union societies were responsible for the acts of their servants.

ART AND ARTISTS.

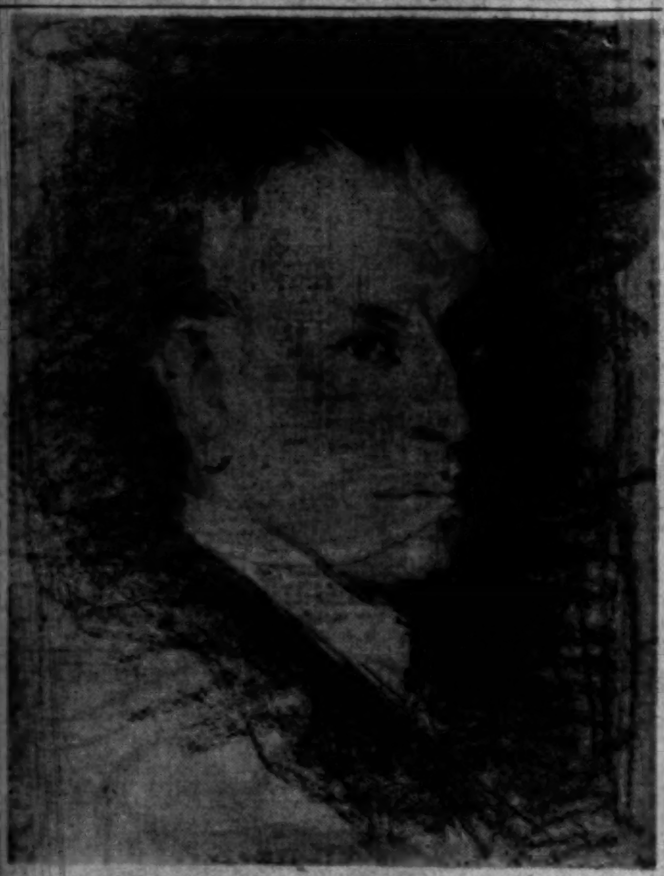
BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

[illegible]

The crimson light of sunset falls
Through the gray glamour of the murmuring rain,
And creeping o'er the housetops crawls
Through the black smoke upon the broken pane,
Steals to the straw on which she lies,
And tints her thin, black hair and hollow cheeks,
Her sun-tanned neck, her glistening eyes—
While faintly, sadly, fitfully she speaks.
But when it is no longer light,
The pale girl smiles, with only one to mark,
And dies upon the breast of Night,
Like trodden snowdrift melting in the dark.
—[Thomas Buchanan.

Western Landscapes.

Some notice was given last week of the "continuous" exhibition of pictures recently opened in the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street. These canvases are all from the brushes of Los Angeles painters, and almost all are new. The idea is to show recent characteristic work by our home artists.



Pastel portrait.
By Achille Hamilton Wolfe.

A number of new pictures have been added since the first brief account of the exhibition was published in this column. Benjamin Chambers Brown has sent in three or four, Charles Percy Austin two, Esther M. Crawford two, Frederick Roland Miner two, and a delicate landscape from the brush of the late Henry Koch is also shown.

Koch was one of the best known painters of Southern California. He had a fine and exquisite talent, a poetic interpretation of nature's dreamiest moods, and though his technique now seems a trifle old-fashioned, the few examples of his work on the market are eagerly sought for by those who appreciate his rare and individual talent. Though the present example bears the long title, "View from Alhambra Looking Toward San Gabriel," it is a small canvas, but an eminently characteristic one. It was painted from the artist's studio in one of the most beautiful spots in Alhambra.

The largest of Brown's pictures is "The Pool Among the Willows," whose charming spring-like quality has been caught and rendered in a somewhat careless and casual way. However, it must be admitted that if the artist was playing at painting he played to good purpose. More decisive is "Lupins Under the Pines, Lake Tahoe." The deep blue and green of the water appears through the light-brown of rough tree trunks. The lupins, rising out of light-green grass in sunlight spotted with purple little shadows, are bright and gay in the breezy air. A smaller landscape, "Winter Poppies," shows the dark gold pouring over fresh green fields, while far off are snow-covered mountain peaks—a delightful epitome of California's sunny winter.

California is also found in Esther M. Crawford's vigorous canvases, but these are transcripts of autumn's rich sunset splendors. Both pictures were painted in the Arroyo Seco—one, indeed, bears the title "Arroyo Seco." The handling is as simple and direct as the laying of a mosaic, a method that makes for breadth and vitality. In color the picture I have just named is especially toothsome.

Charles Percy Austin also has somewhat of the mosaic touch, a sincere and painter-like way of expressing himself. "Near Puebla, Mexico," is a study of an old church and the high gray walls in front of it, all painted in dull tones of light-browns and grays, dark reds and greens, against a background of deep-blue sky. Another interesting picture is "Summer Morning Surf," evidently from Laguna or Balboa, the breaking waves full of motion. The mosaic brush-stroke has its disadvantages—like every other—and one of the most patent is a certain heaviness, a "too, too solid" effect.

Frederick Roland Miner shows two small studies of sea and shore, both with charming skies. A more ambitious canvas is "Where All the Prospect Pleases," a study of a canyon road leading on and on toward vistas of pale blue mountains.

Art in the University.

Under the guidance of Miss Arley Tottenham, who has been teaching art in the University of Southern California, and who recently won the degree of bachelor of arts at that institution of learning, the art class of twenty-five members has been making great progress. I visited its exhibition a year ago and again last Wednesday, spending, on each occasion, a pleasant hour in the well-lighted exhibition-room in East Hall. Besides mechanical drawing, Miss Tottenham and her assistant, who is also her pupil, teach design in theory and practice, drawing and painting from life, still life, the cast, modeling in clay and outdoor sketching.

It has been Miss Tottenham's aim from the very first, to lay the foundations of thorough art training exactly as a school devoted exclusively to art does this important work, to train the young men and women under her charge into correct ways of seeing and of self-expression, and to instill a feeling for ideal beauty. Thus initiated, they can pursue their studies further and become professional artists if they so choose, and in any event their art education will be of immense practical benefit, making them more efficient in anything they may undertake.

Almost one entire wall of the exhibition just closed was confined to posters, showing that the practical side of art is always kept in sight. E. F. Dexter had three posters for "Twelfth Night," the Shakespearean play recently produced at the Gamut Club by amateurs. While his designs were scattered in effect, they had a feeling of vitality, of actuality. This young artist also exhibited excellent cartoons in pen and ink for the junior year book, "El Rodeo." Ruth Heil's posters had simplicity of effect and were admirable in their color schemes. Queen Masters showed an interesting poster for the May festival recently held at the university—a girl in white posed before a spray of pink blossoms. Another poster by her was made for the art exhibition, a delightful portrait of a girl with red hair and a black picture hat, the flesh tones, done in pastel, being true and agreeable. The Easter poster by Renel Cooper was also noteworthy. Against a yellow disk, representing the rising sun, three sprays of white lilies were arranged with geometrical precision. Behind these was a bar of purple-gray. In both design and color this poster was charming.

Arthur Weatherhead had some good pencil drawings, one showing a cottage with trees and a hayrick; another, the smoky roofs of an industrial town; the third, entrance to the College of Liberal Arts. Lolla White showed some still-life studies in black and white; Charles Joyce, an Indian in firelight making a basket, also a very strong study of an Indian's head in charcoal touched up with color; Anna Kettler, pastel heads and landscapes, especially good being a view of the tops of green trees against a gray sky. Miss Kettler has the painter's instinct, and, as a student, should use oil instead of pastel. Oil is the best medium of study for a painter that has so far been discovered, as he can pull it, twist it, turn it—in short, do what he likes with it, as a child plays with mud pies. Pastel is too fragile for a beginner, water color too uncertain. Moreover, the student's aim is never a picture, always knowledge.

Some Mezzotints.

Mezzotint is a style of engraving on copper or steel differing entirely from any other. The surface of the plate is first indented all over by the action of an instrument, like a chisel, with a serrated edge, called a mezzotint grounder. This tool being rocked to and fro in many directions (technically called "ways,") produces a "nap" or "burr," called the mezzotint ground, and this ground, if an impression were taken, would be uniformly black.

A mezzotint engraver's tools are few—a scraper and a burnisher. The design is drawn upon this ground by scraping away the "burr," scraping more and more of the ground in proportion to the shades, using a burnisher for the highest lights. The mezzotinter's work has a breadth of effect, a depth and brilliancy of tone to be attained by no other style of engraving. But the freedom of handling which this method allows, makes a keen knowledge of drawing and the values of black and white indispensable.

An exquisite artist in mezzotint is S. Arlent-Edwards, an Englishman who has been living and working at Bruges for the past few years. About twenty-five examples of his work are now being exhibited in the Merick Reynolds gallery, No. 841 South Broadway. These mezzotints were engraved and printed in color by Arlent-Edwards at one printing without retouching.

Among the portraits shown are copies of Da Vinci's Beatrice d'Este and also his Mona Lisa; Nattier's Marie Louise, Gainsborough's Blue Boy, Van Dyke's William of Orange, Netscher's Young Princess.

A notable exhibition and one which should not be missed. It will remain open to June 15.

ART NOTES.

The Board of Control of Arizona at Phoenix, has entered into an agreement with William Besser to paint the portraits of the sixteen Territorial Governors of Arizona, the two Speakers of the House of Representatives and the president of the Senate of the first State Legislature. In connection with Lon Megargee, Besser will produce fifteen paintings of subjects connected with Arizona.

Lova Jones and Helena Dunlap have been away on a sketching trip of two months, working among the San Diego mountains and at Laguna Beach. Miss Jones intends to hold an exhibition of her work next fall. She has just started a summer school of out-of-door painting at Long Beach.

Oscar R. Coast, the New York landscape painter, has been wintering in Santa Barbara. He is now in Pasadena at the Casa Grande, but will start tomorrow for New York.

Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel spent a month in Yosemite Valley, but only on pleasure bent—they did not sketch. They returned to Los Angeles a few days ago.

The fifth annual exhibition of thumb box sketches will be held in the Merick Reynolds gallery about the middle of this month. Many well-known American painters will be represented.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Marie Van Vorst, the American authoress who lives in Europe and writes delightful romances, in a recent interview said that American men do not know how to make love. Miss Van Vorst is soon to have another novel on the market in which a young Frenchman and an American heiress are the leading figures.

Miss Lillian Whiting has returned from a prolonged visit to Greece, where she went to obtain material for her autumn book of travel and description to be called "Athens, the Violet-Crowned."

In Montrose, Colo., Mrs. Mary E. Sawyer was so popular that she had no opponent for the office of City Treasurer.

Katherine Ward, whose name often appears in newspapers and magazines, is Mrs. D. Francis Murphy, whose husband is a textile manufacturer of Philadelphia. Mrs. Murphy is a niece of Cardinal Farley. Although she has no children, she is deeply interested in the little ones, and many of her poems are about them.

Natalie Sumner Lincoln, whose "Trevor Case" was one of the most successful detective stories of the past few years, is a newspaper woman, and for the greater part of the day is busy at her desk in the office of a Washington paper. Her new mystery story, "The Lost Dispatch," has just been issued.

Women's Clubs.

her mind which to choose among so many of merit.

Mrs. Turk is an active worker in the women's societies of the First Congregational Church, and last Thursday afternoon addressed a large company representing the women's work society of that church at the home of Mrs. W. H. Olmsted, No. 341 Mariposa avenue.

Mrs. Turk has traveled extensively in company with Dr. Turk, and her talk on Thursday concerned a most interesting trip through Albania. She is a fine speaker, with animated face and delightful personality, and her descriptions of the life and customs of the Albanians was exceedingly interesting, spiced with entertaining stories of the natives with whom they came in contact, and incidents of novel experiences, among them the witnessing of an Albanian wedding ceremony.

Mrs. Turk is sure to receive a warm welcome, not only in church circles, but in the club and social life of the city.

Highland Park Ebell Closes.

At the closing meeting of the Highland Park Ebell last week some vital suggestions from the Fresno State Federation were given by Mrs. C. M. Gordon, and a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Emma Greenleaf for the reading desk, platform chair and table that were the results of the March evening of ballads given by her and Mrs. Wiseman. Another vote of thanks was given to Commissioner Gordon for the delightful and instructive trip around San Pedro Harbor of the week before.

The platform was literally a fairy forest of golden mustard when Mrs. Henry Hawes, curator of the ramblers' section, arose to take charge of the programme which included songs by Miss Belle Barker, a recitation by Mrs. W. K. Chambers, a duet by little Ella Knox and Lois Chambers, and an interesting account of the year's work by Mrs. Lucy Tabor who reported that this section had rambled from San Gabriel to the Whittier Reform School and from the Arroyo Seco to the Orphans' Home, everywhere carrying good cheer.

After the programme Mrs. Jane M. Beatty, district vice-president, installed the new officers in her happy way. She presented her successor, Miss Elizabeth A. Packard, who had just been re-elected president, with a beautiful silver-mounted and appropriately-inscribed gavel. The luncheon which followed was admirably managed by Mrs. Harry L. Knight and her fine hospitality committee, and ended with a toast to the Building Committee of the clubhouse. It was voted to meet socially one afternoon each month during the summer vacation.

College Women's Club.

The College Women's Club will hold the last meeting of the year next Saturday at the San Gabriel Country Club, where a luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock. The club has won much prestige from its "creative day" programme.

Alabama's Curious Dower Law.

[Case and Comment:] In Mississippi no dower exists, and in that State either husband or wife may sell his or her lands without the consent of the other. However, when a resident of Mississippi sells any land he may own across the line in Alabama, he must obtain his wife's signature to the deed in other to release her dower; yet by a peculiar provision of the Alabama law this man's wife living in Mississippi can sell her Alabama land without getting her husband to sign the deed, although her married sister who lives in Alabama must get her husband to sign her deed when she sells her Alabama land. In other words, the Alabama law has conferred upon her own married fomen less capacity to contract than she has conferred upon the married women residing in other States.

CLEARED UP BY THE COURT.

THE OLD HIRAM HIGGINS ESTATE SETTLEMENT.

The Facts Judicially Found and Determined Long Ago—Certain Later Misrepresentations Formally Corrected—Complete Vindication of the Daughter.

The Graphic (weekly), of May 31, 1913, published, under the subdivision of "By the Way" (a department generally understood to be personally conducted by the editor, Mr. Samuel T. Oliver,) the following statement, explicit, explanatory and apologetic:

"ADDING TO THE AMENITIES.

"Last September, in this column, I took occasion, on the death of Mrs. Hiram Higgins, to comment on the reported unfilial actions of her daughter. It has recently come to my knowledge that before the mother's death a complete settlement of the Higgins estate had been effected through proper and mutual concessions by and between the parties in interest; and in a decree confirming this compromise the following language was used by Superior Judge James C. Rives:

" 'And it appearing that the contestants, after full investigation of the facts relating to the drawing and making of said will, having discovered error in the allegations respecting the charges against Mrs. Lilian C. Rand, and there being no evidence of fraud or undue influence against the said Mrs. Lilian C. Rand, and said contest having been withdrawn:—

" 'It is therefore ordered that said agreement of settlement and compromise, as well as the action of said W. W. Dodge as guardian ad litem for said Charles W. Rand and Lilian Rand, in entering into the same on their behalf, be and the same is in all respects approved, ratified and confirmed; and it is further ordered that proceedings for the final distribution of the estate of Hiram Higgins, deceased, be had in conformity with the terms of said agreement; and that, after due application for distribution and due notice thereof, and approval of the acts of the executor, in accordance with the terms of said agreement of settlement and compromise, the residue of the estate of said Hiram Higgins be distributed to the persons designated, and in the manner and proportions and subject to the terms set forth in the stipulated form of decree of distribution presented herein and attached to said petition for leave to compromise. July 13, 1908.' "

The statement by the editor of the Graphic then continues to the end of this paragraph: "It was far from my intention to reopen the discussion of that which had been so completely ended as this excerpt from the court record indicates, and I hasten to add my quota to the amenities."

To the foregoing there may properly be added here the following further information, in order to make the situation still more clear:

(1.) The completeness of the legal and personal vindication of Mrs. Rand, the daughter, is shown not only by the above extract from the findings and order of Judge Rives, but also by all the papers in the case, which are on file in the probate department of the Superior Court of Los Angeles county, open to the public.

(2.) The settlement of the contest was full and complete, covering a wide range of subjects. The provisions of the will of the father, Hiram Higgins, were scrutinizingly traversed by able lawyers representing both sides to the will contest, which involved much property, widely scattered, with the result that, after an earnest and thorough investigation, taking a wide range, the decision here quoted was reached; and all the interested parties concurred in it through the proper legal forms.

(3.) The long delay in reaching a result on the daughter's complaint against the local weekly named, because of the erroneous and unjust publication, was due to the fact that it did not become known to Mrs. Rand till months after the weekly's statement was printed, she having sailed for Europe in August, 1912. (Mrs. Higgins died September 1, 1912, and the publication appeared later in the same month.) Other delays ensued, so that the counter publication above quoted has only just been made. It serves to remove from the minds of many persons a total misunderstanding of the actual facts, due in part, naturally, to the entire lack of general and particular knowledge concerning the real outcome of the contest, reached so long ago, and also due to the fact that the court's finding, decision and decree were never before given to the public through the daily journals.

(4.) It is due to the editor of The Graphic to have it freely stated here that he acted promptly, as shown above, when the complaint was squarely brought to his personal notice by Mrs. Rand's attorney.

To Return After a Long Absence.

Mrs. Lilian C. Rand and daughter, who have been living and traveling in Europe for nearly a year past, will joyfully return to Los Angeles some time this summer; the exact date of their homecoming is not yet known here. They will reoccupy Mrs. Rand's Wilshire-boulevard home, "Whitehall," where their correspondents may address them meantime, as they are still on the move; though letters will be forwarded to a given address.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER

LOS ANGELES, June 1.

Lovely Lillian:—It was jolly to hear from you again. Why, blessed, it is so long since we have seen you that we can only remember your virtues. Yes, come, by all means; the mater says you can stay and go on with us to the springs if you like.

There is any amount of fun going on just now, too, because all the boys are home from college and that serene coterie of chronic bachelors, upon whom we have had to depend for the last few months, are all having their noses put out of joint.

We are up to our eyes in parties and new frocks. Really, I was beginning to get quite blasé. The universities disgorged just in time to save my sweet, young disposition. You see, darling, I am a blushing debutante of a season's standing and "youth cries to youth" and all that sort of thing only there weren't any unannexed youths here to cry to. But I feel better now. Edmund is here—home for keeps this time and goes into partnership with the firm right

RECEPTIONS, DINNERS, WEDDINGS AND THE LIKE.

A CARNIVAL dance, more resplendid than any social function of the season, is the wonderful treat being planned by attractive young girls who compose the Los Angeles Orphans' Home Auxiliary, and these energetic workers are meeting daily to add the final touches to the elaborate plan.

The little tots of the Orphans' Home will receive the proceeds and these appreciative youngsters will enjoy, as only orphan babies do, the delights that will be heaped upon them.

The entertainment will take place at Shrine Auditorium and the admission will be 25 cents, with an additional [illegible] cents for each dance, and just one peep at the kiddies would make one pleased to pay many times that amount.

The truly wonderful specialties are to be kept a secret until next Sunday, and enough is to say that the side shows and booths are beyond human description.

The carnival is not a show—it's a benefit, an da real benefit, too. It is for a splendid cause—to build a beach cottage where the orphans can spend a portion of each summer. The Shriners have already contributed $250 to the fund, which will be swelled by the sale of boxes to go at $25 each.

Miss Katherine Johnson is the president of the auxiliary and others interested include Miss Daphne Drake, Miss Aileen McCarthy, Miss Ruth Powell, Miss Juliet Boileau, Miss Duque, Miss Evageline Duque, Miss Sarah Clark, Miss Emma Con y, Miss Lucy Clark, Miss Catherine chester, Miss Mary Burnham, Miss Brown, Miss Constance Miss Florence Bowden, Miss Pollard, Miss Mildred Bur , Miss Edythe Bryant, Miss Mar Thompson, Miss Lois Salisbury, Miss Anita Thomas, Miss Clara Wat , Miss Louise Wheaton, Miss Olive Miss Gwendolyn Davis, Miss Edward, Miss Geraldine Grady, Miss Louise Hunt, Miss Helen Hoover, Miss Mary Hughes, Miss Norma Miss Helen Higgins, Miss Ma Kerckhoff, Miss Gertrude Kerckhoff, Miss Virginia Walsh, Miss Louise Miss Marguerite Maurice, Miss Marguerite McMullen, Miss Sally land, Miss Emily Newlin, Miss Pendleton, Miss Marjorie Mrs. T. In Honor of Son.

In honor of their son, Cosmo, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Morgan entertained with an informal dancing party Friday evening at their home on West Twenty-fourth street.

Series of Affairs.

The Misses Margaret and Esther Dent, No. 2720 Wilshire boulevard, have been entertaining with a series of delightful affairs, two of which have occurred this week, all being either bridge luncheons or auction afternoons. The first of the series was given in honor of Mrs. George M. Peters of Columbus and London, to which forty guests were asked to meet the honoree. The second affair complimented Mrs. William R. Higgins of Spencer, Iowa, and Miss Ridgeway of Chicago.

The third of the series, which occurred Wednesday of this week, was a luncheon of forty covers. An effective decoration for the long table had been formed of pink gladiolus, and hand-painted cards adorned with pink roses and pansies marked covers. Auction bridge followed the luncheon.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Edwin R. Bradley, who is leaving for Europe June 18, accompanied by her husband and her mother, Mrs. Burton M. Williamson, and two sisters, was honored by the Misses Dent. As an innovation the refreshments, which followed the games of auction bridge, were served upstairs in this beautiful home. Suggestive was the table, on which was a rustic bridge spanning an improvised lake. Water-color cards, ornamented with pink roses, marked covers for forty guests. Assisting the charming hostesses was Mrs. Robert Watchorn. The fifth of this delightful series will be given in the near future.

Returned Home.

Dr. and Mrs. S. I. Barrin of Hotel Lankershim have returned from a delightful trip to Central America and Panama. Later they are planning a trip to Lake Tahoe.

Wedded at Honolulu.

A wedding of interest to friends in this city and Cleveland was that of Miss Edna Storrs Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rice of Cleveland to A. J. Kennedy of San Francisco, the ceremony being held in St. Clement's Episcopal Church, Honolulu, Monday evening, May 19, at 5:30 o'clock, the rector, Rev. John Usborne, officiating, with an impressive ceremony.

The bride, who is a petite brunette, was gowned in a handsome hand-embroidered white satin crepe, carrying a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and bride's roses. With this she wore a modish hat of white tulle, adorned with pink sweet peas. Her only attendant was her aunt, Mrs. H. S. Rawlins, who assisted as matron of honor and gave the bride away. Edward Bowes stood with the groom. The church was embellished with Easter lilies and burning candles on the altar. The full Episcopalian service with the ring ceremony was used.

Immediately following the wedding Edward Bowes entertained with an elaborate dinner party at Hotel Young, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy. A large wedding cake, adorned with a wedding bell, centered the table, and surrounding this were corsage bouquets of violets and maiden-hair fern, which were later presented to the guests. Green-shaded candelabra also entered into the artistic scheme. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. James Armstrong, Mrs. H. S. Rawlins, W. H. Armstrong, Miss Creighton and Mr. Conday. The latter two are to be married one month from that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy will be at home in Honolulu to their friends at the Hotel Colonial. The bride left here in January with her aunt, Mrs. Rawlins, for a tour of the Orient, and was married on her return trip. Kennedy is employed as a civil engineer on the dry dock in Pearl Harbor.

Monday Club.

Yellow coreopsis were used to decorate the home of Mrs. H. D. Taylor last week when she entertained the members of the Monday Card Club at her home, No. 1648 Gower street. Five tables were arranged for bridge, after which dainty refreshments were passed. The first prize was taken by Mrs. L. C. Brochon, and Mrs. Maud Davis Baker was awarded the second prize.

Morning Musicale.

Society folk are greatly interested in the morning musicale to be given at the beautiful home of Mrs. R. P. McJohnston of Virginia Terrace, Hollywood, next Thursday morning, for the benefit of the Childrens' Hospital. The programme will begin at 10:30 o'clock and will be given by Miss Collie Woodall and Prof. Julius V. Seyler, pianist, and Mrs. A. R. Hill, accompanist.

Miss Woodall is the guest of Mrs. A. E. Stellar of Vista street, where she will pass several weeks before returning to her home in Nashville. She is the possessor of a rich contralto voice, which, with her magnetic personality, always captivates her audience.

Informal Summer Party.

The members of the Emanon Club will give an informal summer party at the Hotel Hollywood next Friday evening, June 6. A large number of invitations have been issued to the Hollywood and Los Angeles young people. The society women, who will be patronesses are Mmes. Frederick W. Stith, E. K. Isaacs, Maud Davis Baker, F. H. Colby, A. B. Rogers, B. F. Kieruiff, Jr., H. La V. Twining, W. D. Neal and J. E. Forrester.

Foothill Club.

Sixteen members of the Hollywood Foothill Club were entertained with a luncheon at the Mountain View Inn by Mrs. Frank L. Sanborn of Wilcox avenue, last Friday afternoon. Cut flowers were tastefully arranged about the drawing-room and dining-room.

Farewell Luncheon.

The family farewell luncheon given by Mrs. P. B. Chase at her home on Wilcox avenue Sunday was a happy affair. Mr. and Mrs. Chase left Wednesday for a three months' visit to points of interest in the East. A basket of white marguerites arranged with fern adorned the center of the dining table. Covers were placed for their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Chase; their sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bireley and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Herrington, and their grandchildren, Miss Mildred Bireley, Frank and Ruth Bireley, Percy, Howard and Gladys Chase and Alan Herrington.

Polson-Howison.

Miss Minnie Howison of Clovis, Fresno county, was united in marriage with Carl A. Polson, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. R. B. Dunlap of No. 1528 Alexandria avenue. Rev. R. B. Dunlap, brother-in-law of the bride, performed the wedding ceremony. Miss Ines Bagby and Julius Hansen stood up with the happy couple as maid of honor and best man. After a two-months' trip through the interesting points of the East, Mr. and Mrs. Polson will reside in Clovis, Cal.

Miscellaneous Shower.

The Misses Macell and Lillian Nolan of Fountain avenue complimented Miss Mildred Lowther, a June bride, with a luncheon and surprise shower Monday afternoon. The luncheon table was elaborately decorated in pink and white. Falling from the chandelier to the five large baskets of Cecile Brunner roses were pink ribbon streamers strung with pink hearts, at the end of which were bouquets of orange blossoms. Individual baskets of Cecile Brunner roses were given as favors.

The shower was miscellaneous and was given in an immense basket trimmed with rosebuds and tied with a large pink bow. Dainty cards marked places for Mrs. C. L. Perkins, Mrs. William Thomas, Misses Mildred Lowther, Margaret Rankin, Mary Paul, Marion McPherron, Anadeah Hollahan, Cecile Hollahan and the hostesses.

To Be Married Monday.

A pretty wedding will take place next Monday evening at the Hollywood Methodist Episcopal Church, when Miss Helen Kleinsorge will become the bride of Dr. Ernest Cannon of Highland Park. The bridal party will be announced at 8:30 by Miss Faye Thorne of South Pasadena, who will preside at the piano. Before the ceremony, which is to be performed by Rev. C. D. Hicks, Miss Edith Rice of Los Angeles will give a solo.

Miss Kleinsorge is the charming daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry Kleinsorge of No. 1735 North Kingsley drive. She has chosen Miss Muriel Smith for her maid of honor and the Misses Stella Messenger and Mary Miller will be the bridesmaids, Henrietta Grobeck will scatter roses before the path of the bride.

The groom's best man will be Glen Bollinger, while Willis La Mott and Bennijah Potter will assist as ushers.

A pink, white and green scheme will be used in the church decorations and in the gowns of the bride-elect's attendants. The bride-elect will be gowned in a creation of white crepe meteor and beautiful lace made en train. A pink charmeuse gown trimmed with lace will be worn by the maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be attired in pale green gowns of crepe de chine, made with

The Modern Wedding Gift Custom

The trend of modern gift-giving as expressed in practically all of the recent socially prominent weddings, is toward jewels—contributions to the bride's dower chest. Not commercial jewelry, such as one finds in abundance in the average jewelry store—nor necessarily costly.

If you are going to give jewels you must exercise discriminate taste in the selection, for the fullest and greatest ultimate appreciation of a jewel lies in its heirloom value—and its heirloom value in turn, lies in its rarity and exclusiveness.

The jewel gifts Feagans & Company show have nothing in common with ordinary show-case jewelry. As a matter of fact, many of our exquisite pieces have been specially designed and made for us by the leading platinum workers, goldsmiths and gem-setters of Europe. And others are the handiwork of our own designers.

Beautiful brooches and pins, of platinum and gold, with effective settings of rarest gems. Handsome jewelled bracelets—unusual lavallieres and pendants—very smart new rings with settings of perfect gems in newest combinations. Gem-set watches—strings of precious pearls and of perfectly matched gem corals.

There is no other so critically selected jewel gathering in Los Angeles. We believe your judgement will immediately verify our convictions. We welcome your inspection and your closest comparsison of the splendid values we offer.

30 hour folding Leather Clocks in all colors, specially priced at $5.00.

8 3-4 inch sterling silver Candlesticks with silk shades to match—the pair complete $12.00.

Unusual and useful pieces in Gorham Silver; Travel and Toilet requisites in Gorham Leather; Seth Thomas and Imported clocks.

Long Beach.

THE SAD tragedy of Saturday had a depressing effect upon the social and club events of Long Beach and there was little show of gayety. The club meetings were devoid of any amusement or entertainment, programmes being devoted solely to the strict business routine, shortened as much as possible. Society events, where they were not imperative, were abandoned indefinitely.

Two brides-to-be of the early summer, Misses Clara French and Bessie Yett, were hostesses Tuesday evening at the Yett home, to a group of their girl friends. Miss French, is to wed G. L. Mowry, of Saginaw, Mich., while Miss Yett will become the wife of Lauren Bean of Emmet, Idaho.

Mrs. F. M. Sanders has as house guests over Sunday three generations of the Walker family, Mrs. J. R. Walker and daughter, Mrs. Maude Wemsely, and granddaughter, Maude Wemsley of Denver, and Mr. and Mrs. Houston Parsons and son, of Los Angeles.

Members of the Bellevue Club were guests Tuesday of Mrs. James Cresson at her home on East Seventh street.

The New England Society held its annual picnic at Bixby Park and former residents of the six States on the east coast fraternized in a social way.

At the Christian Church parsonage Wednesday morning, Miss Edna Crosswhite, was united in marriage to Capt. Charles O. Bell, Rev. F. M. Rogers officiating.

Mrs. George A. Smith entertained at cards Thursday afternoon at the Kennebec apartments. Whist was the afternoon diversion.

Friends of Miss Rose Johnson and James L. Frazier, were given a surprise this week, when they learned that the couple had been married a week. The ceremony took place in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Wallace Hauk entertained a party of friends at five hundred Friday evening, at her home on Hermosa avenue.

Redondo Beach.

SOCIAL affairs at this beach have been very numerous the past week. Chief among the happy occasions was the first annual banquet tendered the High School seniors by the junior class on last Friday night on the High School campus. The banquet tables were laid beneath myriads of electric light bulbs, and the scene was of much beauty. Miss Mary Ranson presided as toastmaster, and several members of the faculty graced the occasion.

The Wednesday Club enjoyed a 1 o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. V. H. Burnham. Covers were laid for ten at a prettily appointed table set in the dining-room.

One of the coming events is the fourth annual fireman's ball, which has been announced, will be held on Tuesday, June 3, in the pavilion. It is a charitable affair that society in general always favors, and is one of the really jolly occasions of the social calendar.

Every indication points to the fact that the present season will attract more of the prominent leaders in the social world than ever before. Following the announcement that the Mrs. George Wilshire and Dr. Robert Burdette families have taken summer homes on the Esplanade comes the news that Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McAllister, prominent people of Pasadena, have taken the Forbes place at Cliffton-by-the-Sea. They arrived on Friday and will remain, enjoying the sea breezes during the entire summer season.

The Debutante

The Debutante.

away. Such a nice, intelligent fellow, tall and clean, not too "mannerly" and just indifferent enough to make him really interesting.

George finishes this term, too. I don't know what he will take up, but suspect he is a bit of a dilettante. Still passing through the "man-of-the-world" stage and a little trying. But a nice boy. Dances beautifully. That counts for something. These wretched boys won't learn to dance nowadays and they are selfishly depriving the debutantes of the joy of life. Fancy life without dancing, Lili! I should have to joint a ballet.

So bring all the evening dresses you have and don't forget some golf clothes. There's an invitation affair on at the San Gabriel club this week, so be sure to arrive in time.

Oh, cherie, and talking about clothes, did you hear about Mrs. C's corsets? Cost $2000. Made of heavy gold brocade, with gold clasps and diamond studs! And you know what a funny figure she is—all middle. Corinne, who never loses an opportunity to say something naughty, suggested that they were altogether too gorgeous for the exclusive admiration for dear old C. The mater promptly snubbed her, of course.

Oh, yes, and that reminds me about the shoes, too. You know a political candidate of some kind spoke at the Friday Morning Club last week and managed to drag in some allusion to the society woman's extravagance in shoes. Accused them of having thirty pairs at one time. So that started us all on the subject and Mrs. M. J. C. confessed to spending $200 a month on shoes alone!

Aunt Martha, who happened to be there, added greatly to the gaiety of the occasion. "You poor dear," she said. "I suffer with my feet, too. Once you get rheumatics, it is the hardest thing to get a comfortable shoe."

Mrs. M. J. C. was speechless. Her feet are her dearest possession and she has long since considered that they make up amply for her defects of face. The fashions for the last four years have been a godsend to her—skimpy skirts to show the legs and deep hats to hide the face! Hubby is something in particular at the new Midwick Country Club, which is the exclusively fashionable rendezvous these days, so she will have ample opportunity to exercise her chatelainial accomplishments and extend her role of social queen.

Jimmy Childs is back from France; Jess Banning is on her way home from New York; Edmund and Cecil are down from Stanford; Hugh from Berkeley; Lawrence from Yale; Margaret from Vassar, and Ellen from Japan, so you will perceive that our happy little circle has been considerably augmented with youthful charm these last few days. The Bannings will give a dancing party on June 24—you'll be here for that—and then we have two big dances coming off at the Los Angeles Country Club—one on June 13 and one on the 20th. I tell you we kids are coming into our own again. I have been obsessed with grown-ups for weeks and the only social stunts that came my way were "assisting" at middle-aged ensembles. I am pathetically accomplished at handing tea, and in the part of polite echo. Never mind, cherie, there is a good time coming, and my new white tulle is a perfect duck.

We will go over to Catalina for a week or so while you are here. Several of the boys have yachts over there and the bathing and golf are both jolly. And we can dance to our heart's content in that old pavilion. We had no end of fun there last year and I ruined my neck with sunburn. Simply had to wear all my waists the same shape for months as otherwise the outline looked like a low-water mark!

Did you know Kitty W? The sentimental, dramatic little soul who was always in the throes of a new "case." Well, the latest is likely to lead to complications. The silly child went off ostensibly to her music lesson last Wednesday and it subsequently transpired that she had met young Reggie and gone off to Terminal with him for the day. They crossed over to San Pedro and struck one of those tattoo artists who operate on the sailors. Those silly children actually had each others' names tattooed on their arms! Reggie's seems to have taken alright, but poor Kitty is suffering from a horrible go of blood poisoning and you never saw such a dreadful sight as that pretty white arm.

Fancy her doing a thing like that. Really, if she had had all the boys' names tattooed on her arm that she had imagined herself in love with there wouldn't be any space left anywhere. Of course, I daresay she will get well alright, but think how awkward if she marries anyone with some other name! Besides, the odious thing is in such a prominent position on her forearm, she will always have to wear gloves or long sleeves anyway.

And when Reggie finally marries a Florence or Imogen, how is she going to like "Kitty" engraved upon his manly arm, I should like to know? It won't be any use his protesting that he never loved before, will it? So long, then, Lili darling. Distribute the family love all round for a steady.

Your affectionate
TRIXIE.

OVERDOING SPORTS.

Investigation Being Made to Determine Where the Line Separates the Good from Injurious Effects.

[Baltimore American:] German scientists are taking a deep interest in sports, not in the way of participation, but as a study. They are seeking to learn exactly where the benefit ceases and the harm begins, for while it is known that sports are beneficial to a certain degree and also harmful in excess, ti is not known just where one should draw the line.

From their investigation thus far it is not going to be very easy for anybody to draw such a line for general observance. The trouble is that some people can stand more violent exercise than others.

Probably the simplest method for anyone to determine just how far he can go in sports that involve rather violent exercise, says the London Evening Standard, is to take their pulse before entering the sport, then after the game, such as a competition at golf or tennis, or wrestling or boxing, take the pulse again. It will be naturally increased.

At the end of fifteen minutes take the pulse again. If it has returned to normal; that is, to what it was before the exercise was commenced, you can stand such exercise without ill effects. If your pulse has not returned to normal beats the exercise was too violent for you.

Prof. Nicolai declared that the pulse should resume its normal beat within fifteen minutes after every sort of exercise, otherwise physical troubles, especially with the heart, will develop.

"Statistical data show," stated Prof. [illegible], "that town dwellers and domestic animals have comparatively weak hearts. This is because they do not take sufficient exercise. Bodily exercise should be continued only so long as it is possible to breathe with the mouth closed. When you have exercised so violently that your mouth flies open involuntarily and you pant or grasp for breath you are surely overdoing it."

All the professors, including some women experts, were in favor of mild exercises for adults as well as children. Fraulein Dr. Hirsch, of Berlin, declared that women make a great mistake by giving up exercise after marriage. "Women should continue to take exercise, mild gymnastics and the like, after marriage," she declared, and that high heels, lacing and such evils counteracted all the benefits that might accrue to women from exercise.

Prof. Krause of Berlin, said the preavailing tendency was to overdo all sports. He declared that young men especially striving in competition overtrained themselves and while becoming proficient in one thing, like vaulting or running or jumping, they at the same time weakened their hearts and got themselves into extremely dangerous conditions. He insisted that temperance in exercise and in such sports as were violent was quite as necessary as temperance in other things.

THE GREAT DAKE TRAFFIC.

Exceeds in Volume That Passing Through the Suez Canal, and Is too Large for Many to Realize.

[New York Commercial:] The vast traffic of the Great Lakes which pours in a steady flood through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal is but little known even to Americans; to foreigners it is almost unbelievable. This natural strait, which has been improved by art, carries year in and year out more shipping than the Suez Canal. Dr. Charles Casoretty, a French engineer, who is to build here the largest dry dock on the Great Lakes, declares that so few people, either here or abroad, realize this fact that he sometimes hazards his reputation for sincerity in making the statement. It is growing faster than navigation traffic anywhere in the world. It surpasses the entire shipping that enters and departs from the harbor of New York. The giant lakers that pass there in many instances are larger than the largest steamship that plied between Europe and the United States a quarter of a century since.

No more pregnant fact than this can illustrate the tremendous growth of the United States in its internal commerce, for the unsalted seas have played a big part in it. The shipping for the last twelve months was over 17,000,000 tons, while through the Suez Canal the total was only 12,000,000. The empire of the United States within our contiguous continental bounds is, indeed, to most of us only a vague conception, for big figures mean nothing to most minds. The bigness of the country and the importance of its domestic inter-relationship may be considered the cause why our foreign export trade, large as it is, has not been pushed with more persistent energy.

Because his touring car would not run, Walter Guertin of Kankakee, Ill., chopped it to pieces with an ax and sold it as junk. He got $25 for it.

Are You FAT? I Was ONCE I Reduced Myself

I was Fat, Uncomfortable, Looked Old, Felt Miserable, suffered with Rheumatism, Asthma, Neuralgia. When I worked or walked, I puffed like a Porpoise. I took every advertised medicine I could find. I Starved, Sweated, Exercised, Doctored and changed climate but I ruined my digestion, felt like an invalid but steadily gained weight. There was not a single plan or drug that I heard of that I did not try. I failed to reduce my weight. I dropped society, as I did not care to be the butt of all the jokes. It was embarrassing to have my friends tell me I was getting Stout, as no one knew it better than myself.

SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE.

I began to study the cause of FAT. When I discovered the cause I found the remedy. The French Method gave me an insight. I improved on that. Removed the objectional features, added more pleasant ones, and then I tried my plan on myself for a week. It worked like Magic. I could have

at the end of the first week when the scales told me I had lost ten pounds by my simple, easy, harmless, Drugless Method. It was a pleasure then to continue until I regained my normal self in size. I feel fifteen years younger. I look fifteen years younger. My Double Chin has entirely disappeared. I can walk or work now. I can climb a mountain. I am normal in size. I can weigh just what I want to weigh. I am master of my own body now. I did not starve, but eat all I wanted to. I did not take Sweat Baths. I did not Drug. I used no Electricity, or harmful exercises, but I found the Simple, Sane, Common Sense WAY of reducing my weight and I applied it. I have tried it on others. My Doctor says I am a perfect picture of health now. I am no longer ailing. I am now a happy, healthy woman. Now I am going to help others to be happy. I have written a book on the subject. If you are fat, I want you to have it. It will tell you all about my Harmless, Drugless Method. To all who send me their name and address I mail it FREE, as long as the present supply lasts. It will save you Money, Save you from Harmful Drugs, Save you from Starvation Diets, Harmful Exercise, possibly save YOUR LIFE. It is yours for the asking without a penny. Just send your name and address. A Postal Card will do and I'll be glad to send it so that you can quickly learn how to reduce yourself and be as happy as I am. Actress Tells Secret

A Well-Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted its Growth With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement, "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."—[Advertisement.

Alhambra.

REHEARSALS are promising great success for the beautiful cantata, "The Japanese Maid," which will be given at the High School auditorium on the evenings of June 6 and 7. The costumes will be Japanese kimonos of every shade and hue, which will be offset by the dainty Japanese garden with its swinging lanterns and floral garlands. Many of the drills will be fairly enchanting. Among the young ladies who will sing in the chorus are the Misses Josephine Dunbar, Emma Abbey, Leone Taylor, Clara Sanford, Martha Stransky, Lila Cockrell, Helen Hersman, Greta Johnson, Edith Comfort, Beatrice Varney, Mabel Page, Florence Lindeman, Grace Turner, Elizabeth Macfie, Clara Johnson, Marian Davidson, Dollina McKay, Agnes McMillian, Elsie Delmarter, Jean Delmarter, Cleora Smither, Bertha Butcher, Bertha McKay and Ruth Waring.

The Ostend Club of Alhambra enjoyed one of its informal dances last Thursday evening at the Woman's Clubhouse, when the members and a few of their friends danced.

A delightful and excellent "folk music programme" was given and enjoyed by the members of the Music Study Club of Alhambra last Tuesday evening at their regular meeting when they were entertained in a most charming way by the Misses Ruth and Julia Marters at their home on Halldale avenue in Los Angeles. The programme planned for the evening was as follows: Vocal acoustics, Miss Gladys Knesel: "Old Foulk at Home," paraphrase de concert (Foster,) Miss Elizabeth Ruddell; "Robin Adair," quartette; "Bonnie Charlie" and "Loch Lomond," Miss Ruth Waring; "The Little Red Lark" (Irish,) Miss Julia McIlvain; "Old Black Joe," paraphrase de concert, Mrs. Lula Travis Haney; "All Through the Night," duet, Miss Erma Dunbar and Miss Ruth Martens; "Bohemian Dance" (Friml,) Miss Ruth Knesel; "Annie Laurie," duet, Miss Gladys Knesel and Mrs. Florence Knesel Hornby; "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms," Miss Gladys Knesel; "Ach! Nein tu Nein" and "Reseda" (Friml,) Miss Bessie Chapin; "Home, Sweet Home," quartette.

Olga Steeb gave a recital at the High School auditorium under the auspices of the Agnes Hill-Runkel School of Music. Her programme, which was such a delight to Alhambra music-lovers, included the Bach-Liszt Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, Mozart's Pastoral Varies, Beethoven's Rondo in G Major, Gluck-Saint-Saens's Caprice, Alceste; Beethoven's Sonata in F Minor; Schubert-Liszt's "The Linden Tree," Liszt's "St. Francis Preaching to the Birds" and the "Midsummer Night's Dream" fantasie. Following the recital a delightful reception was given by Mrs. Runkel at her studio on South First street, where many music-lovers had the pleasure of meeting Miss Steeb. The rooms were handsomely decorated in flowers and greenery, and during the reception Mr. Miglionico furnished harp music. Punch was served in the dining-room by several young ladies who are pupils of Mrs. Runkel.

The Alhambra Round Table was entertained last Friday by Miss Jennie Lane at her home on North Valencia street.

A large and enthusiastic audience enjoyed the evening musicale given by the Wednesday Afternoon Club Monday evening at the clubhouse, when a ladies' quartette, consisting of Mrs. Cary Jones, Miss Ruth Waring, Mrs. C. H. Overton and Miss Margery Halsted, and Mrs. F. D. Simons, as accompanist, gave a programme of old songs.

By far the most important and largely attended social and club event of the past week in Alhambra circles was the annual luncheon of the Wednesday Afternoon Club at their clubhouse last Wednesday. The luncheon was in charge of the club association, and was beautifully appointed and delightfully served. Covers were laid for about one hundred club members.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Casson of West Alhambra, in company with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Proctor of Duluth, Minn., and William Webb of Viroqua, Wis., recently enjoyed an outing in Rubio Canyon.

Last Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. James D. Fry, at their home on East Alhambra road, had as their guests at tea, Miss Harriet Kemp and Mr. Robert Kemp, who are spending the winter in Los Angeles, and Miss Ruth Waring, of Alhambra, all former friends and residents of Evanston, Ill.

About one hundred and fifty Alhambrans gathered at the Woman's Clubhouse last Friday evening at the big "booster" banquet given by the Alhambra Chamber of Commerce. A most excellent menu was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Methodist Church, and the room was exquisitely decorated in palms, ferns, roses, and large Japanese baskets of beautiful pansies, which reposed on each table. The guests were met by President and Mrs. Robert Jordan and the Reception Committee. After the dinner President Jordan introduced Judge William M. Northrup as toastmaster of the evening.

Duarte.

THE ladies and gentlemen of the Buena Vista Whist Club entertained last Thursday evening at the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ryder in honor of the members of the Azusa Whist Club, who motored over. About forty guests assembled in rooms adorned with May baskets of sweet peas and roses and were cordially welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Ryder. After an informal reception the guests adjourned to the cardroom, where later tempting viands were served by the ladies of the Buena Vista club.

Mrs. Walter B. Leffler gave a delightful missionary tea in compliment to the ladies of the Methodist Church on Thursday. The guest of honor was Mrs. H. J. Rowley of Los Angeles, who gave a pleasing address.

One of the pleasantest functions of the week was the informal reception given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fowler at their home on Duarte avenue. The living-rooms were decorated with masses of greenery, brightened with roses and baskets of sweet peas and genial hospitality was generously dispensed. Among those who were present during the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. William Beardslee, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Menager, Mrs. A. B. Downe, Mr. and Mrs. J. Growing Children Need Good Bowels

Give a Mild Laxative Occasionally to Insure Regular Bowel Action

As a child grows older it requires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health, great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally, according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution. At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels, but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally. Mrs. Henry Babler, Van Dyne, Wis., writes that her little son, Melvin Babler, was constipated most of the time until she gave him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Since using this remedy he has never been constipated.

The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills, as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results, and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to W. B. Caldwell, 417 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

THE COLTS OF RHODE ISLAND.

Wife of the Rhode Island Senator Who Has Succeeded George Peabody Wetmore is a Distinguished Hostess With a Most Interesting Family.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Rhode Island plantations as the small State still figures in its official documents, has always lent to society in Washington the glamour which necessarily clings to all that environs Newport. Its Senators and members of Congress have invariably figured conspicuously in the smart set, and they proved powers in the more important sphere of national legislation. The Aldrichs made their impression on their day and generation and they will be lamented for many months to come. Senator and Mrs. Wetmore had a much more limited circle of influence, but they were typical New England hosts, always dignified, serious and entirely tactful in their activities. Senator Lippitt and his charming young daughter, Miss Frances Lippitt, have added to the splendor of Rhode Island's record as national hosts. Their home is palatial, their amenities limited only by the period of their residence in Washington and their courtesy and punctuous regard of the smallest obligations, one of their most attractive traits.

Senator and Mrs. Colt came to Washington with the convening of the extra session of the new Congress. Few offer so many entertaining viewpoints for study and none combine so many important attributes of greatness. Mrs. Colt is the pleasant, well-poised hostess which one naturally expects from such a combination of good things from the fairy godmother. To state that the new solon from Rhode Island is as well dowered with this world's goods as men from his section who reach the Senate usually are, is to repeat what is known to all. But he has been in the main the architect of his own fortune and he carved it from the legal profession and not in the usual way of New Englanders, the industrial and textile arts. With abundant means, more than average comely looks, Mrs. Colt adds the distinction of illustrious lineage in Merry England in the sixteenth century and heroic traditions from the pioneers who figured in the heroic days of '76. Though now so devoted to that land of religious freedom, the settlement of Roger Williams, Senator and Mrs. Colt present an impressive example of the migratory habits of Americans, for neither is a native of Rhode Island. Mrs. Colt was born in Milwaukee, but her childhood was spent largely in Chicago. Her father, Guy Carleton Ledyard, was a native of New York State and his family took out a land patent near Newburgh-on-the-Hudson in the middle of the eighteenth century. In the old country the Ledyards were of the gentry of Sussex and several figure as knights in the stirring tales of Sir Walter Scott. William Ledyard, the grandfather of Mrs. Colt, five times removed, was a hero whose fame has been preserved in history, song, story and imperishable bronze by his grateful country. He was the gallant commander in whose honor the Groton monument at Groton, Mass., was erected, and it was in defense of Ft. Trumbull and Ft. Griswold that he gave his life for his country. These forts overlooked all the country thereabout and when a British garrison of nearly a thousand bore down on Ft. Trumbull, young Ledyard hastily collected all the men who could bear arms and made a gallant defense. He was outnumbered and deliberately slain by a Tory officer, one Maj. John Bronfield. Ledyard's sword was recovered and his uniform with the coat showing the place where the British sword penetrated, is among the proudest possessions of the Connecticut Historical Society.

The Ledyards remained about New York for almost a century, but some twenty-five years ago, began to follow the trend of events westward. Mrs. Colt's father had many relatives who settled in Middle West, among them Frank Ledyard, so well known in railroad circles, and whose daughter became the wife of Baron Von Ketteler, one of the unfortunate victims of the Boxer insurrection in Pekin. It was, however, through her marriage that Mrs. Colt returned to the home of her remote ancestors on the Atlantic seaboard. Following the family traditions she was sent to New York City to school, and here she first met young Le Baron Colt through a classmate who was his relative. The young people were attracted from the first, but they were of a tender age and they drifted apart. Mr. Colt became enamoured of the West in his college days and when he had taken his legal degree from Columbia College he turned his face towards Chicago. Here he renewed his acquaintance with Miss Ledyard, and after that, events began to take a definite shape. They were married after a brief engagement and it seems the general verdict that they have lived happily ever after.

A combination of circumstances lured Mr. Colt back to the East and after some pondering he finally selected Bristol as a place of residence and Providence as the scene of his legal efforts. He was thirty-two years on the bench before his election to the Senate and adds another to distinguished wearers of the ermine who now wear the toga—among whom may be mentioned Senator O'Gorman of New York and Nathan Goff of West Virginia.

Senator and Mrs. Colt represent so many varying and absorbing points of interest that their influence on Washington society has already been felt. In this day of agitation against fraternities, these much abused organizations will find a firm friend in the Colts. In his college days at Yale, Mr. Colt joined several of the "frats," among them, "Skull and Bones" and he takes a deep and indulgent interest in all the pranks connected with these societies. Mrs. Colt is not a college woman, in that she holds no degrees, but she is sympathetic to every movement which means enlarging radius of feminine usefulness. Her three daughters have received every advantage which higher education implies, including several years each in European seats of learning. Mrs. Colt has been never identified with feminine activities, for her life has been so filled with necessary duties that she has found no leisure. The Colt home in Bristol is an important social center and has been from the days when the family first removed there. It lies in that enviable situation but a few miles from Newport and it participates in all that the Queen City of the Sound enjoys without having the glare of publicity. With three charming daughters to assist in the amenities, the home in the past twenty years has grown steadily more influential. During the summer, few days pass without some special fete, usually in the early afternoon with a spin down to Newport for the more pretentious festas in progress there.

Mrs. Colt, however, has not limited her activities to social leadership. Trained to take a responsible view of life, she has always been a zealous aid in civic and private charities. Her husband's long experience on the bench and the instances which of necessity came under her observation, made her tender towards the unfortunate and ready to exploit the good qualities rather than the evil side of those who fall into the clutches of the law. Providence as a vast beehive of industries has material and to spare for the benevolent. Mrs. Colt belongs to many societies which have as incentive, the aiding of special cases and as her daughters grew to maturity she gave to each some poor family for whom they were held responsible. This method is unique in Providence. It is the outcome of a society which survived the Civil War, a band of rich and noble-hearted women who took over the care of some poor soldier's family, and who fed, clothed and brought them fuel until they became entirely independent. Poor and injured factory workers now supply the place held by military victims and all large factory towns can furnish a fair quota of such. As more organized methods of aiding the poor have become general among the philanthropic, Mrs. Colt has kept apace of every improvement and every preventive to restrain those who need temporary aid from becoming permanent charges on the community. She is one of the district supervisors and it has been her duty faithfully fulfilled to see personally the persons for whom aid is sought. Her daughters and the daughters of friends as they reach womanhood become active workers. As small children they were taught to renounce some pleasure in order to give the money thus saved to the needy. There are sewing and cooking classes for these invalids and the term "idle rich" cannot apply with justice to the wealthy in the city of Providence at least. To Mrs. Colt it seems the generous and benevolent spirit of Roger Williams still hovers over the Commonwealth which he founded.

Mrs. Le Baron Colt—Miss Beatrice Colt.

There are many ties which unite Washington and the new Senatorial family from Rhode Island. Mrs. Colt always admired the capital city of her country and she has been a frequent visitor. This admiration led her to send her two older daughters here rather than to the old favorite in New York City, Mrs. Sears's school, where she received her education. Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Weeks attended Mrs. Summer's school here and the latter graduated with high honors. Some years ago the oldest son, Le Baron Carlton Colt met Miss Edith Converse, the daughter of Rear-Admiral Converse in Newport and their wedding was a brilliant event. Young Mr. Colt has an important position as head of a great industry of Providence, but he and his wife will be frequent visitors next season. Another daughter of Admiral Converse, Miss Shelby Converse married John Huntington Jackson and resides here, and Mr. Jackson's sister is the wife of M. Ekengren, the Minister from Sweden. The second son married Ethel Barrymore.

Senator and Mrs. Colt and Miss Beatrice are leisurely seeking a home and in the meantime are located at the Bellevue. They will not dismantle their splendid residence in Bristol for Mrs. Colt dislikes the idea of removing any of her cherished possessions. Then she expects to spend all the family holidays in the old home. Mrs. Gross and the two sons reside in Bristol and with Miss Beatrice this makes a major part of the family. Christmas is a feast of reunions and Mrs. Colt would not like to miss even a familiar cushion when all her children with their wives and husbands and little ones gather for the celebration. She dislikes the idea of a furnished home almost as much, so the chances are that she will fit up another domicile for Washington purposes. Mrs. Weeks, the middle daughter, resides in Brookline, Mass., but she will spend part of next winter here. The daughters-in-law are also expected and all the youngsters so the Colt household offers opportunities to all divisions of Washington socially.

Miss Beatrice Colt is a graceful girl of the blonde type with a gracious and frank manner. She is rather serious in her tastes and will perhaps figure oftener in occupations relating to philanthropy and social service than in the realms of Vanity Fair. She is treasurer of the various civic societies in Bristol and has been for some time much interested in the American Red Cross. She made her debut a few years ago in the family home and has enjoyed great popularity there and among her parents' friends and her own in Newport. Miss Colt is a fine equestrienne and has joined several of the country clubs. She also manages a boat with great skill and is a member of a canoe club in Bristol. She may be counted on as a social factor as far as the outdoor sports are involved and she is likewise said to be devoted to dancing and to be most graceful. Mrs. Colt has been receiving quietly on Thursdays since coming to Washington, but a new member to the Senatorial set has quite a lengthy list to "call through" before she can hope for many calls. Still the big coteries from the lower house are indefatigable visitors and Mrs. and Miss Colt have been remaining at home on the conventional day for the past month.

Mrs. Colt has a wide grasp of existing conditions and she will devote much time to congenial studies relating to national efforts to aid and uplift the unfortunate. Her work in a special way has been for children and the organizations and methods of the bureau devoted to their welfare will be of great interest. One of the philanthropies through which Mrs. Colt and all her family, children and grandchildren are endeared to the poor in Providence is the Christmas celebration. A tree is provided for deserving families together with good things to fill it instead of a community tree as it were. There are, of course, trees trimmed by the guilds for poor children. Women who are self-respecting are given special work to aid them to make Christmas money and they are generously helped by suitable gifts for so gentle a cause as decorating a yuletide green. Mrs. Colt will continue her work in Providence, but she will also be ready to assist in the numerous and distinctive charities which are local to Washington.

Profitable Lesson in Morality.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch.] A Sunday-school teacher on the Park Slope in Brooklyn told her boys of the city's spring clean-up, and of the admonition that even the cellars and backyards should be cleaned.

Thence she drew a lesson in moral cleanliness, telling the youngsters that while regard for outward appearance was commendable inward purity was much more meritorious. To make them further interested she offered a prize to the boy who should bring the written or printed motto that best expressed it.

"Remember," she said, "that the motto must bear especially on the necessity for inward cleanliness—purity of a heart as pure and polished as spotless gold.

Last Sunday one of the smallest of the boys handed in a placard printed in big black letters.

"Where did you get this," the teacher asked.

"Swiped it this morning off the bootblack stand outside the corner barroom."

The motto read: "Shine Inside."

won seven blue ribbons and had a lengthy pedigree, being by Rendle's Prince—Miss Busybody, Rendle's Prince was a Woolton Baron—Wealdstone Gladys, and among her descendants are eight champions, including the famous field spaniel Endcliffe Bishop.

Rendle's Lily was bred twice. From the first litter, on January 30, 1911, she had thirteen puppies and on January 21, 1912, eleven puppies, making a total of twenty-four in less than twelve months, which is believed to be a record. Her remarkable retrieving qualities and memory tests would fill a column.

She was Mr. Rendle's constant companion for four years and she understood every word he spoke to her and would find articles and bring them by name. She knew the difference between gloves, handkerchief, slippers, boots, stick, leash, hat, keys, collar, etc. She frequently hunted up her leash and collar and asked to be taken out, sitting up with them in her mouth.

Dog Butts in at Wedding.

[Baltimore American:] The butting in of a dog was the cause of consternation during a marriage ceremony in the Baptist Church of Eastville, Va. The animal dashed wildly into the edifice while the bride and groom were marching to the altar and sprang upon the back of Arthur Addison, one of the ushers, grabbed his coat between its teeth and was making efforts to tear the garment from his back. The wedding party was thrown into a panic and the whole church was in an uproar, many of the women leaving, thinking the animal was suffering from rabies. The dog was finally forced to release its hold and was ejected.

It developed that the dress suit worn by the victim of the dog's teeth had been borrowed from its master. The animal had wandered into its master's room and, taking a scent of the missing clothing, followed it into incident occurred during the marriage ceremony of Harry Roberts and Miss Mabel Hemming, a daughter of Rev. Ernest Hemming. The dog is a setter and the property of C. T. Cobb of Eastville.

Courtship of Birds.

[London Standard:] "Of all the bird tribe by far the most interesting in its customs of courtship and marriage is the ruff. They are a remarkable example of selection by the female and it is possibly from a contemplation of these interesting creatures that Mr. Shaw originally got his idea for 'Man and Superman,'" said Dr. F. B. Korkman in an address before a London college.

"The ruff is a swashbuckling bird with an imposing collar or ruff of feathers round his neck and a fascinating crest of feathers on his head. His whole object in life is to please Miss Ruff, but he plays quite a passive part and can only stand and wait to be chosen, and not all of the male birds are fortunate enough to be so favored. When the time for choosing comes round the male birds take up their position on a hillside and wait for the glad moment, making themselves look as bewitching as possible.

"But of a colony of twenty-two ruffs observed only eight were chosen by the discriminating females, and of these only two—both of them very gaudy, dressy birds—were chosen time after time. One can only sympathise with the poor ruffs who were left out in the cold altogether and hope that they accepted their exclusion with some philosophy.

"Even the London sparrow is extremely interesting in his courtship, although we live a lifetime among them without knowing it. The mating of the sparrows may be observed at any time between now and June. That sudden, fierce outburst of chattering which most of us think mistakenly is the prelude to a fight is really a courtship conducted in sparrow style.

"The cocks surround a lady sparrow, each crying out shrilly his own excellencies and the shocking demerits of the others. The lady accepts all this homage by pecking furiously at all the excited suitors, but eventually she makes her choice and flies off with one, and they live happily together for the rest of the season.

"The cormorant also has a most interesting way with him. When he is in love he lies down and, twisting his neck round, lays it flat along his back. And if Miss Cormorant is touched, as she should be, by this display of misery and devotion, she gently caresses with her bill the feathers of Mr. Cormorant at the point where the neck curves over onto the body, and all is well."

Geese Pick Cotton.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] Dr. R. C. William of Tennessee, who is also a farmer, claims to have a flock of geese which he has trained to pick cotton. There are ten geese in the flock, and Dr. Williams claims each goose will pick on an average of seventy-five pounds of cotton a day, and that often his flock will gather sufficient seed cotton in one day to make two large bales.

He says he first taught his geese to pick by placing grains of corn in the opened bolls of cotton in such a way that in order to get the grain the geese would have to pick out the cotton. In that way the geese learned to look for grain in each boll, and although they were often disappointed they would get a sufficient number of grains of corn in 100 bolls to keep them enough encouraged to continue their search for the corn.

A Halibut's Rapid Growth.

[Lewiston Journal:] A remarkable incident happened during the recent trip of the schooner Avalon, which arrived at Gloucester, Mass., the other day from halibuting, there being included in the craft's catch a small halibut which bore a distinction very much out of the ordinary.

Two years ago one of the crew of the Avalon brought up a baby halibut on his trawl while fishing on Green Bank. The fish weighed about fifteen pounds and was thrown overboard. Before releasing the fish, however, the fisherman cut the initials "L. R." plainly upon its back, and nothing more was thought of the incident.

A few weeks ago, while fishing on the Western Bank, some of the crew were surprised when a halibut was hoisted on board bearing the familiar initials "L. R." Instantly some of the crew recalled the incident of two years ago, which nearly had been forgotten, and singularly enough the fish had been caught again by the crew of the same craft.

To give an idea of how fast a halibut will grow, the baby fifteen-pounder of two years ago had grown to four times his former size, tipping the scales at sixty pounds.

Bulldog Catches Foxes.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean:] Bob, the thoroughbred French bulldog belonging to Coy R. Cantrell of Lead Hill, Ark., which started Cantrell's automobile over at Harrisburg by throwing in the clutch with his paws, has again shown his versaltility by joining fox hounds in the chase.

He has more brushes to his credit than any hound in the country.

Cantrell departed last week for St. Louis to visit his sister and gave Bob to the care of his younger brother, an inveterate fox hunter. The young man allowed Bob to try a hunt one night and since that time the sound of the fox horn appeals more strongly to the dog than ever the automobile horn did.

Bob, the "chauffeur dog," is 5 years

Elephants Rarely Sleep.

[Harper's Weekly:] It is doubted whether, in the wild state, elephants ever lie down. Gordon Cumming thought he had found evidence in marks upon the ground that the adult bulls did stretch themselves out at full length for a few hours' rest at about midnight, but he contended that the young and the cows always remained on their feet.

Another authority, Selous, has expressed doubt whether even the old bulls lie down. He tells of one herd that was known to have kept moving and feeding throughout the twenty-four hours. "Except when rolling in mud and water," he says, "it is likely that an African elephant never lies down in its whole life."

However this may be, the most competent authorities seem to agree that this animal sleeps less and more lightly than any other. J. L. Kipling, the father of the writer, has estimated the period of slumber taken standing up to average about four hours in the twenty-four, and this estimate has been employed by the son in an amusing passage for one of his stories, "Moti Guj," wherein the sleep of the elephant is represented as consisting of an hour's fidgeting on one side and a similar period's fidgeting on the other, followed throughout the rest of the night "by long, low, rumbling soliliquies."

GOOD HUSBANDS SPOILED.

Many Men Are Managed Wrongly by Their Wives, Who Should Devote a Little Study to the Situation.

[Detroit News Tribune:] A good many husbands are spoiled by mismanagement. Some women go about it as if their husbands were bladders and blow them up, then keep them constantly in hot water. Others let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference, some keep them in a stew by irritating ways and words, others roast them. Some keep them in a pickle all their lives. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated.

In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying a mackerel, nor by the golden tint, as if you wanted a salmon; be sure to select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go to market for him, as the best one is brought to your door, it is far better to have none, unless you will patiently learn how to cook him. A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is the best, but if you have nothing but an earthen pipkin it will do with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons with strings tightly sewed on. Tie him in the kettle with a strong silk cord called comfort, as the one called duty is apt to become weak; make a clear, steady fire out of love, neatness and cheerfulness, set him as near this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters and fizzes do not be anxious, some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form which confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves him, but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instruments into him to see is he is becoming tender.

Royal Business Men.

[Bit-Bits:] Not a few of the rulers of the world are prosperous business men. The most conspicuous example is the Kasier, who includes among his interests a porcelain factory. The general conduct of it is based upon rules and regulations laid down by the Emperor. Indeed, it is said the Emperor is not above engaging employees himself, adjusting their wages, and even designing certain of the wares turned out. The Emperor is a model employers, anxious as to the comfort of his men, who have been provided with cottages and pensions and given a share in the profits, which are reported to approximate £10,000 a year.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the Prince of Lippe-Detmold is a dealer in butter and eggs, while he has as a side line a busy brick factory that adds materially to his income.

The King of Wurtemberg is the proprietor of two hotels within his domains, which are reported to be worth something like £9000 annually to him.

The Emperor of Austria-Hungary, like the Kaiser, operates a china factory. This establishment, situated near the Austrian capital, employs more than one thousand skilled workmen. The King of Saxony, too, has business interests of this character, though on a smaller scale.

HOW CAMILLE DE VERLAC BECAME FAMOUS FOR THE BEAUTY OF HER HANDS AND ARMS

Free Prescription That Can Be Prepared at Home.

Camille de Verlac, famous for the beauty of her hands and arms, in a recent interview says: "If every woman knew about the prescription that has caused all this talk about my hands and arms they could make their hands and arms just as beautiful as mine. I am glad to have the opportunity to give my recipe free to the world. It will help every woman to improve her personal appearance." When I asked her if she would allow me to publish the prescription, she quickly answered: "Certainly, only too glad to have you do it." Turning to a desk, she wrote it on a slip of paper and handed it to me. Here it is: "Go to any drug store, get a one-ounce bottle of Kulux compound. Pour the entire contents into a two-ounce bottle, add quarter ounce witch hazel, then fill with water. Apply night and morning. This prescription gives the skin a velvety softness and obliterates all defects such as freckles, tan, sun spots, roughness and ruddiness. A single application works a marvelous transformation." It can be applied to the neck and shoulders with equally gratifying results. It is absolutely harmless and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. It is deliciously cool and soothing, and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off.—[Advertisement.

IMPARTIAL REVIEWS BY WILLARD HUNTINGTON WRIGHT.

THRILLS IN MEXICO.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BARRANCA. By Herman Whitaker. Harper & Bros., New York.

THE Santa Gertrudes mine, take it from Herman Whitaker, was no place for timid people. Eleven persons in all had denounced it; nobody had succeeded in operating it profitably, and—what is more to the point—many had met their death under circumstances pointing to foul play. The setting, too, take it again from Herman Whitaker, was not a bed of roses. The mine was situated on the estate of none other than Don Louis Garcia, the great and wealthy landowner, who had a reputation for tenacity of purpose, and who had sworn that no gringo should ever force an entrance on his land. Furthermore, the land lay on one side of the Barranca de Guerrero, a cavernous ravine. And, to make matters worse, there lived near by a neighbor and relative of Don Louis, to wit, Don Sebastian Rocha, a gentleman possessed of darksome habits, in addition to a fierce prejudice against all Americans.

Not a place to be sought after by the uninsured! But heroes of mystery tales have nought to fear, and this is why the two dashing young Americans—Seyd and Thornton—went boldly to Mexico and the Santa Gertrudes mine to make their fortunes.

Enter, the heroine—Francesca, Don Louis's niece; a beautiful and passionate Spanish girl. "Although slender for her years—about two and twenty—her throat and bust were rounded in perfect development. . . . a bit retroussee, the small nose with its well-defined nostrils patterned after the Celtic. . . . Pretty and unusual as she was, her greatest charm centered in the large black eyes that shone amid her clear pallor, conveying in broad day the tantalizing mystery of a face seen for an instant through a warm gloaming." Is it any wonder that Seyd exclaimed: "Isn't she a peach!" It is not. Nor is it any wonder that Seyd saved her pup at the peril of his own life. Thus is romance made.

But this is just the beginning. The two Americans, take it once more from Herman Whitaker, have the time of their lives trying to get the mine operated. Sebastian, the Mexican villain, educated at a boarding school in Manchester, England, is as one with Don Luis in his determination to exclude the gringoes. And Seyd and Thornton are subjected to a series of tricks and persecutions, among which I might mention the blowing up of their smelter with dynamite. . . .

Ah, you have guessed it! You can't be fooled! It is indeed true that Sebastian has a deep and Latin passion for Francesca, and that Seyd and Francesca are in love, thereby introducing the element of amourous jealousy into the villain's machinations.

After the dynamiting of the smelter, the film turns quickly. There is a twenty-four-hour idyll of a very delicate nature when Seyd and Francesca get lost while riding cross country. Then Don Sebastian tries to drown Seyd. But our dauntless hero, though trapped in a building certain to be submerged, escapes and rescues Francesca. (See frontispiece.) Then Sebastian dies and so approaches a happy ending.

"The Mystery of the Barranca"—this time take it from me—is a real thriller. And it is more than a mere thriller. It is carefully written, and in a workmanlike manner. There is considerable attempt at character portrayal. It is melodrama plus.

PLEASING HUMOR.

BACHELOR'S BUTTONS. By Edward Burke. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.

GOOD HUMOR is rare. Therefore, such a book as "Bachelor's Buttons," being the candid confessions of a shy bachelor as described by himself, in the first person, is a welcome relief.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor,
Author of "Little Thank You."

There is nothing uproarious about this chronicle of a timid man. It is simply a smooth-sailing, discreetly-sweetened bit of sentiment concerning a school teacher, who, as he is approaching middle age, suddenly becomes enriched beyond his wildest dreams.

It is no trivial question how he will spend his money. And it is the business of the book to describe his struggles in trying to live his own life and spend his own money in his own way.

Though a woman-worshiping bachelor—like many bachelors, so I am told by many ladies of my acquaintance—he, nevertheless, is hampered by a strong-minded married sister, to whom he does not take as kindly as he should. It is necessary for him to exert positive cunning to dodge the boss rule of this determined wench. But so tender is the bachelor's nature that even this form of self protection makes him conscience stricken. He decides to live in the country and do gardening, for he has a mania for growing things. But Edward needs a housekeeper, and this is supplied him by his sister. However, this housekeeper turns out to be a crook who elopes with some of the silver.

Enter Dorothea, a handsome and buxom village maid. Dorothea knows how to keep house, and things go smoothly until she and Angus, the gardener, cast amorous eyes upon each other. The bachelor, innocent beyond all human belief, is constantly interfering between these two naive lovers, not knowing that when they appear to be quarreling, they are in reality courting in the most approved fashion.

Edward also has his troubles with the big-wigs of the village, who try to make a fuss over him on account of his money, but who are insulted by his innocence, which they think affected.

But no bachelor can escape for long. Such is not the history of that tribe. Sooner or later the right lady appears. It may be a suffragette or a chorus girl; a widow or an old girl of many winters. But she comes, and with her arrival is the end of all man's resolutions. We were morally sure something would happen when the beautiful daughters of the village clergyman set their caps for him. We knew, of course, that he would not marry the beautiful one, for such is not the formula of quiet and homely humor. There is something worldly in beauty, and a gentleman who is depicted for us in overalls, with a spade and a sprinkling-can, knows nothing of the lure of physical beauty. Nor should he. Beauty is for the frivolous, and Edward was anything but that. So it is the homely daughter of the clergyman who remains in the background during all the Shavian advances of her handsome sisters, who wins the rich bachelor gardener.

An amiable story, told with no little amount of amusing detail and written with a light touch. Perhaps a word of commendation should be given Mr. Burke for his characterization of Melia-Hann, an exaggerated English gutter type. Here is a consistently-drawn figure—a character more sharply delineated than any other in the book.

THE LAW'S MAJESTY.

ROMANTIC TRIALS OF THREE CENTURIES. By Hugh Childers. The John Lane Company, New York.

A UNIQUE and fascinating book is Hugh Childers's "Romantic Trials of Three Centuries." It seems strange to me that this particular form of book has not been attempted before, for it surely contains enough personal and historical interest to make the undertaking worth while.

The volume deals with twelve famous trials of history between the years 1650 and 1850. Each trial has been selected either because it possessed something exceptionally interesting in regard to establishing a legal precedent, because it set forth the thought of the time, or else because it introduced some interesting historical personage.

There is a great deal of human interest in these stories. Especially interesting are those trials of the Restoration period, because they show us the curious opinions of the times. The case, for instance, of the Suffolk witches, is an intimately vivid account of that famous trial at which Sir Matthew Hale, a fervant Christian, presided. It was this pious gentleman who let the women die and afterward congratulated himself upon his righteous action.

Then we have the trial of William Penn for unlawful assembly, which was memorable because it indicated the right of juries to acquit without penalty being attached.

Follows then the trials of the murderers of Thomas Thyne, the friend of Monmouth; Beau Fielding's trial in which is introduced his pseudo-wife, Barbara, Duchess of Cleveland; the case of Elizabeth Canning, Duchess of Kingston, a lady whose personality was far from colorless, who was bold and shameless and revengeful; the case of Jean Peltier, who was prosecuted in 1802 for libeling Napoleon Bonaparte; the trial of Disraeli; and last, the trial of James Thomas, Seventh Earl of Cardigan, for shooting a certain Capt. Tuckett with intent to murder him.

There is interesting history in the account of these events, and there is more than that, there is interesting human material—Sir Thomas Brown in the witness box assisting in the destruction of two old women charged with witchcraft; Madame Tallien scandalizing the Assize Court by her extravagant costumes; the cross-examination of forty witnesses, inn keepers and coast guards to describe the actions of an old gypsy tramping from Dorsetshire to London in 1753.

Mr. Childers has done his work well. He has a simple narrative style, and he knows how many excerpts to use and how long they should be. There is no preponderance of detail and yet he presents a very plain picture of those different phases of legal history which he has gathered together under the caption "Romantic Trials of Three Centuries."

AN IMPORTANT ADDENDUM.

THE BRITANNICA YEAR BOOK: 1913. Published by the Encyclopaedia Britannica Company, New York.

THE first copies of the Britannica Year-Book, 1913, were recently published in America by the Encyclopaedia Britannica Company. It is an independent publication based on the idea of doing for a single year (in the present instance, 1911-1912,) what the eleventh edition of the Encyclopaedia has done for all the time prior to 1911. Issued under the direction of the same editorial organization, it provides a review of contemporary additions to history and knowledge which is at once interesting to read and valuable as supplying information often difficult of access and obtainable in no other single book.

To owners of the eleventh edition of the Britannica it will be useful in a double sense; independently as a year-book, focusing attention on the progress of the world's activities in all fields during the period covered, and as a companion volume to the Encyclopaedia, supplying, on many important subjects, information which has become available since that work appeared.

For greater convenience the arrangement of the Year Book is by classification of the subjects, instead of alphabetical, while a detailed index makes every item of information contained in the book instantly accessible.

The scope of the book is very wide. There are separate articles covering every country of the world, giving an account of its current history, and physical and economic development, administration, statistics, etc. Then there are separate chapters covering all the sciences, art and literature of all countries, philosophy, education, religion, archaeology, engineering, law, industry, sports and games, etc. There is an appendix dealing exclusively with international statistics.

Among the articles of immediate interest are found accounts of the Turco-Italian and Balkan wars, by Maj. H. H. Wade, editor of the English Official Army Review; "Woman's Suffrage," by Mrs. W. L. Courtney; "Medicine," by Dr. Stephen Paget; "Dentistry," by Dr. E. C. Kirk of Philadelphia, editor of The Dental Cosmos; "Osteopathy," by Dr. G. W. Riley of New York; "The Montessori System and the Probem of Mental Defectives," by the editor; "Aeronautics," by J. H. Ledeboer; "American Sports," by Walter Camp. Prof. Sait of Columbia College writes on American history, Royal Cortissoz and Montgomery Schuyler on American painting and sculpture, and American architecture, respectively. H. W. Boynton contributes the resume of American literature. Especially noteworthy articles are "New Light on Greek Art," by Prof. Gardner of Oxford; "The Roman Catholic Church," by John Snead-Cox, editor of the London Tablet, and "New Fibers," by C. F. Cross.

The Britannica Year-Book brings the march of events and the story of the world's progress down to the present year. It contains, for example, the story of the death of Capt. Scott in the Antarctic and also includes the Inauguration of President Wilson, together with the names of members of the new Cabinet, which were not officially known until a day or two before the inauguration in March.

BOOK NEWS.

Harper & Bros. announce th are putting to press this week for reprinting, "The Candidate," by Joseph A. Altsheler.

The American publication early next fall of "The Magic Formula," a third collection of studies similar to "Mad Sheperds," by L. P. Jacks, editor of the Hubbert Journal, has just been arranged for by Henry Holt & Co., with Williams and Norgate of London.

Miss Marshall Saunders, the writer of animal stories, is issuing through L. C. Page & Co., at once, "Pussy Black Face," the story of a Beacon-street kitten. In this story Miss Saunders has done for cats what her "Beautiful Joe" did for dogs.

Algernon Blackwood has a new book almost ready for publication. It is entitled, "A Prisoner in Fairyland."

Five or six editions of Mr. Bryce's "South American Observation and Impressions" are still being run off, though the book is not a year old.

Coincident with the unveiling of the statue commemorating Carl Schurz, the Putnams have published, "The Letters, Speeches and Correspondence of Carl Schurz," edited by Frederick Bancroft, author of "The Life of Seward."

A number of additions were made this month to Macmillan's 50-cent reprints known as the Macmillan Standard Library, and Macmillan's Modern Fiction Library. In the former were brought out H. G. Well's "New Worlds for Old," Norman Hapgood's "Abraham Lincoln," Dr. Shailer Mathew's "The Church and the Changing Order," and the Rev. Charles Jefferson's "The Building of the Church," while in the fiction library James Lane Allen's "A Kentucky Cardinal," E. V. Lucas's "Mr. Ingleside," Charles G. D. Roberts's "Kings in Exile" and Elizabeth Robins's "A Dark Lantern" were issued.

A newer and cheaper edition of "The New Competition," by Arthur Jerome Eddy has just been issued. "The New Competition" submits competition as the term is understood, to an analysis, and goes on to offer a plea for co-operation of all classes, mercantile as well as laboring. Not only the right to co-operate, but the necessity thereof is urged in order to get the best results at the least expense.

Ralph Henry Barbour has a new novel called "Peggy-in-the-Rain," which has just been published by D Appleton & Co. The story is reported to be a romance of the sort that feminine readers prefer and particularly now that the hammock season has opened.

A tourist edition of three of Clifton Johnson's "Highways and Byways," volumes—"The Great Lakes," "The Rocky Mountains" and "The Mississippi Valley,"—is now ready. This has been prepared with the needs of the motorist in view. To each chapter the author has appended a detailed note for the automobilist in which everything that he should know about the territory covered on the preceding pages is taken up. The book retains all of Mr. Johnson's illustrations and the old text as well. In making these additions the volumes have been turned to a new and practical end. The combination of anecdote, description, illustrations, and information for the traveler, will doubtless find many readers.

Two new volumes have recenly been added to the Wisdom of the East series, issued by E. P. Dutton & Company, "The Way of Contentment," translated from the Japanese of Kaibara Ekken by Ken Hoshino. The quotations from the Confucian physician's quaint precepts cover his philosophy of pleasure, and his teachings on popular morals, on learning "the art of the heart," etc. The other volume is Margaret Murray's version of "Ancient Egyptian Legends." These are not literal translations, but a rendering of their significance into English.

Harper Bros. announce the publication this month of six new books: "The turning of Griggsby," by Irving Bacheller; "Isobel," by James Oliver Curwood; "Our Own Weather," by Edwin C. Martin; "Harper's Book for Young Naturalists," by Alpheus Hyatt Verrill, and two additions to "Harper's Library of Living Thought," "The Age of the Earth," by Arthur Holmes, and "Ahe the Planets Inhabited?" by Edward W. Maunder.

Henry Holt & Company, have just sent to press the eighth edition of Julie M. Lippmann's "Martha-by-the-Day," and Banister's standard handy little manual on music.

The Macmillan Company have recently published "The Posture of School Children," by Jessie H. Bancroft. This deals constructively with the maintenance of good posture in growing children, the term posture being used to denote the habitual carriage of the body, especially in the erect position. The failure to achieve and hold the correct position in childhood is the cause of far-reaching harm, many disturbances both acute and chronic being, according to Miss Bancroft, directly traceable to it. The application of pedagogical principles to the training of children in correct habits of posture and a working description of some of the new efficiency methods of obtaining correct posture are presented.

The John Lane Company have just published "The Invincible Alliance," by Francis Grierson. It is a volume of essays on various subjects political, social and literary. Some of the titles are: "The Prophet Without Honor" "The Parliamentary Arena," "Republic or Empire," "Impressions of Italy," "Materialism and Crime," "The Agnostic Agony," "Psychology of Dress," "France Old and New," "The New Era," etc.

There is no more romantic story in English history than is related by B. C. Hardy in his biography of "Arbella Stuart." It deals in detail with her childhood at the home of her famous grandmother, Bess of Hardwick, reproduces from authentic sources scenes of her life at the court of Queen Elizabeth, and relates the tragic end of her ill-fated secret marriage.

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Brand Whitlock, the author-Mayor of Toledo, O., whose treatise on municipal reform and the correction of civic evils, has just appeared under the title "On the Enforcement of Law in Cities," before coming to Toledo and entering politics, there, was a newspaper reporter on the old Chicago Herald. While engaged in this pursuit Mr. Whitlock was a member of the old Whitechapel Club, of which, at the same time, Peter Dunne, George Ade an dother men now prominent in the literary world, were active members of the organization. Mr. Whitlock always took a great interest in politics and was sent all over the country by the Herald to "cover" large political conventions.

"Vera Nikto" is the nom de plume of the author of "A Mere Woman," and but thinly disguises a well-known Princess at present living in England at her country home on the Thames, where she devotes the greater part of her time to gardening. Apart from her flowers and dogs, her special hobby is bookbinding in which art she is no amateur. The late King Edward the year before his death secured from the Princess copies of his favorite books, specially bound, to present at Christmas to Queen Alexandra and other members of his family.

Mrs. Edith Barnard Delano, author of "The Land of Content," passed much of her childhood not far from Baltimore on a large stock farm, which, "before the war," would have been known as a plantation. She says that when she was a little girl it was her great delight to be pressed into service as a jockey to exercise the young horses on the half-mile track. White Rosy, the doctor's wise old horse in "The Land of Content," had her original in one of the horses on that farm named Lightfoot. It was said that Lightfoot knew so much that she could take a shopping list to town and come home with the parcels; but, Mrs. Delano admits, the experiment was never really tried.

Miss Lillian Whiting has just returned from a prolonged visit to Greece where she went to obtain material at first hand for her autumn book of travel and description to be called "Athens, the Violet-Crowned." Miss Whiting's book will be up-to-date as she observed the effect of the war in the Balkans on the Greeks, and furthermore she was present in Athens during the assassination and funeral of the late King. She brought back with her a collection of pictures which will be reproduced in her book.

Give Octave Thanet (Miss Alice French,) the Davenport author, a first-class, unique, brain-racking puzzle picture to puzzle over and she is happy. She spends the dull winter evenings and the hot summer afternoons trying to "work them out," and always has a goodly supply of them on hand to entertain her friends who call. In fact, frequently Miss Thanet, who is a charming hostess, gives a puzzle-picture party and has puzzles of her own invention made especially for the occasion. Miss Thanet is very fond of bridge whist also. As a girl she studied Schopennauer and Hegel; now she reads Bergson a great deal. She enjoys an intimate view into the political and commercial affairs of her city, and takes a lively interest in labor matters. She is an admirer of John Mitchell, although she takes issue with him on a number of points.

In her latest story, "A Step on the Stair," she deals with the much-mooted belief of life after death.

The first Loubat prize of $1000 for the best work printed and published in the English language upon the history, geography, archaeology, enthnology, philology, or numismatics of North America during the quinquennial period ending July 1, 1913, was awarded to George Louis Beer for his series of works on the British Colonial system. These are published in four volumes entitled respectively: "British Colonial Policy. 1754-1765, Origin of the British Colonial System. 1578-1660, and the Old Colonial System, Part 1, in two volumes.

Ines Haynes Gillmore, author of the Phoebe and Ernest stories, and her husband, Rufus Gillmore, author of "The Mystery of the Second Shot," are not only both authors, but, by an odd coincidence, both have publishers in the same building. Mrs. Gillmore publishes through Henry Holt & Co. and her husband through D. Appleton & Co. Mrs. Gillmore has just left the city for the summer at her Scituate (Mass.) bungalow, where she is in constant touch with a number of literary and artistic people, including Alice Beckington, Samuel Merwin, Franklin P. Adams, Will Irwin, Adriana, Spadoni, Gelett Burgess, Edna Kenton, Maude Radford Warren, Mrs. Jaques Futrelle and Boardman Robinson. Mr. Gillmore has been making a tour of Kentucky and other Southern States, but is expected to reach Scituate within a day or two.

Kate Jordan has written in her new May novel, "The Creeping Tides," a romance with its scenes laid in a quaint Greenwich village in lower New York. The principal characters are John Cross, an English soldier concealing a shattered reputation, and Fanny Barrett, hiding from an obsessing terror. The atmosphere of this old section of New York is said to be accurately reproduced. Kate Jordan's first novel was called "Time, the Comedian."

Frederick Chamberlain, the author of a new book on the Philippines called "The Philippine Problem," is a successful Boston lawyer and author. He is a graduate of Exeter (N. H.) Academy and the Harvard Law School and his journalistic experience includes the post of Paris correspondent of the Boston Herald. Among other books, Mr. Chamberlain has written "The Blow From Behind," dealing with anti-imperialism, and a southern novel, "The Shoe String County." He has studied the Philippine situation on the islands (where he was among the first to interview Aguinaldo) and since his return. Mr. Chamberlin is now pursuing his literary work in London.

Charles A. Bond, one of the editors of The Tobacco Leaf and a former member of the Third Regiment, Regular United States Artillery, has prepared for publication a journal of his experiences in the Philippines and the Far East during the Spanish War and the efforts at pacification after the Philippine outbreak. Mr. Bond filled about twenty notebooks with sketches while in the trenches before Manila, Callicoon, etc.; participated in many engagements under Funston, Otis and other noted generals, and was present at the death of Lawton and Logan.

A Few Logical Reasons Why Brent's Sell Merchandise for Less

We Control Money Enough

Enabling us to take advantage of any bargain that is offered—whether it be a Bankrupt Stock or a Factory's Over-production—no matter how large the quantity.

Our Facilities

—for handling large quantities of goods could not be improved. Our establishment contains nearly 100,000 feet floor space. We are able to carry nearly a quarter-million dollars of goods and still have plenty of space to display our merchandise.

We Have No High Priced Men

—in charge of our buying and selling forces. R. J. Brent, with over 25 years' experience, fills this capacity.

The Cost of Delivery

—constitutes one of the largest items of expense in the furniture business, but Brent's reduces it to a minimum.

In conjunction with our delivery we conduct a Van and Storage business. Our moving vans, auto trucks and wagons deliver goods from our store and return from various parts of the city and outlying districts with household goods to our warehouse. In connection with this service we keep three men on motorcycles who report to the main office every hour and who are sent in response to phone calls to give estimates on Van and Storage work in any part of the town.

Rent, Another Big Item of Expense

—It is estimated that our building is worth about three times the amount we are paying. We were fortunate enough to make a low-price lease about 7 years ago and still have years to run.

If we were compelled to pay three times more rent than we are now paying, we should have to raise the selling price of our goods about 25 per cent.

—No sale that the Broadway Department Store pro ries greater prestige or offers greater opportunities to this Annual Department Managers' Sale.
—Thirteen years ago we began this sale and each year th become of greater importance.

—Twenty-one department managers, in charge of between 50 and 60 departments, have been given carte blanche to take complete charge of this sale.

No restrictions have been placed upon them. "This is your sale," says the Management, "make the most of it."

—Total sales is the main object, total sales that must eclipse the records of last year.

—For three or four months the buyers have had this sale before them, planning for it, buying the merchandise, selecting it, item by item, that they might present values for the two weeks of this sale that would make it the most talked-of event for years.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.
STUDIO PARLORS 539½ S. BROADWAY.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 29 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage; financial affairs, talents, environments; about children, relatives; when and where to travel, what to seek or avoid, when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES of these events for the FUTURE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Schumann-Heink, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Senator Smoot, Baron Rothschild, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Sembrich, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Hobson, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, Ethel Barrymore, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED work must not be classed with other readers. Do not waste money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE gives expert PALM READings with each astrological reading.

DR. J. A. LARSEN writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and in HAND reading has brought him a LARGE and SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Personal attention given. STRICT PRIVACY. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and many years of experience can produce. HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE solicited.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

BUYING ECONOMY.

The original worth of a used car should be considered as well as its present condition. Tires and gasoline are not the only expense to figure on—repairs and broken parts are much more costly. Mitchell cars have always been sturdily built—they always pay to buy second hand and they are economical on tires and gasoline. We can show you every part that enters into a Mitchell. Why not see these parts and judge the worth of our Mitchell used cars? Our prices are low and we give terms if desired. Both roadsters and touring cars in stock. Write us for our list, or phone for demonstration.

COAL LAND FOR SALE OR TRADE—
320 acres coal land in Colorado containing at least 30,000,000 tons of highest grade bituminous coal outcropping on tract; appraised value by United States government $40,000.00, but this value based on quantity and quality coal only, and without taking into consideration immense added value of strategic location. Land originally selected and patented solely because of great value strategic position for operating coal that for 20 miles no other feasible position; commands access to coal that for twenty miles no other feasible position to mine compels acquirement this land before other company can successfully operate; controls only water supply and only feasible route for railroad. Owing to strategic position, quantity and quality of coal, worth $150,000.00 as investment. Will sell or trade for $15,000.00; take city or country. Write the owner, RALPH S. CURIOSITIES OF MEMORY.

Difference Between Man and Animals, Birds and Insects, the Latter Depending Little on Sense of Sight.

[Youth's Companion:] Let us suppose that a man, in the full possession of all his senses, is accustomed to find his favoriate chair placed in a certain spot, near a window, and suppose that on one occasion the chair is taken away. It would be very odd indeed if the man came into the room in broad daylight, and made repeated and obstinate efforts to sit down in the empty space where the chair usually stood. For our memory is chiefly a memory of things that we see, rather than a memory of our own movements. But many animals have the odd type of memory that the man would display if he insisted on going through his habitual movements in the absence of the chair.

Prof. Watson of Johns Hopkins University has for several summers studied the habits of the sea birds that nest on the Tortugas Islands. Among other experiments, he raised or lowered their nests, which are built near the ground, while the bird was away. The returning bird would always hover about and attempt to alight in the empty air at the former height of the nest.

When honey bees are carried a long distance from their hives and are set free, they first fly far up into the air, as if to look for a familiar landmark. Then they drop back, and have been observed to hover in the air at exactly the height of the entrance to their home hive.

A still more striking case of this kind has been observed in a chipmunk by R. B. Rockwell, who describes it in the Journal of Animal Behavior. The little creature had made her nest in a mattress on a spring cot. The young were discovered, mistaken for mice and destroyed. The cot was removed altogether. The mother, returning, went to the spot where she had been accustomed to climb up the frame of the cot to her nest.

Here she stood on her hind legs and pawed the air frantically in the effort to find the missing frame. Several times she jumped high into the air from this position, and finding no frame to catch, fell backward.

Another observer reports that a bat, whose actions he was studying, was accoustomed on entering its cage to fly up to a piece of white cloth that hung on the opposite wall. The cage was turned completely round so that the door through which the bat entered was on the opposite side. The piece of cloth was still attached to the wall, but, although it was in plain sight, the bat flew to the position in space, now over the door, that the cloth had occupied when the cage was in its former position. Such a memory of place in and for itself, quite apart from the objects that are to be seen there, is almost unknown to human beings. Evidently these animals do not depend upon the sense of sight completely as we do.

FRANCE'S WEALTH PRODUCERS.

An Industrious and Thrifty Peasantry Is the Backbone of the Republic—Net Returns Are Small.

[The Argonaut:] The steady decline of population has long been a subject of serious concern to French statesmen. But another and more alarming discovery has been made. The French peasant is losing his reputation as a wealth producer. The vast accumulation of reserve capital in France, and the general prosperity of the country, are due in no small degree to the existence of an industrious and thrifty peasantry. The peasant is the backbone of the republic. And yet all is well with agriculture in France. The subject has been thoroughly ventilated in the Paris press.

It will surprise most people to know that the net returns to the French farmer are lower than those of most countries in Europe. Denmark, only fourth the size, exports four times more agricultural produce than France. Germany and Belgium, although mainly industrial countries, have a relatively greater agricultural export than France, which is primarily an agricultural nation. The return per acre to land under crops in France is lower than in Denmark, Belgium, England or Germany in the order of production. France shows increasing imports of eggs and butter, although twelve years ago France exported more eggs than Denmark.

Ruskin Did Not Subscribe.

[New York Sun:] Appeals for subscriptions meet with various responses, but the following response from Ruskin to an appeal for a subscription toward the building of an iron church in London probably is unique:

"I am scornfully amused at your appeal to me, of all people in the world the precisely least likely to give you a farthing! My first word to all men and boys who care to hear me is: 'Don't get into debt.' Starve, and go to heaven, but don't borrow. Try first begging—I don't mind, if it's really needful, stealing! But don't buy things you can't pay for.'

"And of all manner of debtors, pious people building churches they can't pay for are the most detestable nonsense to me. Can't you pray and preach behind the hedges or in a sand pit, or a coal hole first? And of all manner of churches thus built, iron churches are the damnablest to me. And of all sects, of believers in any ruling spirit, Hindus, Turks, Feather Idolators and Mumbo Jumbo, Log and Fire Worshippers, who want churches your modern English evangelical sect is the most absurd and entirely objectionable and unendurable to me."

The letter was sold at auction for $50 and the sum was conscientiously handed over to the building fund.

THE NOTABLE ADVENTURES OF "SOLID IVORY" TIERNEY.

BY JOHN A. MOROSO.

THE GREAT EAGLE TRUST ROBBERY.

M'MACKIN, the desk lieutenant, kept his heavy jowls close to the blotter.

James Tierney, plainclothesman, might as well have been in Madison Square as in front of the desk in the Oak-street station, for all the lieutenant was concerned.

"I caught him in the act of taking money for a drink and there was no sandwich on the table," Tierney was saying, as he held fast to the sleeve of his prisoner.

It was Sunday night, and theoretically, no liquor is sold in New York on Sundays.

The prisoner laughed. He was fat and good-natured and wore a diamond in his bosom that splintered the light as it struck its facets.

Tierney drawled out the details of the arrest as the desk lieutenant scratched away, and when he had finished, McMackin looked up, arched his eyebrows and exclaimed, "As I live!"

Tierney's face flushed. His eyes blinked uneasily as if he were preparing to wince under the next shaft of sarcastic comment from behind the desk.

He was new on the force, raw as a boy and honest as a dollar fresh from the mint. He was doing his first year as a plainclothesman in a station, and he did so want to be a real detective.

On this occasion he had arrested [illegible]—none other than Dolan, a man who sent other men to the Legislature, to Congress, to the police force or the Mayorality chair, a man to whom aldermen bowed low and invited to weddings.

"All right, Tierney," said the desk lieutenant, with ineffable weariness in his tone. "You may have the rest of the night off. I'll report the case to the captain when he comes in. Mr. Dolan is his brother-in-law, you know."

"Yes," grunted the faithful Tierney, as he turned from the desk.

McMackin tapped his head with an ink-stained finger.

"Solid ivory," he said to Dolan, who was laughing softly.

Tierney heard the comment as he slammed the door of the station-house behind him. His blue eyes sparkled with resentment and anger. As he strolled away from the station he was glad that it was raining. It cooled his face and soothed him. It was near midnight when he stopped at the corner of New Chambers and Rose streets.

He saw a lone woman turn the corner and start south. As she passed under an arc light, he saw by the twisting of her features that she was crying. Both rain and tears battered her face.

Tierney had nothing else to do. He started along, trailing the creature. He forgot Dolan and the mean-speaking McMackin. Here was a woman in danger at midnight, out in the rain, headed into the heart of the [illegible] district. What did it mean? The wind whipped her drenched garments about her. She fought her way south on Rose street in the teeth of the blast. Through the black maw of the third river-ward arch of Brooklyn bridge she made her way.

Nearing Fulton street, she came upon a shadow at her right hand. It was not a shadow cast by some hidden light, but that dreadful cumulative darkness only the mouth of an alley can make. In the row of old [illegible] buildings, six and seven stories high, it showed as an empty socket in a row of teeth yellowed with years of grinding. She stopped and peered into the hell-hole. A sickly flame of light showed among barrels and boxes, and bales of rope and rags.

She entered the alley and went to the place where the light flickered and hissed in the rain and tumbling winds.

The door at which she paused was forbidding. Its lintel was of granite, eaten into by years of hard service.

A midge of a boy with a gunny sack swung over his little shoulder popped out of the shadows ahead of the woman, forced open the door and kicked it back of him. His little face, showing in the lamplight inside, was pinched and cunning. It was the face of a thief.

The woman took vigorous hold on the door, threw it open and stepped inside.

A MOTHER'S PROTEST.

"Two dollars."

The voice was that of a bartering man.

"F'r the love of Mike, be reasonable."

The protest was that of a gamin, a [illegible] of the streets of New York.

"Take it away," sounded the man's voice.

The haggling was done behind the wall of junk that was the weighty [illegible] of the night.

The child was making a bluff at shouldering his gunny sack and departing when the woman slammed the door behind her.

The junk dealer sprang from his chair and thrust the lad into a pile of rags before he peered around the side of his barricade.

He was a powerful, dominant man of middle age. His eyes were small and gray and hard, like bits of polished Vermont granite. His jaws were big and strong. His neck was columnar.

She was not afraid of him. She went toward him and trespassed upon his snuggery.

"Mike!" she called, unheeding the [illegible] brute before her. "Mike! Don't yer hear me? It's your mother—your old mother."

Mike wriggled deeper in his rag heap.

She saw the bits of dirty silk, cotton and wool move and reached a long, thin arm into the heap. She found Mike and her clutch made fast to the scruff of his neck.

The boy began to bellow, and crocodile tears of repentance coursed his dirty face in muddied canals.

The woman dragged her progeny from the barricade and started with him for the door.

O'Hagan had lighted his pipe.

"There's two dollars comin' to ye," he said, between puffs.

He reached a big, red paw into his [illegible] coat pocket and fumbled for his wallet.

"Two dollars, is it?" barked the woman at the door, as the wind rushed in with the hissing and spitting sound of the rain-swept torch [illegible]. "Two dollars, is it, Mr. O'Hagan? May the good Lord strike you dead if you don't pay more than that f'r the making of a thief out of me only child."

Her voice lost its harshness in a [illegible] sob.

"Take yer brat away an' keep him away," snarled O'Hagan.

The door slammed behind the woman and her child.

HE MAKES A PROMISE.

Being honest, Tierney was a subject of curiosity and annoyance to others of his profession. Tierney became a pariah. The captain did not seem to care whether he ever showed up for duty.

With doglike fidelity, Tierney began the rounds of the junk shops, a most dreary, hopeless, fruitless field. He looked on these places merely as miserable markets for the sweepings that the utterly impoverished might gather and exchange for a few pennies. In his memory, however, was the picture of the woman he had trailed to O'Hagan's place in the alley.

His job was to loaf. All that his captain wanted him to do was to keep away from the station and not "muss up" things. He had been told that very frankly when he was assigned to inspect the junk shops.

Tierney left the station and struck over to Park Row. It was just after sunset, with the first snow of winter flying prettily in the air.

He passed the many brightly-lighted windows of cheap tailors and restaurants and finally got out of the crowd and into the quiet of Gold street. He turned north, paused in front of an alley, beheld the light of O'Hagan's torch, hesitated and was debating whether he should drop in on O'Hagan, when a shawled woman collided with him, gave a cry of mingled pain of soul and body, and fell in a swoon at his feet.

"Say, git up," exclaimed Tierney. "What the dickens!"

He leaned down and picked up the creature—the same woman he had trailed the night he arrested the captain's brother-in-law.

Seeing that her hair was gray and that her face was white, her hands torn by labor and her clothes but rags, he felt a wave of pity come over him.

Tierney supported the woman in his strong, young arms.

With a pitifully feeble struggle she released herself.

"What's the trouble?" asked Tierney.

"Mike," she whimpered.

"Who's Mike?" asked Tierney.

"Me son."

"What's he been up to?"

"Stealin' f'r O'Hagan."

"The junk man?"

"Yes."

"What'd he steal?"

"Nozzles."

"Nozzles?"

"Yes, from the hose in a loft building."

"A felony," said Tierney.

"Yes, an' me tryin' to save him from Sing Sing."

Tierney, somehow, felt that the gray, worn, ragged woman beside him was giving him a tip for his long-desired case.

"Looks bad for him," suggested Tierney.

"Me only child," the mother sobbed.

"Is the boy wrong in the nut?" he asked.

"No," the mother replied. "It's O'Hagan. He pays well for the junk. He's makin' a burglar of me boy Mike."

The woman began to cry.

"Say, don't cry," Tierney besought her. "I'm a cop."

The woman slunk into a shadow afraid.

"Don't be scared," he assured her. "I won't pinch Mike. I'll try to get the goods on O'Hagan."

ON THE ALERT.

None of the junkmen believed that Tierney was honest. They sized him up as a combination of stupidity and rank failure as a detective.

O'Hagan was not surprised when Tierney confided to him that he had hopes of getting off the force and running a shop of some kind himself.

"There's nothing in this game for me," Tierney told him. "It's a rotten job for a grown man to be chasing after a lot of kids for swiping truck. If I pinched one of them the papers would make fun of me and call attention to the gilded dens of vice that are wide open uptown. I'd be the goat—the prize, blue-ribbon Angora."

With Tierney, the disguise of a chucklehead seemed to fit ideally.

One night a charwoman from one of the downtown buildings brought in a gunny sack filled with scrap paper.

O'Hagan paid her in greasy and well-worn coin for it and instead of tossing the bag into the paper heap, he carelessly threw it over toward a pile of broken iron.

It took Tierney a half-hour to figure out that O'Hagan did not want that bundle of scrap paper mixed with the rest of his stock.

"Why?" Tierney asked himself.

Tierney let his pipe go out, made a pretence of looking for a match and then reached over and pulled out a slip of paper from the open sack. He was about to twist it into a spill and poke the end in the stove, when O'Hagan handed him a lighted match.

"Thanks," said Tierney, taking the match, but holding onto the spill.

O'Hagan's eyes never left the scrap of paper in the hands of the plainclothes man. Tierney, fearing to rouse his suspicions, dropped it to the floor.

Tierney felt that O'Hagan had no idea that he coveted the tiniest particle of this cast-off matter near him and so, with great care, when he began to pull on his rubbers, he ran a chance and slipped a bit of it into one of his gum shoes.

When he was safe at home that night he removed the slip of paper from his gum shoe, unfolded it carefully, saw that it had been torn from a scratch pad and that at the top in small type was printed: "The Eagle Trust Company."

HE MAKES A DISCOVERY.

Tierney cherished this bit of paper, placing it carefully away with his insurance policy. From time to time he managed to accumulate other scraps of paper from this particular lot of waste which seemed to interest O'Hagan.

He trailed the woman who sold the stuff to O'Hagan, and found that she was one of three of her sex who cleaned the ground floor of the building in which the Eagle Trust Company had offices.

This did not explain O'Hagan's special interest in her bags of waste. He thought that perhaps it was a superior brand of paper, and that for this reason O'Hagan was keeping it separate from the rest of his purchases. He tested this theory by showing it to a paper manufacturer. The manufacturer informed him that it was a very cheap make of paper and such as was generally used for scratch pads.

Tierney decided that there was but one way to discover the secret of the scratch pad interest on the part of the junk man, and that was to get it from O'Hagan himself.

Above the junk shop was an empty loft. Entrance to it was from Cliff street. Tierney invested in two good steel penknives, and by carefully measuring, marked a spot in the floor of the empty loft which would place him right over the tumble-down desk near the stove in the back of the junk shop. With his knives he cut away carefully until finally a sliver of light came to his eyes from below. A pair of tweezers lifted up the shred of wood and Tierney began to cut softly and slowly for another opening. Soon he had two tiny slits made without even the smallest splinter of wood dropping in the junk shop to startle the man he was after. The plainclothes man found that he could see everything on the desk below and that his radius of vision was as much as two feet on either side. Night after night when he had left the junk-shop, he would slip into the loft entrance around the corner from the alley and stretch himself on his stomach and watch O'Hagan.

For a week the junkman sorted the slips brought from the Eagle Trust Company's waste baskets and finally a little pile of sheets lay on his desk. They were blank pages of a scratch pad.

Tierney saw O'Hagan adjust a microscope, arrange the light and begin a study of the little white sheets. Finally he heard a grunt of satisfaction escape the lips of the patient student of scrap paper and he saw him jot down a row of figures after taking his eyes from the glass.

Tierney heard O'Hagan chuckling with delight as he put the blank sheet and his memorandum in a little drawer of the desk, turn out the light and depart for home.

On his way home, Tierney bought a microscope at a fence on Park Row. It was a good one. He spent half a night in finding how to adjust it. Finally he had the lenses set right and he peeked into the mystery of one of his blank sheets. He saw nothing but the big, porous, pulpous matter that a sheet of paper under a microscope is.

The third sheet showed strange canals in the pulpous matter. They were magnified until they looked like gullies. He worked over them slowly and carefully, beginning at the bottom of one of the canals and following it. He traced a gigantic and writhing "2." He worked on and made out a canal "4" and he desisted not until he had discovered in the apparently blank sheet of paper the number 242,687.

Tierney felt the red hair on his head begin to crinkle. He was in a world unexplored by the average station plainclothes man. He was seeing things the human eye could not see unassisted. He pulled out his sheet of paper and felt it lightly with his smooth fingers. He felt or imagined he felt the corrugations.

What made them?

THE RIFLED SAFE.

When Mr. Severin Cuyler, president of the Eagle Trust Company, entered the company's offices on the ground floor of the highest of the downtown skyscrapers, it was within a second or two of the time set for the clock in his modern safe to release the mass of bolts and steel rods as soon as the combination was worked out.

William Harding, the cashier, bade him a respectful good morning as he leaned over the brightly shining tumblers of the vault. The cashier held in his left hand a slip of paper on which was written the combination. His deft fingers twirled the silver knob in the bowl and then the big steel door swung open.

Mr. Cuyler went on to his private office. He was taking off his overcoat when the door was thrown open violently and Harding ran to him, his face white as chalk.

"What's happened?" asked the president.

"The money has been taken from the safe!" gasped Harding.

"Impossible!" exclaimed Cuyler.

"Come and see, Mr. Cuyler," the cashier said, imploringly.

The two entered the portals of the vault. The books, stacks of stocks and bonds were all in place. The vault doors showed no signs of having been tampered with. The door of the inner safe where the cash money had been stored—$150,000—was open. Not a gold or silver piece, not a bank note, was there.

Cuyler look at his cashier.

"I am innocent," replied the cashier. "Search me, send detectives to my home, do anything you wish. I shall be glad to help."

"Close the vault doors," directed Cuyler, as they passed out. "Do not use the time lock. Make the combination the same as was used last night."

The cashier obeyed, his hands trembling.

He followed Cuyler back to the president's office.

The banker consulted a note book, got the telephone number he wanted and then called the headquarters of the detective agency having in hand the work of the Bankers' Association.

"This is Mr. Cuyler of the Eagle Trust Company," he spoke into the mouthpiece, when his call was answered. "Send the superintendent here immediately. It is very urgent."

He hung up the receiver and pressed a pearl button on his desk. His vice-president and manager responded.

"Not a word of this, Martin, to any one," warned the president. "The cash is missing from the bank. Get sufficient money to carry on the day's business. Be quick about it! Mind you, not a word about the reason for borrowing the money."

"All right, sir," replied Martin.

Superintendent Albertson of the Flynn Detective Agency, was in the office in a few minutes.

"No trouble, I hope, Mr. Cuyler," he said, removing his gloves and glancing toward the pale cashier.

"My cashier, Mr. Harding, tells me that the safe has been robbed," said Cuyler.

"How much?" asked Albertson.

"A hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

"Wow!" the detective exclaimed, softly.

"When was the robbery discovered, and by whom?" he asked.

"A few moments ago—by Mr. Harding."

"Safe blown?"

"No; it was found locked. Nothing in the vault was disturbed. But there was no money in the safe when Mr. Harding opened it, he says."

"I was just starting to open the vault on the stroke of nine when Mr. Cuyler passed me," explained Harding, nervously. "I spoke to Mr. Cuyler as he passed me."

"He did," assented Cuyler.

"The combination was set with the clockwork and the vault was not ready to be unlocked until nine," added Harding.

"Who had the combination?" Albertson asked.

"I did and Mr. Cuyler had a copy," replied Harding.

"Where is your copy?" the detective asked, turning to the president.

Cuyler drew out his wallet and found the slip of paper.

"It has not left my person," he said.

"And yours?" to the cashier.

"Here it is," Harding said, handing it to him.

"Just a moment, if you gentlemen will remain in this room," requested Albertson. "Don't leave under any conditions. I will not go far."

The detective slipped from the room, left the trust company's offices by the nearest exit, was in a telephone booth in fifty seconds and had his office on the wire.

"Who's that on the wire?" he asked when the connection had been made. "Oh, Mill Molly. Very good. Switch Bill Huntley to me, please—Bill? Yes, this is Albertson. Come down right off to the Eagle Trust Company. No; never mind that job. Drop everything and come here as fast as you can."

He slipped back into the offices he had just left and into Cuyler's room.

He found Cuyler and Harding sitting as he had left them and both of them silent.

THE MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED.

Billy Huntley began to work on the problem of how the trick was turned. That was Billy's specialty.

A secret report was made of the robbery to police headquarters, of course, but there was no leak and not a word of the affair reached the newspaper men.

Billy Huntley plodded along with his investigation, inch by inch.

Why had not the electric burglar alarm worked?

Billy solved this after a week of hard toil. The dry batteries were inferior. They had been juggled with.

If the safe had been opened during the night, what was the matter with the time lock?

Billy took this device to pieces and set it together again. He found that the clock spring had been made with the one aim that it would break at the end of a certain period of tension and use. The expert who had made that spring had with wonderful nicety of mathematics, fashioned a clock that would measure time only for a given span set by himself. The man who made that spring was in on the job.

Billy was then certain that the robbery was no "inside" work—that is, it was not done by the president or the cashier—but was done by his old friends and enemies, safe robbers of the professional and painstaking sort.

Eliminating the burglar alarm and the clockwork, there was still a problem and it seemed a poser. Knowledge of the combination was still necessary to get the vault open. How did the man or men who cleaned out the vault get this knowledge? Only two people knew it when the vault doors were closed and the combination set. Cuyler and Harding were the two.

Billy Huntley reported to his chief all that he could find out by sheer labor in mechanics and by ample knowledge of the ways and devices of yeggmen. His chief knew as well as he did, that no safe factory turns out a modern vault without some yegg outpost having at least the blue prints of the construction plan.

How was access gained to those two scraps of paper, or either of them, whereon was written the combination of the vault of the Eagle Trust Company?

HE SHOWS HIS HAND.

James Tierney asked his captain for a day off.

"Take all you want," said the captain. "Things are dull."

Tierney thanked his captain and went to police headquarters.

Now, as every cop knows, McCafferty was one of the squarest men that ever held down a job as chief of detectives. He came up from the ranks and made his name by solving a big case when he was in the flat-footed class.

Tierney knew it very well. He had no hesitancy in going to him and taking with him his scraps of paper.

McCafferty looked at the bits of paper, listened to the story about O'Hagan and called in Lieut. Jimmie Dunn.

"Jimmie," said the inspector, "I want to introduce you to a real detective." Jimmy Dunn looked at Tierney.

"He don't look like it," he said. "Where did you find him, inspector?"

"He's from the Oak-street station," McCafferty replied. "He is going to make an arrest tonight and I think his man will turn up as one of your old acquaintances in the gallery. I want you to give him two good men, who won't knock and who will take his orders."

"I have Michaels and Finnegan," said Dunn.

"They are huskies," commented the inspector. "Have them report to Mr. Tierney at once."

"Thank you, inspector," said Tierney, departing in the wake of the lieutenant.

Tierney lost no time with the two men assigned to him. He refused their invitation to a drink at the corner of Bleecker street and dived east toward the old swamp section.

Tierney swung open the door of O'Hagan's junk shop. The men Dunn had given him stood behind his either shoulder.

O'Hagan peered around his barricade.

The junk man's eyes blazed angrily.

"What do you want, Tierney?" he demanded, his suspicions aroused.

Tierney gave a signal with the fingers of his right hand and Michaels and Finnegan had the bracelets on O'Hagan in a moment.

Then the Ivory Head of Oak-street Station went to the battered desk behind the barricade of junk and threw it open. He reached into a drawer and pulled out two sheets of paper.

On one of the sheets was the memorandum he had seen O'Hagan jot down and chuckle over the night the Eagle Trust Company was robbed. The other sheet was blank, save for the printed words at the top—"The Eagle Trust Company."

"Jist a moment," Tierney said to his two assistants.

He pulled out O'Hagan's microscope and examined the blank sheet. There he found the deep imprint of the figures making the combinations of the trust company, excoriations made by a hard pencil which had been used to jot down the figures on the sheet above this on a scratch pad.

Under lenses it was as plain as if the figures had been written with ink.

"I guess," said Tierney to himself, "I'll tip off the Bankers' Association detective bureau to wise up the cashiers about using hard pencils and soft, cheap paper. Any office boy can pick up a combination if he has the price of a glass."

MAKE DETECTIVE LIEUTENANT.

The captain of the Oak Street Station hustled out of his room to the desk and asked sleepily: "Any orders, lieutenant?"

"One come in just this minute," replied the lieutenant. "It's a general order, cap'n."

The captain rubbed his eyelids and opened the folded sheet of paper.

"'Office Comishpolice,' he read. "'General Order No. 56: It is hereby ordered that Detective James——'"

The captain paused and held the order closed to the light. His eyes bulged.

"Where's Tierney?" he demanded, turning to the desk lieutenant.

"Dunno," the lieutenant answered. "Took a day off yesterday and didn't report today."

"'It is hereby ordered,'" the captain resumed, turning to the men in line, "'that Detective James Tierney report to the central office for duty as detective lieutenant of the first grade, his rank and increase in salary to take effect with this order. The commissioner of police desires also to express his appreciation of Detective Tierney's work on the Eagle Trust Company robbery, a crime committed in the territory below the dead line, which precinct men are supposed to keep clear of crooks. The captain of the Oak Street Station is instructed to report to the commissioner in the morning with an explanation in answer to the charge hereby made that in his precinct a crook of national reputation was allowed to run a junk shop for over a year and operate this particular robbery therefrom.'"

Beads of perspiration were standing on the captain's forehead.

He sent the relief on its way from the station and turned on the desk lieutenant.

"I'll tell you this, you chucklehead," he snorted. "This means a transfer for me, but if I've got to take to the woods of Staten Island or the pampas of East New York, I'll take you with me, you bungstarter!"

The desk lieutenant twitched under this last shot, for he was noted for his deep fondness for beer.

"If you'd kept your eyes on your men this thing would not have happened," the captain continued, waving a short, fat arm in anger. "You ought to be digging clams right now in Canarsie Bay."

His vocabulary was short. He groped for more words and then resorted to pantomime. He beat his bare head with his right fist and glared at the lieutenant.

"Solid ivory! Solid ivory!" was all that he could say before he closed the door behind him with a bang.

TWO HORSES ARE BURNED.

Fire Destroys Barn at Santa Ana Which Contained Much Valuable Property—Short News Stories.

SANTA ANA, May 31.—A barn, two horses, two buggies and some household goods were destroyed in a fire that broke out last night in the barn of Mrs. Carrie Turner, corner West Fifth and Shelton streets. The flames had jumped to the rear of the residence when the firemen arrived and by quick work extinguished them there. One horse and buggy belonged to W. T. Chapman of El Modena and the other to John Aultz. The damage to the residence, $300, is covered by insurance. The loss at the barn, all told about $600, had no insurance.

THREATENS TO KILL.

Charles Free is in jail for threatening to kill H. Marshall. Free is a blacksmith at San Juan Capistrano and Marshall runs a garage there. A few months ago the two men had a set-to in which Marshall had his skull cracked with a piece of gas pipe. That did not settle the enmity of the two men. Free threatened to kill Marshall, and last night Marshall came here for a warrant. When officers arrested Free his loaded rifle was found standing beside his rocking chair.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Three Santa Anans, Clem Beard, T. M. Hill and Victor Walker, brought home thirty-one barracuda, ten bass and one yellowtail from a day's fishing with rod and reel from their launch. They scorn the use of a throw line. Their declaration to use only rods and reels amused some of the commercial fishermen, but the sportsmen got more fish yesterday than the commercial fishermen.

Today a deed was recorded whereby Mrs. Emily S. Perkins of Los Angeles gives possession to her son, Dwight Whiting, Jr., to 7840 acres of land at El Toro. Dwight Whiting, Sr., founded El Toro. His widow has twice been married since his death. The son is in business in San Francisco. On this property is located the largest eucalyptus grove in the county. Most of the land is grain land.

Marriage licenses: August L. Segelhorst, 23, of Torrance, and Matilda G. Van Ness, 23, of Fullerton; J. Lacy Harper, 29, and Dodley Page, 21, both of Santa Ana; Charles C. Monroe, 23, and Ethelinda Hannaford, 21, both of Porterville; Jesus Dominguez, 25, of Florence, and Beatrice Rodriguez, 17, of Chapman; Thomas R. Prey, Jr., 30, and Mary E. Markwith, 24, both of San Diego.

STEPHENS ENDS CAMPAIGN.

Albert Lee Stephens, whose election as City Attorney is conceded, ended a remarkably clean-cut, efficacious campaign Friday and left for San Diego with Mrs. Stephens to attend to some necessary legal business and catch a few hours needed rest. Stephens has been addressing from four to a dozen meetings daily for a couple of weeks, and making votes and friends wherever he has appeared by his modest presentation of the issues involving the duties of the important office, and of the manner in which he hopes to meet them. He has been a warm personal friend of the Mayoralty candidate for years and is looking forward with pleasure to the close official relationship which will exist between the Mayor's office and that of the City Attorney. "I expect to maintain the same high standard of efficiency set by Mr. Shenk," says Stephens. The bar of Los Angeles is quite solidly behind the Stephens' candidacy, and an effort is to be made to roll up a record majority for the popular candidate whose only opponent is the candidate on the Socialist ticket. He will return from the south tonight.

POLSKI OBYWATELSKI.

A special meeting of the Polish Citizen Club will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening at No. 4410 Lima street for a discussion of the candidates and issues involved in the election on Tuesday. W. J. Miller, president of the club, will preside and all Polish citizens are invited to attend the meeting.

MONEY FOR LUXURIES.

Estimated That More Will Be Expended by Americans for Art Works This Year Than Previously.

[Washington Star:] The importation of luxuries for the fiscal year 1913 will be greater than ever before, according to an estimate of William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, based on figures for the first nine months of the year. These luxuries include such articles as art works, precious stones, laces, feathers, perfumeries, cigars, wines, etc.

Art works, for instance, during the first nine months of the current fiscal year, show a value of $50,000,000, compared with $30,000,000 for the corresponding period of last year and $20,000,000 for the like periods of 1911 and 1910. Diamonds and other precious stones reached a total of $35,000,000 during the first nine months of the present fiscal year, as against $30,000,000 during the same periods of the two preceding years. Laces, embroideries and other articles in this class show a total for the nine months amounting to about $36,000,000, which is slightly less than the total imports for 1912, but more than for the same period of 1911. Wines showed an increase of $500,000 and feathers approximately $2,000,000.

A Drummer's Tender Heart.

[Manchester Guardian:] The commercial traveler had just finished a story of a disastrous fire.

"And what did you do when you heard of it on your journey?" inquired his friend.

"Oh, I sent the Governor a long telegram of sympathy. He likes that kind of thing. Cost me half a crown."

"Half a crown!" exclaimed the other incredulously.

"Oh, I charged it to my expenses, of course," explained the traveler.

Kindly feeling and thoughtful economy could go no further.

Matting the surface of the land are beds of stunning red roses beyond which are acres after acres of pink, white and crimson carnations and expansive fields of varigated sweet-peas, cannas, lilies, violets, marigolds and innumerable other species of flora. Interspersed between the properties of the different nursery companies are groves of the evergreen orange. Greenhouses and white-roofed glass houses dot the entire territory.

Looking beyond the hillsides out on the more level plane of the valley floor, we see more orange groves and an extensive area devoted to the cultivation of all kinds of berries. Long hedges of blackberries, loganberries, raspberries and dewberries are trimmed and cared for to such a nicety as to make them not only useful, but ornamental. In the spring when the berries are in blossom these fields have the appearance of immense cotton plantations.

Still further to the southward one gazes upon that portion of the country devoted to truck garden farming, upon fields of alfalfa, of corn and barley.

It is a country all smiling with agricultural wealth. It is a country of freshness and charm. With the delicate scented air pregnant with the fragrance of flowers and orange blossoms, there is also the essence of country freedom, of openness and liberty. There is that here, which is ever prized by the business man of the city for a home location. There are the same conditions here, which went toward making a successful Hollywood, a Glendale and a Pasadena. A little capital, thoughtfully spent will make the Montebello foothill section a beauty spot and show place of which Los Angeles will be proud.

And the possibilities are already realized by many, not only by those who reside in the district at the present time, but by capitalists, investors and public utility corporations on the outside.

This country has forcibly attracted the attention of the officers of the Union Oil Company of California, who have purchased 320 acres of the choicest foothill slopes back of Montebello. They are expending a vast sum of money in development work of a magnificent nature. Their work is a private and not a public enterprise. About twelve beautiful homes will be built upon the property and the rest of the land set to oranges. Scenic boulevards are now being graded through the tract and a large pumping plant is being installed to furnish water. This enterprise may be looked upon as the initial action of a more extensive development to be undertaken by other large syndicates, shortly.

ELECTRIC CAR LINE.

This territory has attracted the attention of the Pacific Electric Railroad Company from two points of interest. It lies upon a direct air-line between Los Angeles and the city of Whittier. The railroad company is considering the feasibility of constructing a line passing through the Montebello territory for the double purpose of shortening their present route to Whittier and of opening up and more extensively developing the large area of fine suburban residential sites.

Recently the Pacific Electric Company sent down a representative to interview the Montebello people on the subject of the proposed line and a right-of-way was discussed.

MANUFACTURING.

What is conceded to be the largest building brick manufacturing company west of Chicago was attracted to the Montebello district, in preference to any other location in the State, on account of the excellence of the local clay. This concern operates a half million dollar plant in the southwestern portion of the section of 150 acres in extent and manufactured the enormous quantity of 53,000,000 common building bricks last year. There are over 350 men on the payroll of the company and the weekly expenditure for wages amounts to $5000. When taxed to its capacity the company can manufacture 296,000 bricks a day, and last year 73,000 pounds of crude oil were consumed in the brick drying process. The product is shipped to all points in California and Nevada, the shipment last year totaling 3600 cars.

Close to Montebello there is a thirty-acre deposit of what is said to be the only vitrified paving brick clay in the State. This has attracted two other large brick manufacturing concerns. One of these companies is capitalized at $100,000 and turns out 20,000 paving bricks a day when running at full capacity. Common building brick are also manufactured.

The Pacific Light and Power Company is engaged in setting poles for an extensive distributing system of electric current throughout the district. In a few weeks electricity may be had for either domestic illumination or power purposes.

HAND OF LABOR.

Besides attracting the lodgement of these larger commercial corporations, the agricultural resources of the district have lured a thousand or more industrious and thrifty farmers to locate here.

These men have made their country an inspiration to life. They have happily blended the esthetic with the commercial and economic. They have reached into the natural store-house of their environment and taken pleasure and profit. They have dug a shallow hole in the ground and planted a rose to gladden the desert air with fragrance. They have dug a little deeper hole and planted an orange tree to draw gold from the soil. They have dug still deeper and drawn pure water from its secret hiding place and poured it out upon the thirsting land. And because they have done these things they have seen the soil smile back its appreciative thanks and have taken enjoyment and wealth from their labors.

In the short space of five years the busy hand of labor has changed a spacious hay field into a country of orchards, of flowers, of homes. The vast extent of this development is the evidence of how diligently, how unceasingly and perpetual the mental and physical energy of the farmer has been plied. These men are to be congratulated.

Next to location and the natural and the developed advantages; next to all the general living conveniences which should environ every home, comes your neighbor's personality. It is hard for a man of forethought and thrift to struggle for advancement in a community populated with unenthusiastic, unco-operative neighbors.

The Montebello district is luckily blessed with inhabitants genuinely progressive. The great majority of the people are co-operative and congenial. Of the initiates guiding the business destinies of the community, nearly all the men are above the throttling influences of petty prejudices and jealousies so often found in small towns.

HISTORICAL.

The Montebello tract and townsite was originally laid out and sub-divided by the Kasper Cohn Company of Los Angeles. Ranch lots of from five acres in size and up were placed upon the market for sale and the townsite was started with fine, broad, oiled streets. The Cohn Company commenced its operations by the establishment of a large and adequate water plant to furnish water for both domestic and irrigation purposes to the entire tract.

This plant has been in operation since the first family settled on the property and has ever furnished an abundance of water. It is valued at about $22,000 and consists of five deep wells, pumped by two suction pumps which are in turn operated by a 200-horse-power steam engine. The water is stored in two reservoirs, one of which contains 1,000,000 gallons and the other 2,500,000 gallons. An extensive piping and ditch system carries the water to every lot on the tract. The water company is now known as the Montebello Land and Water Company.

Adjoining the Montebello tract on the south another large piece of ground has been sub-divided which is called the El Carmel tract. This property is included in the Montebello district.

The domestic and irrigating water for this land is derived from a fine pumping plant on the east side of the San Gabriel river and is distributed through approximately ten miles of pipes and ditches.

Some of the residents on these tracts have sunk their own domestic wells. These range in depth from 60 to 125 feet. At these depths plenty of water is obtained.

TRANSPORTATION.

Montebello is on the main line of the Salt Lake Railroad Company running between Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Salt Lake City. The Montebello station, however, is called Newmark on all the railroad time tables, and tickets are sold to this place rather than Montebello. It is expected that the railroad company will change the name of its station to Montebello, shortly.

This year the Salt Lake has done a large business handling the freight of the community. In view of the fact that the highest carload rate to Los Angeles from Montebello is only 4 cents a hundred pounds the increase of business is quite noteworthy—for during the month of April, 1913, $6830 more business was handled than for the same month a year ago. Of 9,000,000 pounds of freight handled from this station, 4,000,000 pounds is the increase for the month of April, 1913 over April, 1912. During April of this year this shipment totaled 130 carloads, of which 84 cars were vegetables grown in the district. Paralleling last year's business the increase, month by month, of money taken in by the local freight agent has never been less than $1200.

The round-trip fare from Los Angeles to Newmark is 45 cents on the Salt Lake but a 25-ride commutation ticket good for 90 days and for all members of a family is sold for $2.50. A sixty-ride book good for the calendar month but for an individual only is sold for $3.50. There are five local trains a day going into Los Angeles, and four returning. Passengers may make overland trips from this station.

A convenient way, however, to reach Montebello from Los Angeles is by taking the East Seventh street car in the city, marked "Cemeteries" and "Stephenson Avenue," and riding to the end of the line. From this point there is an automobile bus connection to Montebello which runs hourly all through the day. The street car fare is five cents and the bus fare is 30 cents a round trip. A commutation ticket is issued for the bus at $2.00 for twenty rides. These tickets are good for family use. Besides the passenger service the bus company operates an express and freight service from Montebello and a first-class garage in the town.

SCHOOLING.

One of the handsomest landmarks as well as an advertisement for Montebello is the $40,000 High School building of the town, which is located on the main county road close to the central business section. Its artistic mission outline is elaborately embellished with a foreground of sweeping clover lawns and ornamental shrubbery. In point of design this building is a model of mission architecture.

The curriculum of studies includes manual training, domestic science, typewriting, stenography, chemistry, physics, agriculture, applied art and all the general academic studies customarily taught in the State high schools.

The town is fortunate in having a principal who is very enthusiastic in his work and whose prime object is to cultivate enterprise and originality among his students. His influence in this direction is not a common force, but a telling power. The evidence comes out in the products of the students.

Finding that the actylene gas manufactured by the school plant for illuminating the building did not have a hot enough flame to make chemistry experiments, one of the girls designed an apparatus for manufacturing gas from gasoline which would give a hotter flame. Her design was then elaborated upon by one of the boys and the original gas-generating system is now installed in the chemistry laboratory.

Another boy has designed a most ingenious method of elevating water from a flowing creek or ditch by its own power. Some of the art students have done creditable clay modeling and bust work. The scenery for the annual play, given by the senior class this year, was designed, painted and built by boys of the art and manual training classes.

These are all accomplishments not generally developed in a high school.

There are five teachers on the instruction staff and an enrollment of seventy-five students.

There are two grammar schools in the district. The general course of studies, as provided by the State Board of Education, is taught by a corp of competent teachers. There are about 350 pupils enrolled in the grammar schools.

The Thursday Afternoon Club of Montebello is a literary, social and civic organization of forty of the active ladies of the community. They hold bi-monthly meetings and lend their aid to many philanthropic causes. There are three churches in Montebello, the Methodist, Friends and Catholic. The Independent Order of Odd Fellows has constructed a brick building in the town. The order of Benedictine Fathers of the Catholic Church has established a monastery on forty acres of ground, north west of Montebello. They have erected a beautiful mission building on the site and are intensively cultivating various kinds of fruits and berries.

BUSINESS GROWTH.

The Montebello State Bank is the best barometer of the local business conditions. This bank was organized August 19, 1912, with an authorized capitalization of $100,000. It now has deposits of $65,000 and loans, outstanding, of $60,000. The institution owns its own brick building valued, with its banking equipment, at $10,000. It has 250 accounts with people living in the district and its resources aggregate $88,000.

Indicating the commercial growth of the agricultural district the California Vegetable Union has opened a packing-house at Montebello, which has been in operation about a year and has shipped about 120 carloads of vegetables.

REALTY VALUATIONS.

In regard to the citrus farming lands in Montebello it may be said that in orange groves located on the hill slopes back of the town practically no damage was done by the frost of last winter. Fruit which remained on the trees during the entire season is in excellent condition and is commanding higher than the average market prices. Orange land, in these situations, commands from $1300 to $1800 an acre, which includes water piped to the property. Established orange groves command from $2500 per acre, up, according to the age of the trees and improvements.

Excellent citrus land or good general fruit land may be had in the lower part of the valley for from $800 to $1000 an acre, including water piped to the property.

Residential lots in the townsite of Montebello, 45x125 feet, and including domestic water delivered, bring $500 to $600 each, while business lots, centrally located, are sold for $33 per front foot.

INVESTMENTS.

The town of Montebello affords opportunities for investment of capital in the following business enterprises:

A steam laundry is needed and a local gas plant. There is a good opening for a small, but first-class hotel. It is generally considered a dentist would find the district a good location for his work.

The Montebello Chamber of Commerce will be glad to give further information to any prospective investor. Letters addressed to the secretary will receive courteous attention.

BOOSTERS.

Below are given a number of names of energetic and enthusiastic boosters of the district. They are nearly all property owners and are anxious to encourage the upbuilding of their country with people and capital. They will furnish the reader with specific data on any particular point of interest, to him, mentioned in this article. They may be relied upon to give truthful information and will assist visitors to make inspections of the various industries and ascertain data for themselves. National and Local.

FOR "MAN'S BEST FRIEND" TAG DAY TOMORROW.

NATIONAL horse tag-day will be celebrated tomorrow for the first time in this city by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the Team Owners' Association. A feature will be a parade in the morning of most of the fancy driving and riding horses in the city. The proceeds from the tagging, which will be done by as many boys and girls as can be enlisted in the work, will go to the S.P.C.A. for furtherance of its cause.

The day was first observed last year in the East and was such a success that the Associated Humane Societies and the Team Owners Association of America decided to make the observance national this year.

The parade tomorrow will form at Eleventh and Los Angeles streets and is to move promptly at 9:30 o'clock. The line of march will be Los Angeles to Tenth, Tenth to Main, Main to First, First, to Spring, Spring to Seventh, Seventh to Broadway, and then along that street to First, and disband.

Chief of Police Sebastian and the Mounted Squad will lead the parade. The formation will be as follows: Miss Mijigado Green, the Cherokee Indian girl, mounted on her cow pony, "Tony;" S.P.C.A., ambulances; equestrian riders; light driving horses; Shetland ponies; business teams; G.A.R. fife and drum corps, and automobiles containing officers of the S.P.C.A. and the theatrical persons and children who will do the tagging. Judge Rose, driving two pure-white steeds, will lead the light-driving-horse division. There will be special features of the parade, not yet placed, including a celebrated fast trotting stallion on a decorated float.

Team owners and lovers of horse flesh generally, are interested in the movement and it is hoped by the S.P.C.A. to realize at least $1000 through tagging.

Making an early beginning in a good cause.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The Fact and Comment man during the past week received two communications which, because they deal with a subject which just now has a particular interest to all Californians, are well worth reproducing. The first was received from a Times reader in the city of London, Eng., and is respectfully referred by the writer to the local Chamber of Commerce because it has in it a suggestion well worth the consideration of that public spirited Los Angeles organization.

"An exhibit of California products is needed in London," says the Britisher. "I advocated such a plan through the columns of The Times while on a recent visit to Los Angeles and in the course of an interview sought by your paper. I based my suggestion upon my long experience both in California and in London. My opinion has been more than justified by the woeful want of information I find existing in London concerning the wonders and the progress of your State. As a former Californian (by adoption) I urge you to make some decided move to bring about the direct representation of your State over here. This representation could include an exhibit in London of your State products and should reveal to the emigrant, tourist, financier and home-seeker of this country the great advantages offered to all by California."

Farmers Wanted.

The second letter was addressed to the editor by a man high in local railroad circles and has to do with the question of getting information about California land into the hands of the capable and intelligent agriculturists of Europe. The writer refers to a plan, now brewing, of getting together the general agents of the big steamship companies for a trip through the Imperial Valley and other portions of Southern California offering opportunity to a farming population.

"We can easily estimate," he says, "where 500,000 people can be taken care of to good advantage between the Coachella Valley and Yuma and plenty of work found for all able-bodied men in this population. The steamship companies ought to understand this situation so that their agents in European countries can be instructed to canvass emigrants inclined to agricultural pursuits. There will be enough of the element from the congested centers of the cities of Europe to fill our Coast towns to overflowing with that class of people, but what the country really needs is a population of agriculturists."

Good Suggestion.

This is a most excellent plan, and it is to be hoped that the transcontinental railroads coming into Los Angeles will definitely interest themselves in such a proposition. The railway heads probably would have more influence with the men representing the big maritime interests of the world than would any other one agency and no other blessing is more devoutly to be wished at this moment than that Southern California may be enabled after the canal opens to receive and assimilate the desirable types of immigrants. The lower East Side district of New York presents a horrible example of the variety of immigration which California most desires to avoid. Los Angeles, it is to be hoped, will never become a city of slums, a conglomeration of squalid, teeming foreign settlements.

Southern California actually needs today colonists and settlers of the hard working European peasant types. The foreign agriculturist has learned, through centuries spent in grubbing the soil, to get from the ground a yield which is a revelation to American farmers. The average American has never learned the secret of intensive cultivation and only the peasant agriculturist can teach it to him. These humble instructors have taken hold of the abandoned farms in New England and prospered where the descendants of the Puritans have given up in despair. Their children, schooled in making the best of what, to the average American, is adversity and waning opportunity, will be the teachers of the generation to come. Given a fair chance the foreigner will yet demonstrate to Americans the folly of all the present-day talk about an imminent land famine.

Under the tutelage of these painstaking agriculturists from abroad the American will eventually be brought to a realization of the wastefulness involved in the cultivation of the average large farming tract in this country. He will learn that ten acres, or even five acres, properly handled and assiduously and intelligently cultivated, will yield as good a living as was formerly believed possible on the old-time quarter-section. The small tract he will find has the advantage of being less unwieldy and he will soon realize the advantages of the closer community life to be enjoyed in a region of small home places and denser population. Farm life can and will eventually be made agreeable to many who now shun it on account of the isolation of it.

The European immigrants, if we can only get the right kind into Southern California, are going to be the greatest asset of the future in this section. Regulation is what is wanted. Hundreds of thousands of acres of fertile back country are waiting the impetus that only the European farmer with his centuries of inbred agricultural intuition can give them. There are no better citizens in the world than the Americanized descendants of the peasant immigrants in this country.

An Opportunity.

Nor should this important work of regulating the immigration to Southern California be left to the railway and steamship heads alone. And here is where the first letter quoted by the Fact and Comment man may be utilized as a text. Every "boost" agency in this section that has or that can devise facilities for heralding the advantages of agricultural California to the right kind of Europeans should be lined up with the railway men in this good cause.

In the past the immigrant has too often been to the steamship men but so much paying ballast to be dumped off in the western hemisphere after he has served his purpose of helping to keep the keel of some great liner at the proper level below the water line. It is to be feared that there hasn't been any great amount of altruism in the attitude of the steamship interests toward the immigration authorities of this country. Perhaps it would be inadvisable, therefore, to attach too much importance to the effort of the railway men to influence the sailing masters, sincere as that effort may be.

Certain it is that California should permit no grass to grow under its feet in the next few years. A monster California exhibit in London would serve a great purpose and it ought to be installed at once. There should be another in Berlin, one in Vienna, one in Rome; in fact, one in every great European center where such an exhibit would be seen and studied by potential emigrants of the desirable sort, Kerckhoff Block as It Will Appear With Projected Addition.

Perspective sketch by "Times" artist of proposed great east-of-Main improvement.

The portion drawn in line shows the Los Angeles street end of the Kerckhoff building, as it will appear when completed, while the photograph shows the Sixth-street side of the present structure. The addition is being planned by the architects, Morgan, Walls & Morgan, to conform in design with the older building.

Biggest in City.

GREAT BLOCK TO BE ENLARGED.

KERCKHOFF BUILDING WILL BE DOUBLED IN SIZE.

Sixth and Main Skyscraper to Be Extended to Corner of Sixth and Los Angeles Streets—New Portion of Structure to Contain Three Hundred Offices.

The firm of Morgan, Walls & Morgan, architects of the present W. G. Kerckhoff building at the northeast corner of Sixth and Main streets, are engaged in the preparation of working plans for an addition to that modern eleven-story store and office block which will more than double the size and capacity of the property. The project, which has now taken definite form, was announced exclusively in The Times several weeks ago, and is one of the important building enterprises of the year in this city.

The present Kerckhoff building, with a frontage of seventy feet on Main street, extends back along the north side of Sixth street for 150 feet, or to a point half way between Main and Los Angeles. The addition will extend from the rear of the present structure to the corner of Sixth and Los Angeles streets and will have a frontage on the latter thoroughfare of 120 feet. The structure will be twelve stories in height, owing to the downward slope on Sixth street from Main to Los Angeles, the extra story being gained at a point a few feet beyond the eastern end of the present building.

The addition wil conform in architectural design to the present structure and like it will be of the most modern steel frame construction. The ground floor will be given over to store rooms and the upper stories will contain about 300 offices.

The completed block will have the longest unbroken street frontage of any building in Los Angeles and will contain close to 600 offices, making it one of the largest office structures in the West. Construction upon the projected addition will be begun as soon as working plans are available.

The improvement will still further enhance the already impressive metropolitan skyline of downtown Sixth street and will set a new mark for the future builders of Los Angeles street. An idea of the striking appearance that will be presented by the completed Kerckhoff building may be obtained from a perspective drawn by a Times staff artist and reproduced on this page. In the foreground of the picture the artist has shown the contemplated addition and adjoining this on the background, in exact perspective form, is a photograph of the present building.

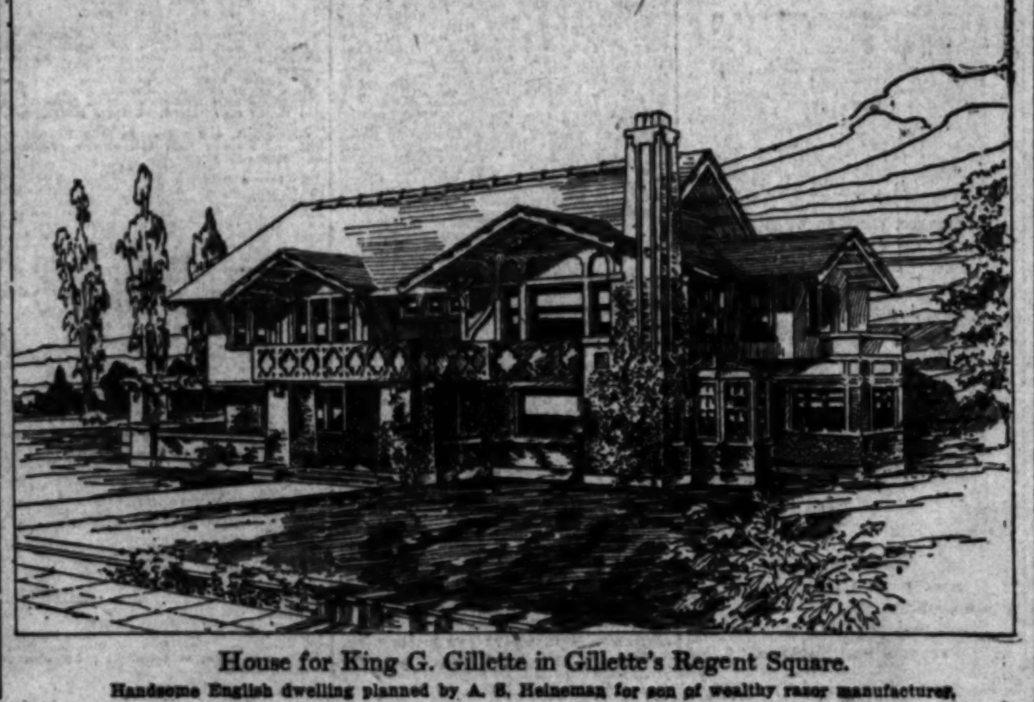
FOR SEAWARD TRACT.

Son of "Safety Razor King" to Build Fine English Mansion in Gillette's Regent Square.

One of the handsomest of the fine homes projected in Gillette's Regent Square tract, in the beautiful San Vicente-Santa Monica section, is a $20,000 residence to be erected by King G. Gillette, son of King C. Gillette of safety razor fame, and owner of the fashionable new Seaward subdivision bearing his name. The house, planned by Arthur S. Heineman of this city, will ocupy a commanding knoll comprising several lots. Here young Gillette will dwell with his bride-to-be, now Miss Elisabeth Caldwell, daughter of a prominent family of Grand Rapids, Mich., and to whom he is to be married within a few weeks.

The Gillette house will be of Tudor English architecture, the lower story being veneered with ruffled tapestry brick and the second story and gables being plastered and treated with a half-timbered effect. The house will contain twelve rooms and four baths, the main rooms being finished after the Elizabethan style, with heavy natural beam effects for the ceiling, high wainscoted walls and numerous fire places and inglenooks. The dining-room will open into a conservatory and the living-room and reception hall, into a formal garden, enclosed with high brick walls and paved with variagated tiles. In addition to the bedrooms on the second floor, there will be a number of sleeping porches and balconies.

The grounds will be elaborately landscaped and beautifully planted. All porches, terraces, drives and walks will be made of imported Welsh quarry tiles, and the entire rear yard is to be enclosed with a brick wall with stone copings, emphasizing the English treatment of the whole property. The garage will accommodate four machines.



House for King G. Gillette in Gillette's Regent Square.

Handsome English dwelling planned by A. S. Heineman for son of wealthy razor manufacturer.

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Redondo and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charge for our Architectural services, if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

We make liberal building loans.

THINK OF BEING ABLE TO BUY LARGE VILLA SITES 50x150 IN THE EXCLUSIVE RESIDENTIAL SUBURB OF BEVERLY HILLS FOR ONLY $1700.
AND FROM THIS PRICE A 10 PER CENT. BUILDING DISCOUNT will be allowed for a limited time provided you start to build within 60 days and complete within six months from commencement.
BUT don't think about it too long. Now is the time to buy both for home and investment.
NO OTHER close-in property can compare with Beverly Hills in price and improvements. It only requires your inspection to prove this.
Other districts talk about their improvements, but they fail to say anything about their lack of sewers; their lack of pure water supply; their lack of adequate public parks and other features.
BEVERLY HILLS HAS A COMPLETE MODERN SEWERAGE SYSTEM WITH CONNECTIONS AT EVERY LOT.
BEVERLY HILLS HAS THE PUREST OF PURE MOUNTAIN WATER.
BEVERLY HILLS HAS BEAUTIFUL, WELL-KEPT-UP PUBLIC PARKS THAT OCCUPY MORE THAN 13 ACRES—including an attractive water garden with thousands of gold fish and many rare tropical plants.
BEVERLY HILLS HAS MILES AND MILES OF WIDE WELL-PAVED STREETS, with broad parkings and palms and ornamental trees.
BEVERLY HILLS HAS GAS, ELECTRIC LIGHTS, TELEPHONES AND SPLENDID CAR SERVICE.
Many beautiful homes have been erected at Beverly Hills, others are going up, and many more planned.
Building restrictions range from $5000 up to $15,000. Prices of lots range from $1700 for lots 50x150 and upward. There is a beautiful lot 80x197 right near the hotel for only $2200. Terms are 20 per cent. down and the balance in four equal payments over two years.
10 PER CENT. BUILDING DISCOUNT will be allowed for a limited time on lots less than one acre in extent in Beverly Hills, provided you start to build within sixty days and complete in six months from commencement.
TO SEE BEVERLY HILLS take the big red "Beverly, Sawtelle and Santa Monica" cars on South Hill st. or West 16th st. If you motor out—go by Wilshire Boulevard or through Hollywood by Sunset Boulevard.

PRETTIEST SPOT IN CALIFORNIA.

There are many pretty spots in California. I am sure however that you'll agree with me that this ad is no exaggeration. Located but 12 miles from 7th and Broadway. Splendid boulevard all the way, within easy half hour of city via auto. There are 12 acres in splendid full bearing walnuts, 8 acres in semi-tropical forest, a brook 10 to 18 feet wide, 2 to 5 feet deep, winds its way through the forest for 1¼ miles, the overhanging trees occasionally admitting the sun's rays, the river which is without exception the largest body of water in Southern California is the south boundary. There are in all 68 acres. I will sell 20 acres, the balance has 20 acres in walnuts, the 28 acres of forest is being transformed into a park with 5 acres of lake. Here you have the privacy of the primeval forest, the park of grand old trees of a century's growth, the rustic bridge, log cabin, etc., an idea of the beauty of the forest is best obtained by a ride through the brook via canoe. PASADENA—

FOR SALE—

TO THE PUBLIC—
— NOTICE —
For over a week we have been advertising a beautiful corner on Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, south of California street, for $11,000, with only $1000 cash payment required, several years in which to pay the balance and no interest charged on deferred payments the first year. It is such an unusual proposition—to be able to buy a prominent corner in this exclusive district at less than its actual value, and for almost nothing as an initial payment—that at first it could not be believed. Several people, however, are now looking into the matter, with a view to making a trade of some kind, if possible. In the meantime there is still a chance for a "dark horse" to slip in and take up the proposition while the others are "figuring." Such things have happened.
It is one of the rarest opportunities that has occurred in Pasadena for many a day. Box 92, TIMES OFFICE, Pasadena.

WATER MAKES ALFALFA POSSIBLE.

ALFALFA AT $20 PER TON, MAKES EVERYTHING POSSIBLE.

When you buy lands of us you get it all ready to work, gravity water for irrigating purposes, piped to your door. You are not asked to take a single chance. Water development is not only very expensive, but there is always an element of risk about it. We have eliminated this risk entirely by the purchase of water shares for all of our lands. Every one knows the value of water in this country. The main question is, can it be had in sufficient quantity at a satisfactory price. In this, San Jacinto is again blessed, for we are told that this is the cheapest water in the State, and when you take into account that these water shares are independent of the land, and can be dealt in independently the same as bonds, it makes a very attractive proposition. The local banks have placed a value on them of $200 per acre, and are making loans on them at that valuation. Water shares in Southern California are considered among the best investments, and seldom if ever depreciate in value. In fact, they very often advance to many times their original cost.

Figure it any way you like, you must count the water stock worth at least what the BANKS ARE WILLING TO TAKE IT AT, or what it is worth in the market today. Granted that it is a good investment of itself, that leaves only $50 to $75 per acre for the land. WE SAY THAT THIS LAND ALONE IS WORTH MORE THAN WE ARE ASKING FOR BOTH THE WATER AND THE LAND. COME AND LOOK IT OVER AND SEE WHAT YOU THINK ABOUT IT.

Remember, the closing-out price for both the land and the water right is only $250 to $275 per acre, all improvements included.

The sun never shone on better soil, or on a prettier place than THE BEAUTIFUL SAN JACINTO AND HEMET VALLEY, AND OUR LANDS ARE THE BEST OF IT ALL. They comprise practically one-half of the great Willow Plume alfalfa section, near the Cawston Ostrich Farm, and adjoining the city limits of both San Jacinto and Hemet."

WHY NOT JOIN

BROWNLANDS HOME FARM CLUB.

We are a crowd of people all interested in owning our own home farms and if you are looking for the same, don't locate on an isolated ranch until you've heard our plan. We are each purchasing a portion of 1000 acres of rich sedimentary land with flowing artesian wells located in a beautiful valley near Los Angeles. We get ten-year terms and net the subdivision profits for ourselves. Our town is growing up, twenty-five families have already arranged to build along principal street, where we expect to reside, farming our lands adjoining. This gives us the advantages of postoffice, school and church, artesian water piped into our homes and the natural gas which was discovered on our main street and which has caused the oil boom around Brownlands. FOR SALE—Country Property.

FOR SALE—217 ACRES, 16 MILES FROM THE city of Sacramento, near Auburn blvd.; and on State highway, which will be the finest automobile road in the State. This district is in absolutely [illegible] orange, olive and almond belt. Approximately [illegible] acres being under a state of high cultivation; soil contains just the right consistency to make it very valuable for citrus fruits and [illegible]. The depth ranges from five to fifty feet. The contour is rolling and studded with many live oak trees.

WATER—THE ONE BIG ESSENTIAL, is piped throughout the ENTIRE 217 ACRES, under high pressure gravity system. The pipe is screw casing, and as fine a system as could be found anywhere. FREE PERPETUAL WATER. WATER RIGHT GOES WITH AND IS APPURTENANT TO THE LAND. This one feature is easily worth $50 per acre to any land. A charge of $4.00 per acre per year is collected ONLY for the acreage under ACTUAL cultivation. If the water is not used it is NOT paid for. There is no other land for sale in this territory that carries water rights for less than $[illegible] per acre. My price for this 217 acre snap is only $150 per acre; one-fifth cash, and the balance in one, two, three, four and five years. This 217-acre bargain adjoins FAIR OAKS, a colony of distinct class. Beautiful homes, productive orange, olive and lemon groves, and nut orchards predominate. Schools, churches and social clubs are in a healthy state of attendance. No intoxicating liquors can ever be sold in this district. Nowhere can a more ideal spot be found in California. Fair Oaks compares favorably with any of the Southern California colonies. Here dwell in happiness 2000 people, on 10-acre (average) tracts. These people have all built homes ranging from $1000 to $20,000 in price. The oranges grown in this district are marketed six weeks in advance of any from Southern California groves, thus commanding a higher price.

During the recent heavy frosts of January and February NOT ONE of our 800,000 little citrus trees (in our nursery, immediately adjoining the 217 acres I am offering you) was even touched. [illegible] NOT ONE SINGLE TREE was damaged by frost that created a loss of millions of dollars in other sections of the State. And further, this district is, in so far as I can determine, the only district in the State that escaped without any "smudging" at all. These are broad statements, but I have the documentary evidence to prove them. These 217 acres are in the cream citrus belt of the State, which means the CREAM OF THE WORLD. Let me show you this snap, and if I don't make good in my statements herein expressed, I will refund your expenses for the journey. Buy this snap, and clean up about $15,000 in, say, 90 days, at the outside. It can and will be done by someone, why not you? The tract is already arranged for you in 10-acre plats, ready for the market, and at $225 an acre will sell like hot cakes. I can sell it for you on a commission, and in short order; anybody can, it will sell itself—[illegible]. For further particulars address LOUIS RICH, [illegible] I. N. Van Nuys Bldg. Phones: F5764. BY E. J. McCULLY CO.
80-acre ranch with Mineral Hot Springs, laxative water, that could be made a very popular resort, because of the good climatic conditions, beautiful scenery, convenience to Oceanside, San Diego and Los Angeles. The owner is in the East and authorized me to make a quick sale at $3000 cash and the balance on long time. From the proceeds of a resort business a man could pay for this property in five years. 20 acres of this ranch is fine walnut or fruit land and can be irrigated from spring water above it. There are hundreds of live oaks, sycamore and other trees on the place and a good stream of water flows all the year. On the place there is a good 9-room house, barn and bath-house and the property is well fenced. This price includes all farming implements and the complete furnishings of the house. At the price it is an unusually good buy. A postoffice is located on this property and a good general merchandising store would pay well, as the ranchers come here for their mail and the nearest town is twelve miles. Investigate at once and you will buy it.

This land is the "Cream of the Yucaipa Valley." Elevation 3000 feet above sea level. Eight miles from Redlands. Two to four miles to station on main line S. P. Railway.

You don't have to plant for experimentation, but you plant here for immediate success, as Big Red Apples have been grown here for over 20 years. The growers of Yucaipa Valley apples get an average of $1.50 a box net in the orchard. Their apples pay $400 to $800 an acre a season. Cherries have paid over $40 per tree per crop. Pears make big money in Yucaipa. All deciduous fruits do fine here and get a better flavor than the same varieties grown at lower elevations.

"From this bench you get the grandest view in Southern California, as this land is surrounded on the north and east by the high San Bernardino Mountain range, that shelter our lands against the cold north winds, the hot desert winds and sand storms. The pure dry mountain air is very beneficial for people afflicted with catarrh and bronchial troubles.

BUY NOW, and get the choicest of the cream, with water ownership, $285 an acre, one-fourth cash, balance in one, two and three years. Water is now ready to use. FREE EXCURSIONS TO [illegible]. Go any day. See this beautiful valley this week. Write or call for booklet with map.

FOR EXCHANGE—
There will be twice as much traffic on Hill st. between Pico and Washington as between Seventh and Pico.

WHY?

Because all traffic going out, both Broadway and Hill, southwest, will have to turn when it reaches the end of the new Broadway, just created by the Council, which ends at Pico, and it will continue south on Hill street.

THINK IT OVER.

We have options on several pieces on Hill st., between Pico and Washington, that will double in value in the next year. One in particular; 1327 South Hill street, we offer for $55,000 this week only. This will be worth $100,000 when Broadway is completed to Pico.

YOU WILL HAVE TO ACT QUICKLY.
Might take some trade if exceptionally good.

NOTED WOMAN HONORED.

The Legion of Honor Bestowed by France on Many Women Who Have Achieved Distinction.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] A good example of the catholicity of the merits honored by the award of the Legion of Honor is shown in its bestowal on Mme. Paquin, who reigns in Paris—and elsewhere—as mistress of robes and modes, and who is also a woman of much philanthropy and enterprise.

France has generously rewarded many women with this special distinction, among them being Rosa Bonheur. Mme. Juliette Dodu, who possessed both the cross of the legion and the military medal, gained the distinction in 1870. She was a telegraph clerk in an office at Pithviers, and when the Germans took possession of the place a message to Prince Frederick Charles was handed to her. Instead of transmitting the message she destroyed it, and was ordered to be shot, but the Prince, who arrived subsequently, ordered her release, and complimented her on her courage.

Mlle. Dottard, who also received the cross, had been attached to the Salpetriere ward for nervous diseases, and the city of Paris also gave her a gold medal; Mlle. Toussaint, for many years head of the Technical School for Girls, was another recipient; Mme. Dieulafoy was decorated as an explorer and discoverer of Persian antiquities; Mme. Marie Laurent, the actress, was not thus honored for her dramatic gifts, despite their distinction, but for her patronage of an orphan asylum. Napoleon I, who created the order on May 19, 1802, bestowed it on at least seven women.

FRENCH NAVY DEMORALIZED.

Disastrous Effect of Opium Smoking.

Naval Ports Spread Nets for Marines.

Sales Unrestricted in French Colonies.

[New York Times:] A great outcry has arisen throughout France over the serious revelations made by the well-known writer and duelist, Rouzier Dorcieres, concerning the hold that opium smoking has obtained on the French navy in southern seaports.

The facts told by M. Dorcieres, who went on a special mission for Le Matin, reveal a state of things which the nation finds it difficult to realize, namely, that "opium is poisoning our navy." He states that in Toulon alone, the chief naval port, there are no less than 163 opium dens. In the same town he has seen officers in the houses of accommodating hostesses smoking as many as eighty or one hundred pipes in a single evening.

'I have seen," he says, "the degrading traffic of dealers in the drug, who infest our Mediterranean ports, in numberless deals, combinations, and calculations, and the loathsome influence of those who, having already poisoned themselves in the colonies, continue the same process in France, and not alone, since there are officers in command with power to lead other human beings to ruin."

All along the Mediterranean, on both sides, he says, at Marseilles, Hyeres and the Gulf of Juan, at Nice and the Villafranca, at Ajaccio and Algiers, as well as at Toulon, and also at the northern ports, flourishing opium dens are found with victims whose numbers are increasing with a rapidity that menaces the national life.

The police and civic authorities, it is stated, can do nothing. Under the present laws only dealing in opium is a penal offense. To smoke it, to induce others to smoke privately or for money, or to possess a large stock of the drug is perfectly legal.

"When one thinks," says M. Dorcieres, "that the Chinese Republic, by a new law, puts to death any person smoking opium in that country, and we Frenchmen who regard ourselves as the most intelligent and best-policed nation of the West, allow with folded arms French brains to be ruined by this drug, one is rendered speechless.

'A customs official can make a search in any house for a bottle of spirits that is undeclared, or for a smuggled 1-cent box of matches, but the French code is impotent before the importation of narcotics. Against opium, ether, morphine, hashish and cocaine, manufactured and consumed indoors, nothing can be done. All the police are able to do is to arrest some waiter or messenger boy who is caught selling the stuff."

At Toulon, he says, a town which was formerly bright and happy, social life is rapidly coming to a standstill. The Mayor of the city says that it is no longer what it was.

"The whole outward life of the town seems to be dying. Trade and manufactures, fashion and luxury, all that goes to make the wealth of a city, have gone under in the crisis brought about by the introduction of opium. In place of the gayety which Toulon formerly possessed, under the influence of innumerable officers and soldiers, returned from distant campaigns to enjoy themselves on French soil, there is now an alarming torpor and general uneasiness.

"Sailors who disembark nowadays shut themselves up in dens which have more to do with the pathology of nervous diseases than our radiant climate and hospitable life."

M. Dorcieres points out as an extraordinary paradox that this terrible scourge is actually one of the principal State manufactures in France's greatest colony, Indo-China, where it is sold under a State guarantee as freely as tobacco is here, and contributes more than one-sixth of the entire revenue of the country.

According to the latest figures, he says, the annual production of opium in that colony is over 260,000 pounds, bringing an average revenue of $1,102,000. Through smuggling, however, the consumption is, at least, double that shown by the official figures. M. Dorcieres says that the dens of Marseilles, Toulon and other towns are supplied by a syndicate of smugglers, who even pay the fines of their agents when caught redhanded.

Owing to the strong public feeling in this matter, it is thought certain that the government will be compelled in a short time to take definite steps to penalize not only the traffic, but the practice of opium smoking, together with the consumption of other drugs, now fashionable in the fast quarters of Paris.

Other authorities at Toulon are adding their testimony to that of the Mayor regarding the evil that is corrupting this leading French port. Admiral Beltue, the Maritime Prefect of the city, says that the effectiveness of the navy as a national defense is menaced by the drug, and, cost what it may, a curb must be put on the pernicious influence which is spreading through the younger portion of the navy.

He says he constantly receives reports of unabashed opium smoking on board ship, while most of the members of the training ship Jeanne d'Arc, which contains the pick of the cadets of the navy, are now habitual visitors to the Toulon opium dens. Meanwhile, he adds, the naval authorities are powerless to restrict the evil as long as they are not backed by the law.

These views are indorsed by the Civil Sub-Prefect of Toulon, who says that many times there has been brought to the attention of his superiors the terrible danger that menaces not only the naval and military, but also the civilian population. The sole remedy, he says, is an act of Parliament making it a penal offense to allow opium to be smoked in private houses.

The traffic, which now goes on, is so profitable to smugglers, he states, that the conviction of an occasional waiter or messenger who is discovered passing the forbidden drug has not the smallest effect on discouraging others in the same trade.

Deputy Charles de Boucq announces that on the reopening of Parliament he will interpellate the Minister of Marine as to what steps he purposes "to take to wipe out the evil which threatens to make the habit of opium smoking contracted by officers general throughout the navy."

That not a moment may be lost M. De Boucq is also preparing a bill which he hopes to rush through to stamp out the evil by making all who deal in opium, have it in their possession, or carry on smoking dens liable to two years' imprisonment for the first and five for the second offense. The bill adds that when the offender is a civil, naval or military official conviction shall deprive him of his position.

Hollanders Coming Here.

[Boston Advertiser:] Evidently it is not smooth for the farmers of Holland. It is true that farming is a science in that country. It is also true that a great many small fortunes have been made from it, but the very prosperity of the farmers has increased ground rents to a degree where many of the farmers feel that they can do better in some other land. Recently 300 farmers from Holland have reached the United States. They have made their plans for taking up land in Michigan and working it for all it is worth. They are not without money with which to carry out their plans. Should they settle near together and institute some of the methods of co-operation which have made farming in Holland such a splendid industry they might furnish an example of the way in which farmers may work together, which will be of great advantage to those Americans who choose to take a leaf out of the Dutch experience.

CHASE TO PLAY MACBETH IN GOLF FINALS TODAY.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

MARTIN CHASE of the Victoria Club, Riverside, defeated Roger D. Lapham of the Los Angeles Country Club by 1 up at the twenty-first hole on the links of the Virginia Country Club yesterday. It was a great victory for "Beau" Chase, for Lapham played two consecutive rounds of 71 on Friday and was regarded as the probable winner of the tournament.

Chase had previously created something of a sensation by defeating A. M. Goodhue, president and champion of the club, who is a very strong player on that course. He now has to meet Norman Macbeth in the thirty-six-hole finals today—Macbeth, who is playing a wonderful game and who set a new record for the course on Friday with 67.

Macbeth defeated Llewellyn Bixby in the second round by 3 up and 2, E. S. Armstrong defeating Bert Paul by the same margin. In the afternoon the match between the two star players was watched with interest, Macbet winning by 4 up and 2.

The Second Flight.

Robert D. Osburn of Riverside was the hero in the second flight yesterday, defeating Frank Tatum of Annandale by 5 up and 4, with the fine medal score of 76. He next defeated F. W. Hicks of Long Beach and will meet George Cline of San Gabriel in the finals today.

Cline won his second round match by default and then defeated Conde Jones of San Gabriel by 2 up. Jones had a good match with Carlton Wright and only won by a narrow margin.

The Third Flight.

Dr. A. C. Sellery is the winner of the third flight. O. H. Hicks of Redlands, the veteran player, who has won his way through to the finals with such good golf and such youthful endurance, found it advisable to default to the doctor in the finals. Dr. Sellery defeated Robin Skelley of Riverside, by 2 and 1, after having accounted for Phillips of Los Angeles by 2 up.

Mr. Hicks won three hard matches—Aldrich, Enloe and J. E. Counts all falling to his prowess before he conceded himself hors de combat, so he has earned his runner-up cup anyway.

J. E. Counts of the home club defeated Walter Leeds of Los Angeles by 2 and 1 before he fell to the Redland veteran's prowess.

The Fourth Flight.

P. H. Updike defeated E. C. [illegible] in the second round by 3 up and [illegible] but was put out by F. D. Hudson [illegible] Los Angeles in the semi-finals by [illegible] and 2. Hudson had previously [illegible] Ross Hickox of San Gabriel his [illegible] by 5 and 4. F. B. Browning [illegible] Geo. Campbell by 1 up in 19 [illegible] then put out B. F. Tucker by 3 [illegible] Mr. Tucker had beaten H. A. [illegible] by 3 and 2, and C. J. Curtis [illegible] and 4.

F. D. Hudson defeated F. B. [illegible]ing in the finals by 1 up at the [illegible] hole, played almost in the dark [illegible] avoid carrying the match over [illegible] Sabbath, and thus wins the cup [illegible] this flight.

The Defeated Eights.

The finalists in the first defeated eight are H. G. Pattee, the third [illegible]erside man to hold his own in [illegible] tournament, and C. H. Knappe of Los Angeles. In the first round [illegible] B. Tufts defeated Judge [illegible]son by 3 and 1 and Pattee [illegible] E. N. Hillegas by 3 and 2. [illegible] a hard match in which they [illegible] perpetually "all square." Pattee [illegible]feated the president of the Golf [illegible]sociation by 1 up.

C. H. Knappe won by default [illegible] Robert Tatum, as did Bert Paul [illegible] Dr. Spinks. Knappe defeated [illegible] by 1 up and meets Pattee today.

Dashing Frank assures us [illegible] is going to win the cup for the [illegible]ond defeated eight and his play [illegible]terday justifies the brag. He [illegible] Dr. Foote by 3 and 1 with [illegible] ostentation—putts off the green [illegible] all that sort of thing. He [illegible] L. Hall of Annandale in the [illegible]day. Kleinberger defeated [illegible] 1 up. Hall won by default [illegible] Howe, and then bid Kleinberger sad adieu by 6 up and 5.

R. J. Cash and J. C. Nivens of Los Angeles Club, are the [illegible] in the third defeateds. Nivens [illegible] Wharton 2 up and Cash [illegible]ereux 4 and 3.

P. A. Coon and G. E. Harpham, San Gabriel men, are the finalists [illegible] the fourth defeateds. Coon [illegible]lon by 3 up and 2 and Harpham from Julian by default.

The tournament closes today [illegible] a 36-hole final match between [illegible]beth and Martin Chase for the [illegible] event. The other flights will be 18 holes only. Osburn and Cline [illegible]ond flight; Pattee and Knappe [illegible]wards and Hall, Nivens and Cash [illegible] Coon and Harpham in the [illegible] eights.

CROP DAMAGE ADVANCES OATS.

SELLING ORDERS FROM LONGS FLOOD THE WHEAT PIT.

But Buying Force Has Such Momentum that Prices Go Up and Market Closes Steady—Belated Covering by Shorts Brings Sharp Rally in Corn.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 31.—Buying force in wheat had greater momentum today than at any time since the beginning of adverse weather and crop reports from the Southwest. Notwithstanding set-backs due to heavy profit taking the market closed steady at an advance of 1-4 to 3-8 to 1 cent net. Corn finished 1-4 to 1 1-4c up, oats with a gain of 1-2 to 3-4c and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to an increased cost of 10 cents. Floods of selling orders from fortunate longs appeared to be all that prevented considerably higher prices than were reached in the wheat market. Belated covering by shorts in corn advanced May sharply at the close. Otherwise demand was not urgent and prices merely reflect the action of wheat. Severe damage reports from the Southwest carried oats higher. Provisions were helped upward by an advance at the yards, but afterward became irregular.

SEGREGATION NO REMEDY.

Dr Albert Wing, Municipal Housing Commissioner, on Red-light Districts and the Social Evil.

That the establishment of a red-light district in this city would tend to increase rather than modify "social-evil" conditions is the belief of Dr. Albert Wing, a member of the Municipal Housing Commission, who spoke on the subject yesterday at the City Club. "Only thirty-two of the larger cities in America have restricted districts," he said, "while many have abolished them. In no case where they have been abolished have they been restored."

The speaker said that the social evil has increased in cities where segregated districts are maintained, and that such districts offer the way for police corruption from the individual patrolman to the police judge. He denied that such districts are a protection to virtuous women, declaring there is no evidence to substantiate such an argument.

The speaker recommended that a vice commission be created for Los Angeles, and that the local situation be closely studied, so that means might be adopted to handle the social evil in the most practicable way.

Following the address there was a general discussion, and the speaker was called upon to answer numerous questions. He maintained that through education and strict suppression the way is open for minimizing the evil.

ON CHEWING-GUM TRAIL.

Trailed through the agency of chewing gum, cigars and cigarettes dropped by the youthful burglars in their efforts to escape after entering a store at No. 742 West Seventh street, Dwight Smith, 15 years old, was arrested early yesterday morning, his three companions having escaped. The boys broke into the cigar store, but were seen by a watchman and trailed until arrested. The captured boy will be turned over to the juvenile authorities.

WHITE SQUADRON DEPARTS.

The White Squadron of Lodge 99, B.P.O.E., left for San Diego on a special train yesterday at 1 o'clock and was attended by about two hundred boosters. The local Elks were headed by Exalted Ruler Edward Regan and Frank Bryson, captain of the drill squad. They were invited to participate in the "high jinks" of the San Diego club and will remain until tonight. During the day they will be taken on a sight-seeing tour of the southern city.

Gambling-Liquor Case.

Police Judge Williams in University Court yesterday fixed the bail of C. F. Holbrook, arrested on a charge of having conducted a gambling game and sold liquor without a license, at $350. The bail of the five alleged frequenters arrested at the same time at No. 2309 East Ninth street was placed at $100. The men asked for a jury trial.

FOREIGN TRADE GROWS.

Secretary of Commerce Commends Chamber of Commerce for Its Efforts to Increase It.

In a letter received yesterday by President Kinney of the Chamber of Commerce, Secretary William C. Redfield of the Department of Commerce commends the Los Angeles organization for its wisdom in appointing a committee on foreign trade.

"It is normal to our character," he said, "that we should seek our share in the commerce of all the earth, and it is to me a cause of rejoicing to see year after year the magnificent growth in our foreign commerce. This has reached its height at the present hour, for our sales of manufactured goods of all kinds to other people have gone on thus far during the fiscal year at the rate of $5,000,000 for every working day, and will at the close of the year, unless all signs fail, make the magnificent total of $1,500,000,000.

"Our total foreign trade, including the above and our other exports and all our imports, will approach the sum of $4,000,000,000 this fiscal year, and in this commerce the balance in our favor will be well in excess of $500,000,000. It is a big world, and in it America should have a big place."

IRON CHIEF CLAIMS.

Hearing of Government Suit Against Riverside Corporation to Be Begun Tomorrow.

The hearing of the case brought by the government against the Iron Chief Mining Company, to declare invalid certain claims of that corporation in Riverside county, will be begun tomorrow before Register Buren and Receiver Robinson of the local land office and will continue at intervals during the entire month of June.

The point raised by the government is that the necessary amount of work has not been done by the Iron Chief Mining Company, and that the claims are mineral in character. There are more than a dozen claims purchased by the corporation from individual entrymen, and the taking of testimony promises to be tedious and long-drawn-out. The suit does not involve the rich deposit of iron ore owned by the company that has long since been patented.

A corps of special agents representing the field service of the General Land Office has just concluded an investigation of the entire field involved and the result of their inquiries will form a part of the exhibit on the part of the government.

HEART DISEASE CLAIMS TWO.

Residents of Upland Are Suddenly Stricken by Death — Celebrated Mountain Resort Opens Today.

UPLAND, May 31.—Two residents of Upland have died suddenly from disease of the heart within a few days. The first victim was J. A. Bradshaw, residing at Twenty-sixth street and Mountain avenue. Mr. Bradshaw was walking about just a short time before his death, though he has been an invalid for several years. He was 66 years old and had resided in Upland for many years. Years ago he was prominent in newspaper and political work in Missouri. He leaves a widow, a daughter and a sister-in-law, the latter Mrs. W. J. Bodenhamer of Upland. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. S. Sampson, and burial was at Bellevue Cemetery. The G.A.R. assisted with the services.

David J. Deer, who had resided in Upland for several months, dropped dead at his home at the Illinois rooming-house, Friday. His death was not altogether unexpected. He was a native of Illinois and 52 years old. Funeral services, conducted at the First Church of the Nazarene, were held yesterday, and interment was at Bellevue Cemetery. A widow and one daughter, Mrs. Alfred Martin, survive him.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Upland's celebrated mountain resort, "Camp Baldy," located in San Antonio Canyon, to the north of this city, opens the season of 1913 on June 1. For some time past, however, the camp has been caring for a number of guests, and everything points to the most successful season in the history of the corporation. C. T. McCulloch is in charge of the camp this season.

Charles P. Fuller has been appointed deputy Coroner, to assist his father in the Coroner's duties. Hereafter, in the absence of the elder Fuller, C. P. will answer calls. This is made necessary from the fact that the Coroner is often called to such a great distance from the county seat, frequent trips to Needles and other points in the eastern end of this big county, being made.

The city fathers are devising ways and means for looking more closely after the upkeep of the improved roads inside the incorporated city. Ninth street, which was improved some years ago, has deteriorated badly, and is now to be repaired and improved from Euclid avenue to Campus.

The choir of St. Mark's Church, this city, will render Gaul's sacred cantata, "Ruth," Sunday evening, June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Manker were host and hostess to the teachers of the city schools, together with the members of the Board of Trustees, at their home on North Second avenue, last evening.

Local Stock Market Activities

By Jno. O. Knight.

Home building and insurance stocks continued to play an important part in local trading during the week. Great Republic Life was in good demand at slightly better quotations as was also California National Life. Los Angeles Fire Insurance and Western States Life also figured somewhat conspicuously in the trading. Indications continue to point rather strongly to better prices for this class of securities.

Los Angeles Investment Company stock was heavily traded in at from $4.10 to $4.12. Announcement has been made that the company will hereafter sell no more treasury stock. Just what effect this will have upon the market is problematical, and opinion on the subject is about evenly divided. Mason Operahouse Home Builders was firm at from $2.20 to $2.25 and Commonwealth sold at from 23 to 25 cents. Standard Building Investment was off, being quoted at from 16 to 18 cents. Southern California Home Builders, continued to sell around 20 cents and San Diego Construction at from 90 to 95.

Union Oil again came into prominence by achieving a new low record, selling on Thursday at 78. Although trading in this issue was light the market apparently was without support. Best informed traders are inclined to regard these quotations as too low, however and expect to see a sharp reaction from the present level when trading reopens this week.

The first transaction in Country Club Park stock reported in some time was made during the week at $120.00 per share.

Consolidated Realty has been in some demand at slightly better quotations since announcement of increase in the dividend rate from 4 per cent. to 6 per cent.

Sun Drug Company has figured quite conspicuously in recent trading at the advanced quotations of $1.10 to $1.15. This issue pays dividends monthly at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum.

Farmers and Merchants' National Bank stock sold off this week to $392.50, the lowest quotation on this issue in many months. Other local bank stocks remained practically unchanged.

The mill at the Yellow Pine Mine has been closed for repairs after a continuous run of eighteen months. It is reported that this property has $100,000 worth of ore on the surface with enough metal in sight to continue the present dividend of 2 per cent. per month for the next year. The stockholders have been receiving this return on their investment regularly for more than a year.

AGRICULTURAL INVESTIGATION.

Two Separate Commissions on Their Way to Europe.

Will Study Production, Marketing and Credits.

Also Co-operation in Banking and Also Farm Work.

[Portland Oregonian:] Hector Macpherson, writing from the steamer Saxonia, which had on board the members of the commission on a tour of investigation of methods of agricultural co-operation, says it will be news to many to learn that there are two separate and distinct commissions on their way to Europe to study co-operation. There is the American commission, composed of representatives of the different States and Canadian provinces, and there is also a United States commission, directly representing the Federal Government and appointed by the President of the United States. A word of explanation will make this clear.

OFFICIAL CHARACTER GIVEN.

The American commission was assembled through the efforts of the Southern Commercial Congress, an organization with headquarters at Washington, and aiming at the promotion of the general economic well-being of the Southern States. The movement began more than a year ago, when the Southern Commercial Congress called a conference on rural finance at Nashville, Tenn.

At this conference David Lubin, American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, was present. He had been called to this meeting by the Department of State, on the urgent request of the Southern Commercial Congress, to lead the discussion of rural finance, which was the topic of supreme interest to the conference. After hearing Mr. Lubin's lucid analysis of the work of the co-operative credit associations among European farmers, the delegates present, representing twenty-seven States, passed a unanimous resolution in favor of sending an American commission to Europe to study those associations on their own ground.

The work of assembling the commission was assigned to the Southern Commercial Congress, and the project was indorsed by Congress. On March 4, 1913, Congress passed a resolution "that the Secretary of State be authorized and requested to bespeak for the proposed American commission to investigate the European systems of rural credits the diplomatic courtesies of the various European governments."

In order, however, to give sufficient [illegible] for the expected diplomatic courtesies, Congress determined to take a hand in the investigation. An appropriation of $25,000 was provided to send a United States commission to represent and report back to the Federal government. The act expressly states that the Federal commission [illegible] co-operate with the American commission in its work of investigation.

The United States commission consists of seven members. They are Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College; Dr. John Lee Coulter of the Department of Agriculture at Washington; [illegible], Thomas P. Gore, Ralph W. Moss, Col. Harvie Jordan and Dr. Clarence J. Owens, director [illegible] of the Southern Commercial Congress. These are all aboard the Saxonia, with the exception of Senators Fletcher and Gore, who will hasten to join the party as soon as the smoke of the tariff conflict has begun to clear away.

The presence of the United States commission will be of the greatest assistance to us in our investigation of European conditions. The men composing it are of outstanding ability and representing the Federal government they will secure for the commission fuller recognition and greater facilities for investigation than would otherwise be accorded. Besides, they come much better equipped for the work in hand than is the American commission. They have on board, besides the five official members, four [illegible] who are already fairly [illegible] with the ground to be covered in Europe, and a stenographic staff which is now doing duty for the two commissions.

INTERESTS REPRESENTED.

Let us now turn to the work of the commission on board. There are in the party 101 members. Of these thirty-seven are either women traveling along with their husbands, or visiting members who are taking the tour, but are not official delegates on [illegible] the commission. Other officials will join us in Europe, some of whom are already on the ground, while others will follow as soon as home duties will permit.

I have [illegible] carefully through the [illegible] working delegates on board the Saxonia, and have roughly classified them on the basis of their principal occupation. Most of the delegates, I find, have several strings to their bows. In fact, it would be difficult to get together another group of men of more varied interests and experience than are represented in these sixty-four commissioners.

I find that twenty-eight members are signed up as farmers; but of these, more than half are farming merely as a side line or for recreation. I submit the following classification as a fair indication of the makeup of the commission: Bankers, 13; farmers, 12; business men, other than bankers, 11; college professors, 11; newspaper men, 6; professional men, other than teachers, 6; representatives of government departments, 5.

In accepting this classification, however, the reader must remember that it gives an imperfect idea of the multitude of interests represented. To take only one illustration: A Georgia delegate was boasting of being one of the most representative farmers on the commission. On questioning him I found that he began as a farmer, took over a store, opened a bank, became director in a fertilizer company, joined a corporation to build a local railway and still remains a farmer. Probably more than half of the commission are just as versatile as the gentleman from Georgia.

WORK BEGAN ON SHIPBOARD.

But notwithstanding the manifold interests of the delegates, there is not one of them but is intensely interested in the problems of agriculture; and a majority of those on board are men who have been champions of the farmers' cause in their respective localities.

From the first day, the commission got down to the work of organizing itself for business. It is now divided into four sections, each of which is to specialize in one of the four grand divisions of the investigation: Production, marketing, country life and farm credit. Exhaustive questionaries have been worked out to serve as guides in the study of each of these fields of investigation; and both questions and method have been tried out in an investigation of conditions actually existing in Canada and the United States.

Probably no part of our summer's work will prove more illuminating than this discussion of country life and institutions as they exist in the twenty-seven States and three Canadian provinces represented on board the Saxonia. It has been brought out that the co-operative movement in America is far more widespread than most of us are aware.

We find, for example, that Quebec, Massachusetts and Texas have already passed statutes governing the establishment of co-operative banks, and that there are close on 200 of these organizations in operation. There are also many private institutions modeled partly upon the European systems, which are granting both short-time loans and mortgage credit to farmers upon reasonable terms. We have numerous creameries, cow-testing associations, egg marketing societies, elevators, warehouse, purebread sires and various other enterprises, owned and at work co-operatively upon American soil.

In the prairie provinces of Canada, co-operative elevators and creameries are established by means of government aid, the province lending the association 85 per cent. of the cost of its plant. These same provinces, as well as several States, have the process of lending on real estate much simplified by the Torrens system of registration of land titles.

The commissions aim at a systematic collection of reliable data on all the institutions working for rural betterment in the United States and Canada. This should prove a valuable part of their service.

MAY HIGH IN BUILDING LIST.

SECOND ONLY TO APRIL IN VALUATION TOTAL.

Permits Granted During Month for Structures to Cost Close to Four Million Dollars—Total Construction Outlay for Year Is Sixteen Millions.

With 1499 permits, representing buildings to cost $3,735,410, to its credit, May stands second among all the months in the history of Los Angeles in point of construction outlay, its great valuation total being exceeded only by that of April of the present year, which boasted a little in excess of $5,000,000 as its aggregate building expenditure. The third best total was that of $3,585,014 for July, 1912. The figures for May, 1912, were 1380 permits and $2,277,861 valuation.

To date for the year the Chief Inspector of Buildings and his deputies have granted 7477 permits for new structures to cost the enormous sum of $15,589,006. The figures for the corresponding period of last year were 6253 permits and $11,225,937. The gain to date over 1912 is 1224 permits and $4,363,069. Both Chief Inspector Backus and Chief Clerk Cohn of the building department predict that the valuation total for the year will approximate $40,000,000.

That building activities during June may serve to bring the total for the half-year close to the $20,000,000 mark is indicated by the fact that permits to the value of $250,000 were granted yesterday morning after the May books had been closed. Applications are on hand for a permit to cover the construction of the $500,000 Metropolitan building at Fifth and Broadway and for smaller structures to cost in the aggregate about $250,000. June, therefore, may be said to have $1,000,000 as a starter toward a big building valuation record.

BUY GOLF COURSE.

Newly-Organized Club Acquires Acreage at Head of Laurel Canyon. Plans Fine Clubhouse.

The Hollywood Golf Club, recently incorporated by a number of Los Angeles golf enthusiasts, concluded the purchase during the past week of 115 acres at the head of Laurel Canyon, paying Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Smith, the former owners of the property, the reported consideration of $57,500 for the holding. The land has an altitude of 1200 feet, being 200 feet higher than the Bungalow Inn, and looks down into the San Fernando Valley on the east. The property possesses unusual scenic beauty and was laid out for golfing some time ago, having been used as a course by many of those who are numbered among the new owners of the tract. The deal was handled by O. E. Farish, president of the California Realty Corporation.

The club will further improve the grounds and will build an attractive clubhouse on a knoll just off the main canyon road. The incorporators and the directors of the club are Alexander MacKeigan, Dr. Sumner J. Quint, H. N. H. Woodcock, E. B. Tufts, R. L. Tatum, Luther B. Spaulding, Sumner P. Hunt and M. P. Snyder. The present membership of the organization comprises fifty persons, which number is to be increased to 200.

In 1908, when the Smiths purchased the tract from Mrs. Marie C. Valdes, the property was wild, mountainous land, without water and without access to the rest of the canyon district. Now the holding is easily reached. It is the plan of the new owners to reserve twenty or more acres to be utilized by members of the club as homesites.

OLIVE STREET SALE.

Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, has concluded the sale through the David Blankenhorn Company to the Guarantee Realty & Building Company of the property at No. 1118 South Olive street, the seller, the Title Insurance & Trust Company, being represented by Bernard Vollmer. The property has a frontage of fifty-three feet with a depth of 150 feet and is improved with a one-story building used at the present time by the Hudson Automobile Company. The sale price is given at $55,000. The property is leased for $4200 a year until May, 1915.

Another sale has also just been concluded by F. J. Potter of Bryan & Bradford of the property at No. 1016 South Olive street, improved with an attractive four-apartment building. The property has a frontage of fifty-five feet and a depth of 155 feet, and sold for approximately $60,000. The rental amounts to nearly $2000 a year.

CANYON CASTLE PARK.

The Board of Supervisors has let a contract to the Pacific Light and Power Company for the installation of street lamps along the Laurel Canyon road from Sunset boulevard to Lookout Mountain Park. These lights will be maintained on the same schedule as that employed by the city of Los Angeles. The residents of Laurel Canyon plan to celebrate the turning on of the lights with an entertainment and dance at the Bungalow Inn. Recent sales in Canyon Castle Park are reported by Chas. S. Mann to the following: Gesner Williams, Eliza M. Walker, W. E. Stevens, John Scharrer, Millie M. Crossier, Mildred I. Crossier, Florence B. Crossier, Ida M. Young, L. M. Hardy, Bertha W. Hardy, Mildred L. Clarke, Robt. W. Brown, Frank Cretcher, Severi L. Newman, Wm. Iver Newman and J. G. K. Williams. A number of the above are preparing to build at once, according to Mann. G. D. Tully has just started the construction of a two-story chalet to cost about $5000.

FINISHING TOUCHES.

The finishing touches are being put on the grounds of the recently completed home of S. M. Spalding in Beverly Hills. The planting of the grounds is in cedars, maple and spruce, and a large rose garden is being laid out on the western extremity. The walks are being paved with brick and bordered with box. The house is typically southern and handsomely finished in ivory and mahogany. It occupies one of the most sightly locations in Beverly Hills, from which is obtained a fine panorama of ocean, valley and mountains. Many of the features of the house and grounds are the special adaptation of the ideas of Mrs. Spalding, who before her marriage was Miss Canfield, daughter of the Los Angeles oil magnate.

EAGLE ROCK TRACT SOLD.

Two hundred and sixty-five acres of land on the Eagle Rock car line and within the northwestern city limits of Los Angeles have been purchased by the California & Arizona Land Company from Abbot Kinney of Venice. The deal is one of the largest recently concluded in inside city acreage. The property acquired is to be put upon the market at once as it is already improved. The consideration involved in the purchase is not given out.

Fact and Comment.

As an integral part of such an exhibit in each city there should be installed collections of pictures of the unsurpassed scenic attractions of the Golden State, with literature printed in the language of the people appealed to. No European traveler should be permitted to think for a moment that his continent has any corner on scenic and tourist attractions.

Under the State realty license law passed by the recent legislative session, provision is made for a big fund, amounting to 90 per cent. of the amount received in fees, to be used for the express purpose of advertising California to the rest of the world. Could this fund be expended to any better advantage than in advertising California's resources in the agricultural districts of Europe? It strikes the writer that it would be an excellent plan to send competent men to do real missionary work in the farming districts of Europe. The reaching of anything near all of the European agriculturists can be accomplished in no other way. Of old the steamship companies were wont to placard the slum districts of European cities with glowing descriptions of America, with the sole idea of baiting enough emigrants to serve as human ballast for ocean voyages. The practice has not been entirely discontinued, notwithstanding the efforts of the immigration authorities. It has been demonstrated that the way to get the emigrant is to go after him.

California, to escape the unfortunate effects of improperly-regulated immigration, so terribly in evidence in many of the Atlantic Coast communities, and to win the population most calculated to advance her interests, could well afford to go into competition with the ballast-seeking steamship agents and to boost the State first hand to the kind of Europeans it really wants as settlers and citizens.

Certainly heer is a cause, too, that is worthy the best efforts of the leading civic and commercial bodies of the State. Letters from Western Stockmen

THE urgent need of a union stock yards in Lo[illegible] Angeles is best realized by stockmen. They know what the lack of facilities for handling the enormous live stock business of Western States is costing not only themselves but the whole meat-consuming public. They are losing much of their possible profits in the high freight rates they now have to pay to get their stock to far Eastern markets—and the public has to suffer through high meat prices. The Los Angeles Union Stockyards Company proposes to put a stop to this. Its project is one that means more profit for stockraisers, better meat and better prices for the Western public. It will make possible the shipping of live stock to Los Angeles and then by Panama Canal to Eastern markets at lower transportation costs than can now be secured direct by rail. That is why Western stockmen are a unit in support of this project. Their support insures success. Sere are a few of the many letters we have recently received from stockmen and men heavily interested in the livestock or packing business:

Salt Lake City, Utah, February 19, 1913.
Los Angeles Union Stock Yards,
Los Angeles, Cal.
Gentlemen:—

I have concluded to invest in the stock of your company because I believe it to be a safe, sound and conservative investment, and should result in large profits to the stockholders. Large Union Stock Yards located in Los Angeles will give shippers market in a different direction, a closer haul with less expense and cheaper rates, with additional ocean transportation facilities. With the opening of the Panama Canal it will bring the market of the world to the doors of Los Angeles for the products of these stock yards. This will be of great interest and benefit to the stockmen of Utah.

Very respectfully,
C. B. STEWART.

(Mr. C. B. Stewart is Vice-President of the Farmers and Stock Growers' Bank of Salt Lake City, Utah, and also Secretary of the State Wool Growers' Association.)

Glendale, Arizona, Jan. 15, 1913.
Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company,
Los Angeles, Cal.
Gentlemen:—

I trust you are meeting with success in every way with your stock yard project, and for your information believe you could count on 100 loads of hogs alone from Glendale, to say nothing of the cattle shipments on which you are posted.

Kindly send me your book giving particulars in regard to your project, and oblige,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. W. DeFEVER,
Vice-President of Glendale, Ariz., State Bank

Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 31, 1913.
Mr. F. E. Schlageter,
Manager Los Angeles Union Stock Yards,
Los Angeles, Cal.
Dear Friend:—

Am satisfied the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards will be a big success, as it will undoubtedly fill a long wanted need from the stockman's standpoint. Let me know when you will be ready, as I will have some stock to go through your yards.

Wishing you all the success possible, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) A. S. ERICKSON.

The letters above prove the demand for the stockyards and the trade in prospect. They are from men who control or influence a large share of the live stock business of the West, and their pledges of patronage mean a big volume of business already in view. The possibilities before this business are absolutely limitless. Scarcely any project ever established in this city or on the Coast offers so much to investors with such a degree of certainty and safety. With the investment of just a few dollars you can now

Our large plant site at Boyle avenue and San Antonio street, junction of the Santa Fe and Salt Lake railroads, comprising about one hundred acres, is now worth fully $150,000.00 more than we paid for it. Only a very few more shares will be sold at the present price of $1.25. The advance may be made any day without notice.

Make your reservation of a block of this stock at once, if you want to take advantage of the present low price. You can make the fullest investigation after reserving shares, and then use your own discretion about taking up the order or canceling it. Up-to-Date and Imposing Educational Structure for Neighboring Town.

Accepted design for new Huntington Park Union High School building, George W. Eldredge, architect.

EASTERNER GETS SCHOOL AWARD.

Huntington Park's Trustees Select Architect.

Fine Building to Replace the Burned Structure.

Decision Follows Extended Legal Controversy.

As the result of a competition entered into by half a dozen Southern California architects, George W. Eldredge, recently of Salt Lake City and architect of the magnificent new $500,000 High School at that place, has been commissioned to prepare plans for the handsome and up-to-date High School structure to be erected by the Huntington Park Union High School District on the site of the building wiped out by fire a little over a year ago. Eldredge has opened offices in the Los Angeles Investment building of this city and will hereafter make his home in Los Angeles. He formerly practiced his profession in Massachusetts.

The competition in which Eldredge was the successful man, while not conducted along the strict lines set down by the American Institute of Architects, conformed to these to the extent that the institute fee of 6 per cent. was allowed the winner. Each competitor was permitted to exhibit his plans to the trustees at a special meeting in which he was given ample time to demonstrate his ideas.

The amount available for the school is $80,000.

The definite award of the Architectural Commission for the proposed building follows an extended controversy upon the part of the district trustees and various other agencies. Robert M. Taylor of this city was instructed to prepare drawings for the school late last year after sketches he had submitted had been favorably considered. Taylor's expectations were knocked in the head, however, when the trustees suddenly discovered that an old State law, which has more than once brought discomfiture to California architects, made the advertising of bids for a general competition for the school work compulsory.

The school as planned by the successful architect will be 119x255 feet in ground dimensions and two stories in height. It will be faced with ruffled brick and will have stone trimmings. Architecturally the structure will suggest Italian renaissance types.

The building will contain in addition to a large number of classrooms, a large study hall, an auditorium, seating 600, and a cafeteria, the latter in the basement. The office of the principal and teachers will be on the first floor.

The architect in his sketches has utilized a portion of the cellar left on the site after the destructive fire of a year ago to form a sunken garden on the east, giving light to all the departments required in the basement. He has adopted what is known as the "block type" of construction, which will allow of the maximum of light and air and at the same time do away with the necessity for so great an amount of masonry work as enters into the average structure.

STATELY CHURCH FOR EAST SIDE.

PLANS OUT FOR BEAUTIFUL HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

Boyle Heights Christian Body to Erect Commodious Temple for the Growing Membership—Structure is to Stand at East Second and Breed Streets.

Plans for a stately house of worship, to be erected by the congregation of the Boyle Heights Christian Church at the corner of East Second and Breed streets in Boyle Heights are in course of preparation in the offices of Architect Robert H. Orr. The edifice projected will be of the temple style of architecture and one of the handsomest of the denomination in this city.

The structure is to cover a ground area of 60x120 feet and will have plastered exterior walls. Provision will be made in the basement for social rooms, a kitchen and a furnace-room.

The main auditorium will be fifty-five feet square and will be connected with a Sunday-school room thirty feet square, both rooms being provided with galleries. The plans call for eight classrooms on the main floor, together with a parlor, 16x28 feet in size, a study for the pastor, a Ladies' Aid Society room and clubrooms for young men and women.

The church was organized about nine years ago and now numbers approximately 250 members in its congregation. The Rev. L. F. Stephens, the present pastor, has had charge of the church since February of the present year, at which time he took the place of the Rev. J. Harvey Hazel, who retired on account of failing health.

INSTALLING MACHINERY.

Packing Plant at Puente to Be Ready for Occupancy in June According to Those Interested.

Representatives of the Puente Rancho Packing Company, announce that the new packing plant now being established by that concern near Puente will be ready to begin active operation on June 15. The equipment of machinery necessary for the manufacture of the various products of the company is now being installed in the four remodeled ranch buildings that are to house the plant, and a company official stated yesterday that 100 hogs a day had been contracted for from growers throughout Southern California.

The buildings utilized were formerly a part of the equipment of the Puente ranch, and are of brick and heavy timber construction. Cement floors have been put in all four of them and they have been otherwise altered to meet the requirements of the packing plant. The former ranch headquarters, a sixteen-room house, is being remodeled for office purposes. One of the buildings will be used as a tomato cannery.

The company has a tract of seventy-five acres on the Pomona Valley boulevard, one and a half miles west of Puente, and adjoining La Fortuna Farms. It is the plan of the company to feed a large number of hogs on the place. At the outset of the venture, it is stated, about thirty men will be employed, this force to be increased as the business grows. The company will specialize in delicatessen products and package goods. The regular railway freight to Los Angeles will be supplemented by a truck service.

WITH THE ARCHITECTS.

Contract Let for Apartment on South Hope—Hotel for Railway Men Started on East Fourth.

Construction will be begun at once upon a three-story brick apartment-house planned by R. B. Young & Son for Dr. F. C. Manning, and to be erected at No. 1325 South Hope street. The Pozzo Construction Company has the contract. The structure will cost in excess of $40,000 and will contain eighty rooms in two and three-room apartments. It will cover a ground area of 50x140 feet.

Earl D. Clark has let to "Home Builders" the contract for the construction of a three-story, fifty-two-room frame hotel and store building to be erected at the southeast corner of Fourth and Gless streets. The structure will be 52x120 feet in size and will contain six storerooms on the ground story. The office and lobby will be on the second floor, while on the third floor will be a large reading-room. The dining-room will be on the ground floor adjoining a billiard and amusement-room. The place has been designed especially as a hotel for railway men, as the site is within easy walking distance of three depots. The cost of the improvement, which has just been started, is given at approximately $30,000.

Plans for a two-story brick apartment-house to be erected by W. A. Lothrop at Twenty-eighth and Idell streets are nearing completion in the office of Anton W. Reif. The building will contain twenty two-room apartments.

TO ATTEND OPENING.

Representatives of Many Cities Will Be Present at Launching of New Townsite of Fontana.

Representatives of all the "citrus cities," including Ontario, Pomona, San Dimas, Monrovia, Cucamonga, Redlands, Riverside and San Bernardino will be present at the formal opening of the townsite of Fontana, in the Rialto district, next Saturday, and will extend a welcome to the newest of the southland's urban communities. The invitation to the celebration attending the launching of the new town has been extended to the commercial bodies of each city in person by A. B. Miller, president of the Fontana company and sponsor for the infant townsite.

One of the features of the ceremonies will be the planting in the big plaza laid out for Fontana of twenty-eight citrus trees, each named after a President of the United States. The programme includes a number of speeches by distinguished visitors.

The new town, already subdivided and laid out for the population its backers hope to attract, lies in the heart of the Fontana holdings, comprising 17,367 acres, 3500 acres of which is already planted to young orange trees, and 2500 acres of which is in bearing citrus groves, deciduous fruits and vineyards.

BUY SEAWARD ACREAGE.

Members of Syndicate Acquire High and Sightly Tract on San Vicente Boulevard—Will Subdivide Holding.

Lawrence B. Burck, president of the California Real Estate and Building Company, heading a syndicate of local investors, this week completed the purchase of Carlos Heights, 164 acres of high tableland, lying along San Vicente boulevard, one and a half miles from the Palisades of Santa Monica. The price paid is given at $325,000.

The property slopes from a half-mile frontage on San Vicente boulevard to the ridge of the Santa Monica foothills, and extends along the rim of Santa Monica Canyon. A portion of the tract is already improved with streets and other conveniences. It is the plan of the new owners to subdivide the holding into quarter-acre residence sites.

Los Angeles Realty Man Negotiating for Large Holding Between Fresno and Madera.

W. O. Huse, a Los Angeles realty man, with branch offices in Madera, is negotiating for a large tract of land midway between this city and Madera, which he proposes to subdivide and place upon the market in small farms. The land is close to the river and is opposite a tract of land recently opened up by Fresno capitalists.

E. P. Nelson of Long Beach has just completed the purchase of sixty acres of the Patterson ranch lands northwest of this city at a reported consideration of $18,000.

Realty deals in Fresno for the past week total over $200,000. One of the large sales of the week was that of a tract of 2360 acres near Clovis to the Fresno Copper Company. The land is to be subdivided and used for colonization purposes. The tract adjoins the International vineyards, and is contiguous to the Big Creek Railroad running east into the mountains.

MAY RECORD MONTH.

Glendale in Midst of Greatest Building Activity—Trustees Advertise for Bids on Fire House.

GLENDALE, May 31.—Up to Thursday of this week May has been the largest month of building permits ever known by this city. In all forty-five permits have been issued, these having a valuation of $70,000. The following permits were among those issued this week: H. J. Chambers, Maryland avenue and Second, residence, $2500; A. T. Wilson, No. 1428 West Second street, residence, $2000; Ben Goodrich, Avenue A, Verdugo Canyon, residence, $2500; H. A. Goodrich, No. 916 West Ninth street, residence, $2500.

In an effort to be ready for the new auto fire engine when it arrives, the Trustees of this city are advertising for bids for the new fire house on Broadway. A two-story brick house with all the modern improvements, and to cost about $5000, is desired.

The High School board of this place has advised a bond issue of $100,000 for the purpose of acquiring additional land and erecting new buildings to accommodate the rapidly-growing enrollment. It is suggested that twelve lots on the west side of Maryland avenue be purchased and that Maryland between Fifth and Sixth streets be closed by the city and made a part of the High School grounds. This would give the school an additional frontage of 180x640 feet, or an equivalent of sixteen lots.

ACTIVE WEEK.

Bay City Building and Railway Projects Rapidly Taking Shape. Grading Begun in New Subdivision.

BAY CITY, May 31.—The past week has seen more activity in Bay City than has been experienced in a long time. The excavating for the new 300-room pavilion and bath-house has been completed, and workmen will soon be erecting the framework of the structure. Ten carloads of lumber for the building have just been delivered over the first extension of the new Long Beach-Bay City electric line of the Pacific Electric, which now extends from the main line to the Ocean Front. Pole crews and wiremen have been at work on the construction work along Ocean avenue to the mouth of Alamitos Bay, and this work is almost completed. It is hoped by the Bayside Land Company, owners of Bay City, that the materials ordered for the new bridge connecting the banks of the bay will soon be at hand, and the line rushed to completion.

The new subdivision at Bay City, lying on Main street and north of the Pacific Electric, is being graded, and as soon as this work is completed curbs and sidewalks will be installed. A crew is driving new piles on the 1500-foot pier at the foot of Main street, and putting it in first-class shape.

NEW VERMONT SQUARE.

The Southwest Land Company reports new buildings started in New Vermont Square by the following persons: Lilly E. McDonald, south side of Forty-first street, between Gramercy and Arlington; Frank L. Tower, corner Forty-sixth and Harvard; Security Home Builders, north side Forty-second street, between Western and St. Andrew's; Emily M. Timerhoff, north side of Forty-third street, between St. Andrew's and Gramercy; J. J. Holderman, south side Santa Barbara, between Gramercy and Arlington; D. W. McLean, north side Forty-first place, between St. Andrew's and Gramercy; Ernest A. Larsen, south side of Forty-first street, between Western and St. Andrew's; Lewis W. Colfelt, north side Forty-third place, between St. Andrew's and Gramercy; H. P. Yehling, south side Forty-third street, between Gramercy and Arlington; Henry Dangers, south side Forty-first drive, between Gramercy and Arlington; R. J. Bird, two-story pressed brick building, containing three stores and six apartments, west side of Western, between Santa Barbara avenue and Forty-first street.

WORK PROGRESSING.

Workmen have completed the setting the poles for the extension of the Los Angeles Railway line along Fifty-fourth street through Chesterfield square. Ties have been placed along the street and "Trilby" rails have been distributed. The work of making the public utilities connections in the same tract is progressing rapidly.

ENJOY HARBOR SAIL.

Forty-five head salesmen and employees of Robert Marsh & Co. were the guests of C. E. Cooper and George Brookwell, sales managers of the firm, last Saturday in an outing at San Pedro. The party spent the afternoon sailing about the harbor.

Yucaipa Valley "Red Apple" Land is the safest and most profitable investment in Southern California today. The net result of an apple orchard, developed under our expert care, shows it to be a highly profitable investment.

Net Result Is What Counts

You can now buy the choicest of our "South Bench" apple lands, with water ownership, at $235 an acre. This tract is the cream of the Yucaipa Valley. It costs only $23 an acre, for first-class apple trees planted in a careful, scientific manner. The total cost of land, water, trees and all costs of development, including taxes, interest, etc., is less than $500 an acre at the end of five years. In the fifth year Yucaipa Valley apple orchards yield an average of over $100 an acre; the tenth year over $400 an acre net to the grower. Other apple orchards in Yucaipa have produced over $1000 an acre in a single crop. Cherries have yielded over $40 per tree. Bartlett Pears are big money makers in Yucaipa.

Big Red Apples have been grown here for over 20 years. During this time we have made a careful study of the net results produced by the different varieties, and have centered on three. These three are the big money makers in Yucaipa. So if you buy in Yucaipa now, you won't have to plant for experimentation, but you plant for immediate success.

OUR NEW "SOUTH BENCH" TRACT

Is perfectly level—no grading necessary. The rich, red soil is 25 to 35 feet deep. Elevation [illegible] to [illegible] feet above sea level. An ample supply of pure mountain water is delivered under pressure to the highest point of each tract, at a very low cost. The high San Bernardino Mountain Range shelters this district against the cold north winds, the hot desert winds and sand storms, making the Yucaipa Valley not only a very healthy and delightful place to live, but it gives us almost perfect conditions for the growing of the fine flavored, juicy, big Red Apples for which the Yucaipa Valley is justly famous.

MAKE YOUR SELECTION NOW

adjoining school site or near National (Ocean to Ocean) Highway. This land is the finest of our rich fruit lands. One share of water goes with each acre. $235 an acre, one-fourth cash, balance in one, two and three years, interest 6 per cent. on deferred payments. BUY NOW, and get the choicest selection. The early buyers in our former subdivisions can now sell at fancy profits.

Join our next excursion to Yucaipa, this week, and choose the most valuable tract. Excursion parties every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, leaving Los Angeles 8:30 a.m., and return here 6:10 a.m. For further information call, phone or write.

WILL PRICE OF RUBBER EVER BE MUCH LOWER?

Careful Survey of a Question So Interesting to Modern Life and Industry — Origin and Development of the Rubber-Producing Business—How People Went Crazy Over It—Cost Can't Be Cut.

BY LEWIS R. FREEMAN,

(Who toured the world as the special industrial commissioner of The Times.)

THE automobile has opened the eyes of the public to a number of things it did not see before, and one of the most important of these is the rubber market. With the motor an indispensable adjunct of modern life and the tire a sine qua non of motor manufacture, next year's price of rubber to the man who owns an automobile, either for pleasure or profit, is overshadowed only by one other thing, and that is this year's price of the same commodity. Gasoline is, to be sure, an important item, but with the outlook hopeful for the development of a distillate-consuming engine, relief on that score seems reasonably certain; the riddle of the future of rubber is harder to read.

With the certainty that the world's demand for rubber will increase even more rapidly in the coming decade than during the last, there is also the certainty that forest-grown rubber—which still constitutes by far the largest part of the world's supply—not being susceptible to exploitation by modernly systematized methods, can never be gathered more cheaply than at the present time. Here and there railways—such as the soon-to-be-completed Madeira River line in the Amazon Valley—may result in the opening up of hitherto unexploited rubber forests and some reduction in the cost of transportation of that product from adjacent districts, an advantage, however, that will be more than offset by the fact that with each passing year the rubber gatherers are being forced farther and farther afield at points where little improvement in transportation facilities is practicable. Some governmental system of supervision of rubber gathering—similar, perhaps, to that of the foresters of Burma in regulating the cutting of teak—may result in less wasteful methods of collecting the gum and stop the rapid destruction now going on of the rubber-producing forest trees. Any increase in the rubber supply commensurate with the inevitable demand, however, must come from one or both of two general sources, plantations or the discovery of a process of making synthetic rubber, either of which holds the possibilities of a solution of the problem. Before considering what these possibilities are, let us first trace something of the beginnings and growth of the jungle rubber industry, which still supplies the highest grades of that product and which, for a number of years to come at least, must still bear the burden of producing the bulk of the world's output.

BACK TO COLUMBUS.

The civilized world's knowledge of rubber dates from the time of the second voyage of Columbus, when Herrera secured some black balls of a lively substance from the natives of Hayti, all but one or two of which were lost overboard on the return voyage through the uncontrollable fascination of the sailors for bouncing them upon the deck. The surviving pellets—no less marvelous to the Europeans of those days than our first fragments of radium—were worn to pieces in the succession of bouncing exhibitions given for the benefit of royalty and science. With the first voyages to the Brazils, the elusive spheroids became commoner, but their utility was still limited to serving as playthings for the idle rich, until a British savant one day discovered that one of them possessed the power to obliterate a pencil mark, a circumstance from which the strange substance took its English name—rubber.

The natives of the Amazon were found to have a crude process of treating their homespun cottons with the melted seringa, thus producing a rough but fairly waterproof poncho. Rubber was far too scarce in Europe to permit of its use for such purposes, and for the next two or three centuries its utility was practically limited to that of a pencil eraser. In fact, it was not until the discovery by the American, Goodyear, about thirty years ago, of a successful process of vulcanization that rubber became an important item of world trade. The first great demand came through its successful utilization in boots, bags and waterproof fabrics, then came its vastly increased use for cables and other branches of electrical industry, bicycle and carriage tires and, finally, automobile tires.

The rubber supply has been a source of serious concern ever since the automobile industry got well under way a half decade ago. In 1909 the supply in the open market was practically wiped out by the feverish demand, the result being that the price went to over $3.00 a pound—equivalent to $6000 a ton, or a quarter of a million dollars a carload. The natural result was a rubber "boom" of two years' duration, marked by the maddest speculation the world has known since the times of the historic "South Sea Bubble" excitement. America, for some reason—probably because it was too busy with speculations of its own—escaped the excitement, but Europe—and especially England—paid heavy penalty for its loss of self-control. Ceylon, Maylasia and parts of Southern Burma, and Brazil were practically all laid out into rubber plantations, irrespective of their adaptability to that culture, and stock in the most unlikely of them was eagerly fought for in the exchanges of Europe. The Chinese, who have always been inveterate gamblers in their own way, caught the infection through the proximity of Singapore, the speculation center in the Middle East, and entered upon a frenzied campaign of rubber buying, the results of which I saw at first hand in the fall of 1910, when practically every Chinese bank in Tientsin and Shanghai had to close its doors.

The boom and the increased price of rubber stimulated the output of jungle rubber to such an extent that the price was soon restored to somewhere near the normal, but not before the riot of speculation had resulted in a hundred million dollars or more of loss. A large part of this sum, however, was invested in legitimate plantation development, and while few of the original investors will ever profit by their ventures, the impulse to the rubber plantation industry was incalculable. The tangible results of this wave of plantation development I will touch upon later.

THE TWO GREAT SOURCES.

The various trees and vines which produce the latex from which rubber is made are found at a number of places in the tropics, but there are only two great sources of jungle rubber—the valleys of the Amazon and the Congo. Of these the former is by far the more important, Para and Manaos shipping over 40,000 of the world's total crop of 70,000 tons in the year 1912. Over half of this amount came to America, the ultimate destination of a good part of it being the great rubber manufacturing town of Akron, O. The Congo rubber is all marketed through Antwerp, while that produced in the various parts of the British empire moves through Liverpool.

The blot which marks the Amazon rubber area on the map of South America covers practically the whole watershed of the Amazon, extending from the Atlantic to the Andes, in Peru, a distance of 2000 miles, and covering a belt of fully half of that width most of the way. The story is told of a London promoter who stated in his prospectus of a wildcat plantation scheme on the Amazon that "the rubber belt of Brazil is checked only by the sky-soaring peaks of the Cordillera of the Andes." "That may be true," said a fleeced investor after the bursting of the boom; "but if the price I paid for stock in his blooming concern is any criterion, I don't see why it need be checked by a little thing like a 20,000-foot range of mountains."

THE FOUR GRADES.

There are four grades of Brazilian rubber: Fine Para, medium fine Para, Sernamby or "Niggerhead" and Caucho. The three better grades are secured from plantations or from forest trees which are tapped standing. Caucho, the cheapest grade, is collected from trees which have been felled, the bark being slashed with axes to allow the latex to run out and collect in shallow trenches cut in the earth to receive it. As a tree so felled does not sprout again, this method is extremely short-sighted, one of the practices, in fact, which some kind of a governmental regulative system is needed to do away with.

The strings of the Brazilian rubber trade are pulled by the managers of a half-dozen big exporting houses at Para and Manaos. These send out their traders or agents to the various strategic points on the upper waters of the Amazon or its tributaries, which form the advanced outposts of the rubber-gathering campaign. The agents hire the "seringueros," or actual rubber gatherers, the "hiring" consisting of supplying each with a several months' "grubstake" and turning him loose into the forest, with orders not to return until a certain minimum of crude rubber has been collected. This minimum is sufficient to pay for his advance of food, and if he is so lucky as to collect a larger supply he may, theoretically, have something coming to him at the end of his season's work. This rarely happens in practice, however, the agent usually managing to manipulate his accounts in a manner that leaves the unfortunate seringuero, no matter how hard or worked, as bad off at the end of the season as at the beginning. It is under this pernicious system, the very nature of which invites abuses, that the "Putomayo atrocities," of which so much has been written of late, occur. This latter section, being on a very remote part of the Peru-Brazil frontier, far removed from the influence of even the slight semblances of governmental authority that is maintained nearer the coast, has developed a system of peonage practically amounting to slavery, under which the most unspeakable cruelties have been practiced to the end of driving the unfortunate natives to greater efforts in scouring the forest for the precious rubber. Mutilation and kindred practices have been every day matters, until it would seem that the name "Red Rubber" the title gained for the Congo product through similar cruelties, may also fitly be applied to that of Eastern Peru.

THE SERINGUERO.

The life of the Seringuero is one of the wretchedest imaginable. He comes mostly from the province of Caera, near the coast, and the change of climate to the sweat-box atmosphere of the Amazon forests is so great that fully a sixth of the newcomers die of fever in their first year. He has to leave Para in the fall in order to make the three or four-month journey to the scene of his labors in the spring. Transportation, food for this unproductive interval, and his "advance" for his season's work costs the company employing him upwards of $500, and he starts his work with the knowledge that this indebtedness must be wiped off before anything will be due from which he may draw to tide over the seven unproductive months in which he has no employment. Always pulled down with fever and dysentery even when not prostrated by one or the other, the distinguishing characteristic of the seringuero appears to be his listlessness, and this in an occupation in which alertness and energy should be more at a premium than in almost any other.

The work of the seringuero is fairly simple; it is his environment and the pressure under which he toils that kill. During the whole five months of the season he must live and work alone. An hour or two before sun up he leaves his hut—usually but a wretched brush and thatch shelter which is only a half protection from the nightly rains—carrying the cumbersome implements of his trade. The "Siphona elastica," upon which he works, is distinguished by its lack of gregariousness, almost invariably being found standing alone. Having found a tree, he makes a number of inch-long incisions on the trunk, under each cutting fixing, by means of a bit of gum or clay, a small cup or the hollow half of a nut husk. Then, blazing his way so that no turn of his trail shall be missed on his return, he searches out the next tree and repeats the operation. This goes on until the vertical sun marks the noon hour, at which time he returns to his first tree and comes back over his path of the morning again, this time pouring the latex or sap, which has collected into a huge bucket. With this he staggers back to his hut at sundown, and, after a hasty meal of farina, begins the "smoking" operation over a rough reverberatory furnace. The heat thickens the milky sap into a pasty-looking cream of pure rubber. This is made into balls by allowing it to coagulate upon the end of a small paddle, these drying in the next day's sun into a deep violet-black color. It is now ready to be carried to the nearest agent, who will send it at the end of the season to Para or Manaos, to go on to Europe or America as the crude rubber of commerce. It may be midnight before the last ball is finished, leaving the seringuero but three or four hours of rain-broken, fever-tossed sleep before taking up the grind for the next day.

A number of patents have been taken out for the preparation of rubber in the forest, but as the simplest of them involve the use of a certain amount of apparatus, they stand little chance of ever coming into extensive use in the remoter Amazonian district. Amazon rubber loses about one-eighth of its weight in "smoking" and "balling," but that of the Congo and other districts is reduced from one-sixth to one-third. The small balls made by the seringuero are combined into huge leaves or "biscuits" at Para or Manaos, the average weight of which is usually in excess of 100 pounds. It is in this form that it is received at the factories.

All rubber business is done for cash on the Amazon. The agent comes down the river with a load of rubber, which, on arrival, is graded and paid for at once. With this money he pays off such of his men as chance to have a balance due them, though, half dead from fever and exposure as most of the latter are, they are scarcely in a condition to make a serious stand for their rights. It is practically a system of slavery, and there seems to be scant indication that the Brazilian government is seriously interested in putting an end to it.

WONDERFUL JUNGLE CITY.

Though the rubber export trade of Manaos is scarcely a decade old, this remarkable jungle city, which is 900 miles up the Amazon from the coast, is rapidly forging ahead of Para as a shipping point. For the last two years its exports have exceeded 20,000 tons in weight and $125,000,000 in value, more than half of the Brazilian output. It has discrowned Johannesburg as the most expensive place in the world in which to live and Singapore as the unhealthiest. Its revenue from the 22 per cent. export duty on rubber alone is nearly $30,000,000, a remarkable showing for an inland city of less than 200,000.

The world's output of jungle rubber is susceptible of some, but not great, increase. In the Amazon belt the explored districts are probably capable of keeping up their present production indefinitely, while the unopened provinces of Matto Grosso and Acre, respectively, on the Bolivian and Paraguayan frontiers, promise to be as prolific of rubber as of deadly fevers. The Congo, partly because its forests are somewhat less dense than those of the Amazon, and partly because of more thorough exploration by the Belgian government, has little "unbled" territory remaining. If either the Brazilian or Congo output is to be greatly increased this must be brought about through the extension of plantations. Practically all of the territory upon which jungle rubber grows is adapted to plantation purposes, so that the possibilities of production from that source are infinite. As yet, however, planting is backward in Brazil and still more so on the Congo. Southern Mexico and Central America are beginning to come into the arena with considerable plantations, but for a realization of what can be accomplished along this line one must go to the Middle East, to Ceylon, lower Burma, the Malay Peninsula, Sumatra, Borneo and Java.

Rubber planting was already well advanced in Ceylon and Maylasia when the year of 1909 with its record-breaking prices opened, and it was the enormous profits, real and prospective, made by these planters that precipitated the boom of which I have spoken. As in a western oil or mining boom, every area within hundreds of miles of the proven districts was seized upon and made the basis of a stock company. Hundreds of thousands of acres of jungle were cleared at an enormous cost and set out to trees in the Malay Peninsula alone, while Ceylon practically decimated its tea-producing area in converting all its suitable—and much unsuitable—land to rubber plantations. Many legitimate ventures went down with the "wildcats" in the final crash, but the sum total of real development was enormous. The wave of speculation passed, but it served its purpose in passed, but it served, while yet in its infancy, into the position of the most important of all Asiatic industries.

IN THE STRAITS.

The greatest development has taken place in the Straits Settlements and the Malay Peninsula, and on the 500-mile railway journey from Singapore to Penang, through Johore and the Federated Malay States, rubber plantations hem in the track as closely as do orange groves the lines between Los Angeles and San Bernardino.

But rubber planting is not a proposition for the small farmer; like cane sugar culture and manufacture it must be undertaken on a large scale. A million dollars—in real money—is about the minimum that a conservative company would need to go into the business, and if the project is a large one, two or three times that sum may be necessary to carry it through the years that must elapse before substantial returns commence. Good rubber land—unless it is some other kind of plantation that has already been cleared—is not very costly in the first place, rather less so than first-class orange land in a good district, in fact.

It is the clearing of the primeval jungle growth which runs into money, even with labor at 20 to 30 cents a day. Clearing a logged-over Washington forest area is child's play in comparison, for there the great trunks are already disposed of and a blown-out pine stump will be dry enough to burn in a year. A Maylasian rubber plantation is rarely clear of logs and stumps at the end of ten years, and I have even seen huge masses of half-decayed wood littering the ground of a plantation of twice that age.

Most of the earlier rubber plantations of the Malay Peninsula—some of them are now close to twenty-five years of age—were set out in the coffee plant clearings when that industry became moribund a couple of decades ago. Copra and pepper plantations gave way in turn to them more profitable Hevea Brasiliensis—for it is the Brazilian rubber tree of the jungle which is the mainstay of the Mafasian planter—and the onslaught upon the forest primeval had begun again even before the great boom of 1909. Today, when a company is ready to engage in rubber planting, from one to five thousand acres of jungle are bought—near tidewater or railroad if possible, but this is not of great importance—and the work of clearing begun, contract laborers from China or Southern India being employed. From 500 to 1000 of the latter may be needed, though the European staff will rarely exceed six or eight. The overseer—as often as not a Dutchman from Java, Sumatra or Borneo—will be paid from $3000 to $5000 a year, and each of his two or three assistants—young Englishmen, who must have had at least four or five years of experience with rubber—about $100 a month. A book-keeper or two, and two or three students or apprentices, who work for a nominal salary in order to gain experience, complete the white staff.

Clearing is inaugurated by cutting down all trees and brush that will yield to an ax, or, if more thorough work is desirable, elephants and dynamite are employed. All the movable trash is stacked about the stumps and trunks and left until the end of the next dry season, when it is fired. This may leave from 50 to 80 per cent. of the ground clear for planting, and into this the young trees two years old in the nursery and from five to ten feet in height—are set, the interval being about the same as in an orange orchard. Further trash is got rid of from year to year as it rots or dries, and the intervals thus cleared are at once filled in with trees. A cleared area will be fully set at the end of two or three years, though some of the larger trunks and stumps may not disappear for a decade or so.

THE FIRST TAPPING.

The young trees, like all members of the vegetable kingdom in the tropics, grow rapidly, and may be ready for their first light tapping any time from their fourth to seventh year, this varying somewhat with the location and the judgment of the overseer. For tapping rubber trees, unlike fruit picking, is fraught with the gravest consequences if done too soon or in an improper manner. Even in the light of present knowledge many a young plantation has been ruined by the anxiety of its owners to begin realizing upon their investment too soon. Tapping is done in the early morning, and except that it is carried on in a more systematic manner, the process is similar to that I have described as employed by the seringueiro in the Amazonian forests.

Estates and overseers have their fancies in tapping knives, but a tool similar to the ordinary farrier's knife is most common. Down the trunk of the tree runs a pattern of cuts, the scars of other tappings. The knife is laid on and slowly, with a light pressure, the tapper shaves off a thin slice of bark. It is imperative that only the bark be cut, for if the slightest incision is made in the wood itself it will be attacked by ants and beetles which laying their eggs, will soon hatch a colony sufficiently numerous to devour the heart of the tree and cause it to die. It is the custom to seal at once too deep a cut with clay or gum.

THE HERRINGBONE CUT.

The most approved system of tapping is that known as the "herringbone," and as each little side cut is reopened the latex oozes forth and runs down to the longitudinal central cuts which conducts it to a little spout of tin a few inches from the ground. Thence it drips into a little receptacle, which may be anything from a patent china cup to a cigarette tin or the half of a cocoanut shell. These cups, after the flow ceases, are emptied into large buckets and carried to the storehouse, where a solution—composed principally of acetic acid—is added to each one as it is received. This causes the solid matter of the latex to coagulate, somewhat after the manner of cheese and the following day it is ready to be thrown into the hopper of a mixing and rolling machine, from which it issues in the form of long, thin, narrow stripes. After a fortnight's suspension in the drying-room, these are ready to be packed in light boxes and expressed, via Singapore or Port Swettenham, to Liverpool.

The rubber tree of the plantation is singularly hardy—in anything near its natural habitat—and, with plenty of moisture, seems to adapt itself to almost any soil. Bad swamp must be drained, but cultivation is not practiced. Its worst enemy is the white ant, an animal which respects nothing less resistant than a place of Harveyized steel anyhow—but this is a pest which is easily disposed of, as is also a fungus, called mycelium, on the

"The Game of Kings" To Become An Important Factor Among Southern California's Kings Of Finance in The Crescent Bay City.

Though the game of tennis received its first public mention in modern times in 1874, spoken of in the Army and Navy Gazette in London at that time as a new game which had just been patented by Major Winfield; it in reality originated before that period, having been played with great enthusiasm by the French and English Kings, from which it derived its title, "The Game of Kings."

Originally tennis was only played in such broad, open spaces as fields or parks; this outdoor form of tennis being called "long tennis," while the indoor game was called "short tennis."

There was one variety of tennis which was played by ten men in a square, grass court in the presence of the "Good Queen Bess." Characteristic of the exceptionally strong-minded woman that Queen Elizabeth was, the zest and vim of this game decidedly captivated her.

The game of "Shuttleback," so popular in the last century, was undoubtedly one of the games that led to the present development of lawn tennis as it is played today.

Major Winfield's idea comprised a portable court, consisting of many accessories not used nowadays. The first public game of this played in 1874 was so sneered at by many that the Maryleborne Cricket Club took it in hand modifying it into its present form in practically all of its details.

In 1875 the "English Croquet Club" opened its doors to tennis, and in 1877 lawn tennis received its real inauguration, when its rules were finally tested.

When one takes into consideration the giant strides that Santa Monica is making every day toward becoming the recognized "playground" of the world, where could be a more fitting place for the "Game of Kings" to be installed than in the Crescent Bay City, for the kings of finance?

Tennis is not only being inaugurated in Santa Monica, but it is being installed, characteristic of Santa Monica, with the highest type of tennis courts to be found.

In Brentwood Place, the splendid new subdivision recently placed on the market by the James R. H. Wagner Company, 110x120-feet tennis courts are being built that have no superior in the west. These will be completed by June 15 of this year.

All of the very latest patents in tennis equipment are being taken advantage of in the splendid steel pipe back nets and such other equipment; such appointments indeed as can only find their counterpart in the exclusive eastern courts. The courts themselves are of the best cement.

Besides the high-class character of the courts themselves, there is to be a tea-room in connection with these courts of particular charm. This is to have a vine-clad pergola to afford the desired shade to those partaking of refreshments prior to, following and between the tennis games. The tea-house will be completed August 1 of this year.

Ideal Setting for Tennis Courts.

It would be almost an impossibility to find a more ideal setting for tennis courts, outside of Santa Monica, than that in which they are to be built.

Brentwood Place is recognized as one of the very highest class subdivisions of Santa Monica with all of the accompanying improvements that this would involve. It lies 360 feet above the sea, commanding a superb view of it. Its boulevards are of high-grade rock macadam, the final oil and sand applications of which are now being made.

Its broad, splendid cement walks and curbs are in and its gas installations and beautiful parkings have just est-class city improvement is here. been completed. Every other high-

One of the principal factors in favor of Brentwood Place which will afford an everlasting charm to the environment surrounding these tennis courts, is the broad, beautiful parkings, planted to the most ornamental collection of trees that can be found.

These trees comprise the Streculia, the Cedra Atlantica, the best variety of pines including the "Country Estate Pines" and others, all of which were imported to Brentwood Place in the largest sizes procurable which could be transplanted with safety.

It is anticipated that these splendid new tennis courts will be the accepted rendezvous for the tennis experts throughout the Brentwood, San Vicente, Westgate and Palisades sections.

Giant Activity Throughout Santa Monica.

The entire section surrounding Brentwood Place seems one vast beehive of activity. Robert Marsh and Company is now preparing for the market on Montana avenue his Ethelwyn Manor Heights subdivision, which will be one of the most exclusive and beautiful high-class, home properties in the entire Southland.

Santa Monica boulevard is also now being rebuilt from the Soldiers' Home onward. The Gillette Regent Square subdivision, recently placed on the market by L. D. Loomis and Company, is another property, due to its high-class character, location and tremendous report of sales, has created considerable stir among real estate circles recently.

The recent acquisition of the 500 acres of Paris Heights by Lawrence B. Burke and Company, with its accompanying activity of improving and marketing, adds another bomb of enthusiasm to keep Santa Monica's activity ever stirring.

HOME ABOVE THE SEA.

Fine New Home at San Pedro Will Crown Bluffs Above Inner Harbor. Many Novel Features.

Situated in the heart of the Vista del Mar tract at San Pedro and commanding an unbroken view of the whole of the inner harbor district, the handsome new home of Geo. F. Settle bids fair to be one of the most interesting residence places in Los Angeles. The house, which will be ready for occupancy about July 1, is costing its owner close to $30,000 and is of brick construction. It contains twelve rooms and is of a modified mission style.

The location of the dwelling is unique. The grounds overlook the waters of the port, with its shipping and industrial activities, and yet are high above them and well back into the hills. From the porches of the house will be obtainable an unobstructed view for ten miles in every direction. The site is at Palos Verdes and Settle streets in the new Vista del Mar subdivision, which lies along the Harbor boulevard.

The house itself boasts many novel features, among them an unusually large breakfast room, planned after the "Beef Steak" room of the Los Angeles Athletic Club; a fully equipped gymnasium, with a boxing ring and a seating capacity of fifty persons; a Turkish bath-room, and an amusement room with pool and billiard tables, bowling alley, buffet and dancing floor. On the top floor is to be an observation room entirely enclosed in glass. A garage for three machines is being built at the rear of the house.

AMONG FINE HOUSES.

New Hollywood Boulevard Apartments Built Around Court and Resembles Fine Residence.

An attractive apartment-house of the residential type, designed to fit into a district of private homes, is being built on Hollywood boulevard near Winona avenue, in Hollywood, by William A. Freeman, a local attorney. The improvement is costing its owner about $20,000 and was planned by E. E. B. Meinardus.

The building follows Italian renaissance lines and has plastered exterior walls and a red tile roof. It contains six apartments of four rooms each and is built around an open court. The structure occupies a sightly lot 75x195 feet in size and is set back forty feet from the street. The rear of the place is to be laid out as an Italian garden.

INTEREST IN REALTY.

SAN BERNARDINO, May 31.—On every hand is seen evidence of fresh interest in realty due to the recent closing of the deal by which the Consolidated Securities Company of Los Angeles took over the properties of the Maclay Rancho Water Company. Vice-President Batty of the Consolidated Company, has been here much of the time for the past two weeks perfecting plans for the management and development of the former Maclay holdings. It is recommended by the local manager, F. A. Powell, that the new owners transfer the utilities to men who will improve them, giving patrons better service, while the Consolidated company will devote its interests to the work of bringing new people to city and valley by improving its city property and subdividing the bearing orchards it has acquired.

BUYS ALFALFA TRACT.

PLANADA, May 31.—C. D. Weir of Los Angeles has purchased ten acres planted to alfalfa in section thirty-three of the Holt subdivision at Planada, from the Planada Development Corporation. His property is under the twelve-inch underground concrete pipe system of irrigation just connected up with the new wells on this tract. W. E. Pickett, the contractor, has commenced work on the foundation of the new school building, which, he announces, will be completed in time for the coming fall term. The opening of the Yosemite National Park to automobiles, it is expected, will mean much extra travel through Planada. Many people this year are taking advantage of the scenic beauty of the trip by taking the auto stage line at Planada which runs to Wawona, the southern entrance to the Yosemite, touching at the Mariposa Big Trees on the way.

OPEN NEW TRACT.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, May 31.—A new high-class residence subdivision will soon be opened at Huntington Beach. A tract of land containing thirty-two and a half acres has been purchased of the Huntington Beach Company and will be divided into residence lots. The tract lies on a plateau and has an uninterrupted view of the ocean, two miles distant. The Mercereau Company, builders of the new concrete municipal pier, are rushing the temporary pier out into the ocean. When this is completed work on the permanent structure will be started at once.

The extraordinary activity all along the South Coast, and the extensive improvements now under way, have rendered the opening of such an office in Los Angeles a necessity, according to those interested.

AN ASSAULT ON LIBERTY.

Labor Union Exemption of Prosecution Presents Crisis by Creating a Privileged Class. 4

[Daily Iron Trade:] Believing a bulwark of civilization and business, as they are understood in this country, is menaced gravely by the provision of the sundry civil bill, clear-thinking men are seeking to defeat the provision forbidding use of government funds to prosecute labor unions and farmers' organizations under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

That the exemption clause is class legislation of the most flagrant type needs no argument. That it would encourage labor agitators of the active, aggressive sort to go far along the road leading to disorder and destruction is earnestly believed. It lets down the bars to all sorts of excess which the experience of the past has shown are resorted to by hotheads even when under the ban of the law. With the ban removed, who shall say what would be the end?

As our contemporary, the Iron Trade Review, aptly puts it:

"President Wilson has had a great deal to say about the 'new freedom.' Is this a sample of the 'new freedom'? . . . If the hands of the officers of the government are to be tied in enforcing criminal statutes, as it is proposed to tie them in regard to the Sherman Act, where will the 'new freedom' end?"

It is urged that all, of whatever political party, who believe in the dictum "equal rights to all and special privileges to none," see to it that Senators are apprised of the temper of the people in regard to so glaring a piece of class legislation before it is too late to remedy it. Though past the House, the bill is to be considered and acted on by the Senate, and sober conservatism and careful consideration are due in that body. It is time the flaming cross be carried and the nation be alarmed at this invasion of equal responsibility for all before the law.

To establish by law an exemption of one class for violation of a law to which other classes are amenable is the greatest assault ever perpetrated on the liberties of a nation. It is too bold to be called insidious, and as it is done in the light of day, it should be opposed in the same way.

No Senator should be in doubt when the vote comes as to how his constituents regard the matter. He should have heard from his State in no uncertain terms and add this to his own knowledge of the dangers lurking in action to set up a privileged class in crime.

It is a crisis in the industrial world, and prompt and decided action is due from every man who believes in true and equal liberty.

THE ISLE OF PATMOS.

The Scenery and Situation of the Island Gives a Key to Much of the Imagery of the Book of Revelation.

[Baltimore American:] Patmos is one of the group of islands called the Sporades. It is now called Patino and lies twenty-four miles distant from the coast of Asia Minor, a little south of Ephesus.

It is a tiny little islet, compared with some of its larger neighbors, and has an area of only sixteen square miles, and at present a population of 4000 souls. In John's time there were still fewer inhabitants, yet before the days of recorded time the islands were inhabited, for cyclopean remains are found there, which show its prehistoric antiquity.

There are not many things of great interest in Patmos, except as the memory and spirit of St. John suffuses every landscape with his gentle spirit of love. There is, however, says the Christian Herald, the cave of the Apocalypse, in which tradition tells us the apostle saw the vision which he has recorded in the last book of the New Testament. There is also the Monastery of St. John, founded 800 years ago, which once contained an important and valuable library, now removed to the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

In this library was found one of the most valuable of the ancient manuscripts of the Gospels. It is not what St. John saw in Patmos that interests us, but what he saw far away, as he looked out from his island prison. Looking to the north and east he could, from the heights of Patmos, doubtless see the great mountains of Asia Minor to the north, among which lay the Seven Churches.

The scenery and situation of Patmos give us a key to much of the imagery of the book of Revelation. Patmos was one of the islands of an archipelago. High mountainous headlands could be seen on every side and around all, shutting him in from country and plain and fellow-disciples, was the impassable sea, his real prison wall, mysterious and dangerous. As we think of this situation of the aged seer we can more fully understant his imagery when he tells us that every "mountain and island were moved out of their places," that every "island fled away and the mountains were not found."

Parted when they were children, thirty-two years ago, neither knowing the other was alive, although living little more than 100 miles apart, two brothers, Lewis Stooms of Philadelphia and Fred Stooms of Georgetown, were reunited recently.

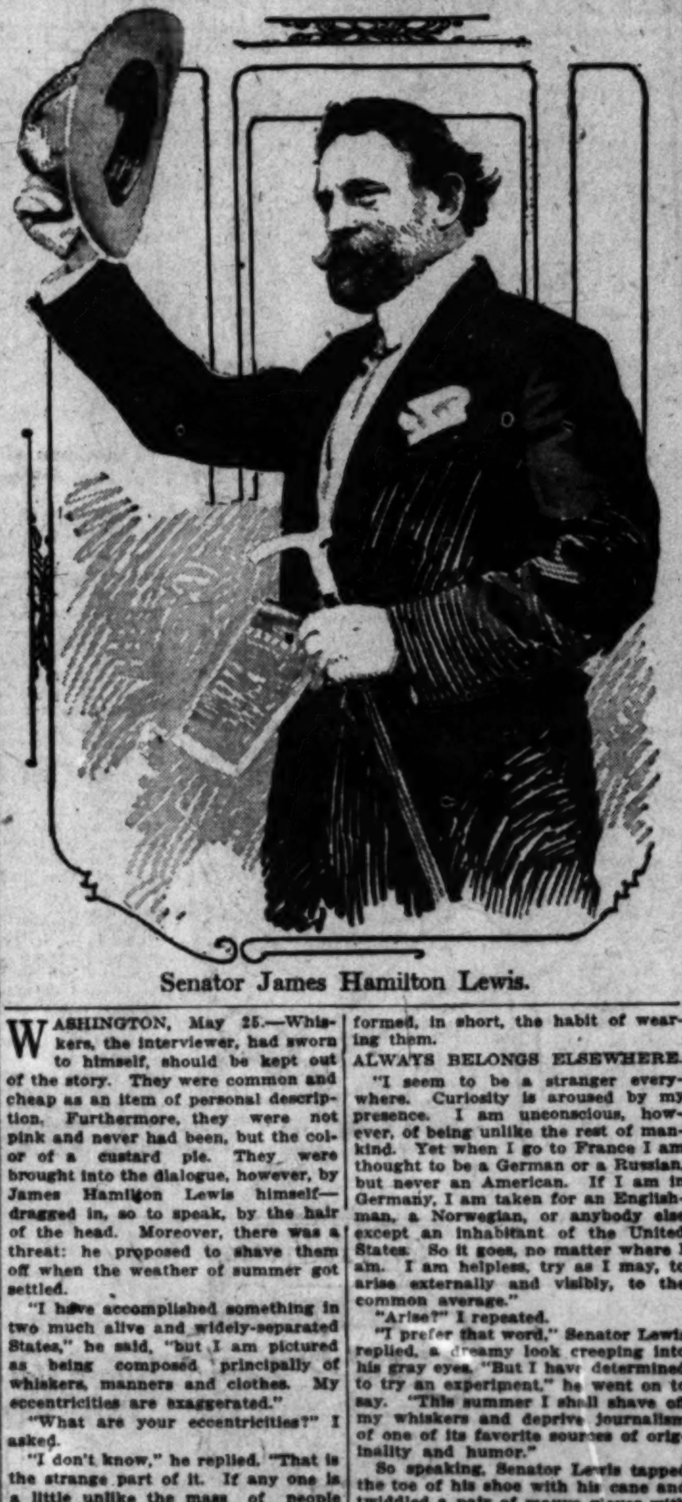
J. HAM LEWIS—SENATOR.

The Illinois Wonder Tells the Picturesque Story of His Life as a Lawyer and a Politician—He Points to His Achievements and Says There Must Be More to Him Than Whiskers, Pleasant Manners, Good Clothes and Spats.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]



Senator James Hamilton Lewis.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Whiskers, the interviewer, had sworn to himself, should be kept out of the story. They were common and cheap as an item of personal description. Furthermore, they were not pink and never had been, but the color of a custard pie. They were brought into the dialogue, however, by James Hamilton Lewis himself—dragged in, so to speak, by the hair of the head. Moreover, there was a threat: he proposed to shave them off when the weather of summer got settled.

"I have accomplished something in two much alive and widely-separated States," he said, "but I am pictured as being composed principally of whiskers, manners and clothes. My eccentricities are exaggerated."

"What are your eccentricities?" I asked.

"I don't know," he replied. "That is the strange part of it. If any one is a little unlike the mass of people whom he meets in the street, either in appearance or demeanor, he is supposed to be a quack, a showman, or a freak. I do not complain about newspaper men. They are fine fellows. But to read them one would think that my personality is all on the surface—that I am mostly bows, smiles, spats, canes and whiskers.

"I have let my whiskers grow ever since I first went to Seattle," Senator Lewis continued. "I was 20 years old, meant to practice law and desired to look experienced and competent. I wooed the aspect of maturity for business purposes. The custom of many young physicians justified me in doing so. Then I was ill a great deal and my whiskers concealed unhappy hollows and angularities. Finally, whiskers became a part of my outward individuality. I formed, in short, the habit of wearing them.

ALWAYS BELONGS ELSEWHERE.

"I seem to be a stranger everywhere. Curiosity is aroused by my presence. I am unconscious, however, of being unlike the rest of mankind. Yet when I go to France I am thought to be a German or a Russian, but never an American. If I am in Germany, I am taken for an Englishman, a Norwegian, or anybody else except an inhabitant of the United States. So it goes, no matter where I am. I am helpless, try as I may, to arise externally and visibly, to the common average."

"Arise?" I repeated.

"I prefer that word," Senator Lewis replied, a dreamy look creeping into his gray eyes. "But I have determined to try an experiment," he went on to say. "This summer I shall shave off my whiskers and deprive journalism of one of its favorite sources of originality and humor."

So speaking, Senator Lewis tapped the toe of his shoe with his cane and twiddled a pair of mauve gloves with his left hand. He wore a pink shirt, blue cuff buttons, a dark suit of clothing—with white facing on the vest—an indigo cravat, a large sky-colored stickpin, and heavy rings on his little fingers. In his scrimping days, it is said, he held that it was more artistic and impressive to expend $86 for three suits of clothes than to wear a $40 suit right through the summer or winter.

Analyzing gentlemen have attempted to reduce Senator Lewis to a table of bare figures—to give his ingredients as though he were a medicine or a bottle of table water. No such essay is to be made in this article. Senator Lewis is to tell his own story. He is to reveal himself to the reader. It can be said, however, that he has some vanity in the fact that he is a member of the National Guard. He is slight and short and there is masculinity in a uniform and with a dangling sword.

ECCENTRICITIES OF MEMORY.

Also he is ridiculously inaccurate in arithmetic and geography, saying 3,000,000 when he means 3000 and declaring that a canal through Central America, connecting the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, will stop the shipment of flour and wheat from Seattle to China and Japan. He will quote Cicero and solemnly announce that he is repeating the imperishable philosophy of Napoleon or George Washington.

But no man has said that James Hamilton Lewis is mercenary, or that he is indolent, or that he is ever forgetful of a friend. Toil, he emphasizes, is at the bottom of all achievement. Those who know him say that he is imaginative and wonderfully, even sensationally, resourceful. His first case in Seattle concerned the theft of a box of cigars. He maintained that his client took the cigars as a precaution against their being stolen by someone else. The jury agreed with the view of the defense. The young lawyer's fee, paid in cash, amounted to 75 cents. Such was his start in criminal practice, a practice that made him famous all through the Northwest and other parts of the country. He came to the House of Representatives from the State of Washington. Now, Illinois has sent him to the Senate. He denies, therefore, though not irritably, that he is merely a wisp of taffy-colored whiskers. But here is his story—he never told it before:

"We were poor, very poor. All Confederates were impoverished. My father fought under Lee, and after the surrender moved to Augusta, Ga. I was an infant. There I grew up. I was a misunderstood boy. Quick, indeed bright, in some directions, I was sadly and hopelessly inefficient in others. For example, I was likely to forget the name of a street. The number of a house would never stick in my head. I was underrated, you see, by persons who should have learned my mental peculiarities. At the age of 7 I committed the "Sermon on the Mount" to memory, the whole fifth chapter of Matthew, which contains forty-eight verses. I could repeat it now, I think, with some prompting. My memory then was freakish. It is freakish yet. I can go into the House of Representatives and, after listening to a half-d short speeches, can repeat them morrow almost word for word, al with mispronounciations and uns inflections.

"I have just come from a con ence with Speaker Clark. We over subjects in which we are in ested. He talked long rows of ures, but they are all jumbled my head. I can't remember an them. "And growing up you became —an aristocrat or a plebeian?" asked.

"I am neither an allopath no homeopath, but an eclectic," Sen Lewis blandly answered. "I pra in either school on occasion and cording to circumstances. Talk about medicine," he said, running fingers through his dark-brown "reminds me that I ran away fr home once again, going this time Savannah. I had learned a li about chemistry at school thought I should like to be a chem I found a place in a drug house."

"House?" I repeated.

"Yes, a drug store. But I sporty and liked to bet on horse and couldn't reconcile myself washing bottles and grinding powders. Moreover, that chemistry. JUST - - BECAUSE

Are you one of the "just because" folks, or do you really reason things out for yourself?

Most people use "just because" as a shield to hide their real reasons.

The real reason back of the success of well managed home-building companies is the well defined demand for comfortable homes, in good neighborhoods, and on easy terms.

The ready-to-move-into bungalow of attractive design, good material and good workmanship, for a small first payment and the balance like rent, is as much a fixture in Southern California as are the banks.

Investigating buyers of this Company's houses state to us that they have searched the city over and could not duplicate our houses at the price.

We meet every requirement, even as to price, and yet sell on easy terms.

Nevertheless, we make a good profit on every one we build, and we keep turning over our capital as rapidly as the most up-to-date dry goods merchant.

This capital, the money of our shareholders, is never idle for a minute. We invite you to put a little of yours with it to see how it pays.

$1.25 makes you a shareholder; paid monthly, buy 100 shares. Take more or pay cash, if you wish. Dividends paid quarterly, 10% on par.

From the Middle-West Grain Farm to the Little Orchard Home

In California

"If I Knew Anything About Fruit Trees I Certainly Would Buy an Orchard Tract"

This declaration was made by a Middle West grain grower, who met a Gibraltar man two months ago, and now he owns nearly 10 acres of the Gibraltar land at Bloomington, and has gained a working knowledge of tree growing, which will bring him success in this new field. From raising grain to growing fruit is a big step forward, but Gibraltar not only provides the orchard home on easy terms, but is giving daily instruction to the man of the wheat field. Each day his trees are inspected and his learning advanced.

"Gibraltar Makes Fruit Growers of Us All"

Read—

Gibraltar's responsibility does not cease with the selling of the individual tracts—Gibraltar teaches the growing of and caring for trees to those who don't know and enables them to compete with their more experienced neighbors.

Gibraltar's instruction is organized along practical and systematic lines, and the man without experience is as safe on Gibraltar Acres as the expert grower. Gibraltar is selling the acreage on a strict co-operative principle, and while the company gives the buyer the lowest terms on planted acreage, their experienced orchardists back up every buyer with actual instruction.

Every step in fruit tree growing, from seed bed and propagating plant to the finished product, is taught by Gibraltar, the foremost olive tree producer in the world.

If you have little or no knowledge of tree culture you are safe on Gibraltar Acres—you are in daily touch with the company's expert orchardists.

5 ACRES PLANTED TO OLIVES, ORANGES or LEMONS, AND A BUNGALOW, may be secured for $200 down and $30 a month, latter including payments on principal and interest—BACKED BY EXPERIENCE OF GIBRALTAR.

SEEK LONG FOR HIDDEN GOLD.

New Search is Planned For Luring Millions.

South Fork to Concentrate on Finding Channel.

Yuba Consolidated Builds a Giant Dredge.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FOREST CITY (Cal.) May 30.—The South Fork Mining Company has resumed work on the long cross-cut adit designed to intersect the continuation of the Bald Mountain gravel channel. A new type of power drill operated jointly by electricity and compressed air, has been installed in the breast of the adit and rapid progress in driving is expected to be made.

Search for the channel has been under way for years, and several times it was thought the objective had been gained, but in each case the deposit proved of limited character. The adit is in about a mile, and will be extended 300 feet further before an upraise is driven.

North of the South Fork group several companies have extracted millions in gold from this channel, and the South Fork management is confident of eventual success. The company is concentrating attention on the south extension of the channel.

Managing Director Weeks recently arrived from Los Angeles to outline future developments, and it has been decided to center all work on the gravel channel for the present. Excellent ledges of gold-bearing quartz have been opened at several points, but their development will be held in abeyance pending the consummation of gravel prospecting. Later it is intended vigorously to develop the quartz resources.

In addiiton to the new power drill other improvements have been made at the mine, and work will be busily conducted during the dry season. The company is composed of Los Angeles people. F. W. Kuhfeld is superintendent.

The North Folk, a near-by property in which San Francisco, Oakland and Southern California people are interested, is claiming decided interest at present. Cross-cutting from the bottom of the winze shaft to tap the Uncle Sam ledge, has commenced, and the entire camp of Forest is feverishly awaiting the result.

In the old Uncle Sam workings the vein yielded phenomenal values, but was subsequently lost. Indications are favorable for the recovery of the rich deposit by the North Fork, and the camp is preparing royally to celebrate the event. Champagne and other brands of cheer have been ordered and Alleghany is arranging to send in a big crowd of celebrants in honor of the strike.

Intersection of the vein at the anticipated point will not only mean much for the North Fork, but will materially enhance the value of other properties in the district, and inaugurate a new era of prosperity in the camp.

ANGELENOS IN MAGALIA.

The Indian Spring Channel Mining Company is rebuilding the plant destroyed by fire in March, and has arranged for the immediate installation of a fifteen-horse-power electric hoist and other machinery. The 170-foot shaft is full of water, but a few days' work will clear it out, after which cross-cutting from the bottom to intersect the Indian Spring channel will commence. This deposit has yielded high values in other properties of the district, and the management is confident of developing a rich mine.

The holdings comprise about 298 acres, situated in one of the richest sections of the noted Magalia district. The channel occurs between two porphyhy dikes and has been demonstrated for several miles. At numerous points exceptionally rich gravel has been intersected. Electric power has been arranged for at the near-by station of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, to operate the mine.

The company is composed of Los Angeles and Pasadena people, and is capitalized at $500,000. Leo Marheimer is president, V. P. Kirby, vice-president; George W. Kirby, secretary, and E. L. Kirby, treasurer.

The Hupp Gold Mining Company is actively prospecting its estate, with a view of intersecting the Indian Spring deposit. An incline shaft has been sent to a depth of 100 feet, and drifting for the channel is under way. A pump and other machinery have been installed, and the water is handled without difficulty. The heavy flow recently struck, encourages the operators in the belief that the channel is near. W. M. Meek is president, and W. H. Corbiere, manager.

GIANT DREDGE.

Preliminary work has started on the building of dredge No. 14 for the Yuba Consolidated gold fields. The boat will be one of the largest in the world and will have ninety buckets each with a capacity of fifteen cubic feet. The hull will be of steel, marking the first dredge of this character to be introduced into the American River field.

The Yuba Consolidated is one of the largest dredging concerns in the world and for years has been the leading gold-producer in California. Its an-

ELDORADO CANYON LURES.

Midseason Activity Is on the Increase—Many Idle Mines Are Revived by New Operators.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) May 28.—Just at this time of the year—midseason—when mining operations usually taper off, Eldorado Canyon is the scene of marked activity. Perhaps the most significant feature of the present development is the fact that after many years of "inocuous desuetude," the Wharton Estate mines are to be reopened. Representatives of the Sterling Borax Company of Los Angeles are in this field and have secured options on the Lucky Jim Rover, Rambler and Lone Cabin mines belonging to the estate and have given out contracts for the sinking of shafts, several hundred feet in depth on the Rover, Lucky Jim and Lone Cabin properties.

Following the recent hurried visit of Gordon Surr, M. E., the Nevada Eldorado mine, which has lain idle for some time past, now presents a lively appearance. A force of men have been put to work unwatering this property and cleaning it out, preparatory to a thorough sampling.

On the Copper Prince, a contract has been let for several hundred feet of sinking and considerable lateral work. The ore on this property is in a stringer chalcopyrite formation, running all through the syenite in a regular network. In the present shaft the ore showing is encouraging enough to warrant a thorough exploitation at depth as the stringers have increased very considerably in size and in metal content.

The mill of the Black Hawk Mining Company is working on ore from its Rand shaft and is plating enough to insure the continuance of active operations for a long time to come. Development work on this property has been under the supervision of Superintendent Robert Dunbar for some time and the ore showings are very satisfactory.

This company owns the Rand, Venus, Mountain, Honest Miner, Buster and Cinch mines, all of which are in ore and have been developed sufficiently to insure an extended mill-run. Sinking and lateral work are progressing very rapidly in the Rand shaft, from which the ore for the present mill-run is being taken.

Brown and Hastings of Nelson have installed an automobile passenger stage and truck line between Searchlight and Eldorado Canyon. Several large automobiles and trucks have been placed in commission, giving daily round trips passenger and freight service. This closes the career of the old six-horse stage coach that has traveled over this road for many years past and with the modern mode of rapid transit, new life and energy is apparent.

HILLS MINE FACES BRIGHT FUTUR

PROMISING OUTLOOK IS SHO BY APRIL REPORT.

Increase in Production, Added Fa cilities and Good Balance Are Fe tures of Showing—Ore Found Depth in Klondyke District—Gol field Looking Up.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) May 30.—T final report of production and ear ings of the Nevada Hills Mining C pany for the month of April has been issued by the management, a shows that the company is now ge ting down to a regular produ basis that will insure large profit the future. The month of April w not a criterion of what may be e pected for the reason that the water supply pipe line was only co pleted the tenth of that month, the output was necessarily reduced a considerable extent owing to short flow. The company has p chased water rights at Westg which insure an ample flow for all quirements and no interruption apparently be caused in future f this source.

The tonnage in April shows a c siderable increase over that of previous month, the output hav been 2218 tons as against 1425 in March. Net profits for the m were $14,236.12, while in March, ing to the water shortage and int ruptions incident to the construct of the pipe line, the company oper at a net loss. For construction equipment the company has expen the sum of $520,703 and after wri off $248,000 for depreciation of mine and plant, the report shows balance of assets in the compan favor of $272,703.

A discovery of great importance been made in the Klondyke distr fifteen miles north of Goldfield on original Klondyke property, contro by James Golden. The new disco was made at a point 100 feet de than has been attained on this pr erty by any other lessees and the affords at least 200 feet of sto backs. The find disposes very eff ually of the assertion made by persons that ore does not go down depth in the Klondyke district. new ore indicates a value of $30 ton in gold in addition to the si which is the main product of the trict.

There is apparently good reason the prediction, now made in var quarters, that Goldfield is on the of a development boom of gre proportions than it has ever know the past. Throughout the country mining men, brokers and ers who keep in touch with activ in this district are convinced that present year will witness the op of important producing mines an revival of market activity for stocks in the Goldfield list. Thi but the natural result of the amount of development now in pr ress in the district and outlined the near future.

The analysts of mining and m conditions reason with logic that ore zone of the district can not be confined within the limits that already proved to be productive that with a dozen companies libe financed for development, and operations planned on a broad comprehensive scale, the chances all in favor of mine-making and strong advance of the values of curities in the Goldfield list.

Mining and financial publica east and west, as well as market ters and publicity literature of br ers, for the first time in years reached the unanimous concl that Goldfield, in the near future, again assume the forefront in interest as a mining center. Wit the past fortnight announcem have been made of deals in Gold properties that will involve exte development at new points there is excellent promise of ma productive mines.

Reports have gained circulatio significant results gained in deep ing in this district, and it is now tablished beyond question that opening of ore by any one of ha dozen companies now operating not only affect the stocks of companies, but will send the list of Goldfields up in a manner has not been witnessed since the boom.

Dr. E. A. Wheeler of Goldfield, tensively interested in mining erties in Southern Nevada, as wel in active medical practice, has been appointed a member of the Board of Medical Examiners by Oddie.

BAPTISTS URGE CONCILIATION.

Present Labor Platform at the Detroit Convention.

Want to Apply Christianity in Every-Day World.

Course on Social Service in Theological Seminaries.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT, May 31.—The attitude of the Northern Baptist church in matters relating to labor, the home and family and social service, was set forth in the report of the social service commission read by the Rev. Samuel Z. Batten, before the convention. The commission presented a declaration of principles which are to be adopted by the church as its platform in dealing with the subjects.

The principal planks are:

Right of both laborer and employer to organize is recognized.

Adequate means of conciliation and arbitration are urged.

Release from employment one day in seven demanded.

A living wage as a minimum in every industry and for the highest wage that each industry can afford.

For gradual and reasonable reduction in hours of labor to the lowest practical point.

Conservation of health and protection of the worker from dangerous machinery, occupational disease and mortality.

Suitable provision for workers in old age and for those incapacitated by injury.

The right of all men to the opportunity for self-maintenance and for protection of the worker from hardships of enforced employment.

For a new emphasis on the application of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property and for the most equitable division of the product of industry that can be devised.

For the protection of the family by the single standard of purity, uniform divorce laws, proper regulation of marriage and proper housing.

For the fullest possible development of every child, especially for the provision of proper education and recreation.

For the abolition of child labor.

For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

For the protection of the individual and society from the social, economic and moral waste of the liquor traffic.

The adoption by each church affiliated with the convention of a constructive programme of social service and to seek to enlist its members directly in some forms of practical social service.

Theological seminaries to have courses in social service that shall train pastors and workers for church leadership in community betterment.

Increase in social service commission from fifteen to eighteen members, the three new members to be women and that one woman member of the commission be elected each year.

INTER-UNION QUARRELS.

Refuse to Work With Unorganized Laborers and Then Delay Building Over Question of Orthodoxy.

Construction of the new railroad station at Kansas City has been held up by factional quarrels among rival labor unions, and in referring to the matter the Kansas City Journal says:

"The interests of the community are very gravely compromised by strife between organized and unorganized labor, but it is immensely aggravated when, after unorganized workmen are barred from participating in such great projects as the new Union station, organized labor itself is divided into factions whose controversies cause interruption of work for which contractors friendly to union labor are in no degree to blame.

"Rigid compulsory arbitration of all labor differences is the only solution of the situation which will safeguard the interests of all concerned and especially those of the public, which is the chief sufferer in the premises. It is little short of criminal that such a project as that of the Union station should be held up while labor unions, which have effectually barred all unorganized workmen from the job, quarrel among themselves because this or that union is not 'orthodox' or over the thickness of the marble used in a particular portion of the job.

"The conditions which ought to obtain would permit any man competent to do the work to have the opportunity of earning his livelihood thereby, regardless of his affiliation with this or that organization. But the supineness of lawmakers has withheld thus far this inherent and inalienable right of these workingmen who are discriminated against. It would appear that this discrimination should mark the limits to which injustice should go, without complicating the situation by injecting factional squabbles into it, the larger interests of the community being in all cases wholly ignored. The law must eventually take these larger interests into consideration if justice is to be done."

BIG STRIKE NEAR LONDON.

Unskilled Laborers Quit Their Work to Demand for a Minimum Wage Scale.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Federal (Wireless) Line Contract to The Times.]

LONDON, May 31.—[Special Dispatch.] After a period of comparative calm in the English industrial world, a series of extensive labor disputes have started in the Midlands.

The unrest takes the form generally of a demand for a minimum wage on the part of the unskilled workers. In nearly every case the strikes began without notice to the employers.

It is estimated that 40,000 men are striking or are locked out, of whom 20,000 are black country iron workers.

A carters' strike at Bradford has led to several conflicts between police and strikers. The movement in the black country today assumed larger proportions. The men's leaders assert their intention of making the strike a national one. Large bodies of police have been sent to the troubled districts.

Self-Revealed.

UNIONITES IN POLITICS CALL EACH OTHER SNAKES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Factional fights within the Central Labor Union, the central organization of all the unions in El Paso, developed the fact that a well-organized movement had been started to control the politics of the city and county through these unions and to elect labor leaders to the city and county offices. The startling facts were developed when five labor-union members of the central body were expelled, after an investigation of the political phases of the situation.

The revelations of the real facts within the governing body of the Central Labor Union has caused much indignation here among the citizens who are opposed to political labor organizations. During the fight the two factions used mud in vilifying the leaders of the opposition and a telegram was produced by one faction in which they were referred to at the State labor conventions as snakes, by the opposition.

Labor's Unrest.

THE STRIKE NEWS OF THIS UNEASY WORLD.

THERE are signs that the silk workers' strike is nearing its end and that without any gain to the strikers. They have only themselves to blame for the failure because they blindly followed the destructive lead of Anarchist Haywood and his I.W.W. anarchist gang. Though a general call was made for all pickets to turn out for duty on May 22, only twenty (instead of hundreds) responded. Workers are dropping the strike and returning to work without conditions, at the Price and several other mills. The actual loss in wages so far, exceeds $5,000,000. Paterson business men urge that Haywood, Quinlan, Miss Flynn and other I.W.W. leaders, be forcibly driven out of the city (as in San Diego some months ago) as being "disturbers of the public peace." At least 800 strikers have gone back to work in the dye works. The strike leaders have said all along the die shops were the keynote of the strike, and that if they surrendered the jig was up for the weavers. The citizens' committee appointed by the Mayor is energetically urging and backing the police and other authorities of the city in efforts to compel the strikers to refrain from further disorder and violence. Seven-girls, one a seventeen-year-old strike leader, have been sent to jail for picketing. Haywood and the other indicted I.W.W. strike leaders, are now (after Quinlan's conviction) evidently afraid of Paterson juries, as they have applied for juries made up from another county, for the coming trial of their cases. Yet Haywood says the I.W.W. is above all courts, including the United States Supreme Court. The ranks of the strikers are dividing for separate action (or inaction.) The Passaic county jail is filled with men and women fighting strikers. The strike leaders can no longer make daily agitating speeches to their followers, as every hall in the city has been closed by the police. Mayor McBride of Paterson says that the I.W.W. agitators are only beginning at Paterson and plan to paralyze the whole country. That is a big contract to fill, but they may do it in spots temporarily. The I.W.W. are boasting that they can successfully call out in sympathetic strike the street car men of Paterson, also the men in the power houses. Efforts by the American Federation of Labor (Gompers & Co.) to "organize" the silk works' strikers, have failed. Upton Sinclair, the out-of-work muckraker, has been encouraging the strikers in speeches at Paterson, censuring the police. Idaho Haywood deludes his followers with such wild talk as "Heaven may fall or hell break loose, but we will win." The strike has been on since February 24, over three months ago, and is as far off from being won as ever.

The Niagara Falls (N. Y.) strike of 1700 employees of the United States Light and Heating Company, begun May 5, was settled May 22, on a nine-hour-day basis. The other terms of settlement are not made public. The wages loss exceeds $100,000. Before the men struck they were told that if they struck the plant would be shut down, and it was. It cost them over $100,000 to "show their independence."

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company of San Francisco and elsewhere says that the strike of its workers has been broken by the formation of a new Electrical Workers' Union, which has agreed to terms offered by the company.

The various labor unions of Jamestown, N. Y., favor a general strike in aid of the street railway men's strike, which still goes on. The strikers are importing autos to accommodate the public. That's practical, anyway.

The Erie railroad has prepared itself for an expected strike of its telegraph operators for more wages in spite of the fact that on May 1 the company put in force a new wage scale which increased the pay roll $50,000 a year.

Throwing of flowers and general joy in Cincinnati on May 22 celebrated the close of the ten days' strike of the 2000 motormen and conductors of the Cincinnati Traction Company. Even at only $2 a day that strike cost the men the loss of $60,000 in wages.

Wireless men employed on 280 trans-Atlantic and coastwise steamships are taking a "strike or no-strike" vote.

More than 50,000 coal miners are now on strike in South Wales, England, as a protest against the employmen of non-unionists.

The week-end (week after week) dockers' strike in Liverpool is still on. The men persistently refuse to work on Saturdays.

The long-standing unrest among the British shipyard workers continues to grow. The men's leaders, however, having failed to secure a general advance in wages, are taking a "strike or no-strike" vote of the workers. The advance they ask is 4 per cent. There is much similar unrest in the government dockyards. The men there want a 15 per cent. raise.

Buffalo is now in the throes of a general strike of its machinists. The men in shop after shop have gone out in whole or the main part and several plants are closed down. Threats of violence have been received by several of the companies. The Ford Motor Car plant is being dismantled for removal to Detroit, the headquarters of the company. The Buffalo branch plant is to be closed permanently. The 500 men thus thrown out of work have the 150 Ford company striking machinists to blame for this. All the machine plant owners refuse to recognize the union, or to meet its committee for discussion. In all 4000 men are out, many of whom say the strike was forced by Socialists. We shall have the same calamity in Los Angeles if Socialists ever control our city government. Remember that when you vote on June 3, for members of the City Council. Ignore the eight Socialist candidates entirely and be safe. This Buffalo strike affects 150 machine shops. W. H. Barr, president of the Employers' Association, says: "The members of our association do not intend to recognize this union." That is official. Two thousand more machinists may go out yet. All differences adjusted the striking drivers of the Buffalo department stores have gone back to work.

Three hundred Erie freight handlers in Buffalo are on strike. They are getting 18 cents an hour but want 20 cents, and time and a half on Sundays. The freight handlers of other roads may join the strike.

The Buffalo teamsters' strike may be averted. The truck owners offer to meet the men and discuss the demands. The drivers ask $13 a week for single horse teams, $15 a week for doubles, and $17 a week for chauffeurs and drivers of three-horse teams.

Department store clerks in Buffalo have secured a $12 a week minimum wage for males and $6 a week for females. All are back at work.

The expressmens' strike at Buffalo is still on. Wagons are out driven by non-unionists brought from other cities, guarded by policemen.

The trolleymens' grievances and demands in Buffalo are going into arbitration.

The Brooklyn (N. Y.) barbers' strike is settled. The men are to work from 8 to 8, on work days, 8 to 10 on Saturdays, 8 till noon on Sundays, and legal holidays, with one full day off each week. In Manhattan the strike is going on, with the price of shaves and hair cuts gone up to 15 cents and 25 cents, respectively. The A. F. of L. barbers were forced to strike though they were earning more than the I.W.W. barbers demand, and had better working conditions. Is there any tyranny worse than union labor tyranny over its own members? The Sheriff of New York says he will call out the militia if necessary to keep the striking barbers from farther violence.

Strikers are in full control at the Wharton N. J.) mine property, but things are quiet. The Empire Iron and Steel Company has granted all the demands of the strikers, except recognition of the Western Federation of Miners, the discharge of about eighty old employees who are not union men, and a 20 per cent. increase in wages. A 10 per cent. raise was given a few weeks ago, and the men, says a company official, are even now "the best-paid miners in the State." Serious trouble here is feared in a few days.

Westchester district, New York, faces a new laborers' strike. The demand is for eight hours and 25 cents an hour. This is a district of large country estates. About $3,000,000 worth of construction work is tied up. There has not been any violence.

One thousand mine workers in the New River coal field, West Virginia, have left their homes and sought the protection of the United Mine Workers of America. It is said they will live in tents. Martial law is continued in the coal fields of the State.

The mill hands of Cohoes, N. Y., have won their strike. They get sixty hours' pay for fifty-four hours' work a week. The strike was on in ten mills for forty-six days.

The masons' strike on the Capitol building reconstruction, Albany, N. Y., is about over and all the masons employed thereon will be paid the same rate of wages.

The Ipswich (Mass.) hosiery mills, closed for a month by strikes, have been reopened, 250 of the 1100 strikers going back to work.

Carpenters in a score of towns in Southwestern Massachusetts are on strike for an increase of pay from 42 cents to 46 cents an hour, and for a Saturday half-holiday.

Massachusetts union painters are on strike for $3 a day minimum wage. This strike is now in its seventh week.

Four hundred striking Italians tried to force out on strike 1500 workers on the Catskill aqueduct, New York. A fierce fight resulted and many are in jail. Much more stringent immigration laws and regulations are now a necessity in this country.

Another I.W.W. inciting organizer has been sent to Auburn (N. J.) prison for one year at hard labor for rioting during the recent textile strike at Little Falls, N. Y. This is the second and there are more yet to hear from, including the I.W.W. aider and abettor, Dr. Lunn, Socialist Mayor of Schnectady, N. Y.

Western railroad conductors are getting ready to co-operate with eastern conductors when the latters' demands for more wages, etc., are presented to the managers of the forty-eight eastern roads.

The I.W.W. organization has got busy at New London, Ct., and 150 strikers (mostly Syrians) are "out" for 15 per cent. more wages, shorter hours and betterment of working conditions.

Stationary engine firemen employed by the Standard Oil Company in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, about 2000 of them, demand an eight-hour day.

Fifteen I.W.W. have been arrested in Philadelphia for disorderly conduct at the plant of the Avery Company, where a strike of 100 men is on.

Seventeen vessels are tied up at Philadelphia because of longshoremen's strike, aided by an army of frenzied women, fought the city police at the Spreckels sugar refinery a few days ago. The women threw red pepper in the faces and eyes of the police. In strike violence, women are as bad or worse than men. This is the kind of devil's work the I.W.W., urged on by Idaho Haywood, is doing all over the country.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

"Wages are too low in Los Angeles, you ought to strike for more," say the always-present union-labor disturbers. They know they are lying when they say it, but what care they for that? All they are after is to produce labor discontent, so that there may apparently (and apparently only) be something to show for the salary and expense money they draw from working union labor without working themselves. How much real work, for instance, has Tveitmoe done since his penitentiary job came to an end?

With practically all-the-year-round employment at the foregoing excellent wages, with always a fair show for the employment of steady men, what on earth is the sense of talking "strike" in Los Angeles? A ew weeks' volunin Los Angeles? A few weeks' voluntary loss of a large amount of wages, and wages once lost are never recovered. When these non-working agitators want you to strike, fellow-wage-earners of Los Angeles, put the case frankly and fairly to yourselves and don't strike. Don't lose your worked-for wages for the pleasure and benefit of labor agitators who live off your wages without working.

Wage Increase Without Strike.

Announcement was recently made by Vice-President Randall J. Le Boeuf of a three-year agreement entered into between the Albany Southern Railroad and its employees. Under this agreement the motormen and conductors on the main line will receive an increase of 1 cent an hour, making their pay 28½ cents. This is said to be one of the highest rates paid in the State. An increase of one-half a cent dates from February 26, while the other half cent will be allowed from March 1.

The agreement also gives the men employed on the Hudson city division a raise of one-half a cent, fixing their rate at 21½ cents per hour, to date from July 1. The agreement also provides that in case of shortage of men on the main line employees of the Hudson city can be put to work there. Le Boeuf expressed satisfaction because of the signing of the agreement, and said that the best of feeling exists between the company and the men.

Welfare Aid to Workers.

The annual report of the International Harvester Company states that the average number of employees of all plants or companies during the year was 42,979. The company contributed $50,000 to the Employees' Benefit Association during the year, bringing its surplus up to $326,940.48. The company appropriated $250,000 of its 1912 earnings to the pension fund. It paid out in pensions during the year $29,871.06, which left a balance of $1,298,868.45 on December 31.

The company appropriated $250,000 also for its industrial accident fund during the year and this fund amounted to $788,125 on December 31. It is said that since the instituting of the fund, May 1, 1910, $386,500 had been paid out voluntarily by the company to employees injured.

Mention is made of the anti-tuberculosis campaign of the company, in which $55,080.23 was expended. Night work for women has been abolished.

Open Shop Is American.

In the conclusion of the joint debate on "Open vs. Closed Shop Unionism" at the University of New York Forum, in which John Kirby, Jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Joseph W. Bryce, president of the Trades and Workers' Association, had already appeared as proponents of the open shop, A. Parkin Nevin, general counsel of the association, on April 4, supported open-shop conditions.

"If," he said in conclusion, "our government is one of law; if every man is to be equal before the law; if liberty is a practical reality and not a constitutional theory; if man's natural, inherent right to labor is protectible—if, I say, these principles are verities, then the closed shop, incontestably, does violence to these principles and becomes at once wrong in purpose, specious in method, un-American in spirit."

Money for War Purposes.

[Indianapolis News:] Prof. Riesser, a well-known German economist, reckons that if war broke out between France and Germany each country during the first six weeks of hostilities would have to lay hands on $300,000,000 to cover the cost of mobilization and to support their armies in the field. Private interests would also make a sudden demand for gold. In Germany at least $250,000,000 would be required to finance war contracts, and a further $60,000,000 by the business world to meet "anxiety calls," that is, demands due to sudden canceling of credit and calling in of loans and mortgages.

Against Closed Shop.

RIGHT TO WORK IS MAN'S LIBERTY.

ILLUMINATING DECISION BY THE CONNECTICUT COURT.

Holds That the General Control by a Union of an Industry Through Closed Shop Agreements Is Illegal and Against Public Policy—Some Eloquent Utterances.

[Portland News Letter:] A unanimous decision recently rendered by the Supreme Court of Errors of the State of Connecticut, in the case of Connors against Connelly, bears directly upon the attempt of the Carpenters' Union to secure a monopoly both in labor and commerce for the exclusive benefit of its members. The opinion in this case holds that the general control by a union of an industry in any community through closed-shop agreements with a considerable number of employers, is illegal and against public policy, because operating to deprive the workmen of their freedom to pursue their trade. In this case the union procured the discharge of the plaintiff from a closed shop on the ground that his membership in the union had ceased, and contended that it was justified in so doing because of the employer's agreement to employ only union men. The vigorous and eloquent utterances of the court in condemning such agreements and overruling such attempted defense should form one of the bulwarks of industrial liability hereafter.

Certain cases appear to give countenance to the broad proposition that every agreement, whatever the conditions, by a labor union with an employer, which provides that the latter shall not employ either at all, or in any given department of his work, any other persons than union members is contrary to public policy. We are not prepared to subscribe to this extreme proposition.

On the other hand, the authorities are, as far as we have observed, in complete accord in holding that where the agreement is one which takes in an entire industry of any considerable proportions in a community, so that it operates generally in that community to prevent or to seriously deter craftsmen from working at their craft or workingmen obtaining employment under favorable conditions without joining a union, it is contrary to public policy.

The reasons for this conclusion are as evident as they are conclusive. "There is no more sacred right of citizenship than the right to pursue unmolested a lawful employment in a lawful manner. It is nothing more nor less than the sacred right of labor. The common law has long recognized, as part of the boasted liberty of citizens, the right of every man to freely engage in such lawful business or occupation as he himself may choose free from hindrance or obstruction by his fellowmen, saving such as may result from the exercise of equal or superior rights on their part."

It needs no argument to demonstrate that any combination between employers and employed, which creates a condition in a community such as has been hereinbefore described, is a serious menace to the craftsman or workingman, who, in the exercise of his free right of choice, does not wish to join a union. It is calculated to place upon his freedom of choice and action a coercion which leaves him no longer wholly free. Its tendency is to expose him to the tyranny of the will of others, and to bring about a monopoly which will exclude what he has to dispose of and other people need from the open market, or perhaps from any market.

Monopolies of things of common use and need, whether created by government grant or by the acts of private persons or corporations, are odious and their existence is contrary to public policy. They were condemned by the common law of England and, although changing in their more common source, have remained under a like condemnation in that country and this to this day. They are especially intolerable where they concern the basic resource of individual existence, to-wit, the capacity to labor. Their beneficiaries may enjoy the favors they bestow, and feel injured when deprived of them. But the interest of the public at large can see nothing but danger in the monopoly of anything of which there is a common need or which is a common resource of life. This is an old and familiar doctrine in whose maintenance none have as deep a concern as the poor, the humble and those who live by the labor of their hands. The monopoly need not be complete to come under the bane of the law; "It is sufficient if the agreement tends to that end and to deprive the public of the advantages which flow from free competition."

Strikes in Lumber Industry.

[Portland News Letter:] The I. W. W. has issued a pink circular stating that a strike has been declared on Parker, Bell & Co., at Pilchuck, Wash. Our advices from there are to the effect that the mill is doing very well without the services of these trouble makers, and is having no trouble getting good men to work in the places vacated by these misfits.

We also have a circular issued by the American Federation of Labor announcing the organization of shingle weavers and telling of the great benefits to be gained by joining and "coughing up" most of the money the men earn as dues to support Gompers et. al. in their sinecures. It may be the workmen will fall for this stuff again, but we don't believe it, especially those who had the experience of 1902 and 1903.

Slight Cause for Big Strikes.

[London Tit-Bits:] The threatened strike on the Midland Railway, due to the dismissal of a guard for sticking too closely to the letter of his instructions, is not the only instance on record of big events of the kind springing from similar little causes.

A Leeds labor war was due to the workpeople declining to wear list slippers in a mill where clogs were regarded as unsafe. At Sunderland a foreman shipwright casually told a workman to "hurry up," and, the implied reproof being resented, an unusually bitter strike was the result. At Jarrow-on-Tyne workmen struck because they objected to the use of brass checks.

There have been at least a score of strikes, big and little, over the question of whether girls should be permitted to wear "fringes" in mills filled with dangerous machinery. The actual immediate cause of the outbreak of the disastrous Taff Valley Railway strike was that a couple of guards were compelled to change brake-vans against their will.

Because one of their number resented being told by a foreman to cut his nails, some 300 working goldsmiths came out on strike not long since. It was explained afterwards that it was customary for the operatives to keep their nails pared close, as otherwise small quantities of the filings of the precious metal in which they wrought might easily work underneath them and be lost.

The strike of the Manchester "nippers," a novelty in labor wars which at one time threatened to dislocate the trade, not only of Manchester, but of Liverpool as well, was brought about through an adult workman interfering in a game of marbles.

LEADVILLE PUPILS STRIKE.

Two Hundred in High School Parade Streets to Protest at Discharge of Superintendent.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LEADVILLE (Colo.) May 31.—Nearly 200 pupils of the High School inaugurated a strike Wednesday as a protest against the discharge of the city superintendent, S. L. Stoner. The pupils paraded the principal streets of the city and attempted to bring out students from other schools, but in this were not successful. The dismissal of Superintendent Stoner is the result of a controversy of long standing among the High School faculty. A committee of strikers say they will not return to school until Stoner is reinstated. There is much public feeling aroused and a meeting of citizens was held Thursday.

Minimum Wage Fixed.

The first real step toward a minimum wage for women and minors was taken on May 21 when the Illinois Senate White-Slave Committee fixed a tentative scale at $7.50.

The law provides for a fine of from $5 to $20, half the fine to go to the person making the complaint. Women from other States traveling in New

SPINELESS CACTUS

This wonder plant, food for man and beast, will revolutionize the agriculture conditions in many of our arid regions. (From Government report No. 827, report 944.) Cattle, sheep, hogs and horses prefer Spineless Cactus to any forage.

One acre of Spineless Cactus produces from 40 to 200 tons a year—1000 slabs required per acre—production should be 10,000 slabs the first year.

Our Proposition to the Public

1—We offer Burbank improved Spineless Cactus slabs for immediate delivery.

2—We offer for short time only slabs for future delivery on attractive terms.

3—We offer 5-acre Cactus ranches at Oceanside at attractive prices and on easy terms.

Opportunity to Buy Shares

THE SPINLESS CACTUS NURSERY & LAND CO. is capitalized for $500,000. $400,000 7 per cent. CUMULATIVE, PARTICIPATING, PREFERRED STOCK, $100,000 of common stock. Par value 20c.

An allotment of the 7 per cent. CUMULATIVE, PARTICIPATING, PREFERRED STOCK is offered NOW for short time only for 10c (which is 50 per cent. below par.) This offer is made for the purpose of acquiring additional land and enlarging our present Nursery to meet the tremendous demand, which is being created for Burbank's Improved Spineless Cactus. This Company, which owns the largest SPINELESS CACTUS NURSERY in the world, should be a wonderful money maker.

Shares bought now at 10c earn 14 per cent. When the shares advance to par, which will be as soon as the first offering has been taken up, the stock will show a 100 per cent. profit.

Our literature is free for the asking—gives the full facts.

Spineless Cactus as a cattle food has come to stay. It requires no irrigation, it grows on any kind of soil. It is one of the biggest opportunities for money making in Southern California.

News From the Great California Oil Fields.

Far-Reaching.

BIG SUIT WILL AFFECT MANY OIL COMPANIES.

Weight of New Government Litigation, in Form of Test Cases, Will Rest on Three Out of Twenty-five Concerns Against Which Suits Have Been Prepared. Rest Will Stand or Fall by Decision.

ONE of the most important events ever instituted in connection with the oil business in California, the results of which will affect almost everyone interested in the industry, is to come up for trial in the United States Court here this month. The suit is one of a number brought by the government against certain oil companies operating on lands withdrawn from entry over three year ago, located in the oil fields of Kern county. Suits have been prepared against twenty-five different concerns, but only three have been filed and will come to trial, the others standing or falling on the outcome of these three.

The suits have been instituted in order to test the legality of an order issued by President Taft, September 27, 1909, withdrawing certain government lands from entry in the districts named, since which time the "law's delay" has resulted in the government being relieved of hundreds of thousands of barrels of oil.

The suits recall the exciting days immediately prior to and following the withdrawal order mentioned. At the time the order was issued most of the land had been filed on, in many cases operations had been commenced and in others oil had already been discovered. The order caused an endless amount of confusion among oil men and to find out "where they were at" an emissary was at once sent to Washington, and a message shortly afterward came back advising those on the withdrawn lands to "stand pat" and to get more if they could.

As a result hundreds of acres were "located" after the order was issued on the theory that it was illegal, not having the sanction of Conress. These latter locators were taking a long chance and simply trusting to their ability to influence their Congressional friends to protect them in the final wind-up.

The large operating concerns had been particularly active in locating all the land that was loose, and in some instances the same land was filed on by a number of different interests.

The oil men had always conducted their operations under the placer laws in force and had been protected by the authorities, the concern making an actual discovery being given title to the land. It happened therefore that in the mad scramble for land "shotgun brigades" were organized, and on the basis that "might made right" the weaker group was chased off some of the land to which they had at least as good a right as the man with the gun. As a result the large operators secured most of the territory.

It may be mentioned, however, that the Standard Oil Company, which had secured considerable land by filing, immediately withdrew from all included in the withdrawal order, but the other large concerns continued their filing, "on advice from Washington," so it was stated at the time.

After the first excitement had passed the operators on withdrawn lands took steps to protect themselves and began a campaign in Washington to that end.

The government authorities stated that those operators who were on withdrawn lands, and who had entered them and were engaged in actual development work prior to the withdrawal order, would be protected, but those who were not on these lands in good faith and those who entered them subsequently to the date of the order would be ousted. The suits that are to come up shortly are for that purpose.

The withdrawal of these lands primarily was a result of the agitation in favor of the conservation of the natural resources of the country, and California oil men were divided as to the general policy of conservation—especially as it applied to oil in California. The conservation of coal in Alaska was all right; the conservation of timber in Oregon was all right, but the conservation of oil in California was another matter. The big corporations here were opposed to it and their representatives said so. The small operator or the one not immediately affected was in favor of it. All agreed, however, that since the lands had been withdrawn some provision should be made for their distribution. The government was on record that these resources should be preserved and that their exploration by private interests must stop. The withdrawals were not, it was stated, for the purpose of forever prohibiting their proper development, but that the government might secure some returns from the enormous wealth contained in the lands.

President Taft, in a speech before the Conservation Congress in 1910, suggested that the government might very properly begin development work on these lands on its own account, and also suggested the advisability of leasing the lands. His talk incidentally showed that he knew more about the oil business in California than oil men gave him credit for. Two bills were introduced in Congress in its session of 1910; one called the Pickett bill and the other the Nelson bill. Both provided for a leasing system on a royalty to be paid the government.

But oil operators here were divided in their opinions as to whether even such a law should be passed. The big concerns in possession of the land were opposed to the law and were strong in advocating that no charge whatever be made. Whatever their influence, the bills failed of passage, and the situation has remained as it was up to the present time, and operations have continued on withdrawn lands with no abatement, and with entire indifference to the government's attitude.

The ouster proceedings that will soon come to a head in the local courts are more to determine the legality of President Taft's executive order of September 27, 1909.

Several thousand acres in the Sunset-Midway field are involved in the outcome of the suit. The government alleges that the land in question was entered subsequent to the date of the withdrawal order; whether by the present occupants or others is not stated and is immaterial. Some companies at present occupying the land have drilled a number of wells and taken considerable quantities of oil from the land. On certain lands prior to the withdrawal order no oil had been discovered, and the government therefore maintains the claims of the operators are invalid.

If the government wins this suit there is likely to be a big scramble among some operating concerns in this State. The suits brought are not only to recover the land occupied, but also to recover the full value of all the oil that has been taken from the properties. It is probable that an injunction will be applied for restraining the occupants from taking any more oil out of the ground. If the injunction is granted and applies to all the companies involved it will mean the immediate shutting down of scores of wells, and will, no doubt, spell bankruptcy for some of the smaller operators, and will be a tremendous loss to the large concerns.

The general effect on the industry will be a big curtailing of production and will increase the shortage that has been apparent the past ninety days. The results will be so far-reaching, indeed, that the progress of the trial will be watched with keenest interest by oil men generally.

COMMENCE WORK ON TAPO LEASE.

SANTA MARIA COMPANY STARTS WELL IN VENTURA.

Diamond Valley Has Light Oil Producer—Companies in Sulphur Mountain District May Unite to Drill Test Well—Value of Ventura Oil.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA PAULA, May 29.—The Tepusquet Oil Company, which recently begun operations on its lease in the Tapo district, has one well down a few hundred feet. The company has held this lease for some time, but has heretofore not operated it. Most of the activities of the Tepusquet have been confined to the Santa Maria district.

The Diamond Valley Oil Company has just brought in one of its wells with an output said to be about sixty to seventy barrels a day of high-gravity oil. The company has been considering laying a pipe line from its wells in Modelo Canyon to the railroad at Piru.

The well of the Bard Oil and Asphalt Company in the Sulphur Mountain district which recently attracted some attention, because of striking a good showing of light oil in a section principally productive of heavy-gravity petroleum, was still fishing at latest reports. After encountering the showing of light oil it was decided to put the hole down deeper. It is said that several concerns operating in this portion of Ventura county are contemplating uniting to defray the expense of putting down a test well.

In a publication entitled "Petroleum in Southern California," compiled by Paul W. Prutzman, under the direction of F. McN. Hamilton, State mineralogist, and recently issued by the California State Mining Bureau, some interesting figures on the value and cost of the production of oil in this county are given. Most of these figures were compiled before the Montebello became the large factor that it is in the county's output. However, they are interesting.

"The production of Ventura county for the year 1910 was 492,147 barrels, having an estimated value of $319,896," says the publication. "Taking the above total for the number of producing wells, the output per well was 1740 barrels per annum, or four and eight-tenths barrels per day, with an average value for the year of $1130, or almost exactly 65 cents per barrel.

"There is some reason to think that this average output in barrels is correct for both light-oil and heavy-oil production, as while there is a great

BIG DEALS IN TULARE COUNTY.

Porterville District Scene of Activity.

Southern Investors Acquire Alfalfa Tract.

Los Angeles Newspaper Ma to Grow Olives.

PORTERVILLE, May 31.—Activity of the past week in Tulare county realty has been distinguished by several large transactions. For the mo part trading has been in alfalfa lands, as has been the case with th market for the greater part of th present year.

There is still, however, a consider able interest in orange lands, altho small tracts of undeveloped oran property are becoming scarce an consequently these deals do not figu so largely.

J. C. Schneider and R. P. Twe both of Los Angeles, have purchas from Beckwith & Anderson of Tula a tract of 209 acres of alfalfa la in the Elk Bayou district, paying f it at the rate of nearly $150 per acr or $31,000 for the tract. The new ow ers have announced that they expe to develop the entire holding as a sto ranch. Over 100 acres of the tract now in alfalfa.

Frank Brundage of Porterville h sold to Albert Kneirr, a cattleman o Visalia, the 1120-acre tract of alfal land in the Tipton district, which generally known here as the Jac Sherrer ranch. The price paid f the property, which is all undev oped, is said to have been $50,00 Less than three years ago proper adjoining this in the Tipton dist could have been bought for $15 acre. Kneirr will farm the prope himself and will stock it with feede cattle.

The reported consideration of $4 000 cash was paid last week by Al Harell, a well-known investor of th district, for the John Frans ranch 200 acres lying along the St. Joh River. The land is general purpo fruit and alfalfa property. At th present time the place is leased. Frans purchased the property l than one year ago and paid $30,0 for it.

H. Olemutz of San Diego has pu chased ten acres of orange land in t Terra Bella district and is here a the present time to superintend pla ing it. Wells are being driven and th property will be set to early nav

Seventy-three acres of orange la on Deer Creek were sold this week b the Hitchcock Land and Water Co pany to H. B. Harrison, a recent co er to this district from Ontario. Th property adjoins a tract of 330 acr purchased some weeks ago by a sy dicate of Canadian capitalists, o which Harrison is the head. Wor has been started on the developme of water for the entire holding, as u wards of 300 acres are to be put i orchard during the ensuing year.

W. McKay, a Los Angeles newsp per man, has purchased twenty-f acres of fruit land in the Deer Cre section and was here during the we to look after the development of h holding. McKay states that his pro erty is to be set out to olives as rapi as the trees can be secured. He h already let contracts for the insta tion of pumping machinery.

AN INCOME TAX PROBLEM.

Puzzling Questions that Will Co Up in Connection with the Colle tion of the New Revenue Produ

[Philadelphia Ledger:] Here a some puzzles for collectors of the pr posed income tax, that tax, be it u derstood, to be collected "at th source." A. B. and C, on June 1 g to their bank boxes to cut coupo A's total income is $1000, B's is $10,000 and C's is $1,000,000. Under th law A should ultimately pay no ta B must pay 1 per cent. and C mo than that. Each of these three m has only $500 worth of coupons cut and deposit that day, and th bank being ordered by your Un Samuel to collect the income t from each at the source procee do so. How is the bank teller t know the amount to be deduc from each of the three batches coupons?

Unless the teller be a financ who's who and knows the total in come of every depositor in his ban he cannot know whether to deduct per cent. or more from the $500 han ed to him.

Will it be necessary for every ind vidual every time he deposits a co pon to tell the teller what his annu income is, so as to be taxed proper

The teller must take a tax of at least 1 per cent. from everybody an then return, later, to the owner th sum, provided he can prove his rig to exemption. This renders it obvio that the government will take ever one in its net and then let go tho who are not obliged to pay. Th in order to catch the big fish, it mu take all the fish in the ocean and th turn the little ones loose. Looks li an expensive way to do busine doesn't it?

Incidentally, it will be worth wh to see what the courts will do abo interpreting the queer law.

MIAMI READY TO RUN FULL BLAST.

MILL IS EXPECTED TO REACH MAXIMUM AGAIN SOON.

Estimates Are for Three Million-Pound Production in May—Inspiration Extension Company Enters Field—Shipments of Concerns Operating in District.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) May 30.—Within a few days the Miami mill will be back again at its maximum production mark, with all six units in operation. Only three or four units have been operated since the cave-in of April 17 with the consequent loss of a large amount of stoping ground. It is expected that May will show a production of 3,000,000 pounds of metal.

Much experimental work is continued within the mill, the idea being to better the percentage of copper saved in concentrates. By the use of new multiple-deck tilting slimers there has been a saving of two pounds of copper to the ore ton and economy also has attended the use of double-deck sand tables and new classifiers.

On the Inspiration and Live Oak properties 229 churn drill holes of an aggregate length of 124,888 feet have been driven thus far. Drilling lately was resumed for the exploration of a large area of Live Oak ground hitherto unprospected.

The Inspiration Extension is a new company lately organized under Delaware laws for the development of a nine-claim group acquired from Anton Trojanovich. As the name of the company indicates, the group adjoins the ground of the Inspiration Consolidated, which has sunk drill holes within a few hundred feet of the boundary. The new corporation has headquarters in New York, and its capitalization is $1,000,000. The officers are: President, William Evans; vice-president, John Kaser; secretary and treasurer, F. O. Augustin.

After about a year of exploration and timbering of old workings, work has been suspended on the once-famous Mack Morris mine in Richmond Basin. It is told that a large amount of silver ore was found, especially on the 300 level, but not in profitable shape. The mine was a heavy producer till 1882, when the rich ore was lost. Work was continued thereafter for a few months until the shaft opening was nailed down tight by an irate company official who had come from the East to learn the truth.

Two carloads a day of 7 per cent. copper are divided by the Superior and Boston Company between the Old Dominion and El Paso smelters. Fine bodies of ore have been found on both sides of the shaft 140 feet below the sixth level. This same body has been cut on the eighth level and a drift is heading for it on the tenth.

The May shipments of the Iron Cap property will aggregate 250 tons. On the 650 level fifty feet of drifting has been through rich oxide, averaging 12 per cent. copper, besides a streak twenty-four inches wide, said to average 50 per cent. in copper and 114 ounces in silver.

The Black Warrior shipments for the month will be at least 4000 tons, much of it going to the Hayden smelter, on account of the strike at the El Paso smelter. Though the Hayden works are only about thirty miles distant as the crow flies, the journey by rail is about 450 miles.

The Golden Eagle, one of the noted old gold-silver mines of this section, located back in 1877, and then a rich producer, is to be reopened by Jacobs, Sparks & Thompson of Globe. The property lies about a mile north of Black Warrior.

AFTER LIGHT OIL.

Standard Is Running Five Strings on Emory Ranch—Many New Wells Expected in Soon.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FULLERTON, May 30.—The excellent wells brought in by the Standard Oil Company in the Coyote Hills light oil section, has resulted in a campaign of activity by the company. No less than five strings of tools are operated on the Emory ranch, and two wells are down nearly 3000 feet. The Murphy Oil Company on property adjoining the Standard has finished the rig for its No. 7 well, and has started building a derrick for No. 8. No. 6—famous for its gas blowouts—is drilling, and will probably be producing in the course of a month or so. The Standard is apparently after the high gravity oil in this field with a vengeance.

The Fisher Oil Company's well in La Habra Valley, which attracted interest last week as a result of encountering an oil sand at about 4500 feet after two years of drilling, has been cemented. Future developments in this well will be watched with attention, because of the area which will be proved, should it turn out to be a good producer.

The Union Oil Company is expected to have three wells in soon and the Amalgamated on the adjoining lease has No. 14 nearly ready to come in. The Petroleum Company's Nenno No. 1 and Gilman No. 4, should be producing in a short time.

Over in Brea Canyon the Menges Oil Company has three wells near completion. One of them is at about the same depth as the company's famous gusher.

The entire field continues the scene of marked activity, and the recent decline of 5 cents in the Standard's buying price for oil is not expected to affect development to any degree.

RAPIDLY TAKING SHAPE.

With the Union Tool Company plant at Torrance running two shifts of men, with the Pacific Metal Products Company also in operation, and with the Torrance pearl button factory and the Fuller Shoe Company's plants completed, the new city of Torrance is rapidly becoming an industrial city in more than name only. Aside from the factories already completed, the Llewellyn Ironworks and the Acme Brass Foundry Company have completed the surveys for their plants, while the Hendrie Rubber Company factory and consolidated plants of the Moore Truck Company and the Union Tool motor department are rapidly taking shape. The huge steel frame for the last-named building is in place. The building is nearly 500 feet in length, is two stories in height at the south end and will contain a railroad track and traveling crane for handling the heavy machinery. The steel for the roofing of the Hedrie plant has just arrived and the Pacific Electric has men at work running trackage to bring in the necessary machinery. Ten tons of crude rubber to be utilized in the company's manufacturing activities are now being shipped from New York.

Seeks Hidden Gold.

nual earnings approximately $3,000,000. With the placing of No. 14 dredge in commission the earning capacity of the company will be appreciably increased. Eastern and Southern California people are heavily interested.

Twenty more stamps have been placed in commission at the South Eureka mill, near Sutter Creek, and the remaining twenty will start crushing at an early date. This will give the company a total of eighty stamps in action. Rich ore is now mined from the big veins recently opened below the 2100-foot level, and at the 2800 and other deep points the quartz showing is reported particularly fine. Like many other mother lode properties, the South Eureka is improving with great depth. Drifts from the South Eureka and Oneida shafts are rapidly nearing each other, and at an early date both properties will be connected underground. The South Eureka and Central Eureka mines are already connected by drifts, and culmination of the new work will make the South Eureka one of the safest and best-ventilated mines in the State.

A strong vein of rich quartz has been opened in the famous old Gold Bank mine, near Forbestown, twenty-two miles from Oroville, according to an announcement of the management. The ledge shows a width of eight feet and the work done at two points is estimated to have blocked out ore ranging in value from $50,000 to $75,000. Twenty-five men are at present employed, and this force will be largely increased at once and developments prosecuted with renewed energy.

The mill is working steadily and the cyanide plant is recovering important values that formerly were lost by the old method of reduction. The owning company is the Forbestown Consolidated Gold Mines Company, controlled by Stover & Cooney. Several properties are controlled besides the Gold Bank and development of these will be actively conducted.

A new impetus to Trinity quartz mining has been given by the progressive operations of the Globe Consolidated Mines Company, composed largely of San Francisco and Southern California people. The company has about 130 men at work in its Globe mine, near Dedrick, and is developing a vast tonnage of good grade milling ore.

A milling plant with a capacity of 100 tons per day has been arranged for and it is expected to place it in action early in August. The company is also working the Chloride-Bailey and Mason & Thayer properties under a bond and option. These mines have made good records in the past, but have been handicapped by their distance from transportation points and lack of adequate milling facilities.

The most recent move of the Globe Company was the securing of a bond and option on the noted Brown Bear mine. This property for years was one of the greatest quartz producers in Trinity, and has produced in the neighborhood of $8,000,000. Developed only to a vertical depth of about 500 feet, the large dimensions of the veins and excellent quality of ore have always made the mine a very interesting one. A comprehensive examination of the property is to be made and if results approach expectations, the Brown Bear will again take its place among the more important gold producers of California.

It is rumored that the famous Blue Ledge copper mines of Siskiyou county have been sold to an eastern syndicate for a large consideration. One report is to the effect that the consideration approximates $1,000,000. The group embraces a large number of claims, in which an enormous tonnage of copper-bearing ore has been blocked out. The ore also carries fair gold values and it is believed that the precious metal content will come close to defraying expenses, leaving the copper values as a clear profit.

It has been known for some time that Marquette (Mich.) people had experts examining the group, as the dimensions and value of the deposits have long attracted attention. The Blue Ledge district is the most promising copper field in California north of the Shasta copper zone, and an ideal smelting site has already been located.

At the recent session of the Southern Oregon and Northern California Mining Congress, held in Redding, a committee appointed to investigate the fume agitation reported that the smelter smoke from the Mammoth smelter was not causing any damage to agricultural products, and that in 1912 crops were the heaviest of any period in the history of Shasta county. The congress recommended the creation of a commission to investigate all smoke troubles developing between farmers and operators, with at least one member a representative of the smelting industry.

The St. Ives mine in the Chicago district, thirty-two miles from Bishop, is being actively operated by the Lone Star Consolidated Company of Goldfield. The shaft is down 200 feet and from this point a south cross-cut is being extended to intersect the vein developed on the 125-foot level. At this point the ore-body ranges from twelve to thirty-six inches wide, with assays running $12 to $20 per ton in gold and silver, with the gold predominating. Following the finishing of work on the 200 level the shaft will be probably deepened and another level opened.

Reports of important discoveries of rich milling ore in the new workings of the noted Plymouth Consolidated recently intersected and assays of the quartz show excellent values. Vigorous work is proceeding from several points and indications favor the replacement of this company among the big producers of the mother lode.

About twenty years ago the Plymouth Consolidated was a phenomenal producer, but was subsequently closed down. It was reopened about two years ago by London capitalists, new machinery installed and the shaft sent down several hundred feet further. In addition to the new ore opened in virgin territory, a vast quantity of comparatively low-grade material is blocked out in the old workings. Formerly considered too low-grade to mine, this material can now be handled profitably. The property is situated near the famous old town of Plymouth, Amador county.

TODAY'S GREATEST Investment Opportunity Is Stock in the Security Home Builders of Los Angeles

SECURITY HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES

Great achievements were predicted for this Company six months ago when it was organized, and we advised every one, man, woman or child, to buy all the shares that they could conveniently.

We told them to ask questions if there was anything they wanted to know—to investigate the Company—to investigate the past methods and business dealings of the men directing the affairs of the Company.

We knew that after investigation they would decide to place their savings in this strictly co-operative Company.

We are safe in saying that without a single exception, every investor who made an investigation of the Company, followed our advice and purchased shares.

This is a great record, but in our first six months we have accomplished great things, we have grown from a small beginning to a Company with nearly $200,000.00 assets.

From the very start we began building operations. Today we own income property, bungalows and choice residence lots, in various parts of the city.

But, regardless of our remarkable success, we have only just started to grow.

The opportunity is still open to you to become a shareholder in this co-operative Company while it is still young, and shares are selling at 14c.

This Company where the small investor's dollar earns as much as the large investor's—this Company which no one man or set of men can control—where all paid full market value for their shares, and all share alike in the entire profits.

We predict that Security Home Builders shares will one of these days reach the dollar mark.

We anticipate our success will outrival even the greatest of similar companies.

We have asked you to investigate and then become interested with us, and offer you the opportunity now before the stock

By PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

This is the Third of the Stror'nary Series of Talks to the More or Less Amazed Populace upon the Live, Important and Momentous Topics of Free Trade and Protection Vital to Rich and Poor, Old and Young Alike. A Declaration of Personal-Political Views.

> "WHAT this country needs above everything else is a body of laws which will look after the men who are on the make rather than the men who are already made. Because the men who are already made are not going to live indefinitely, and they are not always kind enough to leave sons as able and as honest as they are."

There is one great basic fact which underlies all the questions that are discussed on the political platform at the present moment. That singular fact is that nothing is done in this country as it was done twenty years ago.

We are in the presence of a new organization of society. Our life has broken away from the past. The life of America is not the life that it was twenty years ago; it is not the life that it was ten years ago. We have changed our economic conditions, absolutely, from top to bottom; and, with our economic society, the organization of our life. The old political formulas do not fit the present problems; they read now like documents taken out of a forgotten age. The older cries sound as if they belonged to a past age which men have almost forgotten. Things which used to be put into the party platforms of ten years ago would sound antiquated if put into a platform now. We are facing the necessity of fitting a new social organization, as we did once fit the old organization, to the happiness and prosperity of the great body of citizens; for we are conscious that the new order of society has not been made to fit and provide the conveniences or prosperity of the average man.

The life of the nation has grown infinitely varied. It does not center now upon questions of governmental structure or of the distribution of governmental powers. It centers upon questions of the very structure and operation of society itself, of which government is only the instrument. Our development has run so fast and so far along the line sketched in the earlier day of constitutional definition, has so crossed and interlaced those lines, has piled upon them such novel structures of trust and combination, has elaborated within them a life so manifold, so full of forces which transcend the boundaries of the country itself and fill the eyes of the world, that a new nation seems to have been created which the old formulas do not fit or afford a vital interpretation of.

We have come upon a very different age from any that preceded us. We have come upon an age when we do not do business in the way in which we used to do business—when we do not carry on any of the operations of manufacture, sale, transportation, or communication as men used to carry them on. There is a sense in which in our day the individual has been submerged. In most parts of our country men work for themselves, not as partners in the old way in which they used to work, but as employees—in a higher or lower grade—of great corporations. There was a time when corporations played a very minor part in our business affairs, but now they play the chief part, and most men are the servants of corporations.

You know what happens when you are the servant of a corporation. You have in no instance access to the men who are really determining the policy of the corporation. If the corporation is doing the things it ought not to do, you really have no voice in the matter and must obey the orders, and you have with deep mortification to co-operate in the doing of things which you know are against the public interest. Your individuality is swallowed up in the individuality and purpose of a great organization.

It is true that, while most men are thus submerged in the corporation, a few, a very few, are exalted to power which as individuals they could never have wielded. Through the great organizations of which they are the heads, a few are enabled to play a part unprecedented by anything in history in the control of the business operations of the country and in the determination of the happiness of great numbers of people.

Yesterday, and ever since history began, men were related to one another as individuals. To be sure there were the family, the church and the State, institutions which associated men in certain limited circles of relationships. But in the ordinary concerns of life, in the ordinary work, in the daily round, men dealt freely and directly with one another. Today, the everyday relationships of men are largely with great impersonal concerns, with organizations, not with other individual men.

Now this is nothing short of a new social age, a new era of human relationships, a new stage setting for the drama of life.

In this new age we find, for instance, that our laws with regard to the relations of employer and employee are in many respects wholly antiquated and impossible. They were framed for another age, which nobody now living remembers, which is, indeed, so remote from our life that it would be difficult for many of us to understand it if it were described to us. The employer is now generally a corporation or a huge company of some kind; the employee is one of hundreds of thousands brought together, not by individual masters whom they know and with whom they have personal relations, but by agents of one sort or another. Workingmen are marshaled in great numbers for the performance of a multitude of particular tasks under common discipline. They generally use dangerous and powerful machinery, over whose repair and renewal they have no control. New rules must be devised with regard to their obligations and their rights, their obligations to their employers and their responsibilities to one another. New rules must be devised for their protection, for their compensation when injured, for their support when disabled.

There is something very new and very big and very complex about these new relations of capital and labor. A new economic society has sprung up, and we must effect a new set of adjustments. We must not pit power against weakness. The employer is generally, in our day, as I have said, not an individual, but a powerful group; and yet the workingman when dealing with his employer is still, under our existing law, an individual.

Why is it that we have a labor question at all? It is for the simple and very sufficient reason that the laboring man and the employer are not intimate associates now, as they used to be in time past. Most of our laws were formed in the age when employer and employees knew each other, knew each other's characters, were associates with each other, dealt with each other as man with man. That is no longer the case. You not only do not come into personal contact with the men having the supreme command in those corporations, but it would be out of the question for you to do it. Our modern corporations employ thousands, and in some instances, hundreds of thousands, of men. The only persons whom you see or deal with are local superintendents or local representatives of a vast organization, which is not like anything that the workingmen of the time in which our laws were framed knew anything about. A little group of workingmen, seeing their employer every day, dealing with him in a personal way, is one thing, and the modern body of labor engaged as employees of the huge enterprises that spread all over the country, dealing with men of whom they can form no personal conception, is another thing. A very different thing. You never saw a corporation, any more than you ever saw a government. Many a workingman today never saw the body of men who are conducting the industry in which he is employed. And they never saw him. What they know about him is written in ledgers and books and letters, in the correspondence of the office, in the reports of the superintendents. He is a long way off from them.

So what we have to discuss is not wrongs which individuals intentionally do—I do not believe there are a great many of those—but the wrongs of the system.

I want to record my protest against any discussion of this matter which would seem to indicate that there are bodies of our fellow-citizens who are trying to grind us down and do us injustice. There are some men of that sort. Thank God, they are not numerous.

The truth is, we are all caught in a great economic system which is heartless. The modern corporation is not engaged in business as an individual. When we deal with it we deal with an impersonal element, a material piece of society. A modern corporation is a means of co-operation in the conduct of an enterprise which is so big that no one man can conduct it, and which the resources of no one man are sufficient to finance. A company is formed; that company puts out a prospectus; the promoters expect to raise a certain fund as capital stock. Well, how are they going to raise it? They are going to raise it from the public in general, some of whom will buy their stock. The moment that begins, there is formed—what? A joint stock corporation. Men begin to pool their earnings, little piles, big piles. A certain number of men are elected by the stockholders to be directors, and these directors elect a president. This president is the head of the undertaking, and the directors are its managers.

Now, do the workingmen employed by that stock corporation deal with that president and those directors? Not at all. Does the public deal with that president and that board of directors? It does not. Can anybody bring them to account? It is next to impossible to do so. If you undertake it you will find it a game of hide and seek, with the objects of your search taking refuge now behind the tree of their individual personality, now behind that of their corporate irresponsibility.

And do our laws take note of this curious state of things? Do they even attempt to distinguish between a man's act as a corporation director and as an individual? They do not. Our laws still deal with us on the basis of the old system. The law is still living in the dead past which we have left behind. This is evident, for instance, with regard to the matter of employers' liability for workingmen's injuries. Suppose that a superintendent wants a workman to use a certain piece of machinery which it is not safe for him to use, and that the workman is injured by that piece of machinery. Our courts have held that the superintendent is a fellow-servant, or, as the law states it, a fellow-employee, and that, therefore, the man cannot recover damages for his injury. The superintendent who probably engaged the man is not his employer. Who is his employer? And whose negligence could conceivably come in there? The board of directors did not tell the employee to use that piece of machinery; and the president of the corporation did not tell him to use that piece of machinery. And so forth. Don't you see by that theory that a man never can get redress for negligence on the part of the employer? When I hear judges reason upon the analogy of the relationships that used to exist between workmen and their employees a generation ago, I wonder if they have not opened their eyes to the modern world. You know, we have a right to expect that judges will have their eyes open, even though the law which they administer hasn't awakened.

Yet that is but a single small detail illustrative of the difficulties we are in because we have not adjusted the law to the facts of the new order.

Since I entered politics, I have chiefly had men's views confided to me privately. Some of the biggest men in the United States in the field of commerce and manufacture, are afraid of somebody, are afraid of something. They know that there is a power somewhere so organized, so subtle, so watchful, so interlocked, so complete, so pervasive, that they had better not speak above their breath when they speak in condemnation of it.

They know that America is not a place of which it can be said, as it used to be, that a man may choose his own calling and pursue it just so far as his abilities enable him to pursue it; because today, if he enters certain fields, there are organizations which will use means against him that will prevent his building up a business which they do not want to have built up; organizations that will see to it that the ground is cut from under him and the markets shut against him. For if he begins to sell certain retail dealers, to any retail dealers, the monopoly will refuse to sell to those dealers, and those dealers will be afraid and will not buy the new man's wares.

And this is the country which has lifted to the admiration of the world its ideals of absolutely free opportunity, where no man is supposed to be under any limitation except the limitation of his character and of his mind; where there is supposed to be no distinction of class, no distinction of blood, no distinction of social status, but where men win or lose on their merits.

I lay it very close to my own conscience as a public man whether we can any longer stand at our doors and welcome all newcomers upon those terms. American industry is not free, as once it was free; American enterprise is not free; the man with only a little capital is finding it harder to get into the field, more and more impossible to compete with big fellow. Why? Because the la this country do not prevent the from crushing the weak. That reason, and because the strong crushed the weak, the strong nate the industry and the eco life of this country. No man can that the lines of endeavor have and more narrowed and stiffened man who knows anything about development of industry in this try can have failed to observe the larger kinds of credit are and more difficult to obtain, you obtain them upon the term uniting your efforts with those already control the industries country; and nobody can fail serve that any man who tries himself up in competition with process of manufacture which been taken under the control of combinations of capital will pre find himself either squeezed obliged to sell and allow himse be absorbed.

There is a great deal that reconstruction in the United Sta should like to take a census of business men—I mean the rank file of the business men— whether they think that busines ditions in this country, or whether the organization of bu in this country, is satisfactory not. I know what they would if they dared. If they could vote cretly they would vote overwhelm that the present organization of ness was meant for the big fel and was not meant for the little lows; that it was meant for those are at the top and was meant clude those who are at the bo that it was meant to shut out ners, to prevent new entries race, to prevent the building competitive enterprise that wou terfere with the monopolies whi great trusts have built up.

What this country needs above erything else is a body of laws will look after the men who are the make rather than the men are already made. Because the who are already made are not to live indefinitely, and they are always kind enough to leave able and as honest as they are.

REMARKS BY "THE TIMES."

President Wilson is somewhat loose in his generalization when he says that "nothing is done in this country as it was done twenty years ago." It will be remembered that in 1892 there was a Presidential campaign, in which the Democratic party succeeded by misrepresenting the acts and the motives of a Republican President, who was a candidate for re-election, and by denouncing the policy of protection, and clamoring for a tariff for revenue only.

History repeated itself literally last November, when President Woodrow Wilson and a Democratic Congress were elected. It is greatly to be feared that there will be a further repetition, and that for a time "things will be done as they were done twenty years ago." Then it was the Wilson bill and now it will be the Wilson-Underwood bill that will be enacted. The tariff for revenue only of 1893 brought with it the closing of factories, the silencing of foundries, and forges, the throwing of a million workers out of employment, the loss of $2,000,000,000, and general disaster, which continued until the Republican party was restored to power. It is to be feared that what was done then will be done now, unless a belated repudiation of the obstinate and unsagacious counsels of President Wilson shall make itself manifest in the Senate.

President Wilson in stating that "we have changed our economic conditions absolutely from top to bottom, and with our economic society, the organization of our life," gives expression in didactic phraseology to a schoolmaster's ideas of what ought to be, rather than a statesman's declaration of what is.

Republican cries may, to President Wilson's ears "sound as if they belonged to a past age, which men have forgotten." In the scholarly seclusion of a college the President may have forgotten much that it would have been wiser and more patriotic for him to have remembered; but the great mass of the American people have not forgotten that it was the men of thought and action and not the dreamers who saved the life of the nation from Democratic assault. It was mainly Republicans who struck down slavery against Democratic upholding, who upheld the nation's credit against Democratic clamors for repudiation, who protected American labor from the onslaught of Democratic free trade, and the nation's currency against Democratic outcries for free silver.

The men of today have not as you say, Mr. Wilson, "almost forgotten," or forgotten at all that it was the party whose unhappy division made you President that kept the banner of the nation's progress and prosperity full high advanced for half a century.

The men of today have not "forgotten" that since 1880 our population has doubled, our wealth more than doubled, both in the aggregate and per capita; our public debt decreased nearly one-half, our savings banks deposits (and it is the people, not the corporations or the capitalists, that deposit in savings banks,) quadrupled in amount; our farm products quadrupled in value, the value of our manufacturing products nearly trebled, and our exports quintupled.

The men of today have not, "forgotten" that these astounding results have been produced under Republican rule, and notwithstanding a brief interregnum of Democratic possession of the Federal lawmaking power.

In the face of these incontrovertible facts, gathered not from "the loose expectoration of speech" of irresponsible word mongers, but from the census returns, how can you say, Mr. Wilson, that we are "facing the necessity of fitting a new social organization, as we did once fit the old organization to the happiness and prosperity of the great body of citizens; for we are conscious that the new order of society has not been made to fit and provide the conveniences or prosperity of the average man."

What is the matter with the happiness and prosperity of the great body of the citizens? They have two and one-half times as much money per capita in the savings banks as they had in 1880. Have they less comfortable shelter, less wholesome food, less raiment, less educational advantages for their children, less of the comforts and luxuries and conveniences of life than they had twenty years ago? Have they deteriorated morally, mentally or physically since 1893?

Why, Mr. Wilson, do you, in your third newspaper message to the American people leave the domain of politics, wherein you have demonstrated that you know very little, and dilate on economics, about which you abundantly demonstrate that you know nothing at all? Why do you fly in the face of the census returns, ignore current history and attack the accuracy of the multiplication table? Is it becoming in a former Princeton professor and a President of the United States to say in effect with the French academician, "If the facts do not agree with my theories, so much the worse for the facts?"

You complain bitterly that the industrial life of the nation has changed, so that corporations have to some extent taken the place of individuals as employers of labor. Are you quite sure that this has always been a disadvantage to the laborer? Has it not often been the case that the economies in administration, transportation and distribution of products, made possible by large concentrations of capital in corporations, have resulted in benefits which the stockholders in corporations have shared with consumers and workers? Is it not true that coal oil is cheaper in the homes, and the wages of the workers for the oil corporations are greater than when the pumping and refining of petroleum was the business of a hundred individual employers? Of course it is too bad that Rockefeller by his genius for organization was able to accumulate a thousand millions of dollars, while you as an ex-schoolmaster felt compelled to apply to Andrew Carnegie for a pension to be paid you out of the money he had made from the operations of the steel trust. It is deplorable that the pittance of $75,000 per annum, with rent and servant hire thrown in, which you now receive from the American people should have to be supplemented by your earnings as a writer of weekly sketches for the newspapers.

But what do you propose shall be done about it? You say that the life of the nation "does not center now upon questions of governmental structure or of the distribution of governmental power." Well, what does it center upon? You answer that question by saying: "It centers upon questions of the very structure and operation of society itself, of which the government is only the instrument." What, in plain English, do you mean by that explanation?

After denouncing all corporations in sizzling although somewhat sophomorical rhetoric, you say: "I want to record my protest against any discussion of this matter that would seem to indicate that there are bodies of our fellow citizens who are trying to grind us down and do us injustice."

Why do you discuss the matter in columns of diatribes against those of your fellow citizens who own stock in corporations and then "record your protest against such discussion?"

If it is in order to criticise the of a college president and a Pre dent of the United States who robes himself of the dignity of high office to enter the arena of nalistic debate, it might be said, Wilson, that your premises and conclusions are of no kin to other, and that you resemble way the cow who first gave a pai milk and then kicked it over.

That there is more or less unre this prosperous land of ours is That there are many socialistic Cades who promise that if elect office they will cause every pi to hold a quart, is true. That are some evils that need extir and some half evils that re curbing, is true. But will your paper philippic change anything curb anything, or reform anyth accomplish anything except to voke a regret in the minds judicious that the President United States should use his hig fice as a rostrum from which soap-box adjectives at his countrymen? If your article review should accomplish any will it not be an accomplishm mischief, in that it will encour disorderly and turbulent elem society, and will never put bre a man's mouth or hope into a an's heart?

AMERICAN INFLUENCE IN MEXICO.

BY W. D. HORNADAY.

III.

THAT distressing poverty exists among millions of Mexicans of the ignorant peon class is plainly in evidence. It is a condition, however, that cannot be remedied on the moment by any law or set of laws. No one who is familiar with affairs in Mexico will deny that the system of peonage, or slavery, which is practiced by many planters and other large employers of labor is without its barbaric features. Here again arises the question, however, of the contentment of the people. Despite the oppression to which they are subjected, they are by nature optimistic and care-free. What might seem to be brutal deprivation of human rights among a more civilized people apparently gives these stoic-minded Indians little concern. At the same time, it can be said to their credit that they are susceptible of being brought up to high standards of enlightenment by means of education and proper treatment and consideration at the hands of their superiors. From the time of the Spanish conquest four centuries ago the natives have been down-trodden and made to bear the whims and harsh treatment of not only the men holding public office but of the employers of labor. Millions of them are little more than beasts of burden.

It was during the peaceful period of the Diaz regime that new avenues of activity for the common people were opened and this creation of a new field for their energies was due almost entirely to the investment of American and other foreign capital in various lines of industry. There was no general unrest among these people at the time of the outbreak of the Madero revolution; at least not an unrest in the sense that word is ordinarily applied to the laboring class of the United States. The masses of Mexicans have not at any time, either before or since the overthrow of Diaz, displayed any open manifestation of dissatisfaction or discontent with their condition except when roused by agitators. I have investigated this phase of the situation very thoroughly.

I was in Saltillo five years ago when the late Gen. Bernardo Reyes was reported to be fomenting a revolutionary uprising in the States of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila. By order of President Diaz a regiment of cavalry was rushed to Saltillo from Monterey and for several days and nights the troops patrolled the streets. The ignorance of the lower classes in that city and of the surrounding country of what the military activity signified was impressive. Not one peon in one hundred knew or cared what it was all about. They had heard nothing of any proposed revolution and had no interest one way or the other in such a movement. However, if a war was started and they were offered enough money to serve, they would welcome the employment.

The peon class viewed the Madero revolution in the same way. In the early part of that revolt I spent some time in the States of Chihuahua and Coahuila in an effort to learn the nature of the grievances against the Diaz government. A great many laboring men were talked to on the subject and only a very few expressed any interest in the new political movement. As for grievances, their complaints were purely of a local character. In the very same territory where several thousand peons were recruited to the Madero army I found an absolute indifference on the part of the people in regard to the Federal administration. They joined the ranks of the revolutionists simply because it afforded them a way of living with a minimum amount of work. The same thing was true of the privates who made up the rebel forces which brought about Madero's downfall and is true today of the armed opposition to the Huerta regime.

The answer that was finally given to the question: "After Diaz—what?" astounded the world. Many explanations have been offered as to how Madero accomplished his purpose so easily. The weakness of the regular army was the chief cause of the overthrow of the constituted government.

Following the election and installation of Madero as President it quickly became apparent to observing ones that his reign would be short. There was little need of asking: "After Madero—what?" The revolutionary period had set in and is bound to have its sway.

While it is true that during the reign of Diaz there was much corruption in the courts and among the government officials from the highest to the lowest, this deplorable condition was being gradually overcome. It is charged that the practice of graft enabled many men of political influence in the republic to accumulate large fortunes. If reports be true this sore upon the body politic of that country has not yet been healed, and, irrespective of what changes may be made in the government's administration, it is probable that the time-honored practice of levying tribute upon persons and concerns asking favors at the hands of men in authority will be continued more or less extensively for years to come. Many tales are told of large sums of money that were said to have been paid by big American financial interests to obtain favorable concessions for the establishment of industrial enterprises in the republic. They were granted special privileges of enormous value.

The average Mexican is not only a poor hand at initiating big business enterprises, but he is slow to grasp opportunities of this character when examples of their success are set before him. This accounts largely for the wonderful things which have been accomplished by Americans and Britishers, particularly, in the matter of controlling and converting into profitable use many of the vast natural resources of that country. The native population owns only a minority interest of the republic's resources. Not a great many years ago most of the mines were owned by Mexicans, but this is no longer true. Among the many industries which Americans now control are mining, smelting, manufacturing, oil producing and refining and lumbering. They also own many public utility plants in the different cities and towns. They control the shipping upon the island waterways and much of the coastwise trade. In some instances Mexicans and Americans are operating together as stockholders in companies, but for the most part the native people showed an absolute lack of enterprise and ambition when it came to entering new fields of business endeavor that were opened to them. They sat back and saw the foreign invaders acquire and develop mines of wonderful richness, reclaim broad stretches of virgin land, establish manufacturing plants to utilize native-grown raw material, sink wells deep into the earth and bring forth enormous volumes of crude oil and in many other ways demonstrate the almost limitless revenue-producing possibilities of their native land. They saw all this going on around them without, except in a few rare instances, taking any steps to profit on their own account by the vivid and realistic examples which were working such wonders for the upbuilding of the country.

The doctrine of "Mexico for the Mexicans," which is advocated by a small element of political agitators, can never be put in force. The wealth of the land is now owned by foreigners, and this condition will probably never be changed. It is for the good of the Mexican people, and if the efforts of progress and development through the investment of American gold in legitimate and worthy business, and industrial enterprises is permitted to continue under auspices that are fair to all concerned, the salvation of Mexico will be solved in due time. Revolution and chaos cannot continue much longer without some heroic action being taken to bring about the restoration of trankuility. When that time comes there will quickly be inaugurated a new epoch of progress and prosperity.

It is practically certain that in the future more consideration will be paid the peon with a view of improving his material condition and placing him upon a higher plane of citizenship. In view of the fact that the largest employers of labor in the country are foreign concerns, the betterment and uplifting of the lower class falls chiefly to these outside influences.

The taste of higher wages which was given the laboring class under the industrial operations of Americans and other foreigners has had the effect of causing a large increase in the immigration of this element to the United States. The unsettled conditions in Mexico and consequent throwing out of employment there of thousands of people caused many of these laborers to seek employment on this side of the border. At the time the last United States census was taken the Mexican population of Texas was 128,000. During the last two or three years not only has there been an enormous increase in the number of Mexicans in Texas, but in Arizona, New Mexico, California, Oklahoma and other States as far north as Iowa. These brown-hued laborers with their families have been crossing the border by the hundreds every day for many months. They have come from as far south as the City of Mexico. The flow of these laborers into the United States will probably increase as business conditions in Mexico become more depressing.

One of the most distressing features of the situation there is the suffering that is beginning to be felt by the poorer class on account of the shortage of money and food supplies. Many of the farms and plantations are idle. Where it has been possible the ranch owners have disposed of their cattle. The lands of the country are rapidly falling into a complete state of non-productiveness. This closing of the different avenues for the employment of labor serves as an encouragement to the peon to either join some revolutionary band or move to the United States.

POVERTY ON JAPAN'S FARMS.

People Eat Practically No Meat and Hardly a Good Quality of Rice, the Best Quality Being Exported.

[New York American:] Owing to the Japanese problem now so acute in California the following account has timely interest. It is taken from Clarence Poe's book, "Where Half the World Is Waking Up," a book sent out recently by the Doubleday-Page Press. Mr. Poe says of the Japanese farms:

"Forty-six farmers out of every 100 in Japan own less than one and one-quarter acres of land, twenty-six more out of every 100 own less than two and one-half acres, and only one man in 100 owns as much as twenty-five acres.

"Ordinarily, however, these little handkerchief-sized farms yield amazingly. It has been shown by Prof. F. G. King that the fields of Japan are cultivated so intensively, fertilized so painstakingly, and kept so continuously producing some crop that they feed 2277 people to the square mile, and that 21,321 square miles of cultivated fields in the main islands support a population of 48,542,367. If the tilled fields of Iowa, for example, supported an equal number of people per square mile, the population so supported would be over 100,000,000. That State alone could feed the entire population of the United States and then have excess produce left for export to other countries.

"These Japanese lands have been in cultivation for unnumbered centuries.

"Of course, with a population so dense and with each man cultivating an area no larger than a garden patch in America, the people are poor, and the wonder is that they are able to produce food enough to keep the country from actual want. Practically no animal meat is ever eaten. If we except fish, the average American eats nearly twice as much meat in a week as the average Japanese does in a year; to be exact, 150 pounds of meat per capita is required per year for the average American, against 1.7 pounds for the average Japanese. Many of the farmers are too poor even to eat a good quality of rice. Consequently Japan presents the odd phenomenon of being at once an exporter and a large importer of rice. Poor farmers sell their good rice and buy a poorer quality brought in from the mainland of Asia and mix it with barley for grinding.

"Only about one farmer in three has a horse or an ox; in most cases all the work must be done by and with crude tools. It is or, rather, it would be pitiful did not appear so contented men breaking the ground, plowing, but by digging with long-handled tools with blades haps six inches wide and long.

"With land so scarce it is, of necessary to keep something ground every growing day fro end to year's end. Truckers and deners raise three crops a year. crops in Japan are not very Rice represents half the agri values. Next to rice is the silk industry, and then barley, wheat etables, soy beans, sweet potatoes fruits.

A Polite Conductor.

[New York Press:] Nick worth was saying the other day the country is getting too much run with people who take th seriously. And speaking of folk take themselves seriously, Nick lated this one:

There was a well-known in Cincinnati named Dan Kelly worked as a conductor on a car. Among the people who that line occasionally was a able woman, the wife of a citizen. She thought her name one to conjure with, to say of making men kowtow at the mention of it. One day this became greatly peeved because car was not stopped at the the street when she desired to get She asked the conductor if he not have the car backed up she would not need to walk the street in the slush. He told he'd like to oblige and all that was against the rules.

"Why," exclaimed the wo this-should-settle-it tone, "I'm So-and-So."

"My name's Dan Kelly," said conductor, lifting his cap "I'm glad to meet you."

In 1908 he was the candidate of the Democrats of Illinois for Governor. He has been corporation counsel of the second largest city in the country. The Democrats of the Pacific States made him their candidate for Vice-President in [illegible]. After a residence of ten years in Illinois he is a Senator in Congress. J. H. Lewis does not say that he has any extraordinary talents, but he wants to be taken seriously. [illegible] haven't figured in his career, either at the bar or in politics. [illegible], there is more of him than whiskers, manners and spats."

"In the meanwhile," I said, "what has been the philosophy of your life?"

"I have neglected to apply philosophy to myself. Perhaps I have a [illegible]. I know that I am a fatalist. Kind acts bring rewards. Unkind acts are followed by penalties. Nothing will stop the workings of the law of [illegible], of the law of compensation and of punishment. If, as a member of the [illegible] or the Senate, I speak [illegible] to the ash man, or tell a [illegible] I am glad he is looking so well, when he isn't, or help a poor old woman over a street crossing, I have an investment that will pay me a dividend somewhere, some time, and in some way. Call it selfishness if you will, but the word was spoken or the act was done.

"[illegible], I have none. That is to say I feel bitterly toward no man. I have no grievances to plot and work out. The conduct of those who oppose me is forgotten when the contest is over. Such rubbish as hate and the desire for revenge never has any place in my heart or mind."

"You are an orator," I said. "Is your fluency of speech natural or was it developed by hard work?"

"If the world says that I am an orator, it says that of me which I myself do not assert."

"Then change the word orator," I said, "into the phrase, 'an oratorical [illegible].'"

"That sounds better," Senator Lewis answered. "A talkative man would sound better still. I was a nuisance to the neighbors when I was a boy. I [illegible] in my room and out in the yard. Speech, I thought, was one of the tools of the law. I tried, therefore, to express myself in written and spoken language. Speech-makers, I believed, should be learned men. I read many books. After fighting in court all day I would go to my rooms and read until late in the night—history, philosophy and fiction. I have always suffered from sleeplessness. On Sunday I would read the Bible. No man can be called educated unless he studies the Scriptures. Quotations from the Bible, moreover, are always effective before an audience.

"Likewise, I gave some attention to my voice. I would travel to Germany or France, hunt out a music teacher in some village and arrange for lessons in vocalization. Perhaps I would stay for three weeks, singing simple songs and arias from different operas. Then I took long walks for my health. On such occasions I would coin phrases, draw mental pictures and think over subjects. Some day I would make a speech and use the [illegible] phrases and paragraphs thus worked out on foot in the fields and woods and those who heard me would suppose they were listening to an extemporaneous effort."

"Is there anything the matter with the United States?" I asked.

"Yes. Too many alarm bells are ringing. The [illegible] is unnecessary and [illegible]. But our worst weakness is the belief that men must lose their individuality and combine if they would accomplish anything in business, education, morals and government. We [illegible] little else than the communities of character and endeavor. All [illegible] experiments in government have been failures, because men lose their liberty and countries their freedom. Man should develop his character, his mind, his talents, his opinions and his body, while standing apart from the crowd. We are being told today that human beings can be made by wholesale like coats, hats, [illegible] and umbrellas. One [illegible] of the debilitating doctrine runs, [illegible] him on another, and all men [illegible] on the government."

"How would you explain your success in politics?" I asked.

"You can pick out my theories, I dare say, from what I have already spoken of in this interview. But I [illegible] condense the whole scheme of [illegible] success into a sentence. [illegible] counsel every one, no matter [illegible] nature of one's business, the common [illegible] of life to the common [illegible]."

"What questions are you most interested in now?"

"I should like to see a minimum wage established for each class of [illegible] in the United States. Next, I would like a scheme of compensation [illegible] for workers, who, reaching old age, find themselves poor. Pension is an offensive word in such a connection. Charity is an odious word. Let the aged carpenter work [illegible] minutes or fifteen hours a day in his own home or anywhere and let the State give him something out of a public fund his previous labor has helped to create. Let him trade a window screen or a door at a public [illegible] for a pair of shoes made under [illegible] circumstances by an old shoemaker. Or pay him cash if that suits him better and pay him whether he works or prefers to sit at home and smoke his pipe. He has been a soldier of industry and society owes him a part of the profit he did not get when he daily stood at his bench and wrought toward a higher civilization."

difference between individual wells in daily output, it is probable that the average production per well in each class is about the same. But when we figure on the value of this output the price of refining oil is so much higher than that of fuel that the light-oil wells are, as a rule, much better producers in point of value. It will not be far from the mark to take the average annual product per well for the county at a value of $1210 for light-oil production and of $780 for heavy-oil production, equivalent to prices of 70 cents and 45 cents per barrel for the two grades.

"The maintenance charge on most of the wells in this county is very small, due both to their slight depth and to the firmness of the formation penetrated and from which the oil is drawn. With but few exceptions, running sands are unknown, water troubles are the exception rather than the rule, and emulsified oil is not found. While, of course, it is impossible to fix on any operating cost which will represent the facts, as regards all leases, it is probable that the actual cost of producing the average Ventura county well is not over $400 per annum."

Gentlemen:—Yours of recent date at hand, and beg leave to say that the "Bigness of the Gibraltar Company" is such that I can only express myself by saying that I, a subscriber for stock, am fully convinced, and that the start a year ago appealed to me and was trending in a way that had not been exploited, viz: The propagating and planting of the olive, and making a way for the man of small means to own his own home, with an income later.

I am elated with the manner in which our President, Mr. Martin, and his co-workers are striving, ever on the alert. The President and his entire staff are just as BIG as Gibraltar Acres, and those fortunate enough to have subscribed for stock are now contemplating purchasing more.

Hoping that Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company keeps abreast as in its year just passed, I remain

Pellissier Square

A Man Wanting Wilshire Property Asked Us—

"How can you sell this high-class, highly improved property, equal to the finest in the Wilshire at prices so low as to make Pellissier Square an extraordinary bargain?"

We Told Him

"It is because this property has been held intact for years and years by one family—the Pellissiers, and is now being subdivided and offered to buyers at reasonable figures. This property has not passed through several different hands, and the buyer in Pellissier Square today has a chance to make money on his investment."

You Can Profit Too!

By allowing the above facts to be your guidance in buying for profit in this district. The Wilshire is better today than ever—its opportunities greater.

The Most Unfair Critic Has To Praise Pellissier Square.

It is impossible to get away from the fact that it's the best buy in the Wilshire today, because it gives the finest property with down-to-the-minute improvements, at prices much lower than asked elsewhere in the same neighborhood.

Look at these prices—DECIDE—and buy all you can!

In Pellissier Square, between Wilshire and Seventh, east front lots are only $95 per front foot. In neighboring tracts, lots similarly situated are commanding prices of $125 per front foot. Corners on Wilshire Boulevard in Pellissier Square are only $140 per front foot, while similar Wilshire frontage in surrounding subdivisions is priced at $175 per front foot.

Latest and Most Up-to-Date Improvements.

Wide streets bordered by parkings planted with rare shrubbery. Gutters and 6-foot sidewalks of cement. All lots left with a layer of rich loam. All connections inside of curbs. Electric light and telephone conduits. Massive electroliers of exclusive design. No unsightly features. Complete sewer and storm drain system.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

ENQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Iridescence.

GALLUP (N. M.) May 5.—Q.: What do you call that which nature has formed on the glass in the box sent to you? I see it so often on broken glass and minerals when crossing the desert, and notably so when I use my magnifying glass and look at specimens in the sunlight.

M. C. W.

A.: The prismatic colors are reflected from the exterior of the sample of glass, and this is occasioned by exposure to the elements with a quasi-formation of oxides of iron and chrome, which was used in the manufacture of the vitreous substance. The glass specimen when viewed in sunlight shows also a play of colors when the sample is turned or twisted in the hand.

Iridescence proper, "is when the prismatic colors appear to be reflected from the interior of a crystal." There are minerals and manufactured substances that also give a change of colors when viewed with or without the magnifying glass; of the manufactured substances carborundum is an example. The diamond and sapphire are iridescent, and some coal and "peacock iron" are of the varieties representing a play of colors.

Quartz.

CAMPO, May 7.—Q.: I am sending you a sample of some kind. Please state what it is, and what is present in the oxides.

V.

A.: The sample is quartz; it is iridescent; carries iron oxides, and was not tested for gold. You are respectfully referred to the answer given under subheading iridescence and immediately preceding this.

Potash Traces.

LOS ANGELES, May 7.—Q.: On several occasions during the past two years, I have submitted mineral samples to your department of rare minerals, etc., and have always been disappointed in the very low percentages you give from your tests. I have had assays made at Washington, D. C., and elsewhere, and on some samples that you returned less than 3 per cent. potash, I got returns from Washington showing over 25 per cent. How is this?

W. T.

A.: "This" is on this wise. We very well remember the samples you forwarded from time to time, and have some of the separate samples left over, as it were. In the lot of specimens from you we have a sack of minerals from Beck's Canyon. Two thumb specimens (very minute in size) carry very high percentages of potassium nitrate (native saltpetre.)

Knowing full well that such high-grade nitrate occurred in very narrow seams at Beck's Canyon, Utah, and that the low-grade aluminum silicate occurring at the face of the canyon immediately below the narrow seams of niter, we did justice by you in testing your samples all mixed together and reported the fact that 2.85 per cent. was all that we could obtain from the mixture.

There has been entirely too much dreaming about the great nitrate deposits (?) of the arid sections of the West, and it is a matter of history that an authority at Washington, D. C., was responsible for some remarkably peculiar reports alleging very high percentages of potassium salts present in the salines of Death Valley. The reports referred to caused prospectors to stake claims and lose money by the venture, and in the latter days of December, 1912, some Napoleons of doubtful finance exploited certain newspapers with news of "The Great Potash War. Millions at Stake," and so forth, ad nauseum.

Now cometh the United States Geological Survey with results showing that tests from four wells in Death Valley, and testing for "the possibility of the occurrence of commercial deposits of potash from samples of eleven brines were analysed with the result that 0.51 to 1.27 per cent. was found in the original brine. The average was 0.94 per cent."

Would that space permitted a full reference to the report mentioned, but enough is now known to justify the stand taken by The Mining and Scientific Press, and this department of The Times, in warning investors and prospectors not to aviate in the wild goose and gander flights to the wonderful potash deposits of Death Valley (?) There are no commercial deposits of potassium salts at any locality in the United States.

Mica.

SAN DIEGO, May 8.—Q.: I enclose herewith samples of mica found in a mine where there are large deposits of it located, in Wyoming. Can you kindly give me an idea of its value, uses, et cetera?

E. J. S.

A.: The white sample is suitable for small-size stove-lights, and the mottled (iron oxide and manganese stained) samples may answer for use in electrical machinery. No sample is up to the standard of high-grade mica.

The white mica, represented by sample, can be sold as scrap mica; for the manufacture of sheet mica, and when ground up into what is known as mica flour it is an article of commerce for use in decorating wallpapers for paint purposes, in the manufacture of lubricants, and when molded for electrical insulation.

A ton of ground mica will almost fill a box-car if shipped loose. "Mixed with shellac or special compositions, ground mica is molded into desired forms and is used in insulators for trolley wires. Ground mica for electrical insulation must be free from metallic matter . . . and mica used for lubrication should be free from gritty matter . . . Coarsely-ground 'bran' mica is used in increasing quantities to coat the surface of composition roofing-material to prevent the tar or other ingredients used in its manufacture from sticking, when the sheets are rolled for shipping."

The mottled samples resemble the mica obtained from the New York mica mine of near Custer, S. D., which mica is largely manufactured into commercial substances for use where high voltage in electricity must be considered. A carload of mica was once shipped to Chicago from the New York mica mine and was dumped into Lake Michigan by order of the mica trust, but the trust owns the mine today and uses the entire product of the mine for commercial and manufactured specialties. While in a reminiscent mood it can be stated that the Union Pacific Railroad once had a peculiar experiment in using a guaranteed "gritless" mica lubricant on the axles of a train of cars; in short, the wheels "stuck" and would not revolve.

Westmoreland Street Apartment-house Designed After Italian Villa Types—Set Well Back of Lot Line.

Among the many new apartment-houses in the west end, that now being completed by F. D. Turner on Westmoreland street between Sixth street and Wilshire boulevard is notable in more ways than one. Determined to improve a valuable unrestricted site with an income-producing improvement, but at the same time unwilling to offend the owners of neighboring private residences and highly-restricted lots, Turner set about it to erect a building that would not be architecturally out of place in the fashionable section in question. As a result, he has a structure which from the street front cannot be distinguished from a large private residence.

Plans for the place, which is of the Italian villa type, were drawn by Fielding Slingluff. The exterior is plastered and the roof is of tile. The entrance is protected by a handsome marquis and the windows are set off by iron grills. The structure contains four four-room apartments, a billiard-room and reception-room. The finish is in hard woods. At the rear is a garage for four machines.

The building is set back thirty-five feet from the lot line in common with the private homes on the street. The site is 100x170 feet in size.

roots. Some damage is occasionally done by hurricanes, but, all in all, the worst menace to the plantation rubber tree is the careless tapper, and better trained men are becoming available for this work every year.

A comparison of the returns of oranges and rubber would be interesting, but is hardly practicable because of the different conditions under which each is raised. On account of its comparatively low initial cost, there is no question but that an acre of 10-year-old rubber trees represents a much smaller investment than an acre of oranges of equal age in any one of the most favored Southern California districts. Both begin to yield returns at about the same age, but if the cost of the land is included, I should say that rubber trees could be brought to that stage at from 15 to 40 per cent. of what the orange would cost. From that time on, on the score of maintenance and marketing, the advantage is decidedly with rubber, for the tree needs no care or cultivation whatever, while preparation of its product for shipment is simple and inexpensive. In the matter of actual returns comparison also is difficult. Certain small orange groves in especially favored localities, have doubtless yielded larger returns than the average of any Malayan or Cingalese rubber plantation. On the other hand, acre for acre of producing trees, the rubber plantations of the Middle East will certainly average larger returns than the orange groves of California.

UNHEALTHFUL PURSUIT.

The advantage of the orange, of course, is that it is raised in a white man's country. Tropical agriculture has to yield far better returns than that of the temperate latitudes or none but the natives would follow it. There is no such thing as a healthy rubber plantation, and most of them are veritable pest holes. The tree must have heat and moisture, and these, in the tropics, mean mosquitos and bad water. A plantation overseer and his European assistants consider themselves lucky if they spend less than a month a year in the hospital with fever or dysentery, and few indeed of them, even if they live to that age, but are permanently broken in health at 40. Rubber must have its toll of lives, it would seem, just as much on the plantation as in the forest.

At its present rate of increase, plantation-grown rubber will overtake and pass jungle rubber before many years have gone by. The supply of the latter, as I have pointed out, is not susceptible of being greatly increased, whereas, with uncounted acres of suitable land available, the possibilities of plantation-grown rubber are near the infinite. One thing, and one thing only, is responsible for the fact that the area planted to rubber trees in the world today is not several times greater than it is, and that thing, which also hangs like a Damoclean sword above every rubber planter, is the fear that a process for the manufacture of synthetic rubber may be discovered. With rubber at $1 a pound—and it is hardly likely ever to go much below that price as long as it comes from the juice of a tree—there is a huge profit in it for the planter; but it takes a lot of courage for men to put several million dollars into a project with the full knowledge that any day may bring news of invention that will make them paupers at a single stroke. Rubber from coal tar—or some equally cheap substance—at 5 or 10 cents a pound does not sound half so remarkable as a score of scientific achievements which have been announced within the year, and few, indeed, are the optimists, even among the rubber men, who do not feel in the bottom of their hearts that it is coming.

Is Four Per Cent Your Limit?

I have no quarrel with the man who is satisfied with 4% on his money.

But if he were seated at the corner of my desk I know that I could show him where he was not getting all that his money should earn, especially in these times where the opportunities are so great for a higher interest rate.

I HAVE A GREAT ARGUMENT. It holds good today as it did years ago.

I WOULD TELL THAT MAN TO PUT SOME OF HIS MONEY INTO LOTS IN A YOUNG GROWING CITY LIKE EL SEGUNDO. AND THEN LET THE CITY GROW UP TO HIM.

He could have done it in Los Angeles years ago, and if HE WILL DO IT AT EL SEGUNDO TODAY HE WILL WIN JUST AS SURE AS THE SUN WILL RISE TOMORROW.

Look at what is making El Segundo grow.

A Standard Oil plant that promises to be the largest of its kind in the world! He will admit that this plant will grow, so what can stop the plant's city growing along with it?

If One Grows the Other Must

In my opinion El Segundo will be one of the most important industrial cities on the Pacific Coast — and SOON. Her physical advantages, location, climate and, with the new canal opened—her strategic position as regards that great new field, the Orient, crying for our goods, puts El Segundo on the map in large letters.

These are some of the arguments I would put up to the man who will listen to me. We are in a different position entirely from the men who are simply engaged in selling lots. This company is building a city. Already we have broken all records for number of buildings constructed in a year and a half, and in the number of inhabitants that have come to dwell in our city. We are rapidly nearing the thousand mark.

The first thing I do is to send a man down in one of our autos to LOOK AROUND.

When can I send you down?

Yours for success,

GILL, STEWART AND TONNEMAN RELEASED.

Three Speedy Players Find Themselves Free Agents. May Get on With Other Coast League Clubs—Gill Is Willing to Play With Tigers—Brashear at First for Venice—Ryan to Pitch This Afternoon.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

THE ax was swung with considerable vehemence in local baseball circles yesterday.

Dr. Warren Gill was chopped off the Los Angeles payroll, and Venice slipped blue envelopes to Harry Stewart and Charley Tonneman. This brings the Tigers down to the twenty-player limit which goes into effect today, and places the Angels under it.

That Tonneman was slated to walk the plank has been known for some time, but it was not until within the last week that Stewart's name was mentioned in connection with releases.

Maier and Hogan asked for waivers on Catcher Elliott, and had they been granted he would have been released for a needed rest, and re-signed later. In that event Tonneman might have been retained for a few weeks, or at least until the new catcher for whom Venice is dickering, arrived.

It is possible that waivers may yet be granted on Elliott, and should the deal for another catcher go through, it is probable that Rowdy will be given a layoff to recover from the injury that has been handicapping him.

JOBS ARE READY.

Berths are said to be open to Stewart and Tonneman, but it is not known that they will care to accept. Both have traveled in fast company for a number of years, and neither of them would have been turned loose by Venice but for the player limit. It is possible that some other Coast League club can provide a place for them.

Gill's release was more of a surprise. He had been out of the game for several weeks following an injury

Well, Well.

ANGELS AGAIN TAKE TIGE DOWN THE LINE.

Crabb Allow but Five Hits, and Three of These Are Made by Dick Bayless—Ellis Cuts Off Many Hard Drives in Left Field—O'Rourke Has a Dozen Hard Chances, and Slips Up on Only One.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

THE Angels made some more progress along life's rocky way yesterday, trimming the Tigers by a whisker.

The final count was 3 to 2, and placed the Tigers under the necessity of gobbling both games today to get by with an even split for the series.

In order for the Angels to accomplish their purpose, it was necessary for them to place a crimp in the long and honorable winning streak of Elmer Koestner, who, prior to the commencement of yesterday's hostilities, had struggled through nineteen consecutive innings without a run.

Koestner was outpitched by Roy Crabb, a respected citizen of Greeley, Iowa, the same being located in these great United States. Crabb allowed but five hits, whereas the opposing party was paddled ten times.

GREAT WORK BY ELLIS.

Crabb, while he must be credited with behaving in a most workmanlike manner, owes much to the fact that Rube Ellis has a habit of playing his position so deep that he is at all times in the vicinity of Santa Ana.

Rube had seven putouts, which is some day's work for a left fielder, and extinguished a number of promising drives that were headed for Orange county. His catch of Hosp's long fly in the second was a humdinger. Rube, with the true instinct of a great outfielder, saw at once that the drive was intended for the tall and uncut. He lit out accordingly, and picked off the ball just as it whizzed over his left shoulder.

Patsy O'Rourke also was a busy little lady. P. O. had twelve chances, many of them exceedingly difficult, and foozled but one. As for Hosp—oh, well, the oft-repeated phrase, "many sensational plays," is kept stereotyped for daily use.

JOHNSON FIRST HOME.

Ernie Johnson was the early bird that plucked the first worm. Ernie opened the second with a spiteful little grounder to Hosp. He certainly would have been potted had not Hamilton Patterson in some subtle manner muffed the ball. Boles sacrificed in a becoming manner. Crabb slapped the ball past Litschi. Hosp, playing well back, made a wild stab and the sphere slid up his arm and over his shoulder into left field for a single. Johnson took third on this, and scored while O'Rourke and Hosp were operating on Crabb at second on Page's drive. Billy tried to steal and was "bushwhacked" by Elliott.

Metzger started the fourth with a hit to center, and went to second on Boles's demise. Crabb then nailed the libel that pitchers can't pummel by scoring him with a swift single to center.

Moore hung up the most important tally in the seventh, the one which the Angels absolutely needed, as things turned out. Ellis and Moore singled, the former caroming the ball off Koestner's left knee cap in TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND PURSE LURES FAST CARS.

Three Fiats to be Started in Panama-Pacific Road Race. Mercers and Cadillacs to be Favorites Among Smaller Cars—Six-cylinder National and Locomobile Look Good to Many Dopesters—Great Race.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

THREE Fiats will be started in the Los Angeles-San Francisco road race. This decision was reached last night by Attorney E. E. Hewlett, who even went so far as to name the drivers. George Hill will handle one of the cars, Frank Verbeck another, and Felix Magone will possibly be on the third car.

Because of the interest being taken in the race to San Francisco, the Fiat man has determined to keep his stable of cars here. The Fiats are the fastest machines in the world. They are the most spectacular motor racers. The 120 horse-power Fiat was used as The Times-Chronicle pathfinder when the race was first proposed by The Times.

At that time Attorney Hewlett was in favor of entering the three cars, but decided to see how the race would take with the people along the route. From Los Angeles, straight through to San Francisco, everybody is in favor of the big event, and the entry list will easily pass the thirty mark.

Bert Dingley will be home this week from Indianapolis. He must then answer the question as to whether he will drive a National. Another National racer will be entered the latter part of this week, and it will be this car that Dingley will be offered.

There is not a better driver in the racing game than Dingley. He is ready to handle a car and the National is his choice. This would leave the matter entirely up to the National man, who is now in the East with Earle Y. Boothe. He should be here by Thursday, and at that time he will be able to answer and the National team will be chosen.

FLOERSHEIM AWAY.

Gus Floersheim will leave this morning with a Mercer for the run up the valley to San Francisco. He will be accompanied by Guy Ball. There is every reason to believe that Floersheim will have another car beside the Berlin Special in this race. The Berlin Special is now in San Francisco, with Gaston Morris at the helm.

After a fast run to Fresno Gaston writes back and asks that we refrain from calling him the "flying frog-eating Frenchman." He says he is a flyer, however, and in his letter claims that he can average thirty miles an hour from here to Fresno and forty miles the rest of the way. That is perhaps too high an estimate even for Morris.

Omar Toft, on the Simplex, the car entered by Mrs. Leotia K. Northam, has just returned from a fast run to the Bay City. This is one of the likely entrants. The Simplex is fast, and Toft is proving a heady driver. He is one of the men who is almost certain to figure in the inter-city motor fight.

T. J. Beaudette and Charles Soules have been spending the past week looking over the course. They used a Cadillac touring car for the trip and the machine has attracted much attention along the road. On one side is painted, "Cadillac No. 1," and on the other, "Cadillac No. 9." Soules is to drive "No. 1" in the race and Beaudette will be on "No. 9." This is the first trip Soules has made over the road. Both men are pleased with the conditions as they found them and say the road, while it is not a boulevard, is all right, and will permit some fast traveling.

Beaudette drove the car half of the way and Soules on the other half. On the return Beaudette drove that part of the road covered by Soules on the up trip, and Charlie took a whirl at that section driven by Beaudette.

These two make a team that will be hard to beat. They are generally liked and are among the first choices. Soules drove a Cadillac into second place in the last Phoenix race, and Beaudette has been prominent in securing road records for the Cadillac.

"The road was about as I had expected to find it," said Soules. "Out of Los Angeles the limit of speed is largely up to the car and the driver. At Newhall there will be a slowing down and through the canyon it is mostly up to the driver. I would not say that the battle will be fought in this canyon, but many a driver will get an awful jolt there. Beyond Elizabeth Lake there are treacherous places, that may bring grief to more than one car. The bad part of this road is that it is apparently smooth ahead when sudden chuck holes appear across the road and it takes driving to get across safely.

TEJON PASS.

"The Tejon Pass is about the same shape as usual. There are some fords and high centers, but with ordinary care a man should not have any trouble.

"Beyond Bakersfield the road to Delano is rough. All cars can make about the same speed and the man who tries to beat it over this road will have trouble. In the Porterville and Lindsay country the roads are good and wide open will be the rule almost all the way into Fresno. Beyond Fresno depends largely upon what is done to the State Highway that is being built now. If it is finished and the roads are open, great speed will be made."

"This was my second trip recently," said Beaudette, "and was for the purpose of hardening myself for the terrific grind and making a closer study of conditions. This will be a hard race for one man to drive, and a driver should have a fair knowledge of the road. Judging from the large number of cars we met on the road most of the entrants are out looking over the course."

CLEAN SWEEP FOR MERCER SAYS BENTIL.

George Bentil of the Simplex-Mercer agency, is planning to celebrate the remarkable victory of the Mercer at Indianapolis on Friday. When news was flashed over the wire that Spencer Wishart had won the honors over all other American-built cars, Bentil at once wired his partner, George Mackey, who is at Indianapolis, telling him to prepare for a real reception on his return.

"This means a Mercer victory in the Panama-Pacific road race," said Bentil. "We'll show them what the Mercer can do and we'll go out for first honors. The car is right. Proved it at Indianapolis. Now wait for the July 4 race and see what the Mercers and Simplex entries will do. Looks like a clean sweep.

In the Service.

VETERAN VOLUNTEERS HIS CARS FOR FIRING SQUAD.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

CAPT. HARMON D. RYUS, manager of the local Oldsmobile Company, is a patriotic Spanish-American War Veteran.

Last Memorial Day, a year ago, the captain volunteered his services and two of his Oldsmobile "Defenders," to the National Guard companies of this city for service in the observance of the day. A firing squad from Co. A, Seventh Infantry, N.G.C., was driven out to the cemeteries where graves of former members of the regiment are located.

The citizen soldiers fired over each grave and were later entertained at the Los Angeles Athletic club by the captain. In former years, the squad had reached the cemeteries by street car and it required practically the entire day to perform this military service. With the automobiles, the men were enabled to visit four cemeteries in less than two hours.

So well pleased with the appreciation shown by the members of the National Guard was Capt. Ryus that he decided to accept the Memorial Day event as an annual duty. Friday morning he met the members of the firing squad at the armory with two touring cars just after the services had closed at Central Park.

The men were again driven out to the cemeteries, where volleys were fired and "taps" was sounded over the soldiers' graves.

The guardsmen were then taken to the captain's club, where they were entertained at dinner. Capt. Ryus believes that there is nothing too good for the man who wears the uniform of the United States service, and he proved this to the men of Co. A for the second time Friday.

When the meal was over, the squad was driven back to the armory, and it was agreed that the same order would be observed against next Memorial Day.

"I want you boys to consider me obligated for this little act of service every year. It is to be our annual debt of love and respect to the memories of the men who once wore the uniform of our nation's service. I shall never be too busy to turn out with you and help you to perform your duties on Memorial Day."

There were no cheers. The feelings of the men were too deep for that. Each soldier saluted the veteran officer and then shook his hand in a manner which only the man who wears, or has worn, the uniform of his country could appreciate.

The cars glided away and the National Guardsmen went up to their locker-rooms and changed from their uniforms to the clothes which made them citizens again.

MAY ELIMINATE GEAR LEVERS.

RICE PERFECTS A MECHANICAL DEVICE WHICH LOOKS GOOD.

Quadrant on Steering Post Makes Possible Selection of Gears Without Use of Handles or Levers and Seems to Simplify Otherwise Complex Situation.

Percy F. Rice, a young inventor, of Tustin, is responsible for an automobile gear-shifting device which is attracting the attention of the leading automobile manufacturers of the country, among the more prominent of which is one of the largest factories in Detroit. Young Rice has a remarkable number of inventions to his credit, ranging all the way from an automatic job press feeder to a traction cultivator for orange orchards.

The new gear-shifting apparatus simplifies the driving of a motor car. The selector is a little inconspicuous level, which works on a quadrant placed on the steering wheel, and may be grasped between the thumb and forefinger. The driver presses his clutch out and then slips his selector to whatever speed he desires.

The body need never bend from its upright position in the driver's seat, the eyes never alter their range of vision, nor the hands ever leave the steering wheel. The present gear-shifting lever is done away with entirely. This refinement of arrangement will be appreciated especially by women who drive cars.

It is claimed that the Rice invention is different from any other attempted for the same purpose, in that it is absolutely mechanical in action. It is not automatic in any way; does not depend on electricity, compressed air, fluid or other uncertain mediums to accomplish its end. It works by direct action.

The device is inexpensive to install. Rice has run something over 1000 miles with the car on which his invention is installed, and from which the old system of gear shifting has been removed, and has always achieved perfect results under the severest tests.

Rice's patent attorneys have received word from Washington that their client's invention does not infringe upon any that has been heretofore recorded in the Patent Office.

MACKEY, SIMPLEX MAN, TO VISIT FACTORIES.

Charles Mackey of the Simplex and Mercer agencies has gone to the factories. He stopped off to see the Indianapolis speedway race.

Mackey will spend some time at the Simplex and Mercer factories studying the construction of the cars and learning the most minute details of the business. This is his first trip to the plants since becoming interested in the company, and he expects to gain considerable knowledge of conditions throughout the East.

On his return he will stop off in San Francisco, visiting the branch there for several days.

India may be covered in large part by automobile, according to the United States Consul in Bombay. The local taxicab company there is advertising trips as far north as Peshawar, and to the east as far as Calcutta. Nearly all the famous cities can be reached by automobile, including Madras, Lucknow, Agra Delhi, Cawnpore, Mysore and Benares. The best season is between October and March.

CHALMERS CAR ON LONG TOUR.

Needles Desert Worst Route for Tourists.

Swollen Colorado Barrier for Any Autoist.

Hub-deep Sands at Ludlow, Fierce Fight Follows.

That the Needles route is one of the worst that could be chosen for a trip across the continent is the report of C. W. Kimberley, who is making the journey in his Chalmers touring car. With Mrs. Kimberley as his only companion the two are now almost half way across the United States and according to the reports sent back to friends in Los Angeles they have nothing more to fear.

The swollen Colorado could not be forded at Needles. It was necessary to ship the Chalmers to Kingman in order to continue the journey as there are no roads and the river is bank full. The fight through the sands between Ludlow and Siberia was fierce and it was necessary to use two strips of canvas in order to secure traction in the soft silt.

"No one can fully understand the term desert until he has crossed the sands by way of Needles," writes Kimberley. "This route is fierce. It is one long fight all the way. We are out of it now but my advice to motorists is that they follow any other roads than the one by way of Needles."

Here is another argument strongly in favor of the old Santa Fe trail. The Chalmers man has had a chance to study the desert in the direction of the Needles country and he is disgusted. No such obstacles will be found on the southern trip.

OUR ROUTE.

The route by way of the Salton Sea to Yuma is not a boulevard but it can be crossed and the ferry is always in service at the Colorado on either the California or the Arizona side of the river. The sand is deep on the southern shores of the Salton Sea but from Banning to Mecca the going is good, and after the Mammoth Wash is passed there is little sand until Yuma is reached.

Then in Arizona the roads are fairly good. They are at least better than the imitation highways struck by the Chalmers driver. After Globe is reached in Arizona it is necessary to climb 10,500 feet into the Black Mesa hills, but at this season of the year the mountains are beautiful and the roads are excellent as the snow is all gone.

The journey of the Chalmers man is interesting. He tells all about his car, and he is not afraid to praise the touring Chalmers which has carried him over so much rough road. Reports will be received from Kimberley from time to time and he should reach his journey's end with his car in fine shape according to the letter he has sent to those who are watching the transcontinental run.

UNIVERSAL HAS MONSTER PLAN.

WOULD MAKE PLANT LARGEST TRUCK FACTORY IN WORLD.

Built on Scientific Principles the Trucks are Turned Out With Every Care That is Possible—Increase in Output is Desired Because of the Demand for This Commercial Car.

The Universal Motor Truck Company of Detroit, Mich., which is one of the youngest concerns to be introduced into the motor truck world, has established a system that has already been a benefactor to many business firms in their efforts to keep up with their competitors. It is one of the most businesslike and reliable motor truck propositions ever offered to the trade. While the Universal Motor Truck Company is a new concern, it is one of the reliable ones, having as its owners the men who have the great Schlitz Breweries in Milwaukee. It is the intention of these men to make their factory the largest motor truck plant in the world, and it is a surety that the innovation established by them will meet with even greater success.

The company's plant is one of equity. All that is desired is to select the truck, pay a small deposit and the balance on time. This would hardly be more than what would be paid if the truck were rented by the day, and the extra cost would be eliminated by the greater amount of transportation than could be done with horses. No extra charge is made by the company in selling the trucks on their credit plan, and the cost of the machines is no greater than other standard makes.

The Universal trucks are made from the best materials and are built upon scientific principles. They are claimed by their makers to be the equal of any other motor truck on the market. A machine of one-ton capacity costs $1950; a two-ton, $2800, and a three-ton chassis costs $3400. The bodies range in price from $150 up. Service stations have been established in Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Philadelphia.

George Kirkwood, the local Universal agent, is finding a good market for the product here. He says it is only a question of getting enough of the vehicles shipped to him. They are a good value and according to Kirkwood will in a short time be one of the popular trucks on the Coast. They recently received a shipment from Detroit and are now waiting for another before they may continue with the deliveries.

WESTGARD SCORES AGAIN.

A. L. Westgard, who located the Midland trail and who has made a number of transcontinental journeys, has accepted the vice-presidency of the National Highways Association. He is planning to make a physical examination of the trunk national highways proposed by the association and will soon make another journey across the United States in the interest of better roads.

HOW ABOUT LICENSES?

The constitutionality of State automobile licenses is to be tested by the American Automobile Association before the United States Supreme Court. Plans have been made for carrying the New Jersey test case to the highest court in the land. The New Jersey case was brought by the A.A.A. against the State, claiming double taxation in the form of property tax and license fee. The alarming increase of hostile legislation during the past few months, resulting in a howl of protest from motorists all over the country, may be considered as directly responsible for the renewal of the A.A.A.'s activity in the license constitutionality fight. For a time it was felt that the motorist should not complain at having to pay a license fee, and those who thought the principle wrong were not hurt by the small amount asked, and so kept fairly quiet. When the automobile began to be regarded as legitimate prey for the politician looking for more money for the treasury, however, some exceedingly energetic protests began to roll up.

FRANKLIN SIX IN NOVEL TEST.

Silvertown Cord Tires in a Demonstration.

Manager Voit Shows Hamlin Four Real Live Stunts.

Goes Forty-six Miles an Hour Around Sharp Turn.

Silvertown cord tires were put to a unique test on Wednesday afternoon when Ralph Hamlin, winner of the Phoenix road race, coasted down the grade near Hollywood and rounded a sharp corner at forty-six miles an hour without skidding. Then the Franklin man, not satisfied with the test, coasted for a mile, part of the way over level road, to an uphill finish with the Silvertown cord tires making good every minute.

With W. J. Voit, manager of the Diamond Rubber Company's branch, to conduct the test, Ralph selected a stock Franklin, the little six, a car weighing only 2950 pounds, as handsome a car as ever reached this city, and the smallest little six built. A. J. Straney, also of the Diamond branch, was one of the observers, and with F. O. Nelson and the automobile editor of The Times, this made a full load of five passengers, averaging 170 pounds to each man.

First the touring car was equipped with the Diamond fabric tires and the long grade on which the demonstration was to be made was selected. Starting from a given point the Franklin rolled away with brakes released and with the motor silent. As the car gained momentum Nelson anxiously watched the speedometer. The nearer the turn the faster the car speeded.

Used to twice the speed, Hamlin was not worried. With a lookout posted on the turn to warn any autoists of the danger from collision the five passengers were whisked down the smooth road to the sharp turn, which was taken at forty-three miles an hour. Then the speed of the car slackened and after crossing the bridge over the Los Feliz creek it came to a dead halt and the point was marked.

Then, whirling around, after using his self-starter to stir up his motor, Hamlin drove to the foot of the grade and from another given point started at fifteen miles an hour and increased his speed to nineteen and a half miles at the summit of the stiff climb, all on high gear. This was a good performance and Hamlin and the others declared they were willing to be shown, but expressed a doubt that the Silvertown cord tires could do better.

Then a fast run was made back to the Diamond headquarters and Manager Voit set two of his experts to work to change those fabric tires. The wrapped treads were removed and the Silvertowns were pushed into

FRANKLIN SIX IN NOVEL TEST.

Silvertown Cord Tires in a Demonstration.

Manager Voit Shows Hamlin Four Real Live Stunts.

Goes Forty-six Miles an Hour Around Sharp Turn.

Silvertown cord tires were put to a unique test on Wednesday afternoon when Ralph Hamlin, winner of the Phoenix road race, coasted down the grade near Hollywood and rounded a sharp corner at forty-six miles an hour without skidding. Then the Franklin man, not satisfied with the test, coasted for a mile, part of the way over level road, to an uphill finish with the Silvertown cord tires making good every minute.

With W. J. Voit, manager of the Diamond Rubber Company's branch, to conduct the test, Ralph selected a stock Franklin, the little six, a car weighing only 2950 pounds, as handsome a car as ever reached this city, and the smallest little six built. A. J. [illegible], also of the Diamond branch, was one of the observers, and with F. G. Nelson and the automobile editor of The Times, this made a full load of five passengers, averaging 170 pounds to each man.

First the touring car was equipped with the Diamond fabric tires and the long grade on which the demonstration was to be made was selected. Starting from a given point the Franklin rolled away with brakes released and with the motor silent. As the car gained momentum Nelson anxiously watched the speedometer. The nearer the turn the faster the car speeded. Used to twice the speed, Hamlin was not worried. With a lookout posted on the turn to warn any autoist of the danger from collision the five passengers were whisked down the smooth road to the sharp turn, which was taken at forty-three miles an hour. Then the speed of the car decreased and after crossing the bridge over the Los Feliz creek it came to a dead halt and the point was marked.

Then, whirling around, after using the self-starter to stir up his motor, Hamlin drove to the foot of the grade and from another given point started at fifteen miles an hour and increased his speed to nineteen and a half miles at the summit of the stiff climb, all on high gear. This was a good performance and Hamlin and the others declared they were willing to be shown, but expressed a doubt that the Silvertown cord tires could do better.

Then a fast run was made back to the Diamond headquarters and Manager Voit set two of his experts to work to change those fabric tires. The wrapped treads were removed and the Silvertowns were pushed into place in exactly fifteen minutes from the time the car arrived. That was a record in itself.

Back to the same spot the Franklin was sent and once more the motor was stilled, the brakes were released and the car began to coast down the smooth grade. This time Nelson enjoyed the sensation and Voit was too interested in his demonstration to make a comment.

Faster and faster the car moved until at the curve it registered forty-six and a half miles an hour, the fastest time a car has ever made on a curve without the motor in operation. The thrill was great, but the test was on. Not far ahead was the place where the Franklin had stopped when equipped with the fabric tires.

Hamlin rolled across the bridge with the car doing twenty miles an hour. Then Voit was pleased. He knew the former record of the fabric tires would be broken. The spot which saw the finish of the first test was passed with the Franklin moving along at a good clip. Then came the slight hill and the Franklin rolled up this grade to a point 489 feet from the stopping place of the fabric-equipped car.

This was a distinct gain and a remarkable demonstration. Then came the test of the return run up the hill. The Franklin had done good work with the fabric tires. Now for the Silvertowns. The foot of the grade was reached at fifteen miles an hour. The touring car jumped away and Ralph stepped on the throttle as hard as he dared. Instead of reaching 19½ miles the twenty notch was passed half way up the grade and when the car reached the crown of the hill it was doing twenty-eight and a half miles an hour, a gain of nine miles over the fabric tires.

Not even satisfied with this test, Voit had sent the fabric-tire equipped car up the back of West Second street to a point where a turn was made into Grand avenue. At the foot of the grade the car was started at twenty miles an hour, and dropped back to eighteen miles and after making the turn slowly, finished at four miles an hour on high gear. This with the fabric tires.

Now on the finish test Hamlin agreed to start with the Silvertown cords. He left the foot of the grade at twenty miles an hour, increased to twenty-eight miles, and finished, after making the turn, at twelve miles an hour. This on the Silvertown cord treads.

"These tires are speedier, safer on a curve, and are the best equipment we can offer," said Manager Voit. "This demonstration today was unique. It was even better than I hoped it could be. There are other things I wish to show you before we are through. It is my contention that I can show a saving of gasoline with the use of the Silvertown cord tires."

Demonstrating the Silvertown Cord Tire

To the Franklin man. W. J. Voit of the Diamond Rubber Company, proving to Ralph Hamlin, winner of the Phoenix road race, that he can avoid the danger of skidding and can at the same time make greater speed with the Silvertown cord tire than with the ordinary Diamond fabric tire.

NEW STEARNS HOME SOON TO BE READY.

The new Stearns building that is being erected for Smith Brothers on South Figueroa street has reached the second floor, and from present indications it will be ready for occupancy not later than August 1.

Orders have been given to rush the work in order that the special machinery that has been ordered for the electric department can be installed some time during July. Smith Brothers handle the Ohio electric and intend opening the largest electric depot in the West. In the new place it will be possible to charge fifty machines at once.

A device that will show the speed at which a truck or motor car was traveling at any hour of the day is proving of immense benefit to corporations that desire to keep tab on the speed of their machines. Practically all the companies operating trucks in Los Angeles have equipped their trucks with the Jones autolog. The Halliwell Company has been forced to order a large shipment by express to take care of the increased business.

This instrument enables the house managers to determine every day whether or not the truck drivers are working their trucks too hard or driving them too fast.

Finds Roads Good.

HARRISON DRIVES PEERLESS ON STATE HIGHWAY.

H. O. HARRISON drove from Los Angeles to San Francisco Thursday and Friday in a 1914 Peerless, and reports the roads between the two cities in fair condition for touring.

The Peerless agent is an enthusiast over California touring. He takes every opportunity of making this trip from the south in a car, and has made the run on an average of ten times a year for the past six years. No man in the State has a more thorough knowledge of the roads than Harrison. He knows every turn and condition.

A story to illustrate Harrison's wonderful road and direction instinct is told of one of his trips several years ago. He was making the run from San Francisco to Los Angeles and as the party was traveling without a stop the second night found Harrison somewhat sleepy, he curled up in the tonneau and went to sleep. He had been sleeping for several hours when the driver became uncertain about the road and Harrison was awakened. He looked around for a few minutes and said: "We are three miles from Calabasas." This proved to be the exact location, although there wasn't a house or landmark in sight to mark the place.

"The work on the State highway is progressingly rapidly," said Harrison. "All along the route we saw signs of the survey and in some places the work has started. This will be one of the most wonderful trips in the world when the highway is completed, and it is to be hoped that the State officials will see that ample provision will be made to take care of this road after it is completed.

"With a boulevard down the valley and coast California will be more of a motorist's paradise than ever before. At present a car must be kept rolling along to make the run in two days. With perfect boulevards the run will be easy.

"The good roads will also result in the savings of thousands of dollars in tire wear. Up to date the most work has been done on the valley road. Crews of men are at work and the work is being pushed so the road will be ready for the Fourth of July race."

City's Finest.

ABBOTT-DETROITS FOR MONTREAL FIRE CHIEFS.

THE city of Montreal, Can., has just recently appropriated funds and awarded the contract for eight high-powered automobiles for the use of the deputy fire chiefs of the city. The award of the contract was an unusual one inasmuch as they divided same equally between two competing automobile companies, although the entire eight cars are to be used for practically the same purposes and meet substantially the same specifications.

The Cadillac Motor Car Company of Detroit was awarded the contract for four of the machines and the Abbott Motor Car Company of Detroit a contract for the other four. Detroit-made automobiles have gained recognition throughout the world during the past few years as being especially well suited to the exacting requirements of city and government officials. The local companies mentioned above have both enjoyed a large business in cars especially equipped for fire, police, and government work.

The eight cars for Montreal are to be of the fifty-horse-power artillery roadster type and are to be painted fire red, trimmed in gold, and are to meet a test requirement providing for a speed of forty-eight miles per hour when fully equipped for duty, and are required to climb the hill through the main thoroughfare of the McGill University of Montreal, which is considered a very severe test for an automobile, on high gear.

Both companies have cars already in official service in Montreal and have made preliminary tests to the satisfaction of the city officials, thereby bringing to the Detroit companies the present contracts.

The Denver branch of the Midland Trail Association has issued a booklet, "On the Line of the Midland Trail," covering that portion of the trail in Colorado and Utah. The booklet does not attempt to be a log of the trail, and gives only a general description of the road through the two States. There are a number of excellent illustrations of the scenic beauties along the route.

Wins Again.

BUICK FIRST TO LAKE TAHOE.

CROSSES THE SNOWS AND WINS HANDSOME TROPHY.

Thrilling Run Into High Sierras Earns Honors for Handsome Car That is the Premier Nineteen-Thirteen Model to Reach Interesting Resort Among the Hills.

To the little Buick touring car belongs the honor of being the first 1913 car over the summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains to Lake Tahoe. The Buick now holds the handsome silver trophy offered each year by the Tahoe Tavern for the first car to arrive there by way of the Truckee Pass.

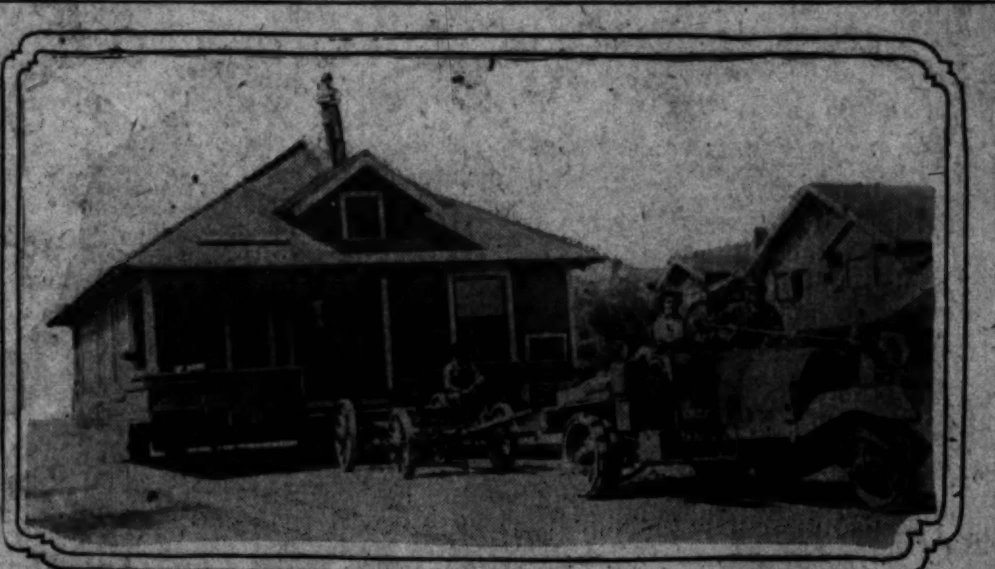
"The competition for possession of this cup has come to be keen," says C. S. Howard, head of the Buick Automobile Company, "and the mere fact that the Buick has won it for two consecutive years proves that the car can give as good an account of itself on top of fifteen or twenty feet of snow as on dry ground.

The little Buick was handled by Fred Gross and Claud McGee of the Howard Automobile Company. In speaking of their remarkable achievement McGee says:

"The road conditions below the snow line are good. In fact they are better than we have ever seen them. The grade between Colfax and Alta has ben widened and the sharp curves removed until it resembles a boulevard. The road around Donner Lake is also very good and from Truckee to Tahoe Tavern is as good a road as one could ask for.

"The State Engineering now has a gang of men at work shoveling out the worst drifts near the summit and the road should be open to touring parties in about three weeks. Those who anticipate making the trip within the nekt thirty days, however, had best communicate with B. L. Bliss, Jr., of Tahoe Tavern, who will be able to give reliable information regarding road conditions. Preparations are being made to resume work on the State road around Emerald Bay and the unfinished mile and a half will be completed about June 15.

"The completion of this road will enable the autoist to reach Lake Tahoe by Auburn, Emigrant Gap and Truckee and return via Tallac and Placerville. We recommend this route as it gives one the advantages of the easiest grades as well as the best scenery for the entire trip. We both feel that a good part of our success in covering the many miles of snow is due to our Goodyear no-rim-cut tires. After we struck the first snow we never had more than twenty pounds air pressure in them and in the worst places they were run absolutely flat and in spite of this hard treatment and abuse they did not give us one minute's trouble and show little, if any, effects of their hard trip."



Knox-Martin Tractor moving a house.

A new departure entirely. This home was removed from Forty-third and Main streets to Sixty-seventh and San Pedro streets in one day. The old man on the front porch is enjoying the ride.

KOEHLER TRUCK ONE OF NEW ARRIVALS.

One of the new arrivals in the commercial line is the Koehler truck, which is now on exhibition at the agency of T. R. Del Valle, No. 1312 South Grand avenue. The truck was designed by H. J. Koehler and L. E. Schlotterbeck. These men have been prominent in the auto truck world for the past ten years.

The designing of commercial cars is a business by itself. It differs from the touring car lines of work and is one of the most intricate propositions now put up to the automobile builder. One of the first trucks that Schlotterbeck designed was a monster ten-ton affair. Now he has dropped down to the 1600-pound Koehler.

His desire was to reach the middle man, the tradesman who needs a light delivery truck at a low price. He seems to have reached a number of local merchants by the demand there is already to inspect the new arrival, which has been on display for only one week.

The Koehler is a speedy, reliable truck. It is ideal for city use and also for out-of-town deliveries. Its capacity is 1600 pounds, but it will carry close to two tons. It is well known in the East and according to Agent Del Valle will soon be better known here.

KEROSENE AS FUEL.

Opinions still differ as to the practicability of kerosene as a substitute fuel for gasoline. While many men may be found who have been running on kerosene-gasoline mixtures for periods varying from a few months to several years, employing only standard carburetors, and others are in the field with special kerosene types, in which they manifest absolute confidence, there are still others who have been through their own experimental experiences, exhausted all resources that have come within the range of their vision, and who now declare that kerosene is almost, if not quite, impracticable under the limitations of present design.

On account of the great num trolley wires encountered on th it was a difficult task. United States Tires are good tires

How did you pick your car?

When you bought your car you didn't choose it because you happened to like the carburetor or because of its thick upholstery or even because of its famous motor.

You got right down to the bottom of the question. You compared various cars point by point until you finally found the car that came the closest to combining all the good points you wanted to find in your car.

Why not buy your tires in the same way?

Why not size up the various brands point by point and pick the tire that combines all those strong features that a good tire ought to have.

You want high mileage

You will get from 25 to 50 per cent. more mileage from United States Tires than any tire ever yielded up to the time the United States Tire Company was organized.

You want to avoid rim cutting

United States Dunlop Tires are the only tires ever guaranteed against it.

Air capacity and diameter are important

No tire ever made has a larger average air capacity or larger diameter measurements than the United States Dunlop. Get a few cross sections and prove it with your own eyes.

You want an easily manipulated tire

The round toe makes the United States Dunlop the most easily manipulated tire on the market.

But the prime essential is fabric strength

Strong fabric means not only high mileage but protection against blow-outs. By a process which we have perfected and control exclusively we have practically doubled the strength of United States Tires and reduced blow-outs proportionately.

These are the good points you want to find in your tires. They govern the size of your tire bills. Four-factory coöperative methods (used exclusively in the making of United States Tires) have enabled us to combine all of them in this one tire.

COAST RUN ON JULY FIRST.

Indiana Motorists to Follow Boone Lick Trail.

Start to Colorado Border Over The Times Route.

Los Angeles Goal of Cross-Country Motor Car Men.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—The route for the Indiana Automobile Manufacturers' Association tour from this city to the Pacific Coast was announced by the Tour Committee tonight. The entire trip between Indianapolis and Los Angeles will cover a distance of 3549.1 miles, and will be made in thirty-three days running, including five lay-over days. The average mileage per day will be 126.8 miles. The route was compiled by W. McK. White, tour chairman; W. D. Edenburn, assistant chairman, and J. M. Ward, Jr., secretary of the Association. It leads the tourists through eight States.

The tourists will depart from Indianapolis on Tuesday, July 1, running over the National road to Terre Haute, the first night stop. On Wednesday they will run to Springfield, Ill., via Paris, Chrisman, Tuscola and Decatur, and on the third day will tour into St. Louis over the Alton way, via Carlinville and Alton. On July Fourth the Hoosiers will start across Missouri, following the old Boone Lick trail and the new Missouri State Highway. St. Louis is planning a great celebration and it is expected that on July Fourth the interest in this section of the State will be enormous. The night stop will be made at Columbia, the University of Missouri town, and on July 5 the party will travel to Kansas City via Marshall and will cross the Missouri River either at Boonsville or Glasgow.

The first Sunday of the journey will be spent in Kansas City, and preparations will be made for the trip across Kansas and Colorado over the Golden Belt route via Topeka, and stopping at Ft. Riley on Monday night. On Tuesday, July 8, the party will be off on a 177-mile run to Ellis via Abilene, Salina, Ellsworth and Hayes.

The run on July 9 will be almost as long, covering 163.3 miles to Burlington, Kan., the night control, via Colby and Goodland. On July 10 the tourists will depart and stop at Limon, Colo., for luncheon. The trip to Colorado Springs then will be undertaken over the Lincoln Highway, the night being spent in Colorado Springs. A short run is promised for July 11, according to the chart of the routemakers. The run will be from Colorado Springs to Denver, a distance of 83.2 miles. The night of the eleventh and the following day and night will be spent in Denver, seeing the sights and resting up for the journey across the mountains.

The Midland trail will be followed from Denver to Salt Lake City. The tour will leave Denver on Sunday afternoon, July 13, and drive 88.8 miles to Hot Springs, the night control. The following day the route calls for 104.2 miles to Glenwood Springs, via Walcott. A trip of practically the same length is routed for July 15, bringing the cars to Grand Junction, a distance of 104.5 miles.

Two long drives then confront the Hoosiers. On July 16 they will cover 172 miles between Grand Junction and Woodside, via Mack and Green River, and on July 17 175 miles will be covered between Woodside and Salt Lake City, via the Nevada branch of the Midland trail, will be followed from Salt Lake City through Nevada.

A day's stop will be made in Salt Lake, the tourists spending the night of July 11 and the following day in the city. On July 19 the tourists will go to Ogden, making the only side trip on the journey. The trip has been planned on account of the intense interest shown by the people in that vicinity and preparations are under way for the entertainment of the Indiana men.

Bright and early on July 20 the party will be off around the south side of the lake for Kearney's ranch, where the night control will be made. A run of 124 miles has been planned for July 21, from the ranch to Ely. On July 22 the run will be made to Goldfield and Tonopah, a distance of 147.3 miles. Then comes the run to Reno on July 24, past Lake Tahoe. The route doubles back past Lake Tahoe and on to Sacramento, Cal., a distance of 179 miles.

The party should be in Oakland July 26, and nearing the end of its long journey. The route lies via Stockton, and the tourists will spend the night in Oakland.

The party will arrive at San Francisco July 27, where it will remain for the following two days. On July 30 the tour will start on the last lap of the journey to Los Angeles over the Coast road. The new Rincon cut-off will be used and then the tour will follow the plank road over the Pacific, which cuts off eight miles through mountain passes. The trip from San Francisco to Del Monte will occupy the day of July 30, the party passing through San Jose, Santa Cruz and Salinas.

The last day of July will see the tourists on their way from Del Monte to San Luis Obispo, via Salinas and Paso Robles, a distance of 149.9 miles. The next to the last day's run will be from San Luis Obispo to Santa Barbara, a distance of 119.6 miles. At noon on August 2 the tour will end in Los Angeles, 105.8 miles from Santa Barbara.

The route has been selected with exquisite care and nothing was done toward selecting any certain routes until a report on road conditions had been received by the Touring Committee. The work has been done exceedingly well and the entire route will be compiled for those who will make the trip.

Sixteen cars already are entered in the tour and it is expected that within two weeks the number will be more than doubled. The following cars have been entered in the tour: American, entered by American Motors Company. American, entered by D. S. Menasco; Henderson, Henderson Motor Car Company; Henderson, R. P. MITCHELL MAN HEARS REAL MUSIC IN HUM OF MOTOR.

IT HAS been left to Leo A. Pell to furnish a unique reason for the visit of a sales manager to the testing room of an automobile factory. Pell directs the disposition of the factory output of the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company at Racine, Wis.

He sometimes becomes weary with the interminable details of long distance telephone calls from insistent dealers and countless wires from traffic departments of railways, and elects to go to the room where the Mitchell six motors are given their horsepower tests by skilled workmen.

"It's a recreation to drill into the mysteries of amperage and voltage," says Pell. "It's music as entrancing as any Wagner and Gounod prepared the scores for to hear that motor humming. Employees may hold their ears and say that the din is too much for them, but I find the sound waves pounding upon the tympanums of my ears bring immediate rest to my mind.

"With a roar that cannot be duplicated on the race track by the speediest monster dashing off the laps at ninety miles an hour, the engine does 2000 revolutions. The exhaust flashes are like sheets of lightning. The matter-of-fact man who handles the carburetor nods to the electric experts who notes the sustained effort and marks the voltage and amperage on the indicators, after which the roar ceases.

"But I'm reflecting on 'Carmen.' Then comes the test at 1800 revolutions—the same kind of a roar and the incessant flashes of exhaust gases—that noise is transformed into the sound of music in Nanon. In turn the testers demand of that throbbing engine on the block, 1600, 1400, 1200 and 1000 revolutions per minute and I find 'Il Trovatore,' 'Lohengrin,' 'The Barber of Seville,' 'Hansel and Gretel' music pleasing my senses.

"It may sound strange, this linking of opera with the noise and heat flashes of a testing-room, but I am as certain of the psychology of a recuperated mental condition after spending some time in this factory inferno as Dante ever had in contemplating his triumphs.

"And then after resuming my work in the Mitchell-Lewis administration office I find myself swelling with pride over the factory's production of a motor that has so much life—so much power and energy—and am content to talk about the construction of those cylinders, the crank case and the efficacy of the valves and other mechanism that afford this engine its terrific power.

"In my mind's eye I see that engine straining at its work as it sends a Mitchell six through a western mudhole on a highway and hear the driver cheerfully call to his passenger, 'You can't find a bit of deep going too stiff for this powerful motor.'"

NON-STOP WORLD RECORD BY PACKARD.

World-wide interest has been aroused by an official non-stop run of 300 hours, which was completed Friday morning, May 16, by a standard "38" Packard motor. This is a new record, more than doubling the best previous run of 132 hours made four years ago in England.

It was announced as a 200-hour test by the Technical Committee of the Automobile Club of America, under the official observance of which it was held. At the end of that period, however, the motor was running so smoothly that it was continued in operation for 100 hours more. Throughout the test, coins balanced upon the test rack, proved the smooth running quality.

The motor maintained a constant speed of 1200 revolutions per minute. Measured in road performance, it pulled a "38" car with a full load, at a speed of 37.46 miles per hour over roads heavy enough to demand a wide-open throttle. In the 300 hours it rolled up a total of 11,238 miles, which is approximately half way around the earth.

The run was made with absolutely no repairs and with no adjustments except minor ones, allowed by the rules of the Automobile Club of America governing the test.

The motor tested was taken from a stock "38" Packard car, driven to New York from Cleveland by F. H. Trego, research engineer of the Packard Motor Car Company, Detroit. The test is the most severe ever given an automobile engine under official observance, the accumulated strain of much more than the average season's mileage being compressed within an unbroken period of twelve days and thirteen nights.

HERE'S HOT ONE ON A BASEBALL MAGNATE.

Some baseball magnates have had a reputation for being close, but it is doubtful that any club ever had the reputation which belonged to the old Boston Nationals when they were owned by Soden, Conant and Billings. That club had a youth named Schwartz, or something like that, playing second base. Schwartz started the season in Boston and lasted until some time in August. He had heard about Soden's aversion to giving passes, but as an average crowd in Boston that year was about 200, Schwartz thought there ought to be room for a friend of his, who went out to the park with him one day. So he went into the office and braced Soden for a pass.

"And who are you, young man," inquired Soden.

"Why, I'm a ball player," replied Schwartz.

"You don't say. And what is your position?"

"Second base."

"Might I inquire what team you play with?" asked Soden.

"Why, on the Boston team—right here," said the astonished athlete.

"You don't say so," ejaculated the magnate, adjusting his spectacles. "I don't ever remember seeing you before."

In the back of the old grand stand at Boston there was a telephone. An attendant watched this phone, and every time one of the club officials called a number he was charged with the call and paid for it at the end of the month.

One month the bill came in and after the books were balanced one call was not accounted for. The manager and players were sent for, but they denied having sneaked over that call. Soden, Billings and Conant, then went into executive session. Each was positive he had not called the mysterious number.

"This extravagance has got to stop," firmly asserted Soden, "tomorrow that telephone comes out."

WHITE SOX BEAT DETROIT IN ELEVEN-INNING GAME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 31.—Collins's double, a sacrifice and Weaver's single gave Chicago the long end of an eleven-inning game with Detroit today, 3 to 2.

The game was a pitcher's battle between White and Zamloch, with the former pitching the better ball in the pinches. White was backed with good support while the fielding of Cobb prevented the locals from scoring, when he made a running catch of a long fly in the tenth inning. Cobb was caught napping off first base one time, and again was caught stealing.

Capt. Harry Lord, of the White Sox, who was hit on the elbow in yesterday's second game, today started for his home in Portland, Me. He will rejoin the club in Boston on Tuesday. Score:

CLEVELAND, May 31.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] In a stirring ninth-inning finish Cleveland took today's game from St. Louis by 5 to 4. Leverenz held Cleveland to one hit in the first six innings, but weakened in the seventh and was replaced after four successive singles in the seventh had been made off his delivery.

Hamilton, who replaced Leverenz, allowed one more hit in that inning, allowing Cleveland to score its third run. In the ninth inning, five successive singles off Hamilton brought in the other two of Cleveland's runs, winning the game.

St. Louis hammered Steen hard and he was taken out in favor of Blanding in the sixth, after three runs had been scored in the fifth. Blanding was effective.

ST. LOUIS PROVES EASY FOR CINCINNATI TEAM.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, May 31.—Cincinnati took both games of a double-header with St. Louis today, the second game being a shut-out. In the first game Johnson held the locals to six well-scattered hits and won, 6 to 2. Greiner, pitching for St. Louis, gave twelve hits, four of which were bunched in the first inning for as many runs—enough to win the game.

In the second game Perritt was knocked off the mound in the second inning after seven hits had been made off him. Burk, who replaced him, did well in the seventh and eighth innings when three hits yielded the same number of runs. The score:

BOSTON, May 31.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] After Brooklyn had shut out Boston 2 to 0 in the first game of today's double-header, the two teams battled to a ten-inning tie with the score 3 to 3, when the game was called on account of darkness.

The first game was a pitcher's battle between Stack and Dickson, the former having the better of it.

The locals found Rucker in the fourth inning of the second contest for two singles and Mann's triple, which, with an error by Cutshaw, gave them three runs. Doubles by Smith and Stengel and a pass to Daubert netted Brooklyn two runs in the sixth and the score was tied in the seventh on a pass to Moran, Cutshaw's sacrifice and Wheat's single. Score:

POLO PLAYER HURT.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 31.—[Special Dispatch to The Times by Federal (Wireless) Line.] Devereux Milburn, the star player of the "big four" of the American polo team, was seriously injured in a practice game at the Meadow Brook Clubgrounds at Westbury, L. I., shortly before noon. Milburn's pony stumbled, apparently tripped by his rider's mallet, while galloping at full speed. The player was trying to block a hard drive by Foxhall Keene. Milburn's pony rolled over with the rider underneath. As the pony regained its feet Milburn attempted to get up, but fell back unconscious. It was found that his mount had kicked him in the head and chest.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

Extra Mileage
Without Extra Cost

A tire that can't rim-cut is worth to you more than a tire that does.

An oversize, with added air capacity, is worth more than a tire without it.

Yet No-Rim-Cut tires offer both these features without any extra price.

Lower Prices

No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than clinchers.

Yet they became, at an extra price, the most popular tires in the world.

Little by little, as our ouput increased, the price of these tires has been cut. Our last reduction was about 11 per cent.

Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires.

Compare Them

Compare these tires with hooked-base clincher tires. The clincher tire will rim-cut when wholly or partly deflated. This is the costliest tire trouble one has to contend with.

No-Rim-Cut tires were never known to rim-cut.

And these tires, as compared with clinchers, have one-tenth greater air capacity. That extra capacity, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Now at no extra price you get tires that can't rim-cut, tires with this over capacity. You get the tires which, in the test of time, have come to outsell any other, any other. Is it not worth while to insist on them.

COAST PLAYERS NEARLY ALL FROM BIG LEAGUES.

Speed and Experience Now Requisites of Athletes Who Want to Play in Our Back Yard—Youngster Must Be a Phenom to Break in, and Creaking Joints Are no Longer a Recommendation.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

WANTED—Men not too young to know baseball and not too old to travel in class AA company. Qualifications must approximate those of major leaguers. Apply to any Coast League manager.

That is the class of "male help" now sought by every Coast League club.

There was time when it was not [illegible] for a youngster to jump from the sand lots to a permanent berth in the Coast circuit, and when elderly gentlemen who had outlived their usefulness elsewhere could come West and wind up their career on our balmy diamonds.

But today the kid who would "jimmy" his way into a job here must be a phenom—a second Hal Chase, as it were, while the gent whose knees have begun to stiffen has a desperate time holding on.

"The Coast League is not a kindergarten for bushers, nor a home for old men," mused Del Howard, recently. "It is now one of the fastest minor leagues in the country."

BAUM SAYS IT'S TRUE.

True, every word of it. Further testimony along the same line:

"When I broke into the Coast I was a raw-boned youngster with some stuff and no knowledge of baseball, and yet I made good," soliloquized Spider Baum. "Fine chance I would have breaking in now if I didn't know more about baseball than I did then."

Hap Hogan here arose to remark that he concurred in these opinions.

"We require the finished article these days. The youngsters are given more chances to make good than they were in the old days, but fewer of them stick. Take the Venice club, for instance. It has been recruited bodily from the major leagues. Every man on it has been with some big league club, except myself, and I have never seen a major league game.

"In fact, every club in the circuit is composed largely of former major leaguers. Most of them are men still in their prime, and several of them are likely to graduate back into the big show."

A peek at the various Coast League rosters tends to prove Mr. Hogan's statement.

WHERE TIGERS PLAYED.

Take the Tiger pitching staff. [illegible] and Ferguson are former New York Giants, Koestner and Harkness are Cleveland graduates, Griffin played with the Cubs and Braves, Hitt with Cincinnati, Raleigh with the Cardinals and Stewart came to the Coast from the Chicago White Sox. Spider Baum was drafted by the Phillies but refused to report, preferring to [illegible].

At the other end of the Tiger battery, Elliott was with the Boston Nationals, Kreitz with the White Sox and [illegible] with the Boston and New York Americans.

Patterson saw service with the St. Louis Browns, later going to the White Sox. Brashear played with the Cardinals and Phillies. O'Rourke is an ex-Cardinal, Hoep was with Cincinnati, Speed McDonnell had the honor of belonging to the White Sox and Athletics at different times, and Litschi came to us from the New York Americans.

Carlisle played an engagement with the Boston Red Sox, Kane was with the Chicago Cubs during the years of their supremacy. Bayless tasted major league life in Cincinnati and Meloan played with the White Sox and Browns.

ANGELS SHOW CLASS.

A glance at the Los Angeles line-up reveals a similar state of affairs. Walter Slagle is an ex-Red, Charley Chech saw major league service with Cincinnati, Cleveland and Boston. Jack Ryan was his mate of the two latter clubs. Bill Tozer used to wear the Garry Herrmann colors and Crabb played with the White Sox and Athletics.

Dillon first-based in both big leagues, playing with Pittsburgh, Detroit and Brooklyn.

"Doc" Gill played several engagements with the White Sox, and Moore is a former Red and Cub. Page once wore the mask for the New York Americans, but later reformed and became a second baseman. Ernie Johnson was weaned away from the White Sox by Berry.

For several years Rube Ellis did his durndest to make a ball team out of the St. Louis Cardinals, and then gave it up. Maggert was once a Pirate, and played last season with the Athletics. How he managed to escape from the big show is something of a mystery.

ON OTHER CLUBS.

I am not familiar with the pedigrees of all the players in the league, but a cursory glance at the hostile line-ups reveals the following people with major league antecedents:

Portland—McCredie, Brooklyn and Baltimore; Higginbotham, Cubs; Carson, Cubs; Krapp, Cleveland; Krause, Athletics; West and James, Cleveland; Fisher, Cleveland and Yankees; Berry, Athletics; Lindsay, Cleveland; Chadbourne, Red Sox; Krueger, Cincinnati; Doane, Cleveland; Fitzgerald, Yankees.

Sacramento—Wolverton, Phillies, Boston and New York Americans; Arellanes, Red Sox; Stroud and Lively, Detroit; Munsell, Giants; Shultz, Phillies; Bliss, Cardinals; Tennant, Browns; Moran, Washington; Kinsella, Browns; Hallinan, Browns; Young, Yankees; Stark, Brooklyn; Shinn, Red Sox; Kenworthy, Washington.

Oakland—Malarkey, Giants; Killilay, Red Sox; Gregory, Browns; Ables, Cleveland and Yankees; Zacher, St. Louis and New York.

San Francisco—Howard, Chicago Cubs; Baker, White Sox; McCorry, Detroit; Spencer, Red Sox; Douglass, Corhan and Johnson, White Sox; Hogan, Athletics and Browns.

Doubtless some have been overlooked in the shuffle, but the evidence submitted is sufficient to establish the fact that the Coast League is some affair.

Angels Win Again.

[illegible] manner. They then essayed a double steal, and Elliott speared [illegible] at third. Rube opined that Umpire Van Cleef did him wrong in [illegible], and pouted at some length. Maggert's out landed Moore on third and he sailed home on Howard's hit to right.

TIGERS START LATE.

The Tigers did not sit up and take notice until the seventh. Dick Bayless, the man who made himself famous by hitting Crabb three times, opened this round with his second hit, a clean and unequivocal single to right. Crabb tried to catch him off first, but instead bounced the ball off the third link of his spinal column from the bottom. This caused him some anguish, and placed him on second. O'Rourke subsequently scored him with a nifty double to center.

Red Meloan, who has not appeared in games with great frequency of late, scored the other Tiger tally. He was sent in to thump for Elliott in the eighth. He flicked the ball a foot in front of the plate. Moore and [illegible] both made a bee-line for it and their enthusiasms brought them together with a jolt. Metzger muffed the ball in the entanglement, and Meloan didn't quit running until he reached second.

QUESTION DECISION.

[illegible] slashed the ball over [illegible] it appeared to kick up a spit of lime dust on the line, and [illegible] was so thoroughly convinced he had a double that it took some time to get him off second base, while [illegible] who had crossed the plate, objected mightily against being sent back. Umpire Finney insisted on these things, however, the ball, in his estimation, landing foul.

Lightning, they tell us, seldom strikes twice in the same spot, and Koestner, starting all over again, popped a foul to Metzger. Carlisle boosted to Howard. Kane walked. Bayless, one of the few men whom Crabb was unable to decorate with the Mojave medallion, skimmed a single through Johnson, scoring Meloan. Kane was nipped at third on an attempted hit and run that was a flat failure, Crabb detecting the plot and sending up a wide one to Hoep.

pathfinder was headed for Merced over the State highway via Oakland, Hayward, Dublin, Livermore, Tracy, Bridgetown, Manteca, Ripon and Modesto. With the exception of two miles between the end of the Dublin boulevard and the town of Dublin, which are bad, the roads are in fine condition to within eight miles of Modesto. From here to Merced, a distance of forty-seven miles, the State highway is now in course of construction and will be finished before the end of the present season.

To avoid this construction work, the National was turned east at Modesto for twelve miles to Waterford and there turned south again to Merced. This adds about ten miles to the mileage, but is a big saving in time until the highway is completed. Sunday morning N. C. Ray of the Merced Chamber of Commerce acted as pilot.

The run to Coulterville via Snelling, Haywards and Blanchard, a distance of 45½ miles, was made in a little more than three hours. The park boundary is twenty-nine miles from Coulterville. From Coulterville on the real mountain roads and scenery are encountered and while some of the grades are steep, there is nothing that should cause trouble to any modern car that is in fair condition.

Of course, there must be a certain amount of judgment and care used in driving over this road the same as must be used in driving over any road of this nature. From the park line to the Sentinel Hotel in the valley, a distance of about twenty-one miles, the road descends 2050 feet and as the descent is gradual it is hardly noticeable. There are a few sharp pitches on the grade, however, but if a little caution is used by the driver there will be no difficulty found in negotiating them. There is also a possibility that autos will be allowed to use the road which the owners of the hotel El Portal are building to connect the present Yosemite-El Portal road with the Merced grove of big trees which is located on the Coulterville road about two miles inside of the park line. This road is to be twenty-five feet wide and is built on an 8 per cent. grade. Its use would make the drive from the edge of the valley to the valley proper a very simple matter.

There are some few items of special equipment which are almost necessary to have on a car making the trip, and the several parts of the car should be carefully looked over. Cars which are not regularly equipped with an air pressure system on their gasoline tanks should have some way provided to pump air into their tank in case the gas line does not flow to the carburetor on the steepest grades. The car should be provided with an auxiliary air valve on the intake manifold with the control on the steering column. The air valve should be large enough to admit sufficient air to kill the motor and still leave the spark turned on.

In descending the ordinary grades it is advisable to put the car in second gear and open the auxiliary air wide, while on the worst grades it is advisable to use the low gear. Using auxiliary air and leaving the car in gear not only gives the advantage of using the engine as a powerful compression brake, but keeps it turning over and circulating the water and oil and allows it to cool gradually. The auxiliary air also allows one to give the carburetor more air as the elevation increases, thereby lessening the tendency of the motor to heat through having the mixture too rich in gasoline.

Another item of equipment which is a big factor in the matter of safety is a powerful electric alarm signal. If a car is equipped with such a signal and the signal is used properly collisions will be unheard of, and it also allows approaching vehicles to select suitable turning-out places on the grades, avoiding the necessity of backing to a place wide enough to pass.

The brakes should be carefully inspected as there are a number of short, sharp pitches and it is absolutely necessary to keep the car under control at all times.

Care should also be taken to see that the transmission and differential are properly lubricated. An extra supply of cylinder oil should be carried in the car and the gasoline tank should be filled at Coulterville on the road of that name or at Chinese Camp on the Big Oak Flat road. There are a number of places on this road, however, where accommodations and supplies may be secured. Merced, which will be the turning-off place for the Southern California cars, offers splendid hotel accommodations. The enterprising Chamber of Commerce of that town is making elaborate plans to take care of the rush of cars that undoubtedly will come as soon as the roads are opened.

FIRESTONE TIRES WIN.

First and Second Cars in Big Indianapolis Race Were Equipped With the Kind Handled by Barr.

R. D. Barr, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Firestone Tire Company, received a wire yesterday stating the cars which won first and second places in the Indianapolis race Friday were equipped with Firestone tires.

"I guess we got about all out of the race that the law allows," said Barr. "If everybody was as well satisfied with the result as I am, there would be another race within a month."

Three Releases.

received in the north. In the meantime, Berry and Dillon discovered that they had a surplus of first-sackers, with Moore and Howard at home in that position, and with "Pop" able to fill in when occasion demands.

The addition of Krueger will leave Howard free for duty at first base should Moore get his physical wellbeing punctured.

TOO MANY FIRST SACKERS.

Berry purchased Gill outright from the Minneapolis club last winter, plunking down a cool $100.. Gill is a sterling ball player, and was not "canned" because he did not measure up to the Class AA standard, but because the Angels happened to be surfeited with first basemen. Gill could easily have been sold or traded, but for the fact that he has a dental practice in this city, and refuses to play with any club which would necessitate a change of residence.

The Tigers are the only club with which Gill would consent to play, and it is not improbable that he may be added to the Venice payroll later. In case Maier and Hogan cannot find employment for him, he will devote himself exclusively to the art of tooth-carpentering, which in some ways has baseball beaten a city block as a means of livelihood.

BRASH AT FIRST.

Roy Brashear may blossom out today as a first-sacker for the Tigers. Patterson is in the throes of a batting slump. Hogan believes that Brashear's big stick could be used to advantage at this time. Brashear is not a stranger to first base, having played that position for the St. Louis Nationals "yars ago."

"By special reguest of the fans," Jack Ryan, author of a recent no-hit game, and a gentleman who wouldn't think of going into court for six cents, will pitch for the Angels this afternoon, according to an announcement made by Berry last night. It is probable that he will be opposed by Spider Baum, and that being the case, it should be some battle. Drucke and Tozer are slated for morning duty.

ONE PLAYER ARRIVES.

NEW YORK, May 31.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Lord Modehouse, selected as one of the two reserve players of the English team in the coming international polo cup matches at Meadowbrook, L. I., June 10 and 14, arrived here today. He believes that the English team has an excellent change of winning back the trophy. He went at once to the Piping Rock Country Club at Locust Valley, L. I., to join the team. Lord Wodehouse has had considerable experience in former play for the trophy.

Bench Awards.

TITLES AND HONORS GIVEN DOG ARISTOCRATS.

PRIZE lists on the semi-annual one-day open-air show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of Southern California were compiled yesterday by the secretary, Mrs. F. M. Connor, who pronounces the exhibit of more than 300 dogs the finest, on the whole, ever secured by the association.

Exhibitors and visitors from other localities bestowed encomiums upon entries, managing officials and judges.

Mrs. F. M. Fenwick of San Francisco, a loser in the competition between her great English Bull champion Kartoum and Champion Mackworth Bertie, handsomely expressed herself in a letter to the directors, complimenting the show on its high quality and stating that she would always recommended Los Angeles as the point where courtesy and fairness are assured visiting exhibitors.

Mrs. C. J. Lindgren of Burlingame, who adjudged the toy classes, states that fanciers of the bay district, who have been taught that no dogs were to be found in Los Angeles, would be disconcerted could they realize the number and exceptional quality of our local thoroughbred animals. She adds that, in her opinion, no better group of toys was ever exhibited than the eighty beautiful specimens which passed under her inspection.

No more open-air shows are to be given by the association, nor will one-day exhibitions be continued, says the secretary. The annual show is to be a three-day exhibition in the old post-office building, at the corner of Grand avenue and Seventh street, in this city, November 27-29.

AUTOS IN YOSEMITE.

For the first time since the setting aside for public use of the big Yosemite National Park, its roadways and driveways will be open to motor cars, Secretary Lane, of the Department of the Interior, having rescinded an order barring them from the national parks. In a statement explaining his action the secretary said: "This form of transportation has come to stay, and to close the national park against automobiles would be as absurd as the fight for many years made by old naval men against the adoption of steam in the navy. Before we know it they will be dropping into the Yosemite by airship. Some say the automobile is less picturesque than the stage coach. I think that depends entirely upon the imagination and the association of the stage coach with romance. After a time we will come to associate the automobile with it. For further justification of this view, see Kipling's poem, 'Romance is Dead, the Cave Man Said.' I want to make our parks as accessible as possible to the great mass of the people." An entrance fee, to be charged automobilists, will be added to the fund for maintenance of the park roads.

INDOOR TRACK MEETS TO BE STARTED HERE.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

THE followers of amateur athletics should be more than pleased with the announcement that indoor track and field meets have come to stay in Southern California. For many years we have been producing some of the greatest and best athletes in the country here, but have failed to maintain a high standard owing to the fact that the field was not wide enough. Now the first meet is scheduled for the evening of June 12, at the L.A.A.C.

In the past, track and field sports have been confined to the college and High School athletes almost entirely, as these men were the only ones with any opportunity to train and with a place to practice. Of course, the local varsities have made some great records and have turned out some splendid examples of athletic perfection.

However, as soon as the intercollegiate and interscholastic seasons come to a close here the High School and the college men at once drop training and enter other lines of sporting activity.

Now the Track and Field Committee of the L.A.A.C. has planned a meet, open to club members, just to try out the indoor feature. If this meet is a success, dual games will be arranged with the Olympic Club of San Francisco and the other northern organizations throughout the summer months, and probably in the fall.

There are any number of good athletes in the club, who have either just graduated from college or who have attained a certain amount of perfection, while training in the club, and it is from this field that most of the contestants are to be selected.

There is a goodly number of Stanford and California men, who are anxious to keep up their training, while there are some good men from the local colleges, who wish to compete for the same reason.

Of course, there are a few athletes who are at the present time in college, but who wish to take up the indoor sport, in order to become better all-around men.

It will be interesting, in the coming meet, to watch the progress made by men like the famous Kelly of U.S.C., Faldo Throop, U.S.C.; Berger, ex-U.S.C., and Ira Courtney, also U.S.C.

"Bo" Wilson, the spectacular Oxy pole vaulter, is also entered. Millsap, former Stanford star, is counted on for a good showing in the 300-yard dash and the relay.

The programme offers a wide variety of sport and it is to be hoped that the amateur fans of the south will give the meet their hearty support.

Why An Underslung?

AN UNDERSLUNG automobile carries its frame below the axle. This type of construction presents certain advantages with which the intending buyer of a new car should become familiar.

Underslung construction is the safest construction known. The weight of the car is carried well within the wheels and nearer the ground. At the same time there is ample and even clearance. Nothing hangs below the frame. The vital parts of the car are protected. "Turning turtle" becomes impossible—skidding is reduced to the minimum.

All Regal Underslungs possess these advantages and many others. So well established is their type of construction that it deserves the careful consideration of every buyer. We ask you to see and ride in one of the Regal cars. Examine them at the local show room.

All Leading Makers of Electric Cars Have Adopted Motz Cushion Tires

After four years' ceaseless experimenting with every conceivable tire, makers of pleasure electrics have come to realize that the Motz Cushion Tire is best. All leading electric car makers have adopted the Motz, even though it costs them more than other tires. They want to give their customers trouble-proof cars. And they don't want tires that allow their cars to be jolted and pounded to pieces.

Thus the great majority of electric owners now use Motz Cushion Tires.

Thus the demand for these tires has increased ten-fold in two seasons.

Only the man or woman who won't or doesn't investigate Motz Cushion Tires continues to use treacherous pneumatics or hard-riding solid tires.

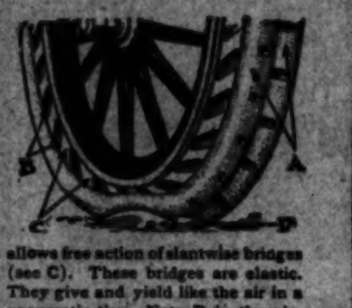
Amazingly Resilient and Easy-Riding

New users are simply amazed at the comfortable riding qualities of Motz Cushion Tires.

None of the jolts, jars and bumps that solid tires give. Riding at night, one could not tell whether his electric were Motz or pneumatic-equipped.

The ingenious application of a mechanical principle made these tires possible.

The double, notched treads (A in picture) prevent skidding and distribute the weight to the sides. The sides are undercut (see B), which allows free action of slantwise bridges (see C). These bridges are elastic. They give and yield like the air in a pneumatic tire. Note D in the picture, showing shock-absorbing qualities when tire runs over a stone.



Utmost Economy

These tires end punctures, blowouts, tire repair bills and the carrying of extra, emergency tires.

And when it comes to mileage, no other tire is to be COMPARED. We actually GUARANTEE each set of Motz Cushion Tires for 10,000 miles—two years!

What more could one ask of tires?

You can get more for your money in a "40" this year than in any other class of car. But the Michigan "40" offers more than all others.

GOODRICH TIRES

Best in the Long Run

Smashingly Popular Because of Their Lasting Value

There are forty-three years of experience in rubber manufacturing in every Goodrich Tire.

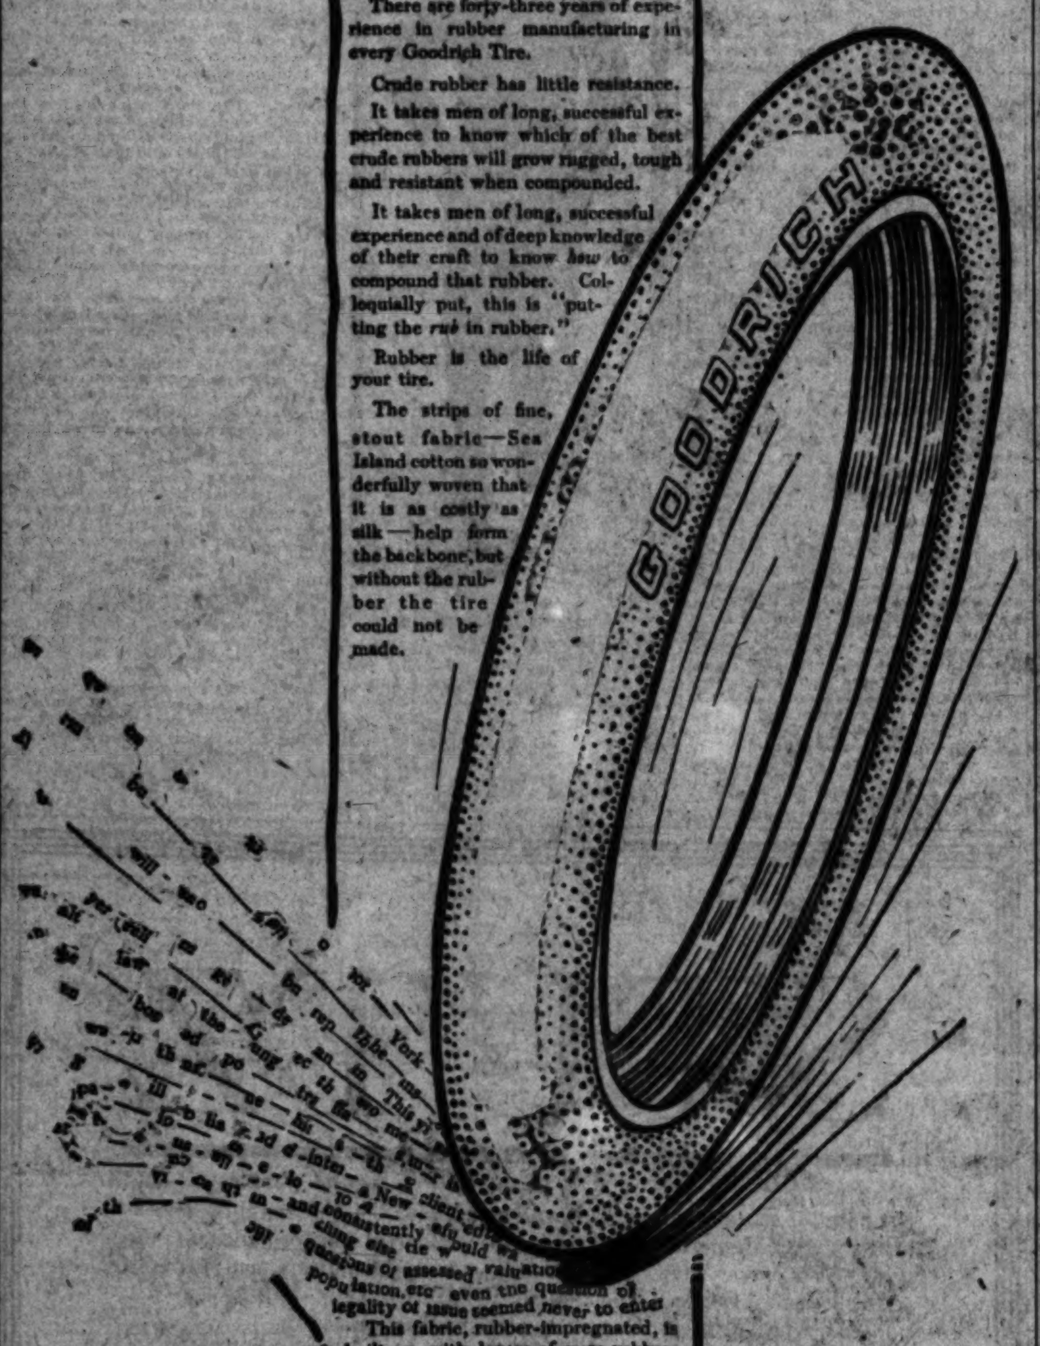
Crude rubber has little resistance.

It takes men of long, successful experience to know which of the best crude rubbers will grow rugged, tough and resistant when compounded.

It takes men of long, successful experience and of deep knowledge of their craft to know how to compound that rubber. Colloquially put, this is "putting the rub in rubber."

Rubber is the life of your tire.

The strips of fine, stout fabric—Sea Island cotton so wonderfully woven that it is as costly as silk—help form the backbone, but without the rubber the tire could not be made.



GOODRICH
New client and consistently questions of assessed valuation population, etc. even the question of legality of issue seemed never to enter

This fabric, rubber-impregnated, is built up with layers of pure rubber, into the backbone of the tire. The sides are reinforced with strips of rubber, making the body strong where the strain will come — eliminating the chance of rim trouble. The tire is finished with the thick, tough Goodrich tread.

This is the specially compounded rubber which must meet the grinding, wearing, bumping, bruising contact with the road. And it does it.

All of this—backbone and tread, side-strips and bead—is converted into a one-piece tire in the Goodrich unit molding.

Our principle of unit molding was the crystalization of our twenty-seven years of experience with rubber before we made the first American clincher tire. This principle demonstrated its exactness at the start; we have never changed it.

In our unit molding the tread and body become one—a unit.

The tread being of the tire, and not simply put on it, naturally does not peel nor strip.

Water and dirt cannot creep under it to ruin the tire and place you in danger.

The whole tire being a unit, you are insured long, uniform wear. You are free from the risks caused by weak spots and dead places from over-vulcanizing which cooks the life out of rubber.

If you were to study a cross section of a Goodrich Tire you could not detect a layer line or separation. It isn't there. Our unit molding has unified the whole tire.

Your tire dealer will supply you with whatever style of Goodrich Tire is best for your needs—but they are all one kind and quality.

Write for our free folders which tell you how to get the most and best service from your tires by avoiding the common causes of injury.

Red Crown

The Gasoline of Quality

Do you distinguish between the Price of Gasoline and the Cost of Gasoline?

The first is cents per gallon. The second is cents per mile—the real, the actual cost.

Automobilists who consider this final cost of gasoline are using Red Crown. They find that it gives them least trouble—most power—greatest mileage; that it is cheapest in the end.

Red Crown is not a mixture, but a homogeneous, straight distilled refinery product. It is always uniform, always reliable. It does away with those repeated adjustments of the carburetor. Clean—scientifically made—a product of long experience.

FAMOUS HAS-BEENS NO. 10.

Was Rated as Highest Salaried Amateur Athlete in the Business During His College Days—Went to Olympic Games to Put Shot for Illinois Athletic Club and Taught Boxing in Paris.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

IN THE army of once great athletes a big Dutchman who bears the label of Rheinschild, holds down a job in the front rank of the first squad of the Color company.

He used to be the great "Rhiney," and was known from coast to coast as one of the most eminent gridiron warriors ever enticed under the Michigan colors. At one time "Rhiney" was rated as the highest salaried amateur athlete in the business, and he had standing offers from a number of those colleges where football reigns, of sweet sums for his services.

Now the big fellow sits behind a door on which "Walter M. Rheinschild, Attorney at Law, is whitewashed, and frames up plays which get some people out of trouble and put others in Dutch, mostly. The lawyer has not taken any active part in athletics during the past few years and some people say he is one of those "rising" legal guys.

"Rhiney's" football instincts were awakened way back in the '90s, when he joined the Boyle Heights Stars. The Stars played high-grade, kid football; and "Rhiney" was the brightest twinkler of the bunch. They beat the Westlakes, took the count over the Horse-shoes and trimmed the Hill Tops. This gave them the "scrub" championship of the city.

In 1900 Walter oared his way into fast company. He took on with L. A. High School.

While with the kid elevens, the big Dutchman had always played at full, but Gene Demens had that job leased at L. A. High and "Rhiney" was jumped in at tackle. It was a great team. Monk Morgan was at center, Les Henry was the "keyno" man and George McLain, the captain, was stationed in the other tackle gap.

The members of the squad kidded the overgrown "scrub" so much that he finally quit the eleven after he had made a berth. He could not be persuaded to come back on any terms.

It was in 1901 that "Rhiney" really arrived. He played a tackle on the High School team and the eleven had a big year. Belmont was tied for the State interscholastic championship, after all the Southern California High Schools and colleges had been put out of the way.

Pomona was touched up at the rate of 30 to 0, U.S.C. was smothered with a 28 to 0 result. 32 to 0 did for Occidental and poor old St. Vincent was outclassed to the tune of 95 to 0. Some big year for fair.

Walter Rheinschild,

The great Michigan football star as he appeared during his first year on Yost's scoring machine.

The fall of 1902, brought a new crop of athletes to the High School. Phil Cass relieved Monk Morgan at center, Frank Cass staked himself to a line occupation, Gene Demens willed the full-back business to his baby brother, "Bab," Nast and "Nutty" Ortwan, broke into the back field and the ends were inherited by Walter Hawk and the little fellow who is now Dr. Boyer of this city. Garth Ferguson, Les Henry, and "Rhiney," were the only members of the old guard who remained on duty.

The preps enjoyed another successful season. Throop was the first victim, 28 to 0, was about all; and Occidental was treated to a 22 to 0 walloping. Pomona checked the bet and U.S.C. held the youngsters to one lone touchdown and considered themselves lucky at that.

The reverse "English" was put on in 1903, to a certain extent. This was "Rhiney's" last year and the colleges were beginning to warm up to him, but he could not sight 'em a-tall. Elwin Caley put a drop-kick over from the forty-something-yard line and the long portion of the score went to U.S.C., and the game ended in a near riot, on account of a decision dished out by Dean Cromwell.

Pomona College had Walter Hempel that year and, incidentally, a real eleven. The final score of the Pomona engagement, showed the High School boys' account to be just forty-two chips overdrawn.

High School had too much stuff for Occidental, though, and Throop, together with various and sundry other lesser institutions, were sadly mutilated. The season ended with the game with Berkeley High School, for the State championship, which L. A. High won, 11 to 0.

Frank Kidder, who is now Dr. Kidder, got the ball and started down the field, with the northerners trailing like the foam after a ship. He was running like a truck horse, according to "Rhiney's" way of thinking, so the big Dutchman aided him to fuss over the line, just out of reach of Jimmy Schaeffer, the great Rugby coach, who was then playing on the Berkeley High team.

Rheinschild organized the first track team at L. A. High the following spring and resigned the captaincy in favor of Horace Donnell. He put the shot and established a new Coast record. He also ran the hundred and came in second to Parsons in one race. "Rhiney" caught on the baseball team one year and organized the athletic association which has run all athletics ever since. He was president of his class and of the Star and Crescent.

When Walter graduated in 1904, he was queened by Harvey Holmes, the U.S.C. coach, quite strenuously; but it was nothing but the big league stuff for Rheinschild. "Rhiney" says that Holmes made him an offer of $75 a month for his services.

Wisconsin was the next to get on the big fellow's prospects. Holmes recommended Wisconsin and soon an offer was forthcoming from Wisconsin, according to "Rhiney," which was $25 better than Holmes's own bid.

"Twelve hundred looked big to me," says Rheinschild, "but I wanted a winner. Wisconsin had been a joke for many seasons and I couldn't see it."

"Shorty" Roach, former coach at at L. A. High, happened to be one of Yost's friends and a Michigan scout on the side. He tipped the "Hurry-up" coach off to "Rhiney" and then began to talk Michigan to the prospect.

The Michigan Alumni Association also got busy; and the result was, Rheinschild for Michigan.

Several telegrams came from the Wisconsin management but they failed to interest the star. California made a bid for him, and he was really at Berkeley, but it was not far enough away from home to suit him, so to Ann Arbor he went.

When he showed up at the hotel and hitched his John Henry to the register, some wise rah-rah boy piped it off.

"Say. You are not Rheinschild, the football player from California, are you? Hell, you were expected to be a big man."

The new arrival informed the jury that he was it; but explained that he had been ill for a month, and was of course about a ton under weight. He only weighed 182 at the time, and that season the only man on the Michigan eleven who weighed less than Rheinschild, was Norcross, the quarter-back.

News of "Rhiney's" arrival, was spread all over Ann Arbor in a short time and he was visited by Michigan men in chunks and bunches. He liked that sort of thing, too; he was only a kid and it was big league stuff.

The next morning a delegation came down from Dartmouth to do business with the California lad. "Rhiney" says that they kept raising their bid until he was offered $2200 for the year's work on the football field. He stayed at Michigan, though, and he swears by all that is swearable that he never received a cent from his Alma Mater for his athletic contributions.

When he turned down the Dartmouth offers it looked as if he was signed for a Ty Cobb salary at Ann Arbor and the eastern papers came out with many articles which insinuated as much.

It was rumored that he was getting as much as $50,000, a year at Michigan. They said that every game he played was worth hundreds of dollars, and every step he took on the football field during the season was worth the price of a drink and a cigar.

"Rhiney" played in thirteen out of the fifteen games played by Michigan that season and scored 210 points out of the 524 totaled by the entire eleven. He went out for fullback on the freshie crew, but was taken off the baby squad and put with the 'varsity, where he stayed, playing fullback all season.

That was the last year that freshmen were allowed to compete on the varsity teams and Rheinschild maade the most of it. He ran the sprints in the indoor games that winter, put the shot with Ralph Rose, and on the ball team in the spring.

That was a big hitch for Mich She beat Chicago 28 to 0, scori to 0 against Wisconsin, 42 to 0 ag Illinois and trimmed the Carlis dians, 22 to 0. She also won her baseball series from Illinois.

Rheinschild was mentioned on eral all-American selections and put on the all-Western eleve many critics.

In 1905, Longman went to full "Rhiney" was switched to ta That was the year Chicago won game 2 to 0, when Clark, the half, crossed the wires and was th for a safety. Wisconsin was t over for an 11 to 0 beating, B was cleaned 130 to 0, and ag West Virginia Yost's boys ran u largest score in the history o game, which was 160 to 0.

In 1906 a wave of athletic swept over the country and the ulty refused to allow Rheinsch play, for appearance sake. Sc and Schultz, two other po Dutchmen, were also kept o sidelines. "Rhiney" assisted Y with the coaching and did some room work for a change.

The next fall "Rhinty" got back the game again at full and Michigan laid off the Conference year, and Yost's scoring machin business with Vanderbilt, Notre D Wabash, Ohio State and several bush outfits, but Pennsylvania w too much for Michigan.

The final score was 6 to 0; was afterwards decided that Mi gan's forward pass was legal and score should have been a 6-all Rheinschild was given All-We tackle, and was mentioned for A America honors.

After football season, the Calif boy put in his time with the and graduated in law in the spring '08.

After taking his degree, he wen London and represented the Athletic Club in the Olympic Ga held at Shepard Bush. He wa of the "also there" guys with shot, and after the games he wen Paris, where he taught the eaters" how to box for a few m

He then went to Germany, w he organized an athletic club, d some Old German Brew and few old castles. When he arrive New York, he got a job escortin flock of prisoners across the cont to Mare Island.

The first thing that offered was a coaching berth at Washi State College. "Rhiney" took tied for the State championship, ting over a 6-to-6 score on hi captain, who was then coaching Oregon Aggies.

The next year Rheinschild co St. Vincents' football hopes and the California championship by ing U.E.S., a stunt which the Ca lic team had never done before.

Athletics as a profession fail enthuse "Rhiney." The last gam the season in 1909 ended his career.

The old boy selected a law offi the Security building, a set of and went to work to develop a pr tice. He has been hitting the ever since, but says college athl do a great deal for many fellows need the money.

The most sensational incident connected with the Indianapolis Speedway race, Memorial Day, was the wonderful performance of the STUTZ cars. They were the only wholly American made cars to give constant battle to the famous French winner.

This proves their strong, sturdy construction.

EDDYTORIUL

Once more we take our editorial pen in hand to indite a red hot eddytoriul in complaint about the poor way the streets of Bingville is lighted at nights. We have been complaining about this for the past 7 years, and it hasn't done any good, but we are not discouraged—we shall keep right on complaining until steps is took to illuminate the main street of Bingville at night so that a person who happens to be walking along said street can see where they be going.

It is a shame and a disgrace and a blotch on the fair escutcheon of Bingville that we have such poor street lights. It is a refleckshon on us as a municipality in general and a refleckshon on our town government in particular.

At present there is only one good street light in Bingville and that is the one whitch stands on the square in front of the P. O. The light which stands in front of Cy Hoskins' residence farther up the street ain't been lit for a year to our certain knowledge principally for the reason that there ain't no wick in the lamp. The remaining other light at the South End of Bingville is also in darkness some fiend in human form having stole the lamp for his own personal use likely.

This is a nice record for Bingville, ain't it? What will outsiders think of us? Only last week there was a piece in our contemptuous contemporary, the Hardscrabble Banner, to the effeckt that Bingville could afford only one street light and if Bingville had enough such lights as that one, the town would be in much more totaller darkness than it is with the one light. Are we a going to be made the laughing stock of the whole entire county because we have got only one street light? We pause for a reply.

At present it ain't safe for a person to go out on the streets after dark unless it is moonlight being as they are liable to be lost or fall and break their fool neck because they can't see where they are a going.

Only one night last week Cy Hoskins, one of our most esteemed citizens, started to walk home in the dark from the P. O., where he had went to see if there was any mail for him, and turned when he thought he had got as far as his house and went up on the front piazzer and knocked at the door for his wife to let him in and presently there was a winder went up upstairs and a woman asked in a trembling voice who he was.

"This is Cy," said Cy, "Hurry up and let me in!" Then the woman at the winder said she was surprised at him and he ought to be ashamed of hisself and she'd tell his wife on him and slammed down the winder. Then Cy realized that he had knocked on the residence of Miss Polly Woods, one of the most respected maiden ladies of Bingville by mistake. Next morning Miss Woods told Mrs. Hoskins all about it and Cy has been busy trying to explain to his wife ever sinst how it happened and a scandal has almost resulted because Bingville wasn't lit up.

Whose duty is it to look after the lights in Bingville? Then let them attend to it. Bingville can never hope to take her proud place among the growing and thriving metropolusses of this country until she can afford street lights. Let us have light!

Items Here and There

Read the advertisements in this issue of the Bugle. You may see something you want and you may not, but it won't do you any harm to read them.

Dave White, our popular undertaker, is on the track of a new subscriber for us. We have offered Dave a commission of 25 cts. on every new subscriber he gets, and being as business in his line is very dull at the present time and no prospects of the Grim Reaper visiting our midst in the immediate future, Dave has considerable leisure time on his hands to look up new subscribers. He is fully authorized to canvass for same.

Hame Wilkins desires us to make a correction concerning a item which we printed about him in the Bugle tother week. We said Hame sprained his ankle. Well, it wasn't his ankle—it was his back. We make this correction with great cheer.

Miss Tabitha Underwood who is one of Bingville's handsomest and most accomplished young ladies, being a expert performer on the melodeum, visited her aunt, Mrs. Jim Harper, last week, who lives across the street from her.

Joe Hines made a flying trip to the Co. seat one day last week on business & plesure, but Joe said the mud was so deep that all the pleasure he got outen the trip he could put into his eye.

Abe Witherow of Snake Bend passed through Bingville last week. He stopped long enough at this office to let us know he was in town. Abe always likes to see his name in the paper.

Silas Osgood of Hardscrabble called at this office one day last week and subscribed for the Bugle, paying a week in advance. This was considerable of a surprise to us. He tells us that he has stopped the Hardscrabble Banner and is going to try the Bugle for a while. It is strange to us that more of their subscribers do not do this.

Widow Skinner had a new henhouse built last week. Lem Brown, our expert carpenter, done the job for her. See Lem's advertisement in another column.

Births

This week we a nounce with pleasure that Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hicks are the proud possessors of a 10-lb. baby boy. The new arrival is a little undersized for a Bingville baby, being as they usually run about 12 lbs. hereabouts, but as Bill says: "The young un will weigh that if you give it time enough." Doc Livermore, our human spechulist & veterinary, was present on the occasion in his official capacity. Doc is real handy to have about in a case like that. Bill is setting up the seegars we understand, although we have received no smoke as yet.

Dozed Off

Deacon Butterworth went to sleep during church service last Sunday morning and let his head fall forward, striking the pew rail in front of him and suffering from a contusion above the left eye. This woke up the Deacon, who says "gosh blame it!" in such a loud voice that everybody in church heerd it and begin to snicker.

Rev. Samuel Moore, our beloved pastor, paused in his discourse and said that the good brother's words was very unseemly ones to utter in that sacred edifice. Then the Deacon grabbed his hat and went home madder'n a wet hen. It is roomered that he is a going to take his name offen the church roll and join the Hardscrabble church.

News Left Out

There are some news which we didn't get into the Bugle this week owing to a scarcity of type. We wanted to mention something about Hod Quigly purchasing a yoke of oxes from Snide Peersby, consideration $40. Also about Mrs. Jerushy Perkins being on the sicklist. We further desired to state that Amri Haines greased his harness and Jed Peters, our intelligent school teacher, is going to hold a spelling bee in the school house some time in the near future, but owing to the scarcity of type as we said before all these news must be suppressed.

Carpenter Work a Speciality!

This is to let you all know that I have purchased several new carpenter tools and am now in a position to do anything in the carpentering line which you may desire. Work done at short notice either by the job or day at reasonable prices.

Estimates given with great pleasure. I am very handy with a saw and hatchet, as the work which I have done in Bingville and vicinity also in the past, proves. You can see samples of my carpentering in many places hereabouts and it speaks for itself.

Making henhouses and shingling roofs a specialty. If your roof leaks, why live under it? See me and I will shingle your roof for you at $1.50 per day and board, you to furnish the shingles.

I am also very handy at fixing up old chairs so that they are safe to set on. Because a chair has a leg broke off don't throw it away. Let me fix it for you almost as good as new.

I can also make clothes chests to keep clothes in where the moths won't feed on them and such like. During my leisure hours I have whittled out several dozen of clothespins which I now offer to the public at the ridiculous price of 25 cts. per doz. If you are needing clothespins see me. Anything in the carpentering line executed with care and attention. All I ask is a chanst.

BEAVERS DEFEAT SEALS IN TIGHT-FITTING GAME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Again the Beavers were in their winning streak and took a pretty 2 to 1 game with little effort, with Hi West high man over Thomas, who twirled for the Seals.

It was a great day though a bit windy. The Seals scored their only run in the first inning on Mundorff's double and some wobbly fielding. Mundorff lead off and walloped West for two bases down the right field line. Charles was safe when Derrick dropped West's throw, Mundorff taking third. Johnston flied to Krueger, Mundorff scoring after the catch. West then made a bad throw to catch Charles and the runner took second. Zimmerman fanned. Charles was out trying to steal third, Berry to McCormick.

Manager McCredie expects Coulson, the new outfielder from Kansas City, to arrive tomorrow. Coulson has been hitting in great style so far this season and McCredie expects him to be a valuable addition.

WOLVES SLAM OLMSTEAD AND EASILY BEAT OAKS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Wolves turned around today and won, 6 to 1.

Having waited all the week for something to happen, they faced Olmstead, warm-up pitcher in chief for the Oaks, and having nursed a grouch since the opening day, they took it out on Henry. Olmstead, whose ordinary stunt is relieving pitchers who have proved unsuccessful, was granted the opportunity of starting the game. And this time he reversed conditions. Instead of finishing, he started and to Buffalo Bill Malarkey was assigned the task of taking the game in hand when it was as good as lost.

It was the inability to hit the Sacramento twirler, aided and abetted by support that was particularly fine at all times, which gave the boys from the capital city a good lead.

Olmstead had men of the Wolves on the bases in the first two innings, but he was fortunate in catching the boys off the bases and worked along for three innings without serious trouble. Hallinan led off with a single to right field and Jimmy Shinn laid down a bunt sacrifice. Van Buren walked, but was forced at second by Moran. The latter stole and with the game in that shape, Tennant drove out his long single against the fence, netting two runs.

Another tally came in the fifth. Jack Bliss started the trouble with a single to left and Stroud bunted toward first for a sacrifice. Kenworthy leaned the ball against the right field fence and later circulted the bases.

It was practically cinched for the Senators in the seventh. Bliss ripped the ball over the infield to center and Stroud followed with a short center-field swat that Zacher couldn't quite reach. Kenworthy's third hit of the afternoon scored Bliss and left Stroud on third. Hallinan hit into a double, but Shinn was walked and Van Buren put the ball to center field while two more made the rounds.

Oakland's run-getting was limited to the seventh. Coy grounded to second, but Hetling hit a fast grounder to right and took second as Shinn muffed in handling the ball. Gardner sent his teammate along a base on a single to left and he scored when Rohrer hit for two sacks. Becker, substituting for Olmsted, was fanned, as was Bill Leard. Score:

New Records Made.

PENNSY FINISHES FIRST IN BIG TRACK MEET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FINAL score: Pennsylvania, 24; Harvard, 21½; Michigan, 19; Cornell, 17½; Dartmouth, 14½; Yale, 10; California, 10; Wesleyan, 10; Princeton, 6; Columbia, 4; Brown, 3; Pennsylvania State, 1; Syracuse, 1.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) May 31.—Twelve sturdy Quaker legs, with which six wearers of the red and blue gathered in twenty-four points, won for the University of Pennsylvania the thirty-eighth annual field and track meet of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, in the Harvard stadium today.

The score was the smallest made by a winner in the history of the association. John Paul Jones, Cornell's captain, finished his college cinder track career by running the fastest mile ever credited to an amateur, his new world record time being 4m. 14 2-5s. This is one second lower than the previous record which Jones made on the same track two years ago.

In the half-mile event, Jones finished second.

RECORDS EQUALLED.

The association records in the 100 and 200-yard dashes and the 220-yard low hurdles were equalled, respectively, by J. E. Patterson and D. F. Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania and J. I. Windell of Wesleyan. The latter won both hurdle events and was the only double winner of the day.

Harvard was giving Pennsylvania stiff battle for the lead when Jackson, the former's colored timber topper, knocked down three hurdles in the 220-yard event and was disqualified. Had he won third place Harvard, which had not been considered a factor, would have won the meet.

Michigan was a close third on points, while Cornell, which had been expected to press Pennsylvania closely for honors, was fourth, Dartmouth taking fifth place.

CALIFORNIA CLOSE.

By a margin of half a point, Yale managed to beat out the University of California and Wesleyan for sixth place. Three athletes, Beeson, Allen and Shattuck, won the ten points which the University of California team carried back to the Pacific Coast.

Incidentally, a good proportion of the net proceeds from 9000 spectators was turned over to the westerners, based on the number of miles they traveled. Princeton, Columbia, Brown, Syracuse and Pennsylvania State College finished in the rear of the standing by points. The results:

The 100-yard dash—Won by Patterson (Pennsylvania,) Reller (Cornell) second, Lippincott (Pennsylvania) third, Bond (Michigan) fourth; time 9 4-5s. Equals intercollegiate record.

Shot put—Won by L. A. Whitney (Dartmouth,) R. L. Beatty (Columbia) second, A. W. Kohler (Michigan) third, H. G. Kanzler (Cornell) fourth; distance 47ft. 2 2-8in.

Mile run—Won by Jones (Cornell,) Taber (Brown) second, Harmon (Dartmouth) third, Madera (Pennsylvania) fourth; time 4m. 14 2-5s. New world's amateur record.

The 440-yard run—Won by Haff (Michigan,) Cozens (Cornell) second, Barron (Harvard) third, Jansen (Michigan) fourth; time 48 2-5s.

The 120-yard hurdles—Won by Wendell (Wesleyan,) Jackson (Harvard) second, Cummings (Harvard) third; time 15 3-5s. W. F. Potter (Yale) did not finish.

Pole vault—Won by Fiske (Princeton,) Wagoner (Yale) and Wright (Dartmouth) tied for second at 12ft. 4in., Camp (Harvard) and Van Kennen (Cornell) tied for fourth place at 12ft.; height 12ft. 8in.

The 880-yard run—Won by Brown (Yale,) Jones (Cornell) second, Capper (Harvard) third, Marceau (Dartmouth) fourth; time 1m. 55 1-5s.

Broad jump—Won by Mercer (Pennsylvania) 23ft. 3 7-8in., Allen (California) 22ft. 10 1-2in., Whinery (Cornell) 22ft. 9in., Thornson (Syracuse) 21ft. 11 1-2in.

The 220-yard hurdles—Won by Wandell (Wesleyan,) Potter (Yale) second, Braun (Dartmouth) third, Brady (Columbia) fourth; time 23 3-5s. Equals intercollegiate record.

The 220-yard dash—Won by Lippincott (Pennsylvania,) Seward (Michigan) second, Bond (Michigan) third, Patterson (Pennsylvania) fourth; time 2m. 1-5s. Equals intercollegiate record.

Hammer throw—Won by Cable (Harvard,) distance 156ft.; Shattuck (California) second, 151ft. 2 1-2in.; Englehorn (Dartmouth) third, 150ft. 2in.; Kohler (Michigan) fourth, 147ft. 9 1-4in.

Two-mile run—Won by McCurdy (Pennsylvania,) Smith (Michigan) second, Boyd (Harvard) third, Keyser (Pennsylvania State) fourth; time 9m. 45 3-5s.

High jump—Beeson (California) and Camp (Harvard) tied for first place at 6ft. 1-8in., Moffatte (Harvard) second, Sargent (Michigan) and Simons (Princeton) tied for third place at 5ft. 11 1-4in.

COBB STILL LEADING.

Crack Batsman of American League Is Far Ahead of Other Sluggers in Either Organization.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, May 31.—American league batting stars are hitting their stride. Unofficial averages published today show that Cobb is still leading the league with an average of .475 for twenty-four games, and next to him are Jackson of Cleveland with .438, Speaker of Boston with .386, Collins of Philadelphia with .375 and Lajoie of Cleveland with .348.

McDonald of Boston leads the National League hitters, his average for seventeen games being .420. Cravath's slugging, which has been a factor in keeping Philadelphia in front, ranks him next with .400. Wagner of Pittsburgh finally passed his understudy, Viox, whose good hitting is keeping him in the game despite Honus's return. Their figures are .351 and 345, respectively. Manager Huggins of St. Louis is fifth with .344. Base-running honors are retained by Milan of Washington, the records showing that he has stolen twenty-seven bases. Next to him in the American League are Bush, Detroit, and Oldring, Philadelphia. In the National League, Herzog, New York, leads with fourteen, and his teammate, Merkle, and Lobert of Philadelphia are next with twelve.

AMERICANS NOT IN IT.

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The British polo team defeated All-Philadelphia at the Philadelphia Country Club this afternoon by the score of 15 to 5.

Money Can't Buy More—in Service and Satisfaction

If you want proof of it let us send a Chalmers "Six" to your door. Take the wheel yourself. Feel the thrill of the power of fifty-four horses vibrant, eager, yet controlled by the tips of your fingers.

You'll be surprised how easy the Chalmers "Six" is to operate. Anyone in the family can drive this car—anyone but the baby. Everything, even the carburetor, is controlled from the dash. Tires are inflated from the compressed air tank.

Push the button which starts the motor and we're off.

Turn into a rough road; keep up your speed—you won't feel the bumps. This car has eleven inch upholstery and extra long elliptical springs. With long wheelbase and solid, Pullman-like construction, the "Six" affords a comfort on wheels unknown outside the most expensive cars.

Stretch your legs in a "Six"; there's plenty of room. We spend $105,000 extra per year on roomy bodies to give you the maximum of riding ease.

See that hill yonder? Take it on high. The Chalmers "Six" has the long stroke motor. It is high-powered for its weight, a horse power for every 74 pounds.

Notice how you seem to glide over the road. No noise—no vibration. Noise is evidence of friction—of wear. Silence proves the motor is running in perfect balance: gears ground to mathematical exactness; every bearing fitting its journal with precision. These are the things that add years to the life of the "Six."

These things, which you can't see, are the things which count most. Thus all steel parts in the Chalmers "Six" are four times as strong as good service demands. Only a few of the most expensive cars have as many drop forgings as the "Six." These make the Chalmers strong where others are weak.

More and more people are turning to this car for luxurious comfort and perfect reliability—the big car with the little up-keep cost. May we show you why? Please phone or call.

" * * * The harder the tests the Knight Motor is called upon to perform, the more I am pleased with its performance.

I have owned and driven four poppet valve engines to a standstill, and will never own another. The Knight engine is so far ahead of the poppet valve that I would not consider any car, at any price, equipped with the latter.

I want to add that it takes a real car to stand up to the Knight motor."

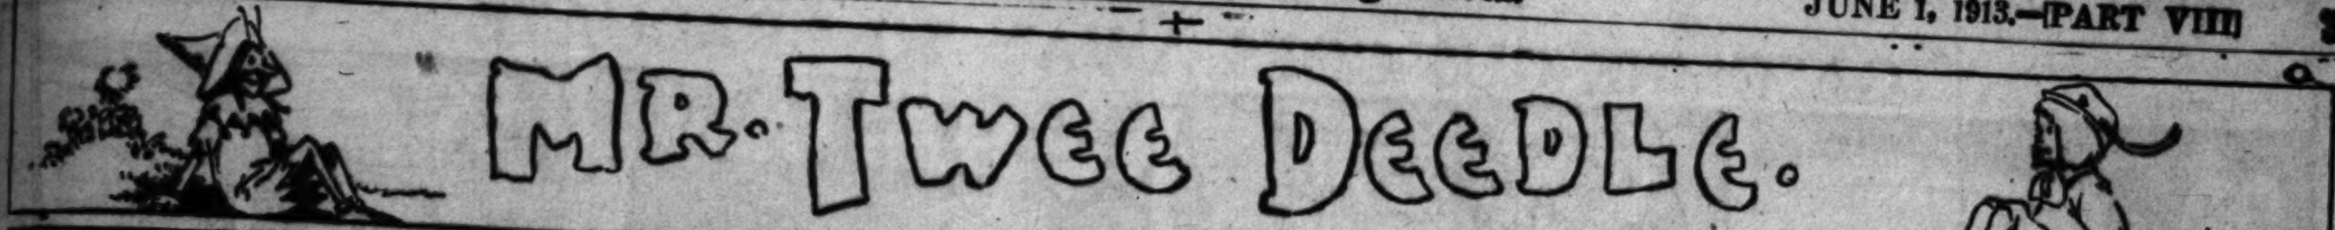
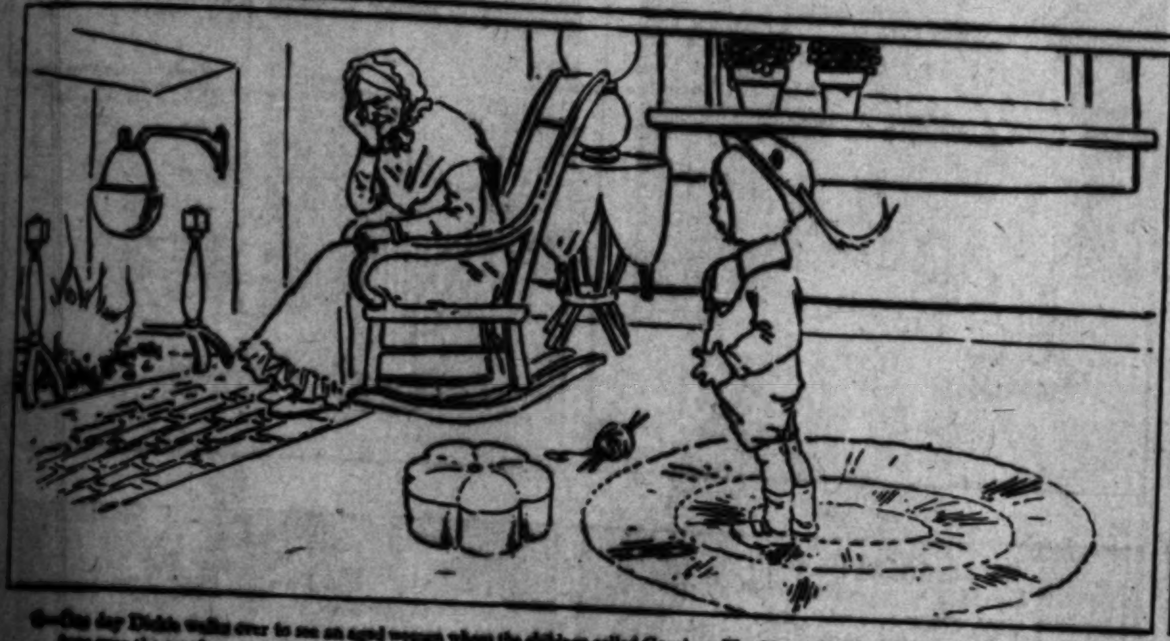
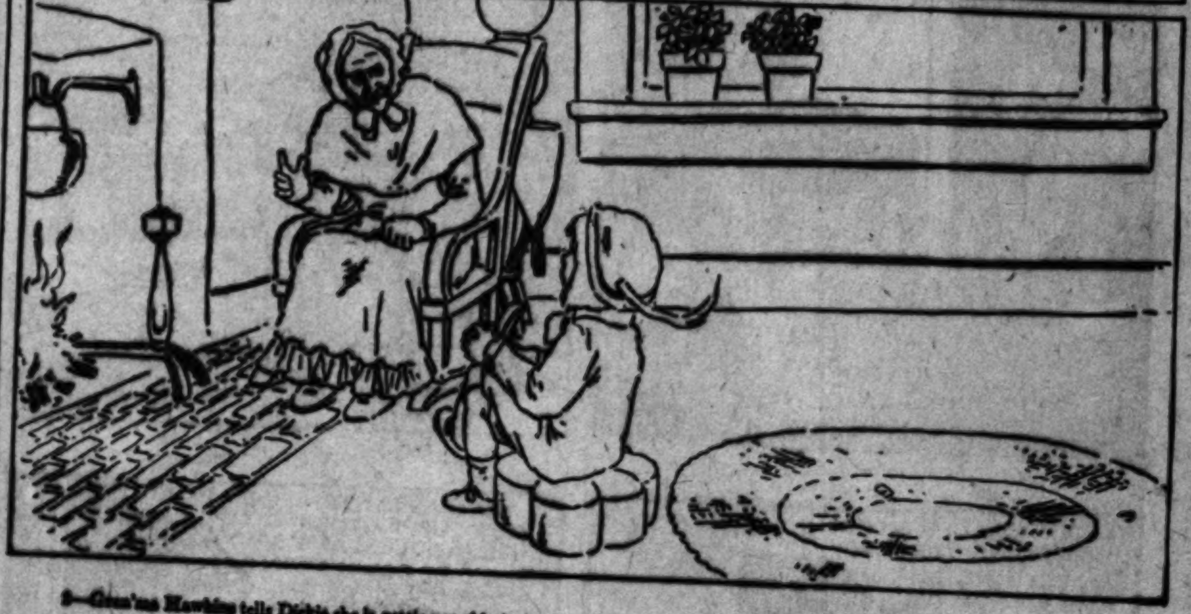
MR. TWEE DEEDLE.

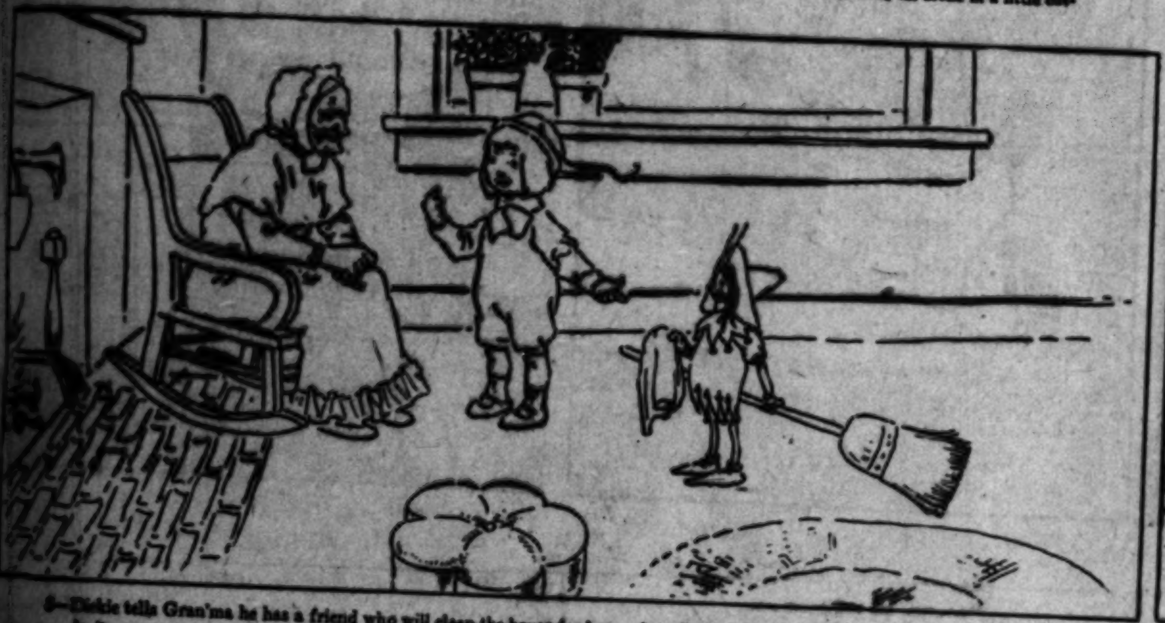




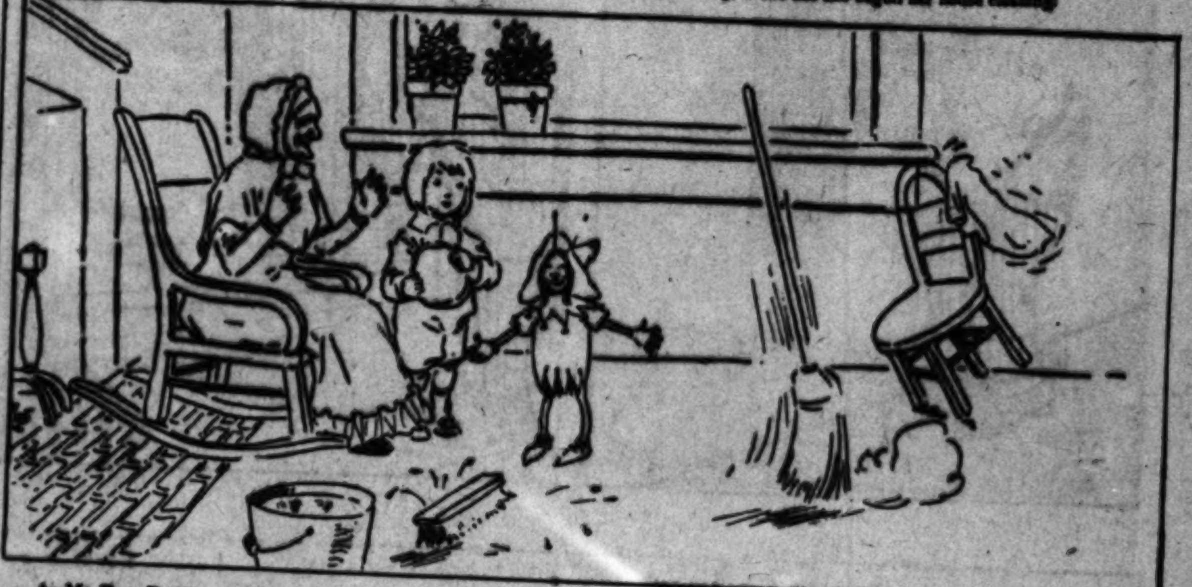
1—One day Dickie walks over to see an aged woman whom the children called Gran'ma Hawkins. She lives all alone in a little cottage near the woods.



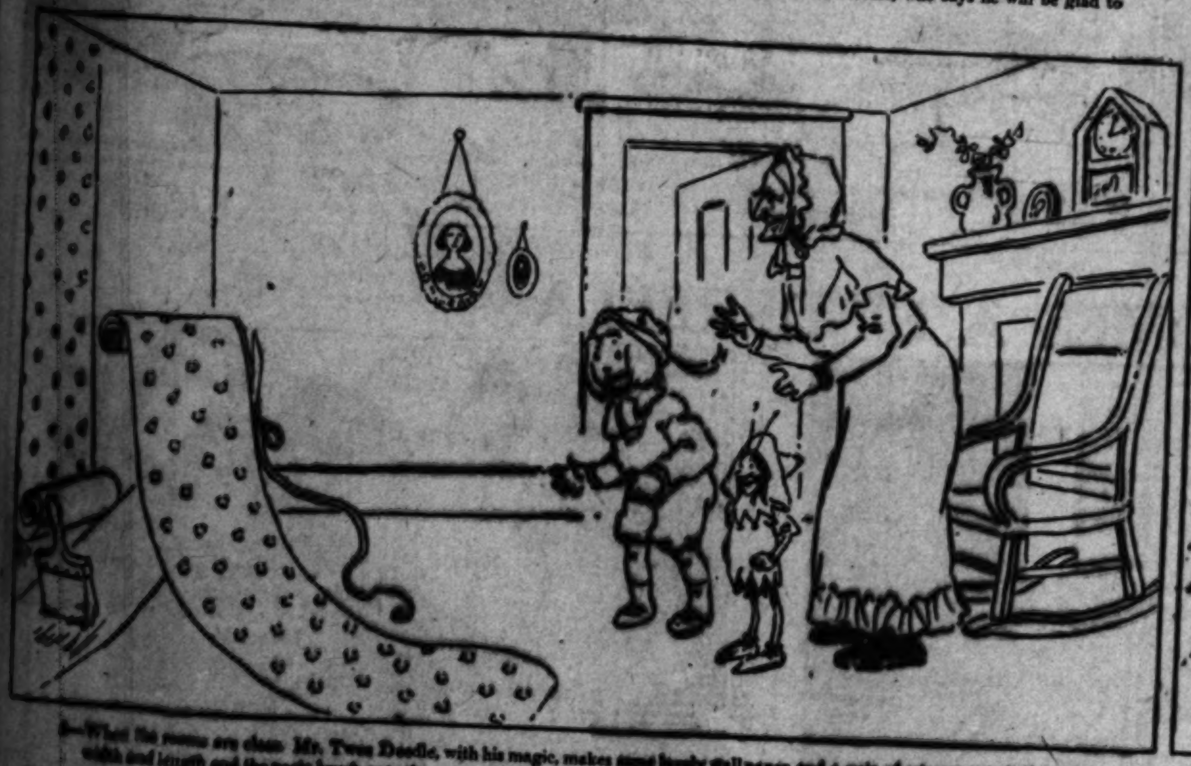
2—Gran'ma Hawkins tells Dickie she is getting so old she hardly feels like working, so she has not begun her house cleaning.



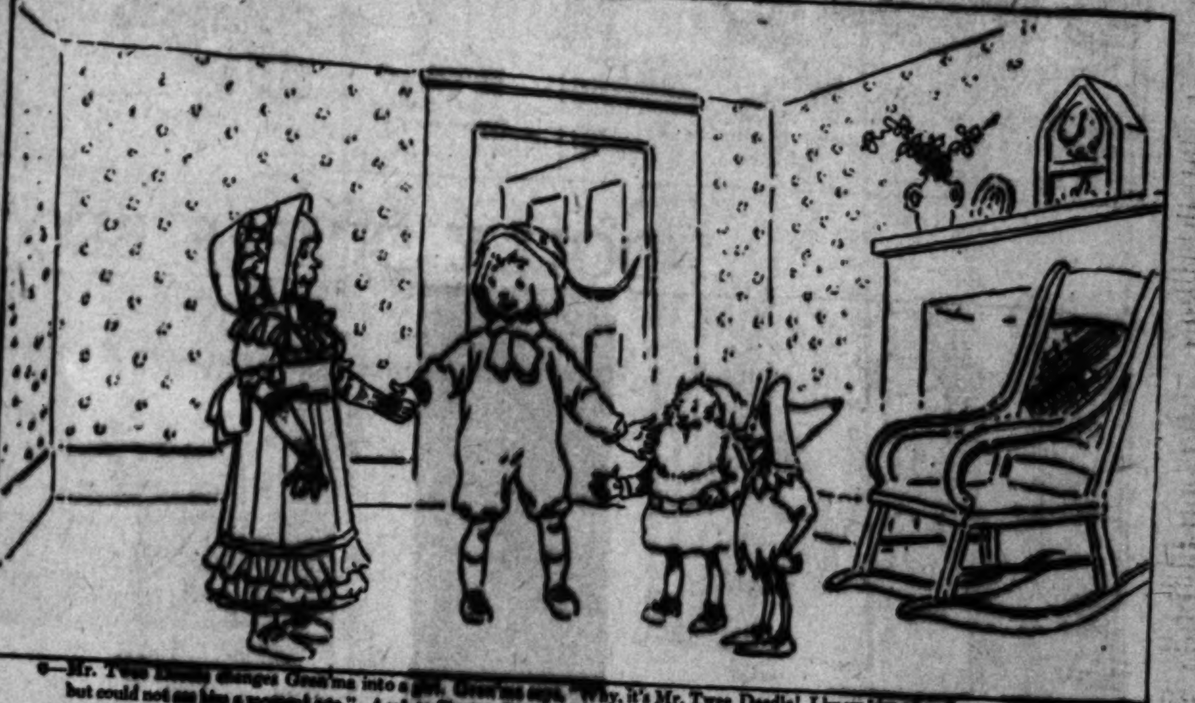
3—Dickie tells Gran'ma he has a friend who will clean the house for her, so he calls Mr. Twee Deedle, who says he will be glad to do it.



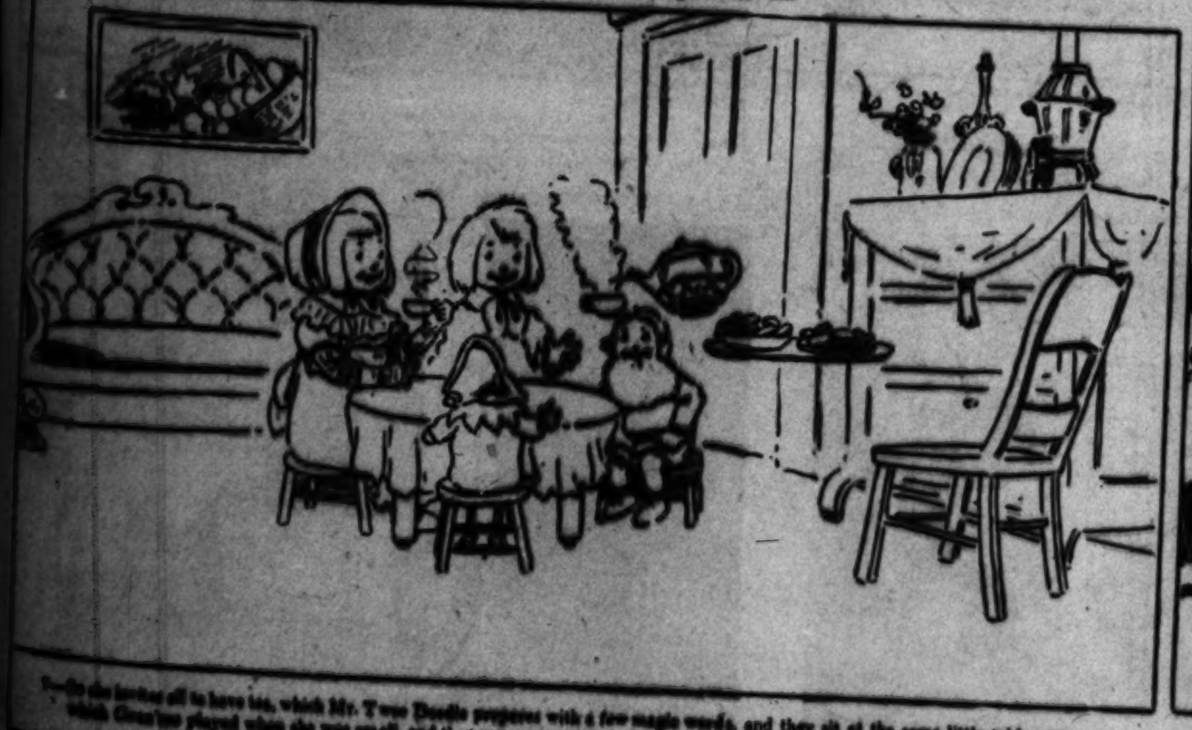
4—Mr. Twee Deedle repeats a magic word and the old broom jumps up and sweeps the floor, the dust rag dusts the chairs and the scrubbing brush scrubs the floor.



5—When the rooms are clean Mr. Twee Deedle, with his magic, makes some lovely wall paper and a pair of scissors cuts it the right width and length and the paste brush puts the paste on it and smoothes it against the wall.



6—Mr. Twee Deedle changes Gran'ma into a girl. Gran'ma says, "Why, it's Mr. Twee Deedle! I knew him when I was a little girl but could not see him a moment ago." And as Doctor Giggle walks into the room Gran'ma claps her hands and cries, "And there's dear old Doctor Giggle!"



7—So she invites all to have tea, which Mr. Twee Deedle prepares with a few magic words, and they sit at the same little table with which Gran'ma played when she was small, and the tea pot pours the tea and a tray of dandy cakes passes itself around.

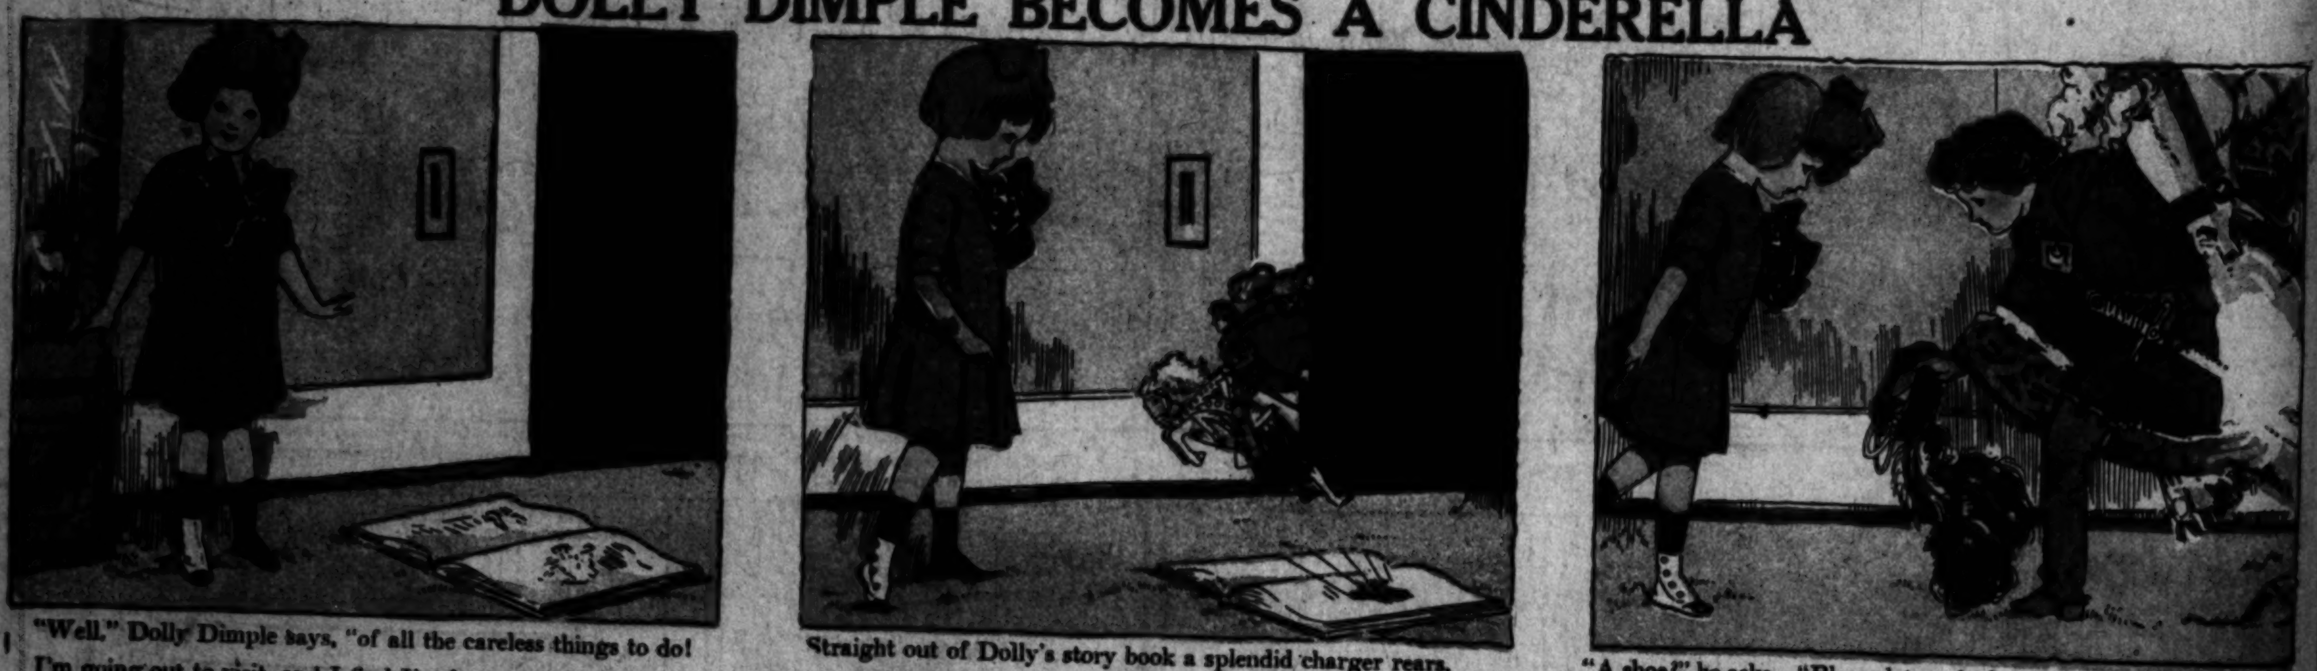
DOLLY DIMPLE BECOMES A CINDERELLA



"Well," Dolly Dimple says, "of all the careless things to do!
I'm going out to visit, and I find I've lost my shoe."

Straight out of Dolly's story book a splendid charger rears,
And on his back a handsome prince in sword and plume appears.

"A shoe?" he asks. "Please let me look. One night I gave a ball
And picked up Cinderella's shoe—and that was very small.

"Look—here's a shoe behind the door! I think it's yours. We'll see I'll put it on. A perfect fit! That's plain as A, B, C!"

"I thank you very much," says Dolly Dimple. "Not at all,"
Says Cinderella's prince. "Goodby. I'm always at your call."

And in the book he sinks from sight. Says Dolly Dimple then:
"Before I go, I've half a mind to lose my shoe again!"

SUGGESTIONS FOR SECOND MOURNING

Black and White Silk With a Mauve Girdle

THERE is a decided tendency in these days to shorten the accepted term of first mourning and to wear black and white, gray and lavender as a formal mark of respect to one who has died.

Especially commendable is this idea for summer, for it is a well-known fact that deep black fabrics absorb and hold the sun's rays, while white throws them off. Comfort is now being considered by custom.

These suggestions should help any one to plan a summer and autumn wardrobe in second mourning. They adhere to the latest and best styles, yet are not obtrusive in any extreme form.

The dotted silk is of white, with black dots. The skirt is draped and slashed over a black underskirt, the curved edges being bound with black. Long sleeves have dropped armholes, and pleated net trims the top of the bodice, which has a white mousseline vest. A girdle of lavender satin defines the waist line.

The cool lawn has tiny dots on its surface. Sleeves are set in under Gibson pleats, and a vest of tucked blonde fills in the front of the bodice. A tunic has its edges emphasized by a band of tucked net. The skirt is trimmed with net and lace insertion, while a black silk girdle and sash define the waist line. White buttons are used in a straight line down the front of the tunic.

One of the latest dresses suggests a long coat over a satin dress. This is of striped silk ratine made on charmingly simple lines. Long sleeves end in white linen cuffs, and a sailor collar of sheer linen trims the bodice. The belt is of the silk, wide and straight. Large buttons are covered with silk, and bound buttonholes are noticeable. This silk coat falls over a white silk skirt, gathered on the central line and trimmed with buttons.

For evening affairs of a semiformal type the dress in black and white is suggested. The neck is shallow, a collar of chiffon turning back from the bodice. White satin sleeves have black cuffs. The striped chiffon tunic is laid over the sides, showing fullness at the waist line. The lower line is caught above the knees. A line of black buttons extends from neck line to hem. A black moire girdle ends in a bow at the back.

In a soft shade of mauve crepe de chine the bolero gown for afternoon is suggested. The bodice is of blonde, with double puffs on the sleeves. The bolero has one button to fasten the fronts. The back is caught in under the girdle, which shows an attractive double buckle of shirred crepe de chine. Fullness at the hips is noticeable, while soft drapery in the skirt completes the charm of this gown. Any soft lusterless silk or cotton could be easily fashioned after this model.

The refinement of a conservative expression of style must always be evident in mourning dress. One who observes it must never be a dowd, always neat and ever unostentatious in apparel. Second mourning is curtailing entire black costumes.

As the summer heat is here, these suggestions, following the trend of the majority of sensible women, will be most opportune.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE WAR WITH HOT WEATHER PESTS.

YOU can hardly begin too early your fight against hot weather vermin. I wonder if there is a single housekeeper who reads this who can say with pride that she never has in her home to wage a war of this kind. If this is the case, blessed among women are you who can make this boast!

Probably I am not entomologically correct when I include mosquitoes and flies among vermin, but I am pretty sure that every woman who has fought them will think the term none too bitter. The mosquito you may possibly set down as plague, an annoyance, perhaps even as a menace in view of his share in spreading malaria and fever, but the fly is something worse than a passing pest. We have heard enough of him during the last few years to end forever the theories of "the harmless little fly." His touch is contamination and worse.

He's had his feet in all the dirt,
Whatever it may be;
And now, to finish matters up,
He's swimming in my tea.

Disgusting? That may be, but nothing like so disgusting as the thing itself. So, as I say, begin your crusade early. Don't wait until the fly has gained a foothold in the home, has had a chance to lay eggs, has begun to speck your wall paper, your mirrors, your windows before you prepare to resist his inroads and to make life a burden to him.

Before there was any prospect of using them you should have put your screens in order, looked to them that there were no breaks to be repaired, no frames to be strengthened, no catches to be mended. Then, when the first steady warm weather arrives, it is a simple matter to hang the screen doors, to slip the window screens into place, and to feel that you are in a measure secure against the entrance of flies.

Provide Yourself with Swatters.

I say "in a measure." No matter how thoroughly screened your home may be, the pests will make their way in by hook or crook, on the clothing of some one, or by a door or window inadvertently left open for a few minutes. And when the fly is in he has come to stay, unless you drive him out. Not of his own accord will he leave your dwelling. He is not called "musca domestica" for nothing!

So provide yourself with "swatters" as well as screens, with fly traps or fly poison as well as with netting. Don't give him a chance to multiply by neglecting him for even a day. Kill him wherever you see him; blow the air of your kitchen full of insect powder at night, and sweep up the stupefied flies in the morning before they have a chance to be revived, and burn them at once. With all your precautions, all your heroic measures, you won't be able to rid yourself entirely of his pernicious presence. Like the poor, he will never cease out of the land, I am afraid, but will abide with us to contaminate our food as well as to annoy us beyond endurance.

With mosquitoes you have a better chance. They are more easily caught, more readily slaughtered than flies, and although science has recently proved what many of us have long suspected, that the mosquito has a longer life than tradition gives it—and does not die at the end of a day or so of existence, yet there is a possibility of killing those that come into the house and with careful screening and proper vigilance you have a fair chance of keeping them out. I do not forget homes that I have visited in the summer where double screens were necessary and where a light was never taken into the bedrooms for fear of showing the marauders the way thither. I recollect well the brushing the family and guests received on the steps before they were permitted to enter the screened porch, and the bottle of citronella that was considered a necessary addition to every dressing table! Yet I hope that these are exceptional cases and that even in the country by diligence in keeping pools near the house well drained or glazed with kerosene and burning dead leaves and damp grass in which the plagues could breed you may with the aid of plenty of screens lead a tolerably peaceful life.

Persevere with Remedies.

One of the troubles in the way of keeping flies under is that so many persons fail to appreciate the danger of their presence and to exert themselves to exclude and to kill them. For so long we have taken flies for granted that it is difficult now to convince us that they are so harmful as scientists would have us believe. Even if we accept the theories in their disfavor we are careless about them and let the insects creep in through our heedlessness.

Other vermin we look upon with less patience—roaches and water bugs, for example. Yet these do far less harm than flies, for although it is not pleasant to find them running over the food in the pantry or to discover that our linen has been gnawed by them, the fly is much more dangerous as a housemate.

Even if your kitchen has been altogether or comparatively free from bugs and ants during the winter they, too, feel the approach of spring and present themselves with cheerful promptness. Unless you wish to be overrun by them don't let them get a fair foothold in the house. Mix borax and sugar and strew it in the corners of the kitchen, by the sink, on the pantry shelves—wherever the pests are likely to gather. Don't be discouraged if a few applications have poor results, but persevere, and if the remedies I have just given do not succeed within a fair length of time, go to your grocer or your druggist and get some proprietary article which may have a more speedy effect. Still, I have faith in the borax and sugar if you don't get weary in well doing, and if you head off the creatures by starving them out.

Bedbug the Worst.

Here, after all, is the best prescription for keeping free of ants, roaches, and water bugs. Look well to the tops of your provision barrels and boxes and canisters. See that there is no crack in the woodwork of your refrigerator, that its door is never left open for a moment. It is astonishing through how narrow a crevice the pests can make their way. I know few experiences more annoying than to open a cake or bread box and catch sight of one of the little rascals scampering briskly about. Food kept in paper bags is a joy to them. The crumbs that are brushed from the table, the flour or the sugar that is spilled when you are taking it from its box, the gravy that drips from a carelessly held spoon or cup serve to encourage them in making your house their home.

Absolute cleanliness, unremitting care to keep food securely closed in tin boxes or glass jars with closely fitting tops, alertness to employ poison or punishment to every one that dares show itself—these are the only methods by which you may secure yourself against the nuisance. Of course you may protect your stores by pasting or tacking strips of fly paper under the edges of shelves in the pantry and tables in the kitchen, you may set dishes of food in pans of water, yet all these are but makeshifts and cannot for any length of time spare you the bother of the insects. Extermination is the only real remedy!

When hot weather comes and some of your neighbors go away and leave the bugs and the mice to starve is the time when the vermin come to you in larger numbers. Especially is this the case in apartments and flats, and your vigilance must be the greater. Put red pepper around the holes of the mice and stop these up with broken glass as well as buy a couple of good traps.

Moths demand a treatment all their own, but when once you adopt strenuous means you are pretty safe in believing you can put them out of the way. Take all your clothes from the closets and brush them well in the open air. Brush off your closet shelves and wipe them with a cloth dampened in kerosene, going into every crack and corner, with a brush if necessary. Follow the same plan with closet and bureau drawers and make your application to the baseboard of the room as well. If you wish to take special pains in view of past annoyance blow insect powder from a powder syringe into each crevice. Then wrap up carefully all the articles on which the moth will feed and you may enjoy a fair of peace of mind.

Mice, moths, mosquitoes, flies, ants—what are they all compared real great plague of the housekee bedbug? We may try to speak lig him; we may call him the "red the "crimson rambler," and a host of pleasing names, but after all he is the pestilence that walketh in dar and I don't believe there is a hous alive who would not rather have any of the other vermin I have mentioned a colony in her establishment than there was even one bedbug housed her roof.

Crush Them Out at the Start.

It is so easy to get them in, so hard them out. One may be brought in basket of laundry or picked up in a conveyance and before you know it house is peopled. Your heart water within you at the mere thou trying to get them out.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to [illegible] many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. — Marion Harland.

"HAVE any of the Cornerites or their friends a good tone square piano, or a piano of any sort in good time, that they would like to have kept in repair or for storage for my use of it? I have no small children, my boy and girl being 12 and 14 years of age. I can furnish references and guarantee if desired. My boy and girl are as passionately fond of music as I, and as I compose music I am sure I could make a nice little income if I had a piano on which to work out my compositions. I know this is an unusual request, and yet I have seen in the paper offers of pianos two or three times. So I hope some one may grant my wish. Mrs. A. E. S."

This is, as the writer says, a rather unusual request, and yet we have had others as remarkable that have received favorable replies. In a big city like Chicago, which is the home of Mrs. A. E. S., there ought to be some one with an old square piano which she would rather lend than sell at a loss. I hope this demand may meet a supply at an early day. I hold the address of Mrs. A. E. S.

Beef Goulash.

"In reply to the request for beef goulash, I wish to submit the following:

"BEEF GOULASH—Quarter pound fat salt pork, cut fine; one and a half pounds lean beef, cut into half inch dice; large Spanish onion, sliced thin; half can strained tomatoes, two medium sized potatoes, quartered; teaspoonful paprika; salt to taste. Fry out your salt pork in a saucepan until the meat is a straw yellow; add the beef, stirring constantly until it is cooked on the outside; put in the paprika. Now place in layers in the saucepan, the sliced onions, tomatoes, and potatoes on the meat and fat already in the saucepan, salt to taste, cover closely, reduce the fire and cook slowly. Do not stir, and when the potatoes in the top layer are done the goulash is ready. Have all your materials ready before starting to cook. A. H. H."

We have had a number of goulash recipes lately, but this differs from the others and sounds practical and good.

Advice About Voile.

"Will you please tell me if voile shrinks much and if one should shrink it before making it up? Naomi."

You do not say if you refer to the woolen or the cotton voile. I do not think the former shrinks under ordinary use; I have never heard of its doing so, and personally I should think it would be more likely to stretch. If you wash it, that is another matter. You would have to treat it as you would any fine woolen goods and use great precautions. I fancy the cotton voile would shrink a little, just as a lawn or gingham would, the first time it is laundered, but I would hesitate about shrinking it first, as I would in making up any wash goods. Can any of our readers give more intelligent advice on the subject?

"Ribbons Like Other Girls."

"I am the mother of seven children, four of less than 6 years old, but three of the girls are of school age. I wonder if some of the kind helpers would send me a few pieces of ribbon for the little girls' hair. We are trying hard to get out of debt and my husband thinks it is foolish to buy such things as we can possible do without, but the girls feel it is hard they can't have ribbons like other girls. We are poor renters and my husband is the only one to work, except during hoeing and cotton picking time, and then the girls help all they can. A. H. G."

I have had to make it an almost invariable rule not to ask for clothing in this column. If I did I would be overrun and have no space for anything else. But I tell myself that ribbons are not quite the same as clothing and I have a twinge of heart for those little girls down in Texas who long to have "ribbons like other girls." Can't some of our readers with little girls of their own help out, if it is only by washing and pressing discarded ribbons of their own small daughters, and brighten the lives of these other children? At that age even a hair ribbon seems an important thing and we are none of us, I hope, so far from our own youth that we have forgotten how it hurt when we could not dress and adorn ourselves as the other children did. It's not vanity, either—just a natural feminine longing to appear well.

I hold the address of A. H. G. and I hope to have early applications for it.

Sweet Salad Dressing.

"Not long ago some one asked you for a sweet salad dressing. Here is a good one to use on different combinations of fruit in salads:

"SWEET SALAD DRESSING.—Half cup sugar, one teaspoon cornstarch, one teaspoon salt, half teaspoon mustard. Mix together, add three eggs beaten light, a half tablespoon butter, one cup mild vinegar, half cup cream. Cook in a double boiler until thick. Just before using add one part whipped cream to two parts of salad dressing and put a spoonful on the salad. Do not mix it. A nice salad to eat with these is a slice of canned pineapple with a small ball of pimento cheese in the center and a spoonful of the dressing on it.

"I noticed a while ago that some one asked you for an easy way to pick pecans. Place the nuts in a pan of cold water and bring to a boil; let them boil for about ten minutes, then when they are cool, crack them and the nuts will come out much more easily. Some one also asked for a recipe for peanut brittle, which you gave, but I have one which I think much easier, and it is the one my mother always uses.

"PEANUT BRITTLE.—Put whatever quantity of granulated sugar you need in a skillet and stir constantly until it melts and boils; then pour over the nutmeats. It is indeed 'brittle' and also good. This is a lot of advice from a bride to one so experienced as you, but I think you will find it all good, as the recipes have been often tested. Mrs. H. F."

I am much gratified that the "bride" should have taken the time to give me the recipes and counsel and I am sure others will appreciate it as much as I myself do. If I may make a suggestion it would be that the sugar for the brittle be permitted to boil until it reaches the stage where a little of it will harden in cold water. If not, it is likely not to be crisp when poured on the nuts. Directions for putting pecans in boiling water have been given before, but I do not think that any one has said they should be put on the fire in cold water and then brought to a boil. I hope you will send us further good points when you find any you think may prove helpful to the constituency.

From a Grateful Helper.

"I inclose a little slip from a correspondent whose address I cannot make out. She sent me a nice little package of scraps some time ago and I would like to thank her for them. I am most grateful to her and I want to thank you for your great kindness. It has brought to me so many pleasures and real benefits. One friend has sent me two full sets of Bible studies when I had but one and it might have been years before I could get more. Some one else sent me a most beautiful box of books, scraps of ribbons and yarn, all lovely.

"Other friends have sent boxes of pieces—from one I had a box containing a warm wrapper, a knit jacket and ulster, and a dress skirt, with pieces of trimming, and nearly every month I receive a lovely large package of nice new magazines. All reading matter I send into the [illegible] for the soldiers, where there is a great call for it, especially for magazines.

"A New Englander who sent me books last year has sent some more this year and while on her travels last summer mailed me many lovely cards. I can hardly recollect all I have had in the way of silk scraps and fancy work and patterns and spools of silk for embroidery. Don't you think I ought to have a glad, warm heart? I must not forget the fine box of holly-hock seeds, of which I am proud. Out of the pieces sent me I have finished my silk quilt and make a slumber robe.

"A box of nice ties, only partially worn, came from one of my unknown friends and I gave them to the soldiers, some to Spanish boys, as I did with the cards received from some one else. I have made eight hats for women and children from the pieces sent me. A correspondent secured through your column supplies me with Sabbath reading; the papers and books go on from me to the men in the home.

"Not less than twenty people have had pleasure and hope through your always tell them it is through the friends that I receive the articles on. I know I am of some use in the while I can work at something I hope your years may be many blessing you can desire. Mrs. M. A. C."

Thank you for your good wishes for the list of those who have helped and whom you have helped. I have a good deal of your letter because it illustrates suggestively the comfort and happiness that may be stowed by those who take the thought to send the little or much to those who desire that which they supply.

Sometimes it seems such a trifle up and post a little parcel of that it is hardly worth while, but the ure of the person who receives it is always much in excess of the trouble cost to send it and when these goods are passed on, as they are by this respondent, there is practically no the ever-widening circle of happiness caused by the first gift.

All these tokens of consideration as bestowed on me personally and you all from a full heart, fervently! thanks have gone to your first friend, for the scrapes.

The tracing of the design on either tan or white linen is an easy matter if directions are followed. What to Embroider

AT THIS season the needlewoman is embroidering dainty articles for her summer wardrobe, and naturally her thoughts turn toward a pretty frock for chilly days, when those of cotton or woolen materials do not afford enough warmth. In Paris the designers are trimming the frocks of white serge, wool ratine and eponge with wool embroidery, and the clever embroiderer can trim her frock in the same manner. Five and a half or six yards of white serge are required for a frock, and it will not prove an extravagance. It cleans beautifully, and many women can successfully wash serge frocks.

Purchase a pattern the correct size and of a not too elaborate design, for the embroidered frock needs no other trimming.

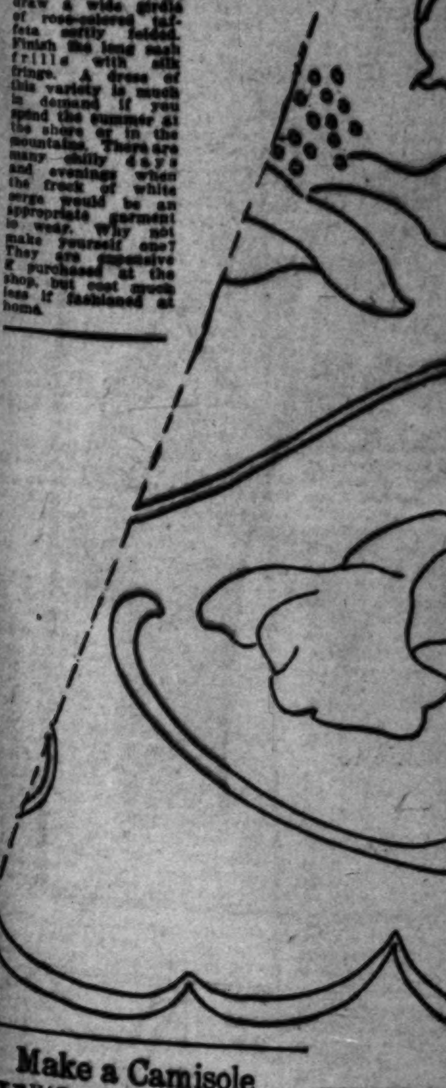
Cut a V-shaped opening at the neck of the bodice and make the sleeves long or of three-quarter length. The skirt should be cut with a slashed effect to the left of the front and gathered softly below the waist belt.

Choose wools in the rich oriental colorings to embroider the design, using tones of dull blue, amber and rose, with touches of black and green.

Before basting the frock together take the design which you have selected and between it and the material place a piece of carbon paper. Using a sharp-pointed pencil trace each line of the design and its duplicate will be found on the material.

The blouse front, sleeves and skirt front should be embroidered. Work the design with the satin stitch, using the colors in an artistic manner, and outline each motif with black. French knots can be used effectively to center the conventionalized flower designs.

On either side of the slash in the skirt arrange a portion of the design extending halfway to the knees, and embroider this and the sleeves to correspond with the blouse front. A finely plaited frill of lace or net may be used to finish the opening at the neck and the sleeves. About the waist draw a wide girdle of rose-colored taffeta softly folded. Finish the long sash frills with silk fringe. A dress of this variety is much in demand if you spend the summer at the shore or in the mountains. There are many chilly days and evenings when the frock of white serge would be an appropriate garment to wear. Why not make yourself one? They are expensive if purchased at the shop, but cost much less if fashioned at home.



Make a Camisole

WHAT shall I do with my chiffon-and-lace evening gown? I wish the transparent effect at the top, but I cannot have my underwear showing through the filmy bodice.

That question has probably been puzzling you as you have planned your evening gowns for the summer. The answer is here in the most attractive camisoles that any feminine heart can wish.

A POPPY CENTERPIECE

DESIGNED BY E.J. BUCKMAN

NO FEAR of going to sleep over this lovely design, even if it has a wreath of poppies as its main idea! In the centerpiece, three-eighths of which I have shown, you will find many opportunities for varying your stitches and using different combinations to get effective results.

The tracing of the design on either tan or white linen is an easy matter if directions are followed. One excellent method suggested by one of our circle is the placing of the design, print down, on the linen and pressing the outline with a hot iron. She vouches for the quickness and success of this "discovery." Be sure to keep the same center and be accurate in matching the scalloped edge. The rest of the design will take care of itself.

One very effective way of working is the use of heavy outlining for the blossoms and the filling in with darning stitch in either red or yellow. Large French knots should be placed in the center and the seed drum should be worked in solid stitch after slight padding.

Use stem stitch for the stems. Outline the leaves in heavy thread or silk and also the central veins. A lovely effect is obtained by working the narrower half in solid stitch or in long-and-short stitch in from the edges, and filling in the other half with seed stitches, which are parallel rows of back stitches.

The turned edges on the flowers can be worked in solid stitch after padding. When you work the buds do the bases in solid work and the petals in the same stitches as you use for the flowers.

A very clever idea is the outlining of the poppies in heavy rope silk. The seed drum is done in solid stitch, and the dots around the center are in punched work, which gives an effective open work. The punched work is done on the base of each bud and on one-half of each leaf, after heavy outlining has marked off the form.

If you wish to use more thread than the above methods require, work the poppies in long-and-short stitches in from the center. In this work you can shade the colors. Work the turned-over leaf in front in solid stitches after padding.

French knots are also extremely effective in filling in the petals of the flowers and buds. Outline the flowers and fill in with knots, that should be smaller than the ones used around the center. Use solid stitch for the seed drum and the turned edge of the leaf.

A darning stitch of a double thread applied over the surface of the flowers gives an unusual effect, if the threads are of different shades or different colors. Pale and deep yellow, pale and dark pink, or two shades of red are easily combined and make double beauty in the colored results.

When padding the hem the use of narrow soutache braid as padding is very easy. Hold it along the edge, as you would couching thread, and buttonhole over it around the edges. Darning cotton in 12 or 16 strands will serve the same purpose if you have no braid. This is much more solid than the long stitches on the chainstitch padding which you have probably used.

An edge of torchon or cluny lace added to the centerpiece will finish the prettiest work that you can do in these summer days. I know that you will agree with me.

The Complete Centerpiece

Three-eighths of the Design

Make a Camisole

WHAT shall I do with my chiffon-and-lace evening gown? I wish the transparent effect at the [illegible], but I cannot have my underwear showing through the filmy [illegible].

That question has probably been troubling you as you have planned your evening gowns for the summer. The answer is here in the most attractive camisoles that any feminine heart can wish.

They are jacket-like underbodices of lace or net trimmed with dainty ribbon flowers, which, by the way, can be made adjustable and changed to suit the color of the gown. White is a wise selection, for it can permanently decorate a camisole, harmonizing with any color of a bodice over it.

There must be no heavy, thick straps over the shoulders, for the beauty of many transparent bodices of lace or net depends on the unbroken line from neck to elbow. Some camisoles have straps of flesh-colored net which hold them securely in place, yet present no band of color through the bodice.

All-over valenciennes is used for a dainty model imported from one of the best-known lingerie shops in Paris. It is shirred into a puffed band of fine white net which passes around the top, drops down to form armholes, and is held over the shoulders by plain bands of net in three thicknesses. The fullness of the valenciennes is gathered into a lace beading two inches wide.

Through this is run pale pink ribbon, and the front fastening is made by a row of rombud buttons down the center of a double pleating of net.

Another camisole is of fine batiste, embroidered and finished at the top with ecru filet shirred into beading and tied smoothly around the bust with white ribbon. Rosettes of white ribbon, with garlands of tiny white roses, trim the lace top. White ribbon shoulder straps hold the camisole in place.

The lovely varieties of shadow laces and flouncings are being made up into camisoles. The pattern of these laces makes excellent protectors against all-seeing eyes. They are transparent, cool, and hide the corset or undervest from view.

These laces are shirred on straight bands of net or insertion to give a firm foundation. They are gathered in at the waist line under beading of embroidery or lace and can be trimmed with garlands of pink, blue or lavender handmade flowers or left in unadorned beauty, with a ribbon drawing in the edge at the top line and lace straps over the shoulders.

Do you remember the handkerchief corset covers of a decade ago? Well, these camisoles resemble them in general shape and idea. They are much more exquisite, though, being in reality a lacy underbodice which contributes to the effect of the gown worn with it.

A camisole of shadow lace or exquisite lace and embroidery will make a present for a bride-elect or girl graduate that will bring joy to the owner at every wearing.

Pretty Bonnets

THE smart shops are selling dainty bonnets made of embroidered crepon suitable for little girls from four to twelve years of age. These can be easily duplicated by the needlewoman and require but an hour or two to make them. First purchase a frame of buckram or wire covered with lawn at the milliner's. Select the variety with a puffed crown and very little brim.

The material used to cover these should be embroidered voile, batiste swiss, crepon or flowered silk.

Many of the imported models are developed of embroidered crepon, and this material comes in the soft pastel shades or in brilliant colors.

The crown of the hat is covered first, and to do this successfully cut a circular piece from the material large enough to accommodate the crown. Allow several inches, so that the material will not fit tightly over the foundation, for the top-crown must be softly gathered at the edge and stitched to the frame.

To form the brim have two pleated frills, the top one a half or three-quarters of an inch narrower than the lower one. Stitch these to the base of the crown and finish with a band of ribbon or velvet tied in a flat bow at the side. If desired a compact bunch of tiny flowers can be used to trim the side.

If point d'esprit or flowered chiffon is the material selected to cover the hat, a lining of silk will be necessary.

When choosing the French crepon have the embroidered flower of pink, blue or yellow, and have several changes of trimming and the bonnet will correspond with any frock.

Candleshades

THE woman who appreciates the beauty of candlelight likes to have pretty shades, for she realizes that these small articles are more decorative than almost any of the small household furnishings. Many of the loveliest candleshades displayed in the shops can be successfully duplicated at home. Those made of lace and silk can be readily stitched together by the needlewoman.

Foundations for the shades must be purchased first, and over flowered chiffon are built the lace coverings.

Irish crochet lace is used for one pretty shade, over a foundation of pale pink silk. A row of insertion is stitched about the top and to this is whipstitched a narrow beading, and to this an edging the same width as the insertion.

A narrow ball fringe is then joined to the edge of the lace and a band of pink ribbon threaded through the beading. This completes the dainty shade, which can be lined with any color to correspond with the room in which it is to be used.

Candleshades of shirred flowered chiffon are charming. The material is shirred very full to the frame and a narrow beading is left at the top. Finish the top and bottom with a garland of tiny flowers. You will enjoy making a set of pretty candleshades, so why not begin now?

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the fabric and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS of WELL-DRESSED FOLK

THE ENGAGEMENT LUNCHEON

Misses, the tale that I relate
This lesson seems to carry—
Choose not alone the proper mate,
But proper time to marry.

JUNE is the proper time to marry. It is rose season, when the garden may be rifled of its treasures to decorate the home or church; when the outdoor world wears its festive robe in honor of the nuptials and songbirds carol the bridal music. Could you possibly choose a more fitting time?

Among the most interesting prenuptial festivities is the engagement luncheon, which the prospective bride gives to her girl friends. The drawing on this page illustrates a clever suggestion for the table decorations and appropriate costumes for the occasion. The centerpiece represents the engagement ring and is formed of buttercups and lilies-of-the-valley. Small bouquets of the buttercups serve as place cards, and the candleshades are of buttercup yellow.

The charming costume of black and pale green is an effective combination of satin and flowered silk. The latter material forms a bolero-jacket effect on the bodice and the left half of the skirt. A deep square-cut yoke and double undersleeves are of cream net. Narrow black ribbon velvet borders the top section of the undersleeves. Finishing the neck line is a collar of embroidered cream batiste.

The contrasting coat and skirt is enjoying a well-deserved popularity. Italian-blue moire is used for the jacket and white serge for the skirt in the chic model with the rust-colored sash. The jacket is trimmed with buttons and a collar and cuffs are formed of black-and-white chiffon. Beneath this is worn a blouse of finely tucked net. Worn with this frock is a hat of natural-colored straw trimmed with garlands of white roses, one strand passing beneath the chin. This last-named feature is much favored by the Parisiennes at present.

The smart jacket-frock is developed of finest white serge, and the short-waisted coat has a vest of flowered silk, which disappears beneath a broad girdle of black satin. Red buttons trim the jacket and skirt. A hat of leghorn, of the floppy shape, trimmed with a white band darned with red wool, completes this stunning costume.

This collection of designs represents the highest examples of the couturiere's art. You will display great wisdom if you choose one or more for your wardrobe.

Advantages of Doctor Ring's Specially Ground Toric Lenses

They may be set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.

They conform to the natural curve of the eye.

They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement.

They eliminate annoying reflections from back of lenses.

They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.

They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.

They are especially desirable in Bifocals because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are much more elegant in appearance.

TORICS and KRYPTOKS cost a little more than the old or regular kind, but are preferred by those who can afford them. No extra charge for examination when you take glasses.

I do not believe you want bargain glasses any more than you want nature to endow you with a bargain pair of eyes.

The memory of the quality, the satisfaction and pleasure that you receive from wearing a properly fitted pair of glasses remain with you long after the price has been forgotten.

The more you care for the comfort of your eyes and the appearance of your glasses, the more you'll be interested in my modern methods of eye-examination and eyeglass adjustment.

Sisters, Cousins and Aunts.

That was certainly a notable gathering at Berlin a week ago, when most of the crowned heads of the world and no end of royalties assembled at the wedding of the Kaiser's well-beloved daughter. She is Emperor William's only daughter, and as dearly beloved as ever a girl was in the world. Moreover, she is thoroughly worthy of all the affection of her parents' hearts. And if the sprig of royalty who secured this treasure is not good to her, all the tortures of the Middle Ages would not furnish cruelty enough to punish him.

There were three emperors present and other royalties "too numerous to mention." Yet kinship ran through the veins of every royalty in Berlin on that occasion, and in all the others of Christian Europe who were not present.

It is said that there is not a reigning monarch in the world who cannot trace his lineage back to Rollo, the Scandinavian viking who settled in the north of France and gave that province the name of Normandy. The world of course is acquainted with the myth that amused the good Queen Victoria, to the effect that she was a descendant of David, King of Israel, through Joseph of Arimathea, the rich man of Jerusalem who lent his tomb hewn out of the solid rock as a sepulcher for the crucified Savior.

Yet there is not a throne in Europe, with the exception of Russia, occupied by a member of a family in the direct line which dates back much farther than a hundred years. The Romanoffs have reigned over Russia for a period of 300 years. The house of Norway is but of yesterday, that of Belgium but of the day before, and that of Sweden dates from the time of Napoleon. As for the English royal family, it is not much older. The first reigning monarch of the house of Brunswick, George I, was a German who could scarcely speak English.

These sisters, cousins and aunts who rule Europe claim the world as their patrimony, and like many another family group spend most of their time and waste much energy quarreling over the subdivision of the estate.

The love of the Kaiser for his daughter is exemplified in his opening of the prison doors to let go three Britishers caught spying over the fortifications of the Fatherland. It is said that Emperor William has never had heart enough to deny this favorite daughter any request she has made.

She is one of the most ardent advocates of peace in the world, and it is probably to her influence that the Emperor has been induced to tentatively propose a cessation of increased military preparation with the idea of gradual disarmament. The burden of taxation to maintain armies and navies in an awful load for the people of Europe to carry. How long they will endure this burden is not easy to determine, but the guess would be shrewd that put the shortest term to the patience of the people.

The real crisis exists all the time between Germany and Great Britain, and it is mere squabbling for wealth that lies at the root of the trouble. Great Britain has the lion's share of the oversea carrying trade of the world, and makes hundreds of millions of dollars a year by performing this service for the other peoples of the earth. Germany has been disputing her right to this monopoly, and out of this grows all the trouble between the island kingdom and the continental empire. If England will only grasp the philosophy of the old adage, "Live and let live," Europe will have peace and the necks of the people will cease to be bent under the load of military taxation.

Get Out and Vote

The voters of the city of Los Angeles are called again to take up arms against the sea of candidates and end our local political troubles. This election is to take place next Tuesday, and is to be, if we remember right, the twelfth in the year. It is to put in office a complete city government from Mayor downward.

There is no party politics at stake at all. On each ticket there are candidates of all shades of national politics, which are not involved at all. The election of next Tuesday is a mere business matter. The whole question is to secure an efficient, honest, economical city government.

There is an organization of business men that has undertaken to select a ticket and to guide the people in their voting. There is no need of any resentment as to this, for the committee is exceedingly large and thoroughly representative. The voters must have leaders and guidance if they are to do their duty properly. President Ripley of the Santa Fe is quite right in saying that the whole body of citizens are as incapable of making their laws as they are of making their shoes.

Over against this business men's ticket is a heterogeneous gathering of independents, mostly nondescripts, largely Socialists, or at least men backed by the Socialists of the city.

We think, speaking to conservative, reasonable voters, that is enough to decide the vote.

But what we wish to urge here is that every voter go out and vote. If this is done the issue is not in doubt. Will you do your duty?

A Muddle-minded Senator.

In discussing the pending tariff bill in the United States Senate the other day, Senator Thomas of Colorado upheld the Wilson-Underwood tariff bill and held up California industries as an argument for reducing the tariff schedules below the point of protection.

Senator Thomas said in substance that there were thousands of laborers in the State of California who were there because of the encouragement given to certain industries by the protection afforded by the tariff, that these laborers would not be in the State if it had not been for the tariff, and that their presence here was creating a great deal of international disturbance.

The Colorado Senator of course referred to the Japanese in California, and to the discussion created between our government and that of the Mikado through the passage of the anti-alien land bill.

Of course these Japanese laborers and many others of the Caucasian race are here because of the stimulus given to California industries through the encouragement of the protective tariff. To this protective tariff the State owes the presence of nearly a dozen beet-sugar factories, the existence of fruit industries representing 50,000 cars of citrus fruit, 100,000,000 pounds of raisins, a larger tonnage of prunes, and in fact nearly every industry in the State is the result of protective-tariff encouragement.

Was this Senator pleading for the destruction of these industries, resulting in universal industrial stagnation in the State? If these industries are the result of the protective tariff, then the removal of the tariff must result in the destruction of these industries, and where will California or any people in any part of the United States be the better for such destruction?

Spring Fashions in Clothes and Brains.

By Herbert Kaufman.

Last season's clothes won't do. They're out of date. The new models are so noticeably different that you'll have to lay in a fresh wardrobe.

You've always been mighty particular about your apparel. Even when it pinched your purse you used to economize in less important directions to maintain a smart appearance.

But that's what's the matter with you—your smartness has been only "look-deep." If you'd studied the fashions in thought half as hard as you've observed the trend in dress you'd be well on the way to the top.

Your opinions went out of style long ago. For years you've regularly looked through your wardrobe and discarded all outgrown and outworn togs. You've consistently rejected faded and ill-fitting garments without once pausing to reflect that most of your mental attitudes were designed in the last century.

The mind requires as much attention as the clothes closet. It must be regularly cleared and restocked.

Vision stands in constant need of revision.

Last year's ideas won't fit this year's ideals.

You formed most of your views, acquired most of your prejudices, obtained most of your convictions, when you were least competent to judge.

Youth, over-confident and impulsive and headstrong and conceited, sets out with a finality of attitude upon every subject from politics to the hydrostatic paradox.

Lived there ever a human who in the first flush of his manhood did not believe that he was more qualified to teach than to learn?

You are taking orders today because you were too anxious to give them yesterday.

The world has not accepted you at your face value and so you've convicted society of bias, bigotry and buncombe.

You've been looking back waiting for the procession to form behind you, and all the while it has been moving ahead.

You've been so anxious to lead that you haven't followed the crowd, and now you're crowded out.

Your taste in haberdashery, the set of your coat, and the hang of your trousers are beyond reproach; but your information is threadbare at the elbows, sags at the collar, and needs patching at both knees.

Your figure is all right, but your figures are all wrong.

You're an authority on sartorial modes, but you've lost track of recent modes in efficiency.

The best establishments have discarded tailors' dummies—they occupy too much room.

Successful merchants can't afford to waste space on show-forms.

When you're through reading about tomorrow's sales turn to the "want" page; begin to acquaint yourself with the requirements for important positions and compare your measurements with the specifications.

You'll have to reduce your chest and enlarge your brain before you'll qualify. By the tapeline of ability you're a misfit.

June! June! June!

IT IS June in California, from today for thirty days. "The leafy month of June." June of which the poet sings, and "What so rare as a day in June? Then if ever come perfect days." California is a land of outdoors at all times, but all countries are lands of outdoors in June. Even the Arctic regions put forth leaves, burgeon, bud and blossom. But even California is more provocative of outdoor life in this month of perfect days than perhaps any other season of the year. In this department reference was made a week ago to California's natural attractions under the headings, "Sierras, Sequoias, Sands." The people of California know these retreats in all their varieties as well as the birds and the wild animals of the woods know them, and love their pleasures and revel in their delights with as much abandon as the mocking-birds, or the squirrels in the woods. Other lands may have one form of outdoor enjoyment, but which has this threefold cord except matchless California? Already parties are betaking themselves to the high Sierras, where the airs come charged with the very wine of life and where the atmosphere is crystal clear, or to the woods and vales where places of entertainment are found, some plain, others luxurious, but all enjoyable. There are rills that go singing down to the river, and still upon the high mountain peaks the snow lies in broad blankets over the shoulders of the rocks. You leave the plain studded with many orange groves and orchards of deciduous fruits where already the summer is beginning to show signs of having turned the mid-point of the season, and you climb on up winding roads by streams that tumble over the rocks, and as you go higher and higher still you are following the footsteps of the spring where ferns are just peeping out of the moist earth or flowering plants are blooming in full luxuriance. Or if you wish to leave the Sierras and the Sequoias and betake yourself to the sands, there new delights await you, and these sands of California stretch for hundreds and hundreds of miles so that nobody can crowd you for elbow-room nor deprive you of sufficiency of cubic air or obstruct your views over the sea or to the towering mountains inland.

The Sport of Kings.

YES, the sport of vikings, for every viking was a sailor bold and loved to see his vessel's prow "cut the dark blue sea that glitters in the sun." He is not only a landsman but a lubberly one whose heart does not thrill at the ditty, "A wet sheet and a flowing sea, and a wind that follows fast, that fills the white and rustling sails and bends the gallant mast, that bends the gallant mast, my boy, while like an eagle free, away our good ship flies and leaves Columbia on the lea." Do you know, sympathetic and patriotic reader, that we have (not in our midst, but) in the State, a California Celebration Committee. It met the other day at Santa Barbara, and among other things launched a plan for an annual yacht race to be run from the Pacific Coast to Honolulu and return. It is hoped that the first race will take place about the time of the Portola festival at San Francisco next October. The plan is to have William G. Erwin, a millionaire sugar man of San Francisco and Honolulu, build a challenger at a cost of $15,000 to $20,000. This done, it is expected that all the sporting blood in California will be boiling at fever heat, and that once the race is put on it will be an annual fixture. It is also anticipated that two years from now that blooded sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton, will be to the fore with a big yacht when the Panama-Pacific Exposition is in progress. The plan is one which should stir all our yachtsmen and put them on their mettle.

A Well-Managed Charity.

THERE is less demand for charity to relieve pressing distress immediately in the Great Southwest than in almost any other part of the world. The man who has any talent in head or muscle can find a market for it at good prices if he is but willing to use his gifts. But there always are in the world people without ability and still more who will not use what they have. When a brother is in distress, until after relief is given, there never should be any question as to how his distress came about. The trouble with indiscriminate charity is that it is unable to deal with hypocrites and fakers who prey upon the sympathies of their fellows. Los Angeles has long had an organized charity in the body known as the Associated Charities of the city. The last report of this society, made the other day, showed that there were 8452 cases handled in two years, giving aid to 33,804 persons. An association of public accountants examined the accounts of the association, and showed that all expenses, including rent and salaries, come to only 27 per cent. of the receipts, leaving 73 per cent. of all donations to go to the support of the needy.

The Orange Season.

WE ARE now about the middle of the marketing of the orange crop of the current season. The crop of Washington navels is practically closed everywhere. The shipments in carloads come to a little less than half for the previous season and to not much more than a fifth certainly less than a fourth, of what had been expected had the January frost not worked such devastation upon the fruit. At the same time, all things considered, the season is not a disastrous one. From Glendora Heights the news comes that the shipments amounted to 105 carloads, as compared to 200 carloads to the same date a year ago. The prices reported from the same packing district for this season average $4.90 per box f.o.b. It cost $1.50 or thereabouts to market a box of oranges from the tree to the retailer, and the grower ought to get $1 a box; therefore $2.50 a box in the East is a fair price ordinary years. It would appear then that if the crop was only a half one the growers receive in this district practically as much money as from a whole crop. From the Corona district the indications are that the receipts will total $1,000,000. The report from which these facts were taken says: "This has been a most prosperous fruit season for citrus growers, and money is plentiful as a result of the fine prices received for fruit." The report from Monrovia states that the fruit exchange at that point expects to receive $40,000 more this season than last. Up to the date of the report referred to, 250 cars had been shipped, mostly navels. One carload brought $5.85 a box in the New York City market. Of course there are other districts where the results will not be so favorable, although in this article such reports as have come to hand are being taken. The facts here stated show why there is no disposition to sacrifice deciduous fruit orchards because of the calamity of last January, but that on the contrary the owners are confident in their own minds of the value of their property, and newcomers find no difficulty in sharing this conviction, as shown by the prices they are paying for orange groves.

Old San Jose a Seaport.

GUADALUPE CREEK flows down from the mountain range back of San Jose, of which Mt. Hamilton, the observatory peak, is the highest point, and runs into the head of San Francisco Bay about fifty miles from the Golden Gate at a little town on the marsh called Alviso. The War Department has had a corps of engineers studying this little creek and its mouth for the purpose of determining its availability for building a small harbor. The report is entirely encouraging, and it may be hoped that the government will undertake the work. The plan is to establish a permanent channel 300 feet wide and of a depth of eighteen feet at low tide. There would then follow a boulevard through the marsh to San Jose, and there is no doubt that the advantages to that great valley would be almost incomprehensible. In fact, San Francisco has always held her own destiny in her own hands, and with her magnificent bay and the two great rivers that come down into it, might with a little enterprise and some money establish a network of water communication that would defy railroad monopolies and cheapen transportation to the great advantage of the farmers in the interior and of consumers and merchants at the bay.

The Wilshire District.

THREE sales of real estate have been chronicled within a couple of weeks in the Wilshire district that are decidedly noteworthy. One sale concerns a lot on the corner of Sixth street and Coronado, fifty feet by 130, improved with a good dwelling house, but the value of which was largely discounted in the sale, at $19,000, or nearly $400 a front foot for the Coronado-street line. A second sale in the neighborhood was nearly opposite, on the east side of Coronado street about half-way to Wilshire boulevard, a lot 75x130 feet improved with a house of considerable age which probably cut no figure in the purchase at all, reported to have changed hands at $22,000, or nearly $300 a front foot. This is to be improved promptly with a four-story brick hotel. Previous to these sales a lot on Wilshire boulevard facing north and reaching all the way from Carondelet to Coronado street, with a frontage of 243 feet and a depth of 150 to an alley, practically unimproved, was sold at $120,000, or about $500 a front foot. These are certainly remarkable sales. It is little more than ten years since the first lot recorded above, with two others south of it, sold for $5100, or $1700 a lot, a matter of about $35 a foot. It is less than fifteen years since no bank in town would be found to estimate the Wilshire lot at over $100 a front foot. It is less than ten years since a lot on Park View a little way north of Seventh street fronting directly on the park, was bought for $90 a foot, if memory serves the writer correctly, and it is cheap today at $500 a foot.

We Do Things on a Big Scale.

THE authorities of the Southern Pacific Company give the people of Los Angeles definite assurance that the new passenger depot at Fifth street and Central avenue will be under way in a few weeks. The new depot is to cost much more than first planned, additional features being added already to cost about $60,000, and probably before the station is completed the railroad will have expended $1,000,000 on it. At Sacramento, a cement company has secured a contract from the State for the delivery of cement along the State highway to the amount of 1,500,000 barrels at $1.15 a barrel, the largest contract of this kind ever let in the country or in the world excep by the Federal government, which let one contract for 5,000,000 barrels for the Panama Canal. Now pop-corn and peanuts are a little matter, but a Fresno man has secured a concession for the sale of these delights of childhood at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and he expects to earn $100,000 in nine and a half months. The amount expected to be sold is 2,000,000 sacks, and they will make a total of 48,000,000 cubic inches. Hollywood, once an independent city, now a part of Los Angeles, is clamoring for better street car service, and a city official in discussing it assures us that seven years from now, when Federal census shall be taken, it will show 250,000 people living north of Wilshire boulevard and west of Vermont avenue. Seven years ago there were less than one-fifth of that number in that territory.

Gold Production in Alabama.

The mine production of gold in Alabama in 1912 was 809.02 fine ounces, valued at $16,724, against 915.06 fine ounces, valued at $18,916, in 1911, according to H. D. McCaskey of the United States Geological Survey. The silver output (entirely from gold ores) was 168 fine ounces, valued at $103, in 1912, against 171 ounces, valued at $91, in 1911. No placer gold was reported from Alabama in either 1912 or 1911 and the precious metal output for the State was mainly that of the Hog Mountain or Hillabee mine, in Tallapoosa county, although the Tallapoosa mine, in the same county and the Storey mine, in Talladega county, also produced some gold. The gold and silver output was all derived from siliceous ores, chiefly by cyanidation, 5693 short tons of these ores being treated in 1912, with an average recovery of $2.96 a ton, against 6360 tons in 1911, with a recovery of $2.99 and 3763 tons in 1910, with a recovery of $3.41.

She looked down, blushed and nodded her assent.

So he told her for the twenty-seventh time how he once won the game for Yale.

Old Fort Tejon---A Forgotten Chapter of History

By Harry C. Carr.

A HISTORIC HIGHWAY.

UNDER a great oak tree in the Tejon, we found, the other day, the loneliest grave I ever have seen.

Carefully brushing away the dry grass and the dirt, we read this inscription on the fallen headstone:

> "First Lieutenant John F. Castor,
>
> "Co. A, First Regiment U. S. Dragoons,
> "Died at Fort Tejon, Sept. 8, 1855."

That little forsaken headstone made the old ruins of Fort Tejon live again for me. I could see the old fort as it must have been in the early fifties.

The sun was setting as we stood at the side of the grave under the oak, and I could almost see the troopers of the old First Dragoons with their queer leather shakos and their sabres on dress parade down by the ruined adobe wall that once was the guardhouse. I could almost hear the stamp of the feet of the troop horses and catch the faint, leathery smell of the accoutrements and hear the clank of the sabres. I caught myself listening for the sweet, penetrating notes of "Retreat" and the crash of the sunset gun.

The old guard house and parade grounds.

But there came no sound except the scratching of the tiny feet of a squirrel scrambling around the deserted and ruined walls. The soldiers are gone. Only echoes and half-forgotten memories and a pitiful deserted grave.

That scene took a powerful grip on my imagination. Coming back to Los Angeles, I tried to find out what events had taken place in that old grass-grown quadrangle.

To my amazement, the history of Fort Tejon seems to have been forgotten. Standing there in the heart of the Tejon Pass, it has played a part in some of the wildest dramas of American history. The old coach road that ran through the Tejon to Stockton and San Francisco from Los Angeles was the scene of some of the most thrilling and romantic events in the annals of early California. That old highway could tell of conquests and romances; of the coming of the explorers; of the bloodthirsty crimes of the early-day California bandits, for it was the stamping ground of the notorious Joaquin Murietta and his cut-throats. It could tell of Indian fights and the conquering march of the American troops. Among all the highways of America this old coach road through the Tejon probably has the most remarkable and eventful history. In all these dramas, Fort Tejon has played a part; yet the story of the fort seems to be in danger of being a lost chapter.

The old highway is soon to be born again as one of the $18,000,000 system of State boulevards, and I hope that the few historical notes on this page will encourage some one to come forward with enough accurate data so that this old military post will not slip forgotten out of the history of the Southwest.

My friend, Senor Lopez, the courtly native majordomo at El Tejon Rancho, told me the circumstances of the founding of the fort.

The end of the Mexican war found the Indians of California in a deplorable state. They were hunted, persecuted and hungry. Lieut. (later Gen.) E. F. Beale, founder of the great quartette of ranchos of the Tejon, had just been appointed General Superintendent of Indian Affairs for California. He reported that 15,000 Indians were starving to death. He had begun his wise and beneficent plan of assembling them onto reservations. In this plan he was handicapped not only by the fact that the Indians were as wild as snakes, but also by the fact that a noisy element of the Americans was in favor of extermination. A desultory and cruel warfare had broken out along the frontier.

Partly in retribution of their wrongs and more out of the desperation of hunger and need, the Indians committed all sorts of depredations on some of the great ranchos of Southern California.

Coincident with these happenings, there occurred an astonishing epidemic of highway robberies. Armed bandits terrorized every road from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Joaquin Murietta was the most famous of these, but there were hundreds more. The country was literally alive with them. The whole of Central California was in a turmoil of rapine and murder.

About the time that Fort Tejon was established, a band of redskins had come all the way down from the Owens River country. They terrorized all the ranches in the Santa Clara Valley, running off the stock, and, in some instances, murdering whites.

Ignacio Del Valle, father of ex-Senator R. F. Del Valle of Los Angeles was at that time the most influential man in the Santa Clara. He was also one of the owners of the land grant where Fort Tejon afterward stood.

When the Owens River Indians went home from their raid, Don Ignacio presented to the authorities an insistent demand for protection. His suggestion was that an army post be established somewhere along the highway through the Tejon. A point was selected about half-way through the pass where the soldiers would be conveniently near Lieut. Beale's Indian operations and also in the midst of the bandit country.

Fort Tejon was formally established October 10, 1854. Lieut.-Col. B. L. Beall of the old First Dragoons was the first commandant. Winfield Scott Hancock, afterward one of the most famous generals in the Union army, was post quartermaster; Lieut. John Pegram, afterward a Confederate brigadier, killed in West Virginia, was adjutant and Dr. William F. Edgar, afterward a leading physician in Los Angeles, was post surgeon.

Probably owing to the pressure of circumstances, the dragoons did not wait for the erection of the adobe buildings, but marched out from the barracks at Wilmington with a pack train and went into camp among the oaks studding the Pass.

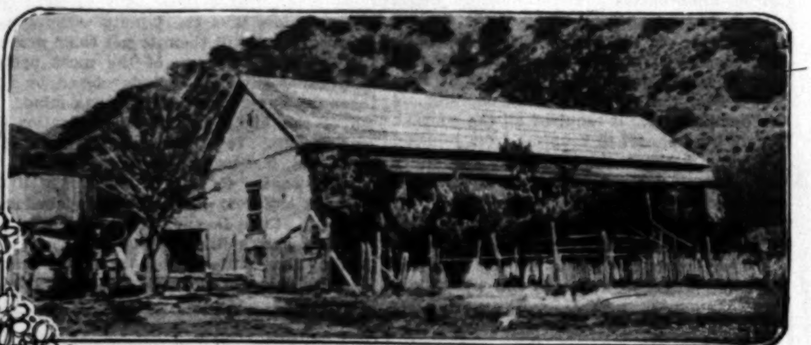
At that time the road from Los Angeles was a mere mule trail over the mountains.

The contract for hauling supplies to the new post was awarded to Don David Alexander and his partner, Gen. Phineas Banning. The latter electrified the community by announcing his intention of hauling the supplies in wagons from Los Angeles over the mule trail, and his further intention of putting on a six-horse passenger stage to run over the Mexican pack trail to Stockton.

The whole country declared the project to be madness, and no driver could be found willing to attempt the feat of driving a six-horse stage over a mountain mule trail. Gen. Banning then declared that he would drive the first stage himself.

In his "Reminiscences of a Ranger," Maj. Horace Bell has the following amusing account of that first stage ride:

"In December, Gen. Banning sat on the box of his Concord stage, to which were harnessed half a dozen well-fed, panting, foaming mustangs. He had succeeded in reaching the summit of the San Fernando and the question among his wondering passengers who had toiled up the mountain on foot was how that stage could ever descend, all declaring it an act of madness to attempt it. Banning laughingly assured them it was all right: that a man who couldn't drive a stage safely down that hill was no driver at all, and should confine himself to driving ox teams in the valley.



Officers' quarters

Picturesque bit of Tejon Pass

"Now he cracks his whip, tightens his lines, whistles to his tingling mustangs and urges them to the brink of the precipice. In a moment they are going down, down, down —rackety, clatter, bang! Sometimes the horses are ahead of the stage; sometimes the stage is ahead of the horses. All, however, going down with a crash. Finally, a conglomeration of chains, harness, coach, mustangs and Banning were found by the pursuing passengers—an intricable mass of confusions, contusions and bruises, forming a general smash-up in a thicket of chaparral at the foot of the mountain.

"Didn't I tell you I could drive over this road?" said Banning triumphantly. "A beautiful descent and less difficult than I anticipated. Gentlemen, you see my judgment was good."

This was the first vehicle to pass over the famous highway that is to be perpetuated as one of the State's great boulevards. The road was soon afterward fixed up, and the Alexander and Banning stage continued to make regular trips. Gen. Banning put on big ten-mule teams that carried supplies to the fort from Los Angeles as long as the soldiers were there.

In one of the publications of the Southern California Historical Society, Dr. Edgar tells of the first night spent at the new military post.

The Tejon Pass was thickly grown with oaks and the acorns brought large numbers of bears. Around his tent, under a big oak tree, Dr. Edgar counted the skulls of ten big bears. He states that the tree under which the soldiers had pitched his tent bore this inscription:

"I, John Beck, was killed here by a bear, Oct. 17, 1837."

This may have been a lapse of memory for the tree was probably that under which Peter Le Bec was buried. Le Bec is supposed to have been the first white man ever to see Tejon Pass. He was one of a party of Canadian trappers who came through there after bear skins. Becoming separated during the chase from the rest of his party, he shot a large grizzly. Supposing the animal to be dead, he started to skin it, when the bear recovered consciousness and killed him.

Mr. Lopez tells me that, when he was a boy, some young people camped in that vicinity, and, having obtained permission from the majordomo of the ranch, dug up the body of Peter Le Bec to establish the truth of the legend of his burial. They found the skeleton of a gigantic frame.

Dr. Edgar states that the first night the dragoons were encamped at Fort Tejon a big grizzly came nosing around for acorns. The terrified horses and mules broke away from the picket lines and stampeded into the hills.

The buildings of the post were soon afterward completed. Some of them are still standing. The mouldering adobe wall that you see so plainly from the road, to the right of the gate, was the guardhouse. The row of buildings to the left of the wagon road as you go into the post consisted of the barracks of the troopers and the quartermaster's storehouse. The barracks still stand in good condition; the storehouse is in ruins. The building farthest back and directly facing the automobile road was the officers' quarters. This building is still in good condition and is occupied by a herder employed on the Tejon ranch.

The other two ruined walls you can see standing to the right of the officers' quarters, looking in from the automobile road, were the hospital and the post drug store. There is one other building to the left of the gate as you come in which I have not been able to identify.

Col. Beall, in command of the fort, was an old officer—considerably over the present age limit of the army; and the tradition is that he did not maintain a very rigid discipline at the fort. In one of his reports, Lieut. E. F. Beale rather plaintively remarks that he asked for troops from the post on a certain occasion; but Col. Beall replied that he had no authority to send a detachment without the authority of Gen. Drum, the department commander. Lieut. Beale recommends in his report that the post be increased by another company so that soldiers could be sent out when need-

"IF THIS is human nature, oh, why then is human nature low!" That's what it reminds the Eagle of.

It also reminds the Eagle of the showman who at a certain point in the performance addressed the audience as follows: "Now friends and fellow-citizens, I will introduce to your notice the African hyena, a beast which lures its prey by crying like a human child, another case, if such were wanted, to prove the total depravity of human nature."

Depravity of human nature, my friends! There is no other creature that ever emanated from the hand of the Almighty or that in His infinite wisdom was ever permitted to live so depraved as the human race. The only other creatures to be compared in degradation to human beings are the fallen angels who converted themselves into devils and must be worse than the devil himself if they are worse than the most depraved classes of the human race.

Are you wondering what I am talking about? I have in my Eagle eye a story that appeared in this great journal of civilization the other day. It manifested a depth of degradation that no beast of the field or fowl of the air can fathom in its baseness. The buzzards, most despised of feathered tribes, would be shocked to death if they could hear that awful tale and comprehend its devilishness. It required all the courage of my Eagle heart to keep me from fainting away as I heard the words of this story hum over the wires coming from the East the other night.

No, I am not talking about the slaughter of women and children in Albania by barbarians whose blood was boiling with the resentful anger of war. I am not thinking about riotous strikers in an eastern city whose minds were inflamed by incendiary speeches from the mouths of lawless anarchists.

It is a story of womanhood and infancy, of motherhood and babyhood. This is what makes the story incomprehensible to the mind of the Eagle tribe, or even to the race of buzzards. If there is a thing that is lovely in the eyes of the Eagle it is his nestlings in the aerie on the rockbound peak of the mountain-top. There never was an Eagle mother that spread her wings in the air under the blue canopy of heaven that ever treated her younglings with cruelty or even neglected them. If you know anything of natural history you must have read that the seal tribe has patriarchal laws by which the head of the family will punish severely, even unto death in extreme cases, the female seal who neglects her young. Now the seal is an evolution downward, for it belongs to the canine tribe and has taken exactly a different course from that of the shepherd dog or of the Boston terrier, canine varieties which show a survival of the fittest while the seal is a survival of the unfittest.

Only human beings could be guilty of the indescribable, incomprehensible sin of "baby farming." That's just what I am talking about, for human mothers with hearts like flint abandon their children to the tender mercies of baby farmers, and that in the face of long experience which teaches that the heartlessness of these greedy hags is unspeakably cruel.

A mother abandons her little child in its tenderest infancy to the awful mercies of those who manage these baby farms. The baby farmers take the infants without pay or reward and kill them to get their profits. Life insurance is one of the most useful institutions invented and developed by the ingenuity and genius of the human mind. It marks the highest point of civilization in modern life. Yet these baby farmers corrupt this institution and turn it into a devilish engine for the destruction of little innocent children. Actually, the wickedness of these people is appalling. Think of insuring a baby's life for $300 and then permitting that little innocent to die under the slow agony of starvation and every kind of neglect! If such a story came from the heart of darkest Africa where savagery is at its worst it would be incomprehensible to any Eagle mother that ever spread her wings to shelter her offspring from the cold and the rain. Yet this story concerns women, mothers of children themselves, in America where the flower of civilization is most resplendent and its fruits sweetest. It is a business, if you please, to establish "a home" to receive children unwelcome to the mother's breast, and then to starve them or murder them by slow poison in order to get a few paltry dollars of insurance on their little lives. An Eagle never looked into the eye of a little Eaglet and did not feel her heart thrill with mingled pride and affection as she looked upon that little part of her own body, that life sprung from her own life, and there is no joy from the sunrise in the morning to his setting at night so keen as that of feeding the little Eaglets in the nest. There is no enemy of the Eagle tribe so fierce or powerful that the Eagle parents will not do battle with that enemy in defense of their offspring, even at the risk of the last drop of the Eagle life-blood.

Then there is another story not so diabolically wicked but more awfully foolish than this one concerning baby farming. This event happened right here in Los Angeles and right under the mother's eye from a recent date. Through her lack of reflection, of forethought, of care for her offspring helpless in its inexperience of early babyhood that mother stood at her own cottage door and saw the cruel wheels of a big red beach car grind between their steel rims and the steel rails on which they run a little 2-year-old boy into fragments so small that it required a basket to carry them home.

She lives on a street along which a streetcar line is operated. In her thoughtlessness she gave her baby boy a penny and by her own direction the little toddler undertook to pilot his way through wagons, motorcycles and street cars, not to mention automobiles and other wheeled things, in an attempt to cross the street to buy a stick of candy.

Sorry? Why, the tears flowed like a river from her eyes and her heart throbbed almost to the breaking point as she saw that little mass of bleeding humanity gathered up from the dirt of the street. Of she sobbed, "Oh, if I had only tho There is just the thing. Every human who commits a crime or makes a b like this, worse than a crime, takes in this exclamation, "If I had only thou

You see the man in the dock being for murder or robbery, and how often he plead that he was drunk or angry, if he had only thought he would not committed the deed. He pleads with judge in the name of his wife and chi who will be left destitute if he is prison, widowed and orphaned if he capital punishment.

DO WE really like these sparkling conversationalists? You know the kind I mean. Those bright creatures who are busy thinking of the next epigram all the time you are speaking. Who never really listen to a word you say beyond catching a remote hint of the drift of your remarks in order that they may hang their witticism thereon with a decent appearance of relevance.

They very rarely make an ordinary response. At all costs they must be brilliant. Every conversation is a background to throw up their shine. Your own efforts are merely their cue, as it were, for their next conversational stunt.

Their mental gymnastics [illegible] uncanny. Poor things, what a cruel fate to have to live up to a reputation as a brilliant conversationalist. The wear and tear must be terrific. I always thought the lot of the Satanic villain in Gilbert's "Fairy Dilemma," in which he was condemned to talk in rhyme for the rest of his life, was rather awful, but it must be as nothing compared to the fate of the brilliant conversationalist.

Consider for a moment the mental anguish of the dressy little society woman who is famous for her conversational sparkle! There must be no flat days for her. On those dreary occasions when she cannot think of another blessed bright remark there really is nothing for her to do but go home and hide her miserable head. If we invite a sparkling conversationalist to dinner we obviously want her to sparkle. It does not console us in the very least to be told that she is quite clever at shelling peas, or burning wood, or making bead mats.

Accomplished Guests.

ABOVE all things guests must be careful to live up to their accomplishments. That elegant young tenor, for instance. What does he suppose he was invited for, I should like to know? He might have the decency to give his hostess credit for a little gumption. His conversation is very so-so and his table manners leave a good deal to be desired. He is not expected to monopolize the conversation or set the fashion in the stylish use of cutlery. But he is required to sing nicely when he is asked and to sit down and shut up when he isn't. And if he doesn't feel like singing, how dare he come?

There is another sort of male guest that is invited out expressly to pay gentlemanly little attentions to the girls. Some men excel in this accomplishment, and a very useful one it is. They are always popular with hostesses. But one can readily understand the disgust of a hostess who had carefully selected a male guest with this object in view if he outraged her hospitality by going off to play bridge with the Thompsons and that minx of a widow.

Social Assets.

TWO old established bachelors I know can always be sure of pressing invitations from out-of-town hostesses. They both own large motor cars. "P.S. Would you mind bringing out Mrs. P. and the girls in your car?" has become a classic tacked on to the ends of their invite cards.

Now you know, under the circumstances, those men have no right to accept those invitations if their cars are out of repair. They have been known to do [illegible], but 'pon my word, it was like their blooming cheek! Every guest must have some sort of an asset, some sort of a claim upon his hostess's genial hospitality and the man with the car has no more right to go without his car than the sparkling conversationalist without her sparkle.

One elderly dame I know is in perpetual demand at dinner parties and I wondered why. One does sometimes—you know how it is. Then I discovered that she owned two unimpeachable ancestors with British titles, and a brother who is a celebrated author. By Jove, but that is some social asset. You have no idea what a lot of unpleasantness one can get away with in society with a backing like that.

Professional Borrowers.

BORROWING is a great art. Real efficiency can only be obtained through the possession of many graces and positively no conscience. The conscientious man, hard pressed, who borrows with shame and lives under a cloud until he has repaid the loan, is a poor miserable creature who makes us feel no end of a fine affluent fellow, a lordly benefactor to whom groveling gratitude is due.

But the professional borrower succeeds reversing this state of affairs with an incredible artistic skill. No wonder he regards every dollar borrowed as a dollar earned. Pay it back? What nonsense! Why should he? Did he not exude charm and flattery enough at the time of borrowing, to cover any small obligation under which he may seem to have been placed. He of all people accepts the scriptures literally. It is more blessed to give than to receive, and he that borrows for perpetuity is conferring blessing galore with a nappy finesse that is entitled to its reward.

The debonair borrower finds me weak-kneed and subservient every time. Even as I make my resolution to be firm, my fingers instinctively seek the coin. His splendid belief in himself and his ability to cull and use my money to much better advantage than I can myself, hypnotizes me. I realize that he is prepared for every excuse and parry beforehand. That nothing I can say will ever convince him that I have no money to spare. That, in fact, if it actually was my last dime he would take it with that genial manner that declines to believe that so clever a fellow as myself could ever be anything but prosperous.

It is no easier to steel one's heart against the hard-luck borrower. This kind is always careful to make solemn and definite promises of repayment. At half past one o'clock on a given day in a given place he will refund with interest any trifling amount you may have contributed to his salvation. While he always needs something quite large—say $500—he is nevertheless prepared to save your face by acc [illegible] skilfully conveying an impression of reproachful martyrdom. And he thought you were his friend. He had come to you with loyal confidence in your goodness of heart and you have failed him brutally. Had the case been reversed all that he had would have been yours. You evidently doubt his word, you have no confidence in his of repayment!

Of course as a matter of fact you On the contrary. But it takes many of fencing against the hard-luck to reach that nicety of courage to your villainy.

Who's Who----And Wherefore.

Noted Men and Women of the Southwest.

BUILT OF BRAINS.

THE Republic of Switzerland is composed for the most part of a great clutter of barren mountains capped with absolutely barren glaciers, snow and ice. Between the peaks and ridges lie beautiful vales cut by streams that have worn their way through eons down deep into the hillsides, and these collect in places in beautiful lakes. The fertile portion of the little country is exceedingly small.

Yet Switzerland imports more luxuries than many of her larger neighbors. The people of the country have invested in hotels a matter of $60,000,000.

Switzerland is the playground of Europe, and these hotels are for the accommodation of wealthy visitors from all over the world, and these luxuries go to feed the guests at these hotels.

Almost exactly two years ago I was in Switzerland and paying my first visit to Geneva. One beautiful May morning as I walked down the avenue that we would call Mont Blanc boulevard, across the bridge that spans the Rhone, and so on down by the English Gardens toward Luna Park, my eyes were attracted to the fine hotels and apartment-houses. I am a pretty loyal citizen of Los Angeles, and am hard to convince that anything elsewhere is superior to what may be found in my own home city. But when I looked upon some of these magnificent apartment-houses built for the accommodation of tourists who visit Switzerland for a few month. in the year it made my heart sick to think how far behind my home city was ir this respect.

After an absence of a year I returned in August two years ago, and found comfort in the sight of the Rampart apartments on the corner of Sixth street and Rampart boulevard. Then, soon afterward, I saw the Bryson on the corner of Rampart and Wilshire boulevards arise, and that ministered perfect comfort to my wounded spirits, and even made my heart swell with pride as I reflected that nothing in the way of an apartment-house in any city of Europe could compare in any respect with this splendid lodging-house of the city of Los Angeles.

I spent an hour the other day inspecting it from basement to roof garden, and was amazed at the perfection of its appointments. It contains about 350 rooms, divided into about ninety apartments. Some of these are bachelor's quarters containing a living-room and kitchen, at a cost of $50 a month. Others have living-room, dining-room and kitchen at about $125 a month, and on up to apartments with three rooms and kitchen at $150 a month.

From one end to the other there is no sign of any bed, wardrobe, bureau, bath or lavatory arrangements of any kind. It is almost like touching a spring and a great mirror revolves, disclosing a bed behind which are situated a bath-room and accompanying appurtenances. Or in as easy a way to cause a bookcase to swing and there is a wardrobe with dressing-room concealed by that artistic piece of furniture. The kitchens and bathrooms are all tiled, and in these rooms every bit of woodwork is of white enamel which must be kept spotlessly clean, for every fly-speck will stick out before your eyes like a brush fire in the night.

The whole top floor is devoted to an admirably appointed club room, with a ballroom attached and a big kitchen where service for 500 guests may be prepared. There is no garden on the roof, but a beautiful garden under the roof, and the views!

The Bryson is pathfinder to steer investors into a wilderness far from the city center. It is an index finger ten miles long that points investors to big fortunes. Before the Rampart and the Bryson were built it was difficult to get $100 a foot for ground along Sixth street or $125 along Wilshire. Almost directly across Wilshire boulevard from the Bryson an immense lot was sold the other day stretching from Coronado to [illegible] street for $500 a foot. That is the value of Westlake property at the present time anywhere fronting on the lake, or anywhere along Wilshire boulevard near the lake. Sixth-street property between the two parks is held at $300 a foot, and Seventh street frontage at higher figures.

Of course the I.W.W. crowd and the other [illegible] and all kinds of people who [illegible] do anything will tell you that this is a millionaire's work, and that only a millionaire could do it. The Bryson cost nearly a million dollars before it was opened, and will probably pay interest on the round figure. It is the work of Hugh W. Bryson, now a stockholder and general manager of the Engstrum contracting corporation, and this is his story: He was born in Tennessee, August 3, 1868, at the city of Memphis, and was educated in private and public schools until he came to nearly young man hood. His father was in the furniture business in Memphis and was far from being a millionaire. The boy Hugh W. Bryson began his business career as a clerk in a cotton establishment, stepped up from there to a clerkship in a bank, and then went into the real-estate business on his own account. He worked hard and saved a little money, and came to Los Angeles when just 30 years old, in 1898, and entered the Engstrum construction concern as a clerk. Then he bought an interest in the big construction company, and has been a member of it for the last six or seven years. He built the Rampart and sold it to Robert Marsh & Company, and then undertook the construction of the Bryson apartments. He set the pace in going far afield with apartment-houses, and also in building reinforced concrete apartments of the most substantial kind of construction, of the most convenient appointments, the most elegant finish and the most luxurious furnishings.

The house is full almost every day in the year to its capacity, and most of the guests are permanent, and also most of them are citizens of Los Angeles established here in business on a large scale or in professional life.

The Bryson is the creation of Hugh W. Bryson, who owns it in his own individual right and, as will be seen, is a creation of but a few years' effort with only brains for foundation stones and only brains to finance the undertaking. He had excellent judgment in going out to the high ground in the beautiful Westlake district far from the noise and bustle of the business center where the views are superb and never to be cut off, and where the air is as sweet as the breath of heaven, which it is, coming directly from limitless leagues of the uncontaminated sea.

He's a Live Wire.

In my younger days, like many men who have achieved fame and fortune (note I do not say like many other men) I was a pedagogue. Some forty years ago the first crude efforts were being made to harness electricity to do mechanical work. I remember the city editor of the Portland Oregonian coming up to the school with a miner who had brought in a device consisting of a rough circular piece of wood to which he had attached a number of magnets and set this in a frame around which other magnets were fixed, and the electric current created produced a circular motion in the round piece which was fixed on a shaft. The Oregonian wished a scientific explanation of why the magnets caused the wheel to turn. This was not the first thing of the kind, although it was an independent invention of the miner. It was farther from being the last of its kind. I remember setting the thing in motion before a class of young men who were engaged in the study of physics and urging them to devote their time and brains to the study of electricity as being the coming motive power of the world. Those who took the advice made no mistake, whatever was the fate of those who neglected it. The electric engineer of the present time comes pretty nearly being at the head of industrial affairs.

Allan Christopher Balch, general manager of the Pacific Light and Power Company and the Southern California Gas Company, and vice-president of the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation, knows something about electricity and its important uses forty years after the miner exhibited his crude device for producing circular motion by means of magnets.

Mr. Balch was born at Valley Forge, N. Y., March 13, 1864. On April 29, 1891, at Oakland, Allan Christopher Balch married Miss Janet Jacks.

Mr. Balch had been educated in the public schools of New York, fitted for college at the Cambridge High School and finally graduated from Cornell University in the class of 1889 with the degrees of mining engineer and electrical engineer.

The call of the West was loud in the young man's ears, so the year of his graduation he was found in Seattle, where he organized the firm of Baker, Balch & Company, and soon was made a director and general manager of the Home Electric Company of that city. This company and several others were amalgamated into the Union Electric Company, Mr. Balch was made general manager of this. He remained there for two years, and in 1891 went to Portland, Or., to the Union Power Company, of which he was made manager. This company supplied light and power to the city of Portland, particularly for operating the street railways.

In 1896 Mr. Balch came to Los Angeles, where he took active part in founding the San Gabriel Electric Company, one of the first large concerns of the kind in the city. Later he was one of the organizers of the Sierras Power Company and of the Mentone Power Company. These were the three great corporations which pioneered the way for electric development throughout the whole Southwest. They were in due time amalgamated into one company named the Pacific Light and Power Company, which absorbed also the San Bernardino Gas and Electric Company, the Riverside Power Company, and the San Antonio Heights Railroad Company.

Mr. Balch is associated in these undertakings with Mr. Huntington and Mr. Kerckhoff. They purchased the City Gas Company and reorganized it as the Southern California Gas Company. On account of his thorough electrical education, his large and varied experience and proved executive ability, A. C. Balch was selected as general manager of the combined organizations.

In 1902, with his associates, he bought the San Joaquin Light and Power Company, and established the executive offices in Los Angeles. Then the power and lighting facilities of Bakersfield and Merced were added.

Mr. Balch is interested in the Coalinga Water and Electric Company, the Fresno Irrigated Farms Company, Summit Lake Improvement Company and the Lerdo Land Company, and is a stockholder in many similar companies. He is a member of the California, Los Angeles Country and Crags Country clubs of Los Angeles and Bohemian and Pacific Union of San Francisco. He is a Thirty-second Degree Mason and a Shriner, and at college was in the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

A Banker of Note.

Willis Douglas Longyear is among the bankers of the longest standing here, and one of the popular financiers of the city. He was born at Grass Lake, Mich., July 2 1867, and was educated in the public schools in that city, and then as a boy went into the postoffice as a clerk for two years. From the postoffice he became a clerk in a business house in Kalamazoo, and then was in the National Bank of Kalamazoo from 1884 to 1839. He came to Los Angeles in that year, and in 1890 became connected with the Security Savings Bank, where he has been ever since.

The bank had been established the year before by a man named Meyer, who is here no longer. Mr. Sartori, now president of the bank, was cashier at that time, and Mr. Longyear was pretty nearly all the rest of the works.

The little bank of twenty-odd years ago has grown under the management of Mr. Sartori, Mr. Longyear and others until it now has close to 90,000 accounts, and its assets are crowding $50,000,000.

Those who lived in Los Angeles twenty years ago and earlier than that will remember a building contractor marked for his honesty and ability and a very popular man, the late A. F. Mackay. Mr. Longyear married a daughter of his, Miss Ida Mackay, and they have two children, a splendid specimen of young manhood in a son now attending the High School, and a sweet daughter somewhat younger.

Banker Longyear is decidedly a "mixer," for he belongs to the California Club, the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the Jonathan Club, the Los Angeles Country and the Crags Country Club. This last is an organization of about sixty members that own about 1500 acres up in the beautiful Topanga Mountains, where the members enjoy real country life to the very height of perfection.

Mr. Longyear is also a Thirty-second Degree Mason.

No end of people speculate as to this banker's name. It is either Mohawk or Pennsylvania Dutch and by his ancestors was spelled Langjahr. The present form of the name is an exact translation into English.

Due Bonifacios.

Away up at Weaverville, in Trinity county, "far from the madding crowd's ignobie strife," indeed far away from the old stage road to Oregon, in the early '60's were born two boys to one household who are well known in Los Angeles today. Charles Clark Loomis was born November 14, 1860, and his brother, Harry Loomis, October 23, 1862. Their father had come form New York and their mother from Virginia. The father came by ox-team in 1849 and went into the mining business, finally winding up at Weaverville in Trinity county, where he married and his two sons were born. They were educated at the Tehama public schools In due time they wandered to San Diego and went into the hotel business. This was in 1881, and they kept the Horton House until 1886. The brothers came to Los Angeles in 1899 and took charge of the Van Nuys Broadway, and then went to the Angelus in 1904, where they have remained ever since.

This Los Angeles hostelry has 225 rooms, and is patronized largely by commercial travelers, business men from all over the world, and in the winter time by tourists.

The Loomis brothers are pretty good authority on Los Angeles hotels. They say the Angelus has always been full in the winter time to its absolute capacity, but in the summer time, when they first went to the house, they often had plenty of room. But this has been steadily improving with the larger influx of tourists and business men to the city, until now the summer trade is very good.

These hotel men have seen many changes in San Diego and Los Angeles. When they first went down to San Diego the population was not more than about 3000. When they came to Los Angeles it was only about 100,000. In the thirteen years since they opened in the Van Nuys Broadway the population of Los Angeles has grown to nearly 500,000.

PACIFIC PERSONALS.

Maj. J. F. A. Strong, the new Governor of Alaska Territory, is said to resemble in character his name, and surely he needs to.

That was a notable gathering at the Friday Morning Clubhouse in Los Angeles the other day when Miss Mary Foy, a native of the city, formerly a teacher in the High School, told the assembled women of her visit to Washington and her entertainment by the President.

The Coast still sets the pace, and did when Reah M. Whitehead, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, faced her sister woman and attorney, Leola M. Blinn, in a criminal case before the courts of Seattle. One woman had to win in that case, and it was the one on the prosecuting side Gilbert D. Metzger, described as a wealthy contractor from Honolulu, passing through San Francisco the other day, sounded a loud note of warning as to the effect upon the island industries of the Democratic tariff with its ultimate free-trade features.

The Seattle Ad Club honored itself in honoring Joseph Blethen as its president for the coming year.

John Higgins says the navy is using on the Pacific Coast 250,000 tons of coal annually, and it should be got from Alaska.

Charles A. Weyerhaeuser of the great lumber family is one person who sees no danger in the Democratic tariff putting lumber on the free list, according to his saying at Seattle the other day.

Harold Bell Wright, the author, is making lots of money out of "best sellers." He just bought a stock farm in the Imperial Valley at $15,000.

Mexico's New Schemes for the Farmer.

By Frank G. Carpenter.

Government Plans

RECLAMATION AND IRRIGATION OF THE PUBLIC LANDS.

HOW MEXICO WILL MAKE DAMS AND SINK WELLS—600,000 ACRES OF THE IMPERIAL VALLEY TO BE OPENED—MEXICAN BEEF AND THE UNITED STATES MARKETS. NEW SCHOOLS OF AGRICULTURE—FAKE RUBBER SCHEMES AND THE NEW BANANA PLANTATIONS—MILLIONS IN CHEWING GUM.

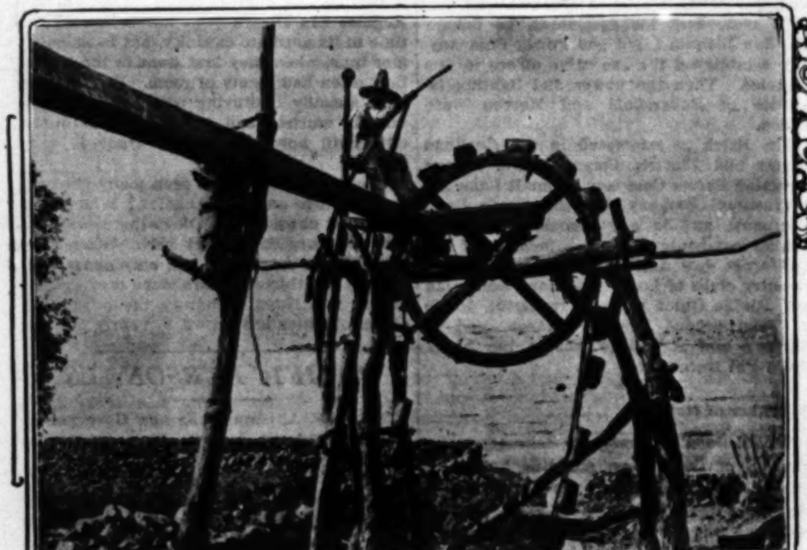
From Our Own Correspondent.

MEXICO CITY.—Many of the plans which were originated by President Madero have been adopted by his successor. This is especially so as to the new movements for building up Mexico. The Department of Public Works and that of Agriculture are being carried on along the same lines, and the gradual subdivision of the lands and the giving them back to the people has been put forth as one of the policies of the Huerta administration.

A short time before President Madero was killed I called at the Department of Public Works and had a long talk with Senor Rafael Hernandez, who was then a member of the Cabinet. He is a relative, by marriage, of the Madero family, is a man of great ability and has had largely to do with the origination of the movements here as to the public and other lands. When I called upon him he was making plans for the reclamation of lands which had been ceded by Mexico to certain foreigners, who had not complied with their concessions. Said he:

Gathering India-rubber.

Sorting coffee.



Old style irrigation in Mexico.

Plowing in Mexico.

"Mexico has awarded tens of millions of acres of excellent land to outsiders at a few cents per acre. We have given concessions to companies and private parties to survey our public lands and to look into the rights of the squatters. In some cases the reward for this trouble has been one-third of the waste lands. This work has extended over a number of States, and in connection with it, the title to millions of acres has passed from the government. As a consideration for surveying 9,000,000 acres in Lower California, one American company got the title to 3,000,000 acres and it had also the right to buy the remaining 6,000,000 acres at a cost of about 2 cents gold per acre, payable on time without interest. That company now owns something like 4,000,000 acres, which is fitted for colonization. Its lands are some of the best in Mexico. They are already worth a vast sum, and their value will be increased by the completion of the Panama Canal, after which the lands will probably be colonized.

"Other concessions of great value have been granted in other localities," Mr. Hernandez continued, "and so much of our best lands have been lost. What we are doing, however, is to go over the concessions and see whether the concessionaires have complied with the terms upon which they took over the lands. If they have not done so, we are able to get the lands back, and we are doing so. We have already been able to recover 25,000,000 or 30,000,000 acres, and we shall probably get back as much more. This will make something like 60,000,000 acres, or considerably more than two States the size of New York or Pennsylvania."

"But that must relate only to the lands forfeited by companies which have not carried out their part of the bargain?"

"Yes," replied Senor Hernandez. "It is only where the companies have not carried out their contracts. Where they have complied with the laws and regulations their property is as safe as it could be anywhere in the world, and we would not have it otherwise. We are ready to stand by our contracts, although they may have been bad ones at the time they were made."

Millions in Chewing Gum.

"How about other concessions outside lands?"

"Many concessions have been granted for almost nothing covering property which ought to give a great revenue to the government," Senor Hernandez said. "Take, for instance, chicle, the chewing gum which is now working the jaws of millions of United States citizens. That comes from here. It oozes out of a tree found in our public forests, and is gathered, based upon a tax assessed on a value of the gum at 18 pesos, or $9, per ton. The actual value of the chicle at the seaports is at least $300 a ton, and when it is landed in New York it is worth at least $500 in gold. That concession is still in force, but we shall change it as soon as its term has expired.

"Another concession is connected with guayule, a plant which grows upon our high plateaus, of which they are now making rubber. According to the terms of the concession, the government should have one-third of the net profits. In some recent returns our share of a sale of a half-million tons of this stuff was about $8500, whereas it should have been $200,000 or more. It is easy to figure the actual value of a ton of guayule. I should say the stuff is worth $125 a ton, and that that half-million tons was probably worth $625,000 in gold, of which the government should have had a full third. Nevertheless the company sent us in 17,000 pesos, or $8500. We objected, and they finally paid over $80,000, but they should have paid more."

American Capital in Mexico.

"But does Mexico want American capital?"

"Yes," replied the Secretary. "We are glad to have you people come to Mexico, and we think we can show you opportunities to make more money, perhaps, than in any place else on this continent. We want bona fide immigrants, and we want foreign capital to develop our mines, our farms and our industries. As it is now we have already hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of United States money invested here, and when conditions become a little more settled we have no doubt but that we shall have hundreds of millions more. There is no antagonism between Mexican and American interests, and I believe that the relation of the two countries will be closer and more cordial as time goes on."

Big Reclamation Schemes.

The conversation here turned to the new irrigation schemes which the government has under way, and Senor Hernandez said:

"We expect to do a great deal in reclaiming our government lands, and in the introduction of irrigation works which will water not only them, but those of private parties as well. A great part of this country is high and dry, but we have many torrential streams which might be held back by dams in reservoirs, which would give water for irrigation. Such undert are costly, and we have arranged that may be carried on through govern loans. We have established here a capital what might be called 'the Ba the Farmers.' It is really a loan tion for irrigation and agriculture. It organized as a stock company, but it is operated as an official institution, the ernment having purchased most of shares. This bank advances mone farmers at a moderate rate of interest, vided they invest at least 40 per ce the loans so received in improving properties. It has already loaned $50,000,000, and during the past months it has effected transactions gating almost 14,000,000 pesos.

"In this bank, under certain cond farmers can have loans up to 60 per of the value of their property. F

$100,000 can get a loan of $60,000, this is invested in irrigation works h get a second loan of $36,000 more."

Artesian Wells for Farmers.

"We have also an appropriation
Congress of $250,000 a year to be artesian irrigation. This is to be in much like your own reclamation which has done so much to irrigate in the West. We are using the mone sink wells in different parts of the lic.

"We have three classes of projects.
is the drilling of wells for the small holder, say the man who owns a tho acres or less. If he wishes to have a sian well bored we have our engineer ports on the possibility of finding and if their report warrants it we wi an artesian well with the underst that if sufficient water for irrigati struck the owner of the land will pa cost of the boring and a small thereon. The second class is as to holdings of medium size, that is, esta a hundred thousand acres or so. In case when the engineers' reports are factory, the government bores wells, this case only on the understanding that the private owner is to have only half of the land that can be irrigated by the water supply and that he must give an equal territory to be irrigated by the other half to the government. The latter part is then government land and as such it is divided up and sold at the high rates that irrigated tracts easily bring.

"The third class deals with the irrigation of the big estates. Take for instance a man like Terrazas, the great land owner in Chihuahua, who has an estate of 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 acres. If we should bore wells on his estate it would be with the understanding that we were to have a grant of 100,000 acres provided we could strike water sufficient for the irrigation of that land. This tract would then be divided up and sold and Terrazas would expect to make his profit out of the increased value of the surrounding territory.

"In all of these projects the money received by the government for the sales of land goes back to the reclamation fund. This fund will rapidly grow, and in time we expect it to result in the adding greatly to our irrigated territory."

Irrigation in the Imperial Valley.

I here referred to the Imperial Valley of California, and asked Senor Hernandez what would be done with that part of it which extends down into Mexico. He replied:

"Our part of the Imperial Valley is quite as valuable as that which lies in the United States. It will be irrigated by the Colorado River, which, as you know, makes a great bend across the Mexican boundary and then returns to the United States. We have had surveys made there in connection with the United States government, and have made such a water agreement with you that we can reclaim an equal territory with yourselves. I should say there is at least [illegible] acres of that land upon which we can put water, and this will be worth in the neighborhood of $200 an acre when the water is turned in. There is no soil on the face of the globe richer than that of the Imperial Valley, and as the main system of irrigation has already been completed it will take but a small amount of money for us to throw our part of it open to investment and colonization."

Mexico's Cotton Lands.

"How about your cotton plantations? Can these not be increased by irrigation?"

"Yes, we have plans to that effect. We have immense zones that are suitable for cotton, and we have one concern which is making final arrangements to cultivate about a quarter of a million acres. This will give us all the raw cotton we need, and leave something for export. As it is now, our plantations are turning out an annual yield of about 75,000,000 pounds nearly all of which is used in our factories."

"How much cotton can you raise per acre?"

"We have tracts which produce 650 pounds, or almost a bale and one-third to the acre, and we have other plantations which do not yield more than 250 or 200 pounds per acre. Our best cotton region is the Laguna district, lying in the Central States not far from Torreon. The soil there is exceedingly rich, but it must have irrigation. There are schemes for dams in that vicinity which will increase the irrigated area. Then we are growing cotton along the coasts of the States of Guerrero and Oaxaca, and near the coasts in Vera Cruz and Tamaulipas. The climate of the Pacific coast is especially favorable for cotton, and the cultivation will increase there as the transportation facilities are developed. Indeed, the construction of the railroads, already projected, will greatly enlarge our cotton belt, and we shall soon figure as one of the first-class producers in the world's cotton markets."

Mexican Beef for the United States.

"How about your stock ranches? Will you be able to supply the United States with beef in the future?"

"I do not see but that we may be able to do so," said the Mexican Secretary of Agriculture. "You people are growing so fast that you will soon be unable to feed yourselves, and we are so situated geographically that no other country can compete with us in supplying your needs. We have something like 120,000,000 acres of pasture lands and 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 head of cattle grazing upon them. We have several million sheep and we are now exporting something like 200,000 head of cattle a year!

"The stock industry is one which we could greatly increase with additional capital and better farming. Our cattle are not improved animals, and it is a question whether we can maintain fine breeds of stock without bettering our pastures. As it is now, the beasts must be hardy to feed on the sparse grasses of the dry season and to travel the long distances that are necessary to reach water. Some of our big haciendas are importing shorthorns, Herefords and other breeds, but we all know that we must improve our pastures, increase the number of drinking-places and build the necessary sheds and barns before we can radically improve our stock."

The Government and the Farmer.

"What is the government doing to teach the farmer?"

"It is just beginning its work along agricultural lines," said the Minister. "The chief trouble we have here is the poor machinery, the non-use of fertilizers, and, in addition, the backwardness of our farming class. The government is trying to show the farmers the advantages of machinery and modern farm tools. We have now stations where such machinery is shown, and where it is loaned to the farmer. As to fertilizers, we are trying to encourage the use of them, and have obtained from the railroads low rates for their transportation. We are also prohibiting the exportation of fertilizers from Mexico, and we will put heavy export duties on all such goods.

"As to the education of the farming class, we have a national school of agriculture here in Mexico City which is attended by 500 students, and we have established experiment stations and demonstration farms in different parts of the republic. We have also a staff of traveling instructors who visit the farmers on their estates, and teach them the better processes of cultivation. We hope to advance steadily along all such lines, and the prospect is that we shall greatly increase our crops and better our stock."

I asked the Secretary of Agriculture what Mexico was doing as to the tropical parts of the country. Senor Hernandez replied:

"There is a steady increase in our plantations in the lowlands along the coasts. This is especially so of coffee, which has been aided by the high prices of recent times. We have many new banana plantations, the output of which goes to the United States, but which will have a market in Europe as well. Our present production of bananas is about 150,000,000 pounds. The State of Tabasco alone annually sends to your country more than a million bunches.

"And then there is our rubber," continued Senor Hernandez. "Heavy sums have been invested in that industry, and not always judiciously. We have some forests of wild rubber trees which are producing abundantly and also some good plantations, but a number of companies have been organized in the United States and in other foreign countries which seem to have had no other purpose in mind than to secure cash stock subscriptions and to misappropriate them. These have done us great injury, and we hope there will be no more in the future.

"Our exports of india rubber last year amounted to about 15,000,000 pounds, with a value of over $10,000 000, and we sold also guayule rubber to the amount of about $6,000,000. We sold coffee during that time which brought in between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, and our exports of vegetable products were worth $45,000,000. In addition to this we are exporting fiber plants which will bring us in this year about $30,000,000 in gold. So you see that we are still doing business notwithstanding the reports concerning our disordered conditions and turbulant state."

All in a Day's Work. By S. Worthington Green.

LION AND GOATS.

JUANITO and Leon took the flock of sheep out every morning at daybreak and did not bring them back until the sun was setting. They needed no supervision or help all day long, and it was not necessary for them to take a lunch to eat at midday, for they were only two dogs, and one meal a day was all they expected or required. If they had lived later and in a better-known portion of the country they would have attracted attention as remarkable dogs, and would undoubtedly have figured in nature stories. But the place was western Texas, and the time was when the Lone Star State was an independent republic, and at that period the nature story was still to be invented.

Juanito and Leon were named by the rule of contraries, for "Johnny" was a big black fellow of pure mongrel breed, slow-moving, except when it was desirable to move quickly, and of fierce demeanor, while "Leon" was a little yapping black-and-white terrier who could never be found two consecutive seconds in the same spot. Leon, however, was not so inappropriately named after all, for he thought he was of such importance that the welfare of the flock depended on him alone, and if Juanito knew that was a fallacy you would never have suspected it from his manner, which suggested a feeling of the utmost consideration for his little friend. The two dogs, in short, were excellent companions, and shared equally the care of the flock.

If some of the sheep strayed a little farther into the chaparral than Juanito thought was wise, a deep admonitory bark or two brought them racing back; and as for Leon, he barked most of the time, always when one of the patriarchal goats that acted as bellwethers for the flock took it into his head to climb a sycamore, many of which followed the habit so common with that tree of growing in a half-reclining direction. It is possible that Leon's barking, though without perceptible effect on the flock, served to regulate their movements, it is certain that it located the exact whereabouts of the dogs and their charges for all who might be within hearing.

One day the flock had been conducted along the gentle ascent that rose from the Concho River until the stately pecans that fringed the stream had been left behind, and only an occasional dwarfed sycamore accentuated the stretches of catclaw and mesquite whose leaves furnished such delicious browsing for sheep. Everything had gone along as usual; too adventurous sheep had been recalled by deep warnings from Juanito; Leon had continually scurried here and there bearing his usual heavy weight of responsibility, and the guardian goats had chased away a strange dog that had ventured too near, for while they meekly accepted a reproof from their own dogs, even from tiny Leon, they were prompt to resent the uninvited approach of a strange animal, and had been known to put cows and horses to ignominious flight.

The little terrier had just discovered a giddy ewe straying off by herself into the chaparral, as yet unperceived by the big dog, and he flew after her, all his experience having failed to teach him that his attempt to bring her back would be fruitless. The sheep browsed unconcernedly from one shrub to another, and Leon ran yelping around her, when suddenly a gray form rose with a slight swish from out the bushes and descended fairly on the luckless sheep, crushing her to the ground. For one moment the little dog was paralyzed with amazement, then his valor returned and he promptly seized a convenient hind leg of the marauder. With a smothered growl, but without losing hold of his prey, the mountain lion turned and struck at the saucy dog, one claw laying open a deep cut in his shoulder. Leon let go the foot he was chewing, but only to grasp the still more convenient tail, and that apparently was too much for the patience of the lion, for he dropped his sheep and, seizing the rash terrier, sprang along the trunk of a leaning sycamore close by.

Leon's cries when he attacked the lion were in a key that Juanito recognized at once as meaning danger, and he ran to his friend's help. The little drama, however, had moved so rapidly that Leon was dangling from his big namesake's mouth in the sycamore when Juanito arrived, and though the tree leaned invitingly and was not high, it was still too high for Juanito, who could only leap up and bay. The other sheep, meantime, had huddled together in scared bunches, but the two big goats, obeying their instinct for the fray, were marching through the chaparral with quick but stately tread, heads held high and eyes alert. They reached the sycamore where Juanito was barking beneath and Leon was crying above, and barely halting for a quick inspection, one of them proceeded deliberately up the sloping tree trunk, his sharp hoofs making his ascent apparently as secure as the lion's if less rapid.

The tree was a twisted and dwarfed one and the lateral branches being small the lion had not ventured far, but was lying across the trunk where two branches made a broader support. He watched the commotion below with great indifference and paid no attention to the ascending goat. Just below where the lion lay the inclination of the tree trunk became greater, and for a few feet it was almost level, and when the goat reached that point he lowered his head and sprang forward, striking the lion squarely in the side. The attack was so unexpected that the big beast could not keep his balance and fell to the ground, followed by the goat, whose momentum had proved too great for his security.

The lion had no sooner struck the ground than he was seized by Juanito, ably seconded by the hoofs and horns of the goat that had remained on the ground. After a few moments of gasping indecision, little Leon, though with a badly lacerated side, added his worrying attack to the efforts of the others, and the goat that had climbed the tree, none the worse for his tumble, joined in.

The lion was able to give a very good account of himself and the ensuing melee was such a confused scramble that it seemed marvelous that the four friends could select the common enemy for attack rather than, by mistake, each other. But the ferocious bulk of Juanito, with the efficient aid of the goats and the terrier, was too much for any mountain lion, and this one was soon stretched lifeless on the ground, while the dogs licked their wounds, and the goats, with torn and bloody fleeces, stalked unconcernedly back to the sheep.

A Sudden Shower.

How rapturously run
  The light troops of the rain!
Battalions, one by one,
  Have stormed my window-pane.

Blue rank on rank they beat
  With many a silver drum;
I hear ten thousand feet
  Melodiously come.

But ah! how soon they fly,
  How swiftly take their flight,
When in the vaulted sky
  Flash the sun's blades of light!

City vs. Country.

I'm weary of country and all that it means,
I'm sick of its atmosphere, sick of its scenes,
I'm weary of horses and chickens and cows,
Of an up-to-date barn and an out-of-date house;
I'm tired of lacking both ice-box and ice,
And drinking well-water has ceased to be nice,
And I long for the city—a flat all complete—
With a delicatessen-store right down the street!

A snug city flat, with a dumb-waiter shaft,
With a janitor not too much bent upon graft,
With a bath and kitchenette showing some class,
And a nice little, neat little stove that burns gas;
With the "movies" near by, and a drug-store at hand,
Oh, who could desire to go "back to the land?"
From a right little, tight little flat that is neat,
With a delicatessen-store right down the street!

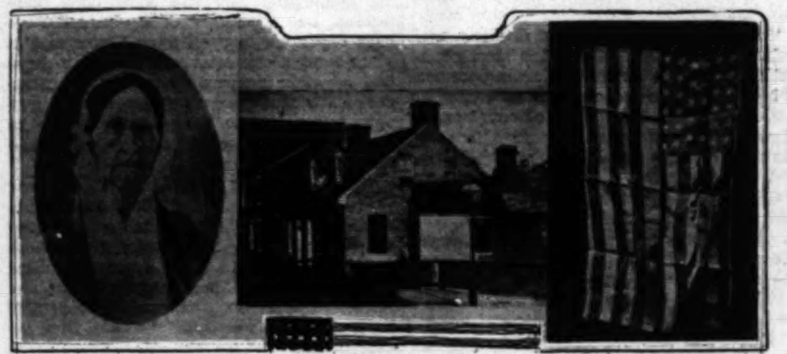
The True Story of Barbara Frietchie.

By Edward B. Warman. A M.

POETRY AND FACT.

CHRISTMAS of 1891 found Mrs. Warman and myself in the quaint old town of Frederick—"green-walled by the hills of Maryland." We were pleasantly situated in one of the old-time structures on the historic street of Patrick, only three blocks distant from the old home of Barbara Frietchie.

"On that pleasant morn of the early fall
When Lee marched over the mountain
 wall—
Over the mountains winding down,
Horse and foot, into Frederick town.
Forty flags with their silver stars,
Forty flags with their crimson bars,
Flapped in the morning wind: the sun
Of noon looked down, and saw not one.



Barbara Frietchie, her household and the "silken scarf."

Up rose old Barbara Frietchie then.
Bowed with her four-score years and ten;
Bravest of all in Frederick town,
She took up the flag the men hauled down;
In her attic window the staff she set,
To show that one heart was loyal yet.
Up the street came the rebel tread,
Stonewall Jackson riding ahead."

We are told in the poem that Jackson and his men passed by Barbara's house and fired upon the flag that was in the attic (dormer) window. This, however, is an error. In the first place poor old Barbara could not get to the room in the attic, as she was too rheumatic at the time as I was informed by her nephew.) In the second place, on September 6 the Confederate army came in on the Harper's Ferry road and passed down Patrick street, but when within a block of the house—a creek was between them and the house—they turned off at a point called Mill Alley, thus crossing the creek a block distant from the house.

Therefore, with all due deference to the loyalty of Dame Barbara, that little silken flag was not observed by Stonewall Jackson, as neither he nor his men passed the house on their entrance into Frederick City. On September 10, when Lee's army left the city, a portion of them passed Barbara's house, but Stonewall Jackson was not one of the number, as he rode around by the Presbyterian Church on Second street to call on the pastor and his wife, with whom he was well acquainted—the wife being the daughter of ex-Gov. McDowell of Virginia. It being early in the morning, Gen. Jackson dismounted, tied his horse to a tree in front of the church, and wrote the following note which he slipped under the door of the parsonage:

"My Dear Classmate: Regret not being able to see you and Mrs. Ross, but could not expect to have that pleasure at so unseasonable an hour. T. J. JACKSON."

Near this church, on Bentz street, is an old mill, and from this mill is the short cut of which I spoke, known as Mill Alley. Gen. Jackson crossed the creek and took this cut to Patrick street, joining his men after they had passed Barbara's house nearly a block beyond—sixty-three yards by actual measurement.

Barbara's niece also said to us that her aunt was quite ill at the time the troops passed by and was unable to go to the attic, or dormer window.

That Barbara Frietchie was loyal is true; that she was boldly, grandly loyal is also true. That a tiny, silken flag floated from the dormer window is also true; but that it was "rent with seam and gash" is not true; not true that it was fired upon; not true that "the dust-brown ranks stood fast;" not true that there was any occasion for

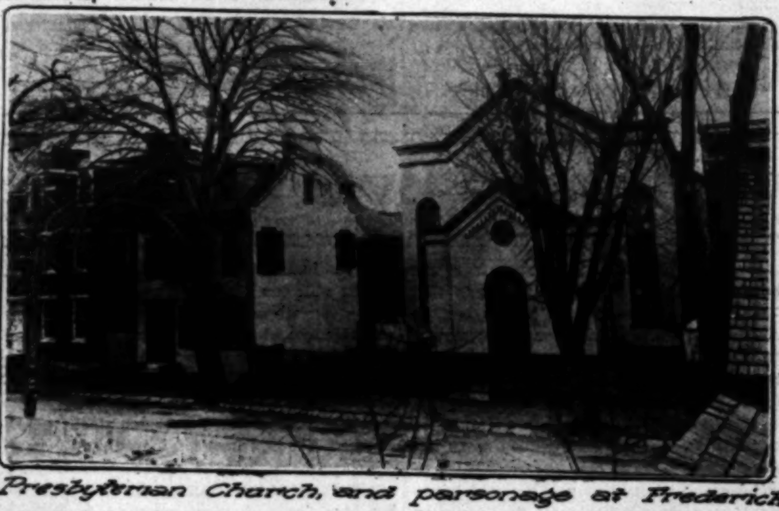
"A shade of sadness, a blush of shame
Over the face of the leader came."

No, the little flag, unobserved and undisturbed by the enemy, waved on—"rose and fell
On the loyal winds that loved it well.'"

When the Union troops passed through the little burg Barbara, with great effort, tottered to the window of her bedroom and waved the little flag which, for the occasion, she had fastened to her cane.

The Facts of the Case.

There were other and younger loyal women also in Frederick town who loved the dear old flag. A Mrs. Mary Quantrell, a school teacher, lived but a short distance from Barbara on the same street.



Presbyterian Church, and parsonage at Frederick

When Lee's army passed her house she stepped out upon the piazza and defiantly waved a miniature Stars and Stripes. An officer rode up and demanded it, at the same time remarking: "You would better keep that rag and make aprons for your children." She refused to give it up, but continued waving it even more defiantly and replied: "My children do not need aprons so badly as your men need shirts."

This enraged the officer who, under the impulse of the moment, drew his saber and cut the flag from her hand. She stooped, picked it up and "shook it forth with a royal will."

Thus it may be seen that the loyalty of the one, and the act and loyalty of the other were closely blended and, being variously reported, the story grew and became somewhat distorted and exaggerated. It reached the ear of the novelist, Mrs. Southworth, who furnished the name of Barbara together with the incident as reported to her, to Poet Whittier, who, in turn, with a vivid imagination coupled with poetic license, wove the fabric as we have it today.

In the German Reform Cemetery we visited the grave of Barbara Frietchie. There she lies by the side of her husband, who died in 1849. At the head of Barbara's grave is a small, square marble block on which is the following inscription:

BARBARA FRIETCHIE.

Died December 18, 1862.

Aged 96 Years.

Frederick City, an inland town of about 9000 inhabitants, is much prettier in its poetical setting than in prose. The town, instead of being "as fair as a garden of the Lord," is almost as suggestive of age as are the hills that surround it. Of course I am speaking of the time when the poem was written.

Being but five miles from the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains, we walked to the summit. About a quarter of a mile from the top we came to Braddock Spring, so named because Gen. Braddock and his men used this spring when camping nearby. On the top thereof was an immense flat stone said to have been placed there by his men. We reached underneath and secured some beautiful ferns for our page of Frederick relics.

When we reached the top of the mountain a beautiful view presented itself. On one side, near the base, was Middleton and the beautiful Middleton Valley; on the other side, five miles away, could be seen the historic town of Frederick, which, in all probability, would never have been so widely known had it not been for the poem of Barbara Frietchie.

Retracing our steps, we recalled the lines of the poem referring to the time—

"On that pleasant morn of the early fall
When Lee marched over the mountain
 wall—
Over the mountains winding down,
Horse and foot, into Frederick town."

The few days sojourn were pleasant ones. After securing the excellent photographs reproduced with this sketch—which same were obtained from Barbara's nephew (Mr. Byerly,) and a visit to the grave of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," we left with most pleasant recollections of our quiet Christmastide, and, with the poet, we breathed the benediction:

"And ever the stars above look down
On thy stars below in Frederick town."

Origin of Common Things.

[Tit-Bits:] Forks—Forks were unknown in England until about 300 years ago. A knife was used to cut up food, but the food was conveyed by the fingers to the mouth. The first evidence of a use of the fork in the twentieth-century fashion was by a noble lady of Byzantium, who, in the eleventh century, had married a Doge of Venice, and ate in that city after her own custom, cutting her meat very finely up and conveying it to her mouth with a two-pronged fork. The act was regarded in Venice as a sign of expensive luxury and extreme effeminacy.

Shoes—As coverings for the human foot shoes have been worn from the earliest times. The shoes of the Jews were made of wood, rush, linen, or leather. The Romans were the first to set the example of costly shoes, and introduced various decorative adornments of ivory and precious stones. In the Middle Ages fashion played some fantastic tricks with shoes, and in England, about the middle of the fifteenth century, shoes with such long points were worn that they had to be tied to the knee for convenience of walking, the dandies using silver chains for the purpose. It was about 1633 when shoes of the present form were introduced, and in 1668 the came into use as an ornament.

Chimneys—The oldest certain accoun a chimney places it in Venice in None of the Roman ruins show chim The chimney of antiquity was a hole in roof. A kitchen in Rome was alwa sooty, and the wealthy Romans used wood which would burn without soot.

Silk—The first silk was made B.C. by the wife of a Chinese Emperor. Ari totle at 350 first mentions silk among Greeks. The manufacture of silk was ried on in Sicily in the twelfth centu later spreading to Italy, Spain, and South of France. It was not manufactu in England before 1604.

Tea—Tea was introduced into Engla about the middle of the seventeenth tury, when it was a great luxury fetched from £6 to £10 a pound. Up about 1885 the greater portion of the imported into this country came China; the bulk is now obtained India and Ceylon, although China tea good quality is again working its way favor.

Beards—These were regarded as a possession by ancient races. The Je were proud of their beards, and wore th through the days of their Egyptian bonda although the Egyptians shaved. Greeks and Romans of the ancient mostly shaved, and the term "barbaro (beard-wearing) was applied for a long riod to people who were considered out the pale of polite society. Beards ha been taxed occasionally, as in Russia Peter the Great, and at an earlier date England.

Pins—Pins were in existence, no dou in prehistoric times, and have been earthed in British barrows. Brass were introduced into England from Fra about 1540, and were being made in country three years later. They were factured by machinery in England in Matches—Lucifer matches—that matches tipped with an explosive substa that bursts into flame on being struck were first used about 1834. Many impro ments have been made in matches si then, the most important of which was invention of the safety match, striking the box only.

Wire—This was originally made by mering, but is now produced by means powerful machinery which draws the metal through a series of holes of grad diminishing size. The first wire mill England was set up at Mortlake in Enormous quantities of wire, of diffe grades and sizes, are now being used, ing from a thickness difficult to bend to finest thread.

A DOUBLE TRIUMPH.

"BE NOT afraid—it is I!" The words were thundered out in stentorian tones.

"Where is he?" whispered Cousin Jasper, who was holding Esther's hand under the prayer-book. "And who's the littl fellow reading notes with his nose?"

The "little fellow" gave a quick jump, and landed at the front of the pulpit platform, one hand in the breast of his spreading-skirted frock coat, and the other deftly tucked between the lapping capes behind. He stood with one foot slightly advanced, his sparse hair plastered across his forehead, his small, not unpleasant face tensely drawn, his dark eyes snapping, and his large ears as out of proportion to his stature as his voice.

"Be not afraid, it is I!" he repeated, beaming about upon his congregation.

Jasper tittered faintly. "All right, old top—if you promise to go easy."

"Jasper!" gasped Esther; then she indignantly tried to withdraw her hand. But Jasper only tightened his grasp on it.

"Did you, my beloved, ever think seriously of those words?" And the parson came forward, his hands clasped before him, with his index finger pointing straight at Jasper. "Be not afraid—it is I!"

"Very well—we'll call it quits!" said Jasper, in a tone so low that only Esther could hear. The girl struggled again to free her hand. "Esther—my dear little cousin, behave!" whispered the young man. "Your pa's looking at you!" And sure enough the spectacled eyes of the Reverend Tutwood Little were turned in the girl's direction, although the reflection of light on the glasses effectually concealed the eyes.

"It was all very well for you to tease at Aunt Ellen's, but it isn't nice of you to carry on like this here," whispered Esther scoldingly.

"Sh—sh! Don't start an opposition sermon under your pa's very nose!" admonished Jasper.

When they arose to sing a hymn Jasper started:

"Rocky wages paid to me,
Can't you raise it two or three?"

But Esther withered him with a look, so he meekly subsided, and sang a falsetto tenor to the booming bass of the tiny parson. When it was all over Esther showed her displeasure by ignoring her big, good-looking cousin, who followed her penitently. But as they made their way through the little crowd toward the parson, who was braily shaking hands, and indulging wild, parsonly witticisms, Jasper noticed that Esther exchanged tragic glances with a tall, pale youth who accompanied a dark-eyed stylish little woman, wearing a wide-rimmed hat with red roses. She might have been anywhere from eighteen—up. He did not see her face, but there was something singularly familiar about her pose.

"Papa, this is cousin Jasper. He came to the house a short time after you left."

"Well, well, well, well, my dear boy, we've been anticipating your visit with great pleasure. So happy to meet you!" came the startlingly full deep tones of Uncle Tut. "Esther has told me so much of her visit to your mother's—and about you!"

"I hope, Uncle Tut," began Jasper seriously, "she didn't tell you about the night in China—"

"Oh, papa," interrupted Esther nervously, "excuse me—but mother told me to say she would have dinner early, and—Jasper, you and papa will have lots of time to become acquainted at home. There are so many who want to chat with papa. Come, Jasper, we—"

"Wait a moment, my dear," commanded the pastor. "Esther you remember the Rev. Dr. Bascom. You know he filled my pulpit on two or three occasions. My nephew, Mr. Ross, Dr. Bascom." Jasper extended his big paw, and vociferously shook the cold flabby hand of the young parson "with an ingrowing face,"—as Jasper described him—giving him an uncomfortable jerk at the finish. Jasper got the lay of the land quickly; the young parson was in love with Esther. "Dr. Bascom will dine with us today," continued Uncle Tut briskly. By this time everybody was gyrating toward the doors. Jasper peered about for the tall, pale youth and his handsome female companion. He spotted them in the columned peristyle, and noticed that Uncle Tut greeted them curtly, and hustled Esther ahead with Dr. Bascom.

Uncle Tut untied the hitching strap, and sprang into the little surrey. "Jasper, my boy, you'll sit beside me. The doctor and Esther will get in the back." The tone of finality irritated Jasper.

"Thanks, Uncle," he said pleasantly. "Esther and I have decided to walk. We won't be far behind you!" And waving his hat, he turned, and deliberately headed Esther for the tall, pale youth, pausing to glance back to catch the faint scowl on his uncle's face. Then he turned to catch the radiance dawning in the countenance of the good-looking youth before him.

"Cousin Jasper, this is Tom Lawson!" and the touch of tremulous joy in the girl's voice was unmistakable. "Oh—and Mrs. Lawson."

Jasper had been so occupied with his romantic discoveries concerning the cousin of whom he was so fond that he had not given more than casual attention to the beautiful little woman. The start of recognition was mutual, but unnoticed by the other two. She was beautiful—one of those who never grow old. All of the spontaneous rapture of life was in her face, and all the wisdom of worldliness. Her eyes held a thousand imps of mischief, and yet there was a something clean about the way she looked at one when her face was in repose. Jasper remembered, and cast one vindictive glance at her.

"It seems to me mother used to talk about a Mr. Ross back East—but I never met him—I was at college," volunteered Tom.

"Ross is not an uncommon name," responded Jasper; and he appropriated Tom for the walk homeward, although he knew that neither woman approved of the arrangement.

"Esther," said Uncle Tut, drawing the two into the study. "I may as well say what I have to say in the presence of your cousin. I'm very much displeased that you introduced Jasper to the Lawsons. You understand perfectly that I do not approve of that association. The young man is an idler—like most young southerners, full of the vain glory of blood and birth. And as to the mother—"

"She's a peach," broke in Jasper flippantly

"Eh? What? um—ah—yes; as I was saying—why, she goes about with the young men of Bowling Green, plays golf, and bowls in short skirts and—what do you call them?—middys. Rides horseback in divided skirts—she, the mother of a grown son! It's not proper. It's—"

"She looks only eighteen. Swell figure," cut in Jasper.

"Oh, papa, you know nothing wrong of her!" pleaded Esther.

"I'll be the judge as to that," responded Rev. Mr. Little severely. "It's due to her that your brother gave up his study for the ministry, and went East to become a broker!"

"Well, Wall street is making money for him," sulked Esther.

"Tut—tut—a daughter of mine! I am astounded! Young lady, my children obey me as long as they are members of my household—I am the master here. You will hereafter cut those Lawsons!" The little man straightened up, and tucked in his chin. Esther, tall, mild, plump and white, looked down upon him with trouble in her eyes; then her face softened. Jasper thought he had never seen anything sweeter.

"Gee! but you're a darling!" shouted Jasper, and he pulled the pretty thing into his arms, and kissed her roundly upon the lips. Uncle Tut looked uncertain for a moment, then said in his loud patronizing voice, "Well, well, I'm glad to see you cousins like brother and sister. Come here, Jasper, I want you to see the family escutcheon. This is in the original colors given to father by his uncle, Sir Henry Little. Have you a copy?"

"No, uncle," responded Jasper. "And the truth is—I'm a humble person, and I haven't in my system the vainglory of blood and birth. Very interesting—very, very interesting!"

"Um—ah—suppose we join the family. Dinner must be about ready to serve."

"I don't like your conduct toward papa," scolded Esther, as she sat beside Jasper, on the rail of the back porch in the moonlight. "It's not respectful. I used to like you, but now—"

"I don't know which way you're most charming—pouting or smiling," remarked Jasper critically, not removing his arm from her waist—he never missed an opportunity to avail himself of cousinly privileges.

At that moment a neighbor's piano broke into a lively rag. Jasper started the grotesque dance, then seizing Esther by the arms dragged her protesting into it, until she became infected. There was a titter at the screen door, and the four younger girls rushed softly out, each one being given a turn by Cousin Jasper. And they voted him the dearest, loveliest cousin in all the world.

At the approach of light, brisk footsteps there was a sudden subsidence.

"Esther, my dear, you're wanted in the study," said Mother Little, in the subdued, courageous, submissive voice of the minister's wife.

"Now the lamb goes to the slaughter," mentally remarked Jasper, joining mother and the girls in the living room.

An hour later he excused himself on the plea of having his smoke, for Uncle didn't approve of the smell of cigars in the house.

"But we just love it," confided Emma—the second girl—to Jasper. "Don't tell anyone; but I—I smoked a cigarette one day when the folks were away—it was like having a man around."

Jasper strolled out to the hammock, where a white dress was swaying gently back and forth. "Congratulations," he said simply, extending his hand to Esther.

"What?" exclaimed the girl, startled.

He sat beside her, holding up her left hand, and illuminating it with his cigar. "Twenty dollars worth. The measly chump! Well, the future Mrs. Bascom, I wish you joy." And he flung her hand from him.

"Jasper—I had to say yes. It was father's wish. What could I do?" And she broke into sobs.

Jasper drew her head upon his shoulder soothingly. "It's all right, my girl—of course you had to. But somehow—the talks we had together—your thoughts about love—I'm disappointed, that's all. You couldn't love that asinine cadaver. And then there's Tom—"

"What do you know about that?" And she drew away, catching her breath.

"Why—I saw you together—I saw your eyes meet—that's all."

"Jasper! And I thought you such an irresponsible—"

"Fool. Thanks. But tell me, Esther, how far has it gone?"

"I love him—I love him, Jasper, and he loves me. We've met—secretly, and he's kissed me. I know it's wrong. And now I shall never see him again! Jasper—Jasper—my heart's broken!" and the sobs broke forth afresh.

"Hush, hush, girlie. It's not too late. Let me think." There was a moment's silence; then Jasper asked suddenly. "Got a shawl around you? Go down to the big double swing in the back lot, and wait—wait there." A note of excitement had come into Jasper's voice, and he wound the shawl warmly about her. "Now, skidoo!" And he was off.

In front of the park he surveyed the pavement in both directions, then sauntered toward the town park. He strolled about the border of the lake; but all of the occupants of the benches were in pairs. Of course—this was no place for a disappointed lover. With a sudden intuition, he made straight for the bowling alley. "Guess the fellows have gumption enough for a Sunday side-door." And there he found the object of his search just finishing a game.

"Pretty hot in here. Let's get out. Have a cigar." And Jasper, with young Lawson beside him, was soon sauntering toward the minister's home, talking volubly.

"Yes, she was a lovely girl—became engaged to a dub just to please her father; and it about broke the hearts of the lovers," said Jasper, finishing a story.

Lawson straightened up. "But she was doing her duty—he was doing his duty. It was the right thing," responded the boy.

"The right thing be blowed!" exploded Jasper. "The right thing for him to have done was to have grabbed the girl up in his arms, and made for the nearest—or—ahem—the next nearest parsonage. It's a case similar to Esther's. Her father's made her engage herself to that walking piece of papier mache—Bascom, this very evening."

"Esther engaged! I thought she wouldn't—I can't believe it. Ross, tell me it isn't so!" And the young fellow grasped Jasper's arm.

The two stopped regarding each other. "Don't get excited," said Jasper coolly. "There isn't any spooning going on. She's down in the lot behind the house alone, in the big swing. Say—say—wait a minute. Don't do anything that could be construed—undutiful!" And his laugh followed Lawson as the youth plunged out of range of the street lights.

Jasper sat on the low cement fence, and chewed his cigar meditatively. Then with a careless, impatient exclamation of a nature that would not have edified his uncle's ears, he struck through the grounds toward the back lot. "I've got to see whether it pans out. The little fool may lecture him, and send him home to mama." But what he saw a moment later set his fears at rest. There was a black division line across Esther's white bodice.

"Tell me that you love me—tell it to me again, my own, own Esther!" the lad was saying, in low, tremulous tones.

"I never knew—that I could be so happy!" responded the girl.

"We can take the interurban car at a quarter of ten," said Tom excitedly, "and go on to Walker's Point. Don't be afraid, dear. Come—come to me. Don't let us lose our chance of happiness!"

"Don't do it that way, kids," said Jasper, breaking in upon them. "Don't be uneasy. You're going to have each other, sure. But come down to your mother's apartment, Tom, and bring the girl—in half an hour. Stay here till then. Gee! I'm taking a long chance—but here goes."

And Jasper again disappeared in the dark, leaving the lovers staring at each other in amazement.

Jasper found the outer door unlocked, and passed up the stairs of the only apartment-house in the little town. He tried the door corresponding with the directions in the bell, and to his surprise found that it yielded. He paused.

"Hello, Tom; you're in early," called a voice from the parlor. Jasper, hat in hand, stepped softly up the hall, and stood, gazing reverently at the pretty vision clad in rose. She was reading a book, and her little feet were propped on a cassock. Slowly the eyes became aware of something unusual, and raised themselves to Jasper's face. After a moment's bewildered inspection, she flung down her book, and sprang to her feet, the fire leaping to her eyes.

"Jasper Ross! I told you that last night we dined at Murray's that I never—never wished to see your face again!"

"Uh-huh! You've told me that several times, Gladys," said Jasper quietly.

"Then why—why do you always come back?"

"Because I know you want me," the young man replied. "Come, honey girl, what are you doing out in this god-forsaken place?"

"Why—" and she struggled a moment to retain her severity. "I'm being—truly rural!"

"Oh, piffle!"

"Well, then, I've bought and sold a little land, and trebled my money.

"Are you ready to go back?"

"I can't get Tom away. He's perishing with love for the dominie's daughter."

"Well, take her with us."

"I havent said I'd go."

"But you will. You've kept me on the ragged edge for five years—and that's enough. You're going to marry me now right off the reel."

"Oh—I am?"

"You are. I've been polite, and let you have your own way long enough. Come here!" And he seized her arm, and pulled her suddenly to him. For a moment the defiant look on her face faded into one of uneasiness. Then he laughed. "You ought to be licked, you little tormentor! Quick—here come the kids. Kiss me, and say, 'I will!' There, honey—you'll never be sorry!"

"Certainly it's up to you to do the telephoning," said Jasper to Tom, as the four sat at supper an hour later at Walker's Point. "No, I won't tell you what to say. It'll come to you after you've started. Go on—go on; brace up!"

The young fellow took the receiver nervously. "The Rev. Mr. Little? Y—y—yes, sir. This is—a—your son-in-law, Esther's husband, and we're willing to overlook everything if you'll—oh, I can't—here's Jasper—he'll tell you!" (Covering the mouth-piece.) "Take it, confound you, take it!"

On a Down-to-Date California Poultry Rancho.

By Alma Whitaker.

CHANTICLEER ET MADAME ENTERTAIN.

THERE were great doings at El Rancho de las Plumas, and barnyard society was in a flutter of expectation. A social event of unique character portended, in which Chanticleer and his family were not only to be hosts and entertainers, but would actually furnish in propria personae the luncheon as well.

The human lord of a California canyon inclosing the "Foothill Feather Farm" had issued invitations for the day thuswise:

"On the 20th day of April, at high noon, will be carried out, with the accompaniment of appropriate doings, the formal operation of the opening, with a loud crow, but without the use of a crowbar, of La Casa Bungalow Nueva para las Gallinas. The spot is hard by La Casa Vieja de la Paz, y cerca la Arbol viejo de los Muertos Ladrones de los Caballos—Si, Senor! You are invited to be there along with your sharpened appetite."

*NOTE — Reduced to plain English, this is an invitation to a hen-house opening.

The guests of the occasion were all-human. Dreadfully, fearfully human. Human enough to like chicken both inside and out. And the lord of the canyon had ordained that they should have chicken both inside and out to their hearts' and their tummies' content.

I was one of those guests and I know all about it. The ranch is an ideal spot in a beautiful southern canyon, and it belongs to a business man who makes this feathered world his darling hobby. A lodge and a Swiss chalet for the humans rise picturesquely from the terrain, but it is the rows of modern bungalows, exclusively for the accommodation of the vast feathered family for which the unique ranch is famous, that attracted the particular attention of the visitors.

A FAMOUS OLD ALISO TREE FLANKING A HISTORIC ADOBE.

Many kinds of fowls are here reared under ideal conditions, and I will confess to a deep and insatiable interest in chickens for the first time. Hitherto I had regarded them as merely the vague source of my breakfast egg and an occasional meal and a certain French play of recent memory. But as for making a personal call upon them under polite social conditions—well, I had never regarded them as possibly in our set, don't you know.

Wherefore I was deeply impressed with their lofty manners and fine breeding, their noble lineage and their superb plumage. Their reception of us was the acme of cordial insouciance—hospitable within decorous limits, but no toadying. There must have been many thousands of them, each race, each caste segregated in its own domain. I was formally introduced to a scion of the House of White Orpington, of Plymouth Rock, of Cornish Indian, of White-faced Black Spanish (San Roberto el Obispo,) and White Leghorn; besides great snow-white Peking ducks and a mammoth Bronze turkey tom of sixty-pound bigness and $100 valuation; not to mention many other illustrious names that escape my uninformed memory. A queer tribe of game fowl took my special fancy—they were ugly enough to have a five-century pedigree—like the Hapsburgs; but their very homeliness is their merit, so I was told.

We wandered through the bungalows—modern fowl dwellings all partitioned off into rooms and nests and roosting perches, and connected with scrupulously clean and fresh "runs." It was perfectly fascinating to come upon numberless odd eggs just dropped about anywhere, all looking so fresh and essentially eatable. In some cases I could see that Madam Chanticleer regards a nest as a superfluous luxury, and believes in the Japanese plan by which the floor suffices for the best part of the furniture.

And each domain seems situate in a more beautiful spot than the last. Indeed, the particular corner devoted to the Homer pigeons enjoys the distinction of daily visits from the young deer who come down from the chaparral-clad hillside to glean the luscious pea-pods temptingly placed there by the vrau of the establishment. Two dear little deer were shyly peeping at us when we arrived. They were not exactly frightened of us, but I observed that they thought it just as well to keep an eye out for breakers.

There were numerous nurseries for the baby chickens, teeming hundreds of fluffy little busybodies, all energetically investigating the ground with a discriminating eye. And not one single mother to take care of them! In this ideal chicken world mothers are relieved of all responsibility, and, after they have supplied the indispensable egg, they have nothing to do but cultivate their own ego and personal attractions, and of course Senor Gallo. They appear to have solved the problem of the woman's movement more effectually than we have done.

The whole system amounts to the Socialist idea of state care of the babies. It simplifies all the problems of free love and divorce so conclusively that one can see a great future for the baby incubator.

In the incubator house things were intensely interesting, for some eggs were just about to break. Tapping had been going on for some hours, and 400 new little lives were about to brave the terrors of the world. And motherless, too! But even the most sentimental observer could not pretend that these orphans were unhappy. Perhaps, after all, mothers are not all they are cracked up to be. Eggsactly!

A lordly peacock evidently objected to our intrusion and cast a scornful eye upon us. One lady of our party must have felt most uncomfortable, as he fixed a haughty eye on her inferior plumage. He is such a connoisseur in feathers, and he enjoyed the supreme conviction that his own were peerless.

The duck pond and the rustic bridge engaged our wistful admiration. What an ideal life in a California summer!

But, for my part the luncheon was more within my understanding. That is the capacity in which I have usually associated with the chicken tribe hitherto. It was certainly a delightfully unique idea, and I should say it was the first time such a celebration had taken place under such original conditions.

Of course the menu was chickeny beyond reproach. Fried chicken, roast chicken, chicken stew, chicken salad, chicken sandwiches, chicken pie and egg-nog—all served in true picnic fashion under the giant sycamore tree, of historic associations.

We were considerate enough to lunch beyond the range of vision of the other hens. It must occasion very mixed emotions to see one's visitors dining off one's little brother, no matter how complimentary their relish.

Appropriately, feathery speeches made by distinguished members of the sembled human company, and the thereof radiated proper gladness at eminent success of his novel form of tertainment. The new Hacienda of Hens—one of the most beautiful farms in the world—has been duly and propriately dedicated. We have enjoy royal day's entertainment, and we shall no time in paying our party call.

I am not a chicken woman, nor the ter of a chicken woman, and so I do undertake to give any advice here carrying on a chicken ranch. But a fri of mine, a feat sharp and a fan gives me some for the infor of novices. I ap them here, with prayers for the beginner.

Good Short Stories - - Brief Anecdotes Gathered From Many Sources.

Compiled for the Times.

A Lawyer on "Doing" Her.

ELIHU ROOT was talking about the corporation lawyer.

"He isn't so much abused as he once was," said Senator Root. "A reaction in his favor has set in. In the past a corporation lawyer couldn't attend a public dinner without having some such story as that of Lawlace thrown at him.

'Lawlace, Prof. Lawlace, taught corporation law in a famous school. He had a reputation for wit. He was always making funny cracks at modern life and society.

"A student, in answer to one of Lawlace's questions, said grandiloquently:

" 'A lawyer's first, his sole duty, is to see that though the heavens fall, justice is done.'

" 'That justice is done,' repeated Lawlace thoughtfully. 'H'm, yes, exactly. And my experience has been that the lawyer who does justice oftenest is the one who first achieves a white palace in Fifth avenue overlooking the park.' "

Candor Gone Mad.

VICTOR GRAYSON, the English Socialist and ex-M.P., denied in New York that he advised murder as a strike weapon.

"Such advice on my part," said Mr. Grayson, "would be candid, indeed, wouldn't it? It would be candor gone mad. It would be like the well-dressed lady in the department store who approached the floorwalker and said candidly:

" 'I have kleptomania. What would you advise me to take for it?' "

Too Much Talk.

KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN, in an anti-suffrage letter to the Senate, recently said:

"I'd like women to keep in the background. The limelight never made anything grow."

Mrs. Wiggin was congratulated in New York upon this epigram, but at the same time she was asked if she did not think her strong anti-suffrage stand might not harm her popularity as a writer.

"Well, we must be sincere," she replied, "whether our popularity be harmed or not. And yet——"

Here, with a laugh, Mrs. Wiggin vented another epigram.

"And yet there'd be a great deal less trouble in the world if more people stuttered."

A Noble Reminder.

DR. SIMON FLEXNER, the noted physician of New York, is a foe to warfare, and at a recent dinner he said:

"A friend of mine was telling me about the horrors of the war in the Balkans. One incident lingers in my memory.

"Three young surgeons, during a terrible battle, were working in an exposed and dangerous place. The general sent an orderly to them. The orderly galloped up with bowed head amid a rain of bullets, and demanded angrily:

" 'What are you here for? The general wants to know what the deuce you're here for?'

A young surgeon, covered with blood, looked up from the prostrate form he was bending over, and with a smile he answered:

" 'Tell the general we are here to remind you all of civilization in the midst of this brutality.' "

An Artist in Silence.

J. PIERPOINT MORGAN was always a silent man, and he would sometimes champion the silent with a story.

"Old John Bates, an upholsterer"—so the story began—"was renowned for his silence. People who had been his customers for a generation had, many of them, never heard a word from him except: 'Good morning. Five dollars. Thank you. Good day.' Old John, in fact, cultivated silence as a genius cultivates his art.

"A patron one day said to John:

" 'What's the best kind of mattress?'

" 'Hair,' was the reply.

"The patron, some twenty years later, had occasion to buy another mattress, and again he asked:

" 'What's the best kind, John?'

" 'Cotton.'

" 'Cotton?' the patron cried. 'Why, you told me twenty years ago that hair was the best.'

"The old man gave a quaint sigh.

" 'Talking has always been my ruin,' he said."

Fired for Cause.

WILLIAM J. BURNS, the detective, proposes to train up a number of young college graduates in the detecting trade.

Talking about crime to a group of college-graduate applicants for posts on his staff, Mr. Burns said:

"It doesn't take me long to decide on a lad's suitability for this career. Only the other day, for example, I discharged a Yale first-honor man after twenty-four hours' trial. His first case proved him valueless.

"What was his first case?" asked a Harvard oarsman.

"Theft of a box of soap," said Mr. Burns. "Theft of a box of soap from a freight car—and the idiot arrested a tramp"

Their Passport.

SENATOR JONES told a Senate story at a luncheon in Washington.

"We'd be a hard lot indeed, we Senators," he said, "if we were as black as we're painted. I heard a dreadful story against us yesterday.

"Two ladies, it appeared, came to the visitors' gallery and demanded admission, but they had no cards.

" 'If you have no cards, ladies,' said the doorkeeper, 'perhaps you know one of the Senators, and can get a card from him?'

" 'Oh, no, we don't know any Senators,' they said hastily.

"The doorkeeper bowed low.

" 'That, ladies,' he said, 'is very much to your credit. Pass right in.' "

* * *

A Back-hander.

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, en route for the suffrage congress at Budapest, said on the Minneapolis:

"I see that a number of influential women have appeared as anti-suffragists before the Senate committee. I'm sorry for this.

These women declare that they wish their sex well, but it is hard to understand their attitude. To me they seem to be striking a back-handed blow at progress. They are like the spiteful lady who said to an old friend:

" 'You don't show your age at all, darling.'

" 'Oh, don't I?' cried the old friend, delighted.

" 'No,' said the other. 'I was looking for it in the sitting-room. When did you scratch it out of the family Bible?' "

A Fatal Experiment.

CHARLES S. MELLEN, New England's noted railway man, said at a luncheon in Boston:

"The way some people talk, you'd think that there were a thousand safety appliances, any one of which, applied to American trains, would abolish accident and loss of life forever.

"There are, it is true, an abundance of safety devices for trains. These we are testing one by one, just as fast as we can. But very, very few of them prove, on a running train, to do the things they do on paper.

"The average safety device, indeed, recalls the widow who applied for outdoor relief.

" 'Yours is a sad case,' said the charity agent. 'How did you lose your husband, ma'am?'

" 'He was killed, sir,' answered the widow, 'while testin' a new safety cow-catcher for the P.D.R. Railroad.' "

An English Compliment.

"THE English are a heavy-handed race," said a suffragette in the smoking-room of the Colony Club.

She lighted a fresh cigarette and sipped her coffee.

"The English are heavy-handed," she repeated. "I went to hear Mrs. Pankhurst lecture in Woodstock on my last visit to England, and do you know how the silly old farmer chairman introduced her? Well, this is what he said, intending it for a compliment, mind you:

" 'Ladies and gentlemen, you have heard of Mr. Gladstone, the grand old man. Let me now introduce to you the grand old woman.' "

The College Graduate.

IT WAS the season of the college graduate, and at a dinner in Lakewood George J. Gould said:

"The college graduate has many charms, but the chiefest of them is, perhaps, his cocksureness. Ah, if we were all but as cocksure as the young college graduate on commencement day.

"I know a manufacturer who took his son, fresh from Yale, into the mill last fall to learn the business. I met this man the other day and said:

" 'You took George into the mill recently to teach him the business. How is it turning out?'

"The manufacturer passed his hand over his brow and sighed.

" 'Oh, splendidly,' he said. 'George is teaching me now.' "

Fidelity.

THOMAS NELSON PAGE, describing in Washington the devotion of the old-time Virginia slave, said:

"They tell a story about a certain Chandler Moulton and his servant, Tom.

"It was in the days of duelling, and young Marse Chan had reached the age when he should learn to handle a duelling pistol. Accordingly, every morning, old Tom would load up a pair of pistols, and, crouching behind a stone wall, he would spring up suddenly, shout: 'Now, then, Marse Chan, one, two, free, fire!' and he'd bob down again before the youth could hit him.

"But Marse Chan improved rapidly. After a week's practice he could put a hole through old Tom's hat at every shot. The hugely delighted the faithful body-servant.

" 'Keep on, Marse Chan! Keep on!' he chuckled. 'And if ye kin git de hand up a leetle mite quicker, in another week ye'll be hittin' me in the shoulder, mahk my words!' "

Excuse for Inefficiency.

MAYOR REUTTER, in an address on efficiency in Lansing, said:

"The inefficient have alwayr their excuse. And their excuse is always beside the point, always lame and empty, like their work itself.

"I once said to an inefficient workman:

" 'Hang it! George, everything I tell you goes in at one ear and comes out at the other.'

" 'Well, Mr. Reutter,' said George, with a hurt look, 'ye can't blame me for havin' two ears, can ye?' "

An Old Fraud.

VICTOR GRAYSON, the English Parliamentarian who was expelled from the House of Commons for obstruction, said in New York the other day:

"Your multi-millionaires are the glibest lot of hypocrites that history has ever seen. With one hand they make the gestures for a Sunday-school address, and with the other hand they pick the people's pockets.

"These men, preaching good and doing evil so piously, remind me of the old fraud who said:

" 'I believe in putting by something for a rainy day.'

"And so saying, he stole his neighbor's mackintosh."

The Irish Way.

AN IRISH M.P. is telling a story of a man who complained to three friends—an Englishman, a Scotchman, and an Irishman, that his servant was constantly breaking china.

"What do you think I ought to do with her?" he asked plaintively.

The practical Englishman said: "Dismiss her!" But as she was otherwise an excellent servant, her master was to do that.

"Then take it out of her wages," gested the thrifty Scot.

"That wouldn't do much good," reply, "for her wages are less amount of damage she does."

"Then raise her wages!" said the man promptly.—[Pearson's Weekly.

Isn't that a to live and die for? the answer? I say, let's quit being a covey of men and women harpies, watching our brothers and sisters—especially our sisters—and making it impossible for them to draw a free breath. Let's quit this scabby business of playing the spy—of constituting ourselves judges of our brothers and sisters, and the moment they do something unusual, or something to irritate or annoy us, making for their most vulnerable spot. And an attack on the reputation is always a sneaking, underhand job.

What are we going to do knowing that this travesty on brotherly love so largely exists among our friends and neighbors? Pay no attention to it, to be sure. Go upon our ways, doing our deeds, performing our labors and duties, and seeking our enjoyments in our own way. Strength and wholesomeness of character eventually win out even if they do not express themselves along conventional lines, and the little dabs that our curious and envious friends make at our reputations die still-born. And when we shoulder up into the front ranks of the successful, these same dabbers cry with one accord. "We always expected this: Splendid character! Fine noble creature!" And that harum-scarum motor ride we took out to the beach late at night to hear the high tide battering in on the rocks—which looked so reckless and was so entirely innocent—will be forgotten.

Do's and Dont's For the Moralist.

Don't become a self-appointed mentor of the morals of men, women, children and affairs. It is a most uncomfortable position to occupy, and is sure to make you unpopular.

Don't become impertinently cock-sure that you are always right, and the other fellow always wrong. Mistakes are easy to make, and hard to rectify.

Don't try to tell others how to bring up their children until you have learned how to bring up your own.

Don't, Mr. Bachelor, commence to lecture the very young lady severely upon the imprudences of puppy spooning, and end up by kissing her yourself.

Don't set up a howl about your poor neighbor working all day Sunday, while you ride by in an automobile. You can afford to be good now.

Don't put on your white cravat, pull a long face, and force your entire family to go to church on Sunday, then go home and find fault with everything on the dinner table, and graft and cheat in every business deal during the week.

Don't talk about the immoral tendency of the theater, and the moral uplift of the church, then spend $2 for a seat to see what the new show is like, and drop 5 cents in the plate on Sunday.

Don't rave and pretend to be shocked over the new gowns of your wife and daughter because the said gowns adhere pretty closely and have a little harmless two-inch cut up from the hem; then when you come home in time for the afternoon tea, follow the Widow Smith about—whose skirt clings most awfully, and displays the silk hosiery—well, quite some above the ankle and whose waist is a webby transparency over low-cut lingerie; then tell the wife that Mrs. Smith is an exemplary little woman, and that you recommend having her at the house quite—quite often.

Don't roundly rebuke your son, and mortify him in the presence of guests because the little fellow did not think to draw up a chair for the lady, then sit engrossed in a book when your wife and her friend enter the parlor, and let your son see you allow them to find their own seats.

Don't dope out the moralist stuff morning, noon and night to the tiny ones, and to those weaker than yourself; don't preach good manners and immaculate morals at them without being pretty sure where you yourself stand in these particular matters. And don't, when your kiddie finds you out in an inconsistency, and has the temerity to point out the fact to you, silence him with a trouncing. You may silence his tongue, but not his soul questioning.

Don't ever consider yourself safe in a false stand of self-righteousness. All the arguments, money or power of position you may bring to bolster yourself in your own esteem and that of others while protecting yourself or another in a criminal neglect or persecution of the helpless, will not save you from your true conscience nor from the penetration and contempt of others whom diplomacy may hold silent.

To Attract and to Hold.

Great bodies move slowly. Well—perhaps; but don't you envy the girl or the man who thinks fast, and has the right word to say at the right moment upon every occasion? Some people are born with this sort of genius. But don't despair, pretty wall-flowers, it may be cultivated—yes, indeedy. Its lack is due to a species of laziness if you who have it not. Isn't it perfectly tantalizing, though, to know that you have brains, to know that you have thoughts and knowledges worth communicating, and that would prove most interesting to others, and to have some brainless little chit come along and put it all over you, becoming the center of absorption to gray-haired scholar and addle-pated youth alike? Yi-yi! It is indeed humiliating. You go home and look at yourself in the glass, and although you are pretty good-looking, and have large, luminous eyes, you vote yourself a "cheese." Why, the other girl was homely as well as brainless; but she certainly possessed the "zizz." What is zizz? Get down your mental retort, and analyze it. A few molecules of gumption, the phrenological faculty of language—yes, language without brains and without any special education. There you are—born with it. Even if the lass says "I have went," she is sure to say it in an interesting way, and to say something equally ungrammatical and in an equally interesting way the next moment. But to continue the analysis: a fund of vitality, a cheerful spirit, freedom from the danger of getting into a thoughtful state of mind, and of therefore lapsing into silence in the presence of others; the genius for seeming to become intensely interested in the personalities and affairs of others, and handing out the subtle compliment of this interest. Above all is the faculty of alertness—the faculty of taking in all of the details of the field of action at a glance. This is cleverness, if it is not intellectuality, and you'll have to take off your hat to it.

Don't say that you never could be clever—that it is not native to you. If you have real brain fiber almost anything is possible. Well—how to begin?

In the first place, my dear, 'tis a woeful mistake to permit a mental slump after the valedictory has been laid away in a roll of perfumed silk and white ribbon. Sometimes you lay away your brains with it, and become beastly uninteresting. Don't do it, dear girl, and sit around in heavy passivity waiting for some youth to land you into the safe commonplaces of matrimony. For commonplaces are all that you will get if you don't wake up.

Better not let your brain get rusty from disuse, and don't cumber it with lumber too heavy for it. Know things and force yourself to talk about them. Practice on the family—father in particular. During the day get up in subjects that interest him. Try to imagine that he is someone else's father whom you are under obligation to entertain. Dress for him, perform delightful little favors for him, sing, laugh, chatter pretty nothings. Practice, practice until you have the arts of the brainless, artful minx at your tongue's and finger's tips, and you'll be able to attract, and to hold after you have attracted, which is going the minx one better.

speak of sickness. Dr. Edgar, the first post surgeon, was on one occasion summoned in the middle of the night to go to the bedside of an old sergeant of dragoons who seems to have been on outpost duty. Riding in the midst of a heavy storm, his horse slipped and fell on him, paralyzing his right side.

Mr. Lopez tells me that when, from sickness and desertions, the Indians fell off to a few hundred, they were moved away to a cañon not far from the present Tejon ranch house. Their descendants still occupy the place—a beautiful spot of fertile river bottoms and giant oaks. Here Gen. Beale accomplished the wonderful work of transforming these wild, low, grasshopper-eating savages into something approaching hard-working, well-behaved, industrious farmer people.

When the Civil War broke out, the garrison was reduced to a minimum and the post languished. Finally, in 1864, it was abandoned and the remaining troops sent East.

The land grant upon which it stood passed out of the hands of the Aguirres and the Del Valles and was added to Gen. Beale's great quartette of ranchos. It has now become the property of the recent purchasers of the four vast ranchos "rolled into one."

So complete has been the post's extinction that not even the troops who occupied its barracks remain on the army rolls. Dragoons and mounted rifles are no more. In the great reorganization of the army the mounted rifles and dragoons were wiped out and the present cavalry organizations took their place.

So the adobe buildings of Fort Tejon may be said to be a monument to the old First Dragoons of gallant memory.

different breeds, unless you are prepared with proper subdivisions. Intermixing produces mongrel stock.

16. As to what breeds or varieties to keep, make your own choice, after investigation, advice and experiment. On a town lot one breed is enough, ordinarily.

17. Do not think that the business will run itself. Attend to it closely, day in and day out, and sometimes o' nights.

18. There are more do's and don'ts to be learned, and it is up to you to learn them. In the chicken business you may not be able to recline on downy beds of ease (made of pinfeathers) by the end of the first month's operations, but you can keep ahead of the game and derive no little pleasure out of it while marching in the van.

Bulls of Graduates.

[New York Sun:] How well educated along elected lines one may be and yet how ridiculously remiss in others is illustrated in the recent congratulatory letter reported to have been received by President Woodrow Wilson from Tadashige Suzarki, a Princeton graduate, now at Shiroishi, Miyagiken, Japan. Among other things the alumnus of the big university says: "I send you my hearty congratulations for your throne of Presidency on this memorable day. When I knew that Hon. Wilson was elected Presidency of U. S. A., I could not keep a loud hurrah."

While this may seem laughable, it is not much better or worse than some of the glaring errors in orthography, syntax and prosody discovered in a number of very bright graduates of our best universities when occasion came to test their ordinary scholastic acquisitions. A poor speller at college is taken as a matter of course in most cases. It is supposed that if he has advanced through the high or preparatory school and has not been turned out a proficient speller that he is a hopeless case in this respect and there is no use trying to improve him. So his spelling is condoned and his attention directed to logarithms perhaps.

A droll story is told of the student who was turned out the best mining engineer of his class. A task had been set him by a professor. He failed to finish it, and wrote to his preceptor: "I am sorry the work you gave me to do is not dun. I sprained my ancle." The reply sent him read: "If you sprained your ankel of course that is all there is to it. Your work was doo to be done a week ago, however, and I'm afraid it is now too late."

The Patient Public.

We are waiting for a system
That will take the trusts and twist 'em
Till their gains are scattered in the public hands,
While the rich pay all the taxes
And the price of things relaxes
And we'll never have to meet unjust demands.

We are waiting, we are waiting
With a courage unabating
For the simple standards that we knew of yore;
We have felt the fond elation
Of a glorious expectation,
And if necessary we can wait some more.

School Gardens.

TWENTY - FIVE THOUSAND PUPILS IN LOS ANGELES.

FOR years school gardening in Los Angeles has been carried along in a desultory sort of way, never reaching an active stage in more than a score of schools until late in the year 1912. Since that time this phase of school work has been pushed on an organized basis so that at present it is accomplishing more and more each succeeding month.

In September of last year the agricultural department of the city schools was instituted with C. F. Palmer as supervisor and four able teachers assigned as assistants. The city was divided into four districts, Mrs. G. E. Larkey having the northwest, Miss Clair Healy the northeast, E. P. Terry the southwest, and E. C. Langlois the southeast. At present seventy-five schools and 25,000 pupils are receiving more or less instruction. Lack of suitable grounds is one of the most serious problems now confronting this department. About forty vacant lots are being used, nearly all of which are adjoining the school yards, though a few are several blocks distant.

Aside from lack of area the quality of soils is a serious and perplexing subject. When it is known that nearly all plats used are really improved by hauling in street sweepings the seriousness of the matter becomes apparent. The writer has examined many lots and gardens filled with this material and would not, for quite a consideration, have a single load of it put in the surface or working soil of his own garden. In some cases teachers and pupils have tackled this problem under circumstances that might well appall the experienced soil worker. Land and fertilizers have been hauled or carried from home or near-by premises, by the children, and soils rendered somewhat usable through much hard labor in preparation. In the opinion of the writer such experiences and lessons are valuable, both to the teachers and to their charges.

The writer has no desire to criticise the splendid work of the staff now handling this phase of school work but must give it as his opinion that the next greatest need is the connection with this department of someone who really knows how to garden. A considerable area, with good soil, is badly needed, this to be in charge of a first-class gardener who has had long years of practical experience with a great variety of plants, soils, conditions, etc. Such a man could add much to the value of the teaching by instructing the teachers and demonstrating by actual examples the practical and profitable side of plant growing. While the primary purpose of school gardens is to interest the child in plant life, crops, soils, care necessary, etc., such instruction may as well have an economic and commercial value and the children be taught the best methods of attaining the several ends sought. At present the supervisor represents the theoretical and scientific side and neither he nor assistants have had sufficient actual experience in growing things at their best, such as can be carried out only in first-class private gardens for the growth of plants or their products (or both) for market. Given an assistant of this sort the supervisor would have someone to lean upon in supporting the practical side of the work and for demonstration of any and all new work he wishes to institute. All the teachers stand in need of such information and instruction as a practical and experienced gardener could give them, even though he were a man of much less education from a school point of view. Such a man could be obtained at a very moderate salary and perhaps several would be tried before one entirely satisfactory be found. In the opinion of the writer our city school board could make no better investment for the good of all than procuring such a garden as herein hinted at, and the practical care-taker whose very necessary services are more freely discussed.

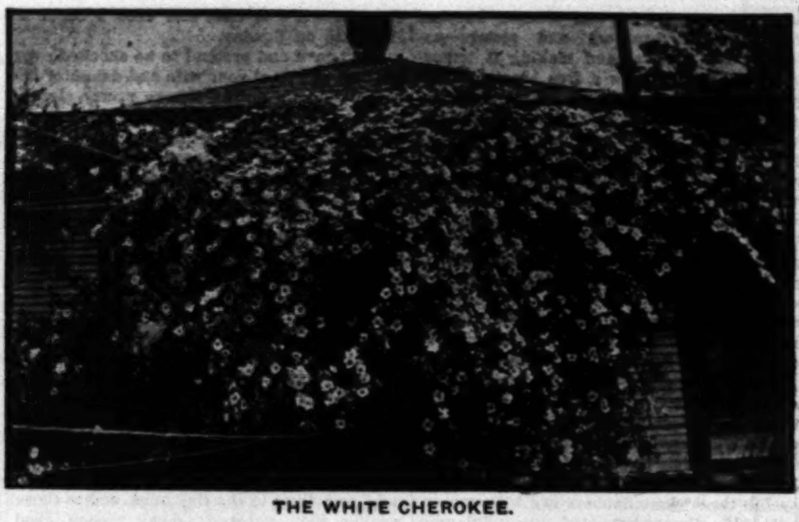
The White Cherokee.



THE WHITE CHEROKEE.

THERE is a charm—a purity—a sufficiency about the white Cherokee that the later sorts do not have. We would have the pink sort lighter or darker in color than it is, or hold its color longer, or something else is wrong and it is the same with all colored flowers. In white alone you will find "no grounds for complaint," like the man who looked in the pot for the cause of his weak coffee. For fine, glossy foliage throughout the year, as well as for an abundance of annual blossoms, no rose compares with the Cherokee. It is not exacting in either soil, climate, or conditions, except it will not stand the cold of the "Eastern States" and its growth is confined to the States along the southern border of this country.

Getting Rid of Alkali.

NUMEROUS inquiries have come to this department dealing strictly with the commercial end of horticulture or agriculture. Because of short notes on alkali, in the study of which the writer has specialized, several have wished to know what crops, if any, may be grown that will extract alkali from the soil so that it will be carted away with the land's products.

This erroneous idea prevails to such an extent that the land owners should be set right. Such removals amount to so little as scarcely to merit consideration in connection with other and more important questions constantly confronting the owners of all lands, alkaline or otherwise. No crops may be grown that in a dried state will carry away more than about five pounds of alkali to 1000 pounds of the gross. Surely this rate of getting rid of this bothersome mineral will not appeal to any practical man. Such a method of riddance is so far from consideration in working and cropping land that would profit far more by bringing alkali to the surface through over-irrigation and sweeping it up, when crystallized on the surface, by means of a whisk broom and housewive's dust-pan. The question of raising or lowering the alkali contents of land so as not to interfere with crops cannot be discussed here, for lack of space. Suffice to say there is but one way of getting rid of this mineral in sufficient quantity to permanently benefit land so treated, and that is by under-drainage of the soil.

Daleas of the Desert.

IN CALIFORNIA of the South we have nine native species of shrubs known as Dalea, recently changed by the enterprising botanists to Parosela, but still Dalea in common parlance. Plant fanciers must not confuse the leguminous with the dahlia of the garden, which is pronounced with the "a" broad, having been named after one Dahl—a name pronounced nearly as broadly as our English word doll. To return to our Daleas (with the long a;) had we a botanic garden where native plants could be tried out, doubtless good garden subjects might be found in this genus, for some of these flower very freely and are especially adapted to very dry situations and locations.

Photographing Red Snow.

SOME months ago an interesting article on red snow, by S. B. Parish, was published in this department. It appears that a fine color-photograph of this natural phenomenon was obtained, by the Lumiere process, in the Yosemite Valley during last July. Ford A. Carpenter of San Diego obtained the original picture of these fields of microscopic plants and the same was reproduced in natural colors in Transactions of the San Diego Society of Natural History (Vol. 1, No. 3) and has evoked considerable favorable comment and discussion. This red snow plant field is believed to be the most southerly ever observed, though a frequent sight in the far North and in European mountains.

Too Much Shade.

IT WILL be noted by the observant that about the present season of the year that portion of California lying below the Tehachepi has an excess of nearly sunless weather, a sharp contrast with the near-by cloudless sky dominant for some months later on. This high, protective cloud sufficiently protects to give us some of the loveliest and balmiest atmospheres one can experience, yet no other shade is required and too many dwellings have an excess of the latter. If the vines that envelop so many cottages are past the blooming period, as many are, they should be cut back at once. A new growth will quickly spring forth that will give all desired shade, and a most charming freshness, for the later dry, warm days of summer and perhaps too much for winter. Vines that flower in the fall are better for house covering for the reason they may be cut back after flowering and so leave the dwelling exposed to light and air and sun throughout winter or the so-called rainy season. Much ill health is engendered by the overshading of residences, for with us nearly all classes of vines grow so comparatively redundant as to constitute a real menace to health. Nevertheless, but little time is necessary to reduce them to the safety stage.

Old-Fashioned Flowers.

THE floral exhibitions this spring have shown a lamentable lack of good, old-fashioned herbaceous-rooted perennials. Those few seen at flower shows were unusually good. A few long sprays of foxglove in the Eagle Rock floral exhibit were the best ever coming under the writer's notice. The weather of the present year has, up to date of writing, been extremely favorable to this class of plants. California gardens have for all time been lacking in the charm which these plants alone can supply and which cannot be displaced by any rare and costly introductions without loss of attraction, and often of real live interest.

Dwellers in the Soil.

MANY gardens are troubled with an excess of worms and insects in the soil; the writer's is one of the number. The introduction of much organic matter in the soil is responsible. It has been found that lime and wood ashes have a strong tendency to drive away these pests, especially if the soil be constantly stirred. Some growers state that tobacco dust is an excellent material to introduce and that it is also a good fertilizer. In small gardens it could be used with economy, but on la it would prove costly. It is clai tually destroy wire-worms or one of the worst soil pests we h with.

School.

Sun:] Make a study of the of the large schools and schools. Decide whether your child's temperament and disposition will develop better through contact with a few carefully-selected children, or whether he or she needs a larger number of companions as a stimulus to altruistic growth and development.

If the child is an only child, or if he or she, even to your blind eyes, seems to be a trifle selfish, then the large school will be more helpful. If the child is delicate or in need of special training along any certain physiological or psychological line, the small school will probably make the greater appeal.

Next, the child's future must be considered. What is to be the child's life when he leaves school? His future plan of living or his vocation should determine to what specialized type of school he ought to be sent.

The Moral Atmosphere.

Is the school sympathetic in tone or is its attitude toward the child one of cold formality? Is the discipline repressive in character, with obedience coming as a direct result of outward force? Or is the discipline a suggestive one, leading the child to control through self-development? If the latter is true then the child is getting that best of all training—a training in moral self-reliance.

Demand for Summer Eggs Makes Good Market.

By Michael K. Boyer. POULTRY EDITOR OF THE FARM JOURNAL.

Expert Advice.

FORCE THE HENS TO LAY DURING THE HOT MONTHS.

[Keeping up the summer egg crop is the theme of Mr. Boyer's article this week. He points out the necessity of meeting the increased demand of pleasure resorts for eggs and calls attention to the better prices obtainable in summer as compared with the spring market.

Methods of overcoming the depressing effects of summer heat on the hen's productiveness are described, as are also questions of feeding and the general care of the flock.

The gist of his article is summarized in his advice to keep both a summer and winter-laying flock, fattening and killing the poultry off for the market after their laying season is completed.

The White Cornish depicted herewith by Mr. Graham is a strikingly attractive fowl that is rapidly regaining some of its lost popularity. Breeders are devoting considerable attention to this bird, which had an interesting origin, but has passed through rather a devious career. In their best form they present a really striking frame and unusual features of physical development.]

THERE is a lull in the summer egg crop, just as there is in the midwinter product. Extreme heat has the same detrimental effect upon egg-making as has extreme cold.

With the increased demand of pleasure resorts for summer eggs, and the naturally small yield, better prices as a rule can be obtained than can be secured during the late spring months.

There are two factors that emphasize the summer egg shortage—one is broodiness, the other, the gradual approach of the molting period. To overcome these is a question of breeding; to increase the yield becomes a matter of feed.

Hot weather is depressing, not only to birds, but animals and human beings as well. To get up energy and productiveness under such a drawback calls for good engineering.

In the first place, the hens must be kept comfortable. They must be in as cool a place as possible, protected from the hot rays of the sun and sleep at night practically in the open. All these facts have gradually led up to the adoption of the scratching-shed plan of housing.

Next we have the water supply. Scientists tell us that in 100 parts of the white of an egg 80 per cent. is water and in 100 parts of the yolk 52 per cent. is water. This shows the importance of having a continual supply of fresh water constantly within reach. These water dishes should be placed in the coolest spot possible.

Next we have the feed supply. Too much importance cannot be attached to the quality. The feed must be more of a nitrogenous nature, like wheat and oats, for instance, with just sufficient carbonaceous food (corn) to properly balance the ration, say, for example, two parts wheat, two parts oats and one part corn. In the morning a mush should be made of two parts wheat bran to one part each of middlings, cornmeal and ground oats. These parts must be governed by weight, while the grain ration should be made up by measurement.

In the mash food there should be an addition of 25 per cent. of meat scrap. If at all possible, twice a week there should be a separate feed of green cut-bone, allowing about an ounce for each fowl in the pen.

Green food must not be forgotten. Each morning the fowls should be given grass or other green stuff. It will be noticed that they will eat of it more greedily when given the first thing in the morning than they will at any other time of the day, and it does them the most good at that time.

Where it can be purchased reasonably it will be profitable to mix the mashes with milk—skim milk or even sour milk.

While this method of feeding and care will do the trick of increased summer laying, there is additional work to be done in overcoming the loss sustained by hens becoming broody, or young hens going into molt early. This must be done by breeding, supplemented, of course, with the aforesaid method of feeding. Here is where summer hatching comes into great use. Each year hatches should be made in June, July and August, and from these the pullets selected and grown. These pullets will pass over the molting season, and it is a rarity for a midsummer-hatched pullet to become broody.

There is more or less wear and tear on young hens that are forced for summer egg production, and the hot weather and the strain on them often cause considerable reduction in flesh. As soon as the season is over they should be yarded separately and fed to take on fat. These hens will then come in for good prices around the holidays, when sold as roasters. The amount realized for the carcass is all clear gain, as the hen has given a profit in the eggs she produced.

Regularly each year there is a falling off in the egg crop, especially during the months of July and August. The prices, it is true, are not so tempting as they are in midwinter, but then the cost of production is not generally so great. There is a more liberal supply of green stuff, which, being of a bulky nature, saves considerable grain.

The effect of the hot weather of July and August can be considerably reduced by providing such protection as shade in the runs and open-front houses at night. Where trees are not grown in the runs, canopies can be erected under w hens can shield themselves.

When hens are compelled to close, badly-ventilated houses at are unable to secure the rest and that will be necessary for the laying imposes upon the system. adoption of the scratching-shed the birds are quartered indoors door benefits. An English Fowl With Oriental Ancestors.

[BY LOUIS PAUL GRAHAM.]

As pointed out in a previous article on Dark Cornish, the ancestors of the Cornish fowls were Aseels, Malays and English game fowls. The former were imported from India in their purity, and the fanciers of Cornwall set about crossing them with other domestic fowls to produce something distinctive, either in a utility way or for its beauty. The results of their crossing with the English game produced what are now known as dark Cornish, which were very popular in the county of Cornwall for a decade or so before their fame spread over other sections and caused them to be obtained and bred in the other parts of England. Shortly after this they spread to the United States, and, as is always the case, fanciers commenced to breed the fowl in other colors. Within two or three years of the first importation of Dark Cornish came the whites and blues, and within the last ten years we have the Buff Laced.

At that time they were all known as Indian Games, Cornish Indians and White Indians. Of late, however, the breeders of these varieties are endeavoring to emphasize and increase their utility value and forget as far as possible their Game origin, and a concerted effort is being made to have the fowls known as Cornish fowls, in honor of the county in England which produced them.

Considerable White Aseel and White Malay blood entered in both compositions of the White Cornish, and in America, what is known as the White Georgia Game was used and also White Wyandottes. Both these crosses almost wiped out their Cornish characteristics. The former made them tall, long-legged, narrow and stilted fowls, while the results of the White Wyandotte cross showed long, soft feathering, poor shape and carriage and knot combs—not the handsome pea combs which this breed should carry.

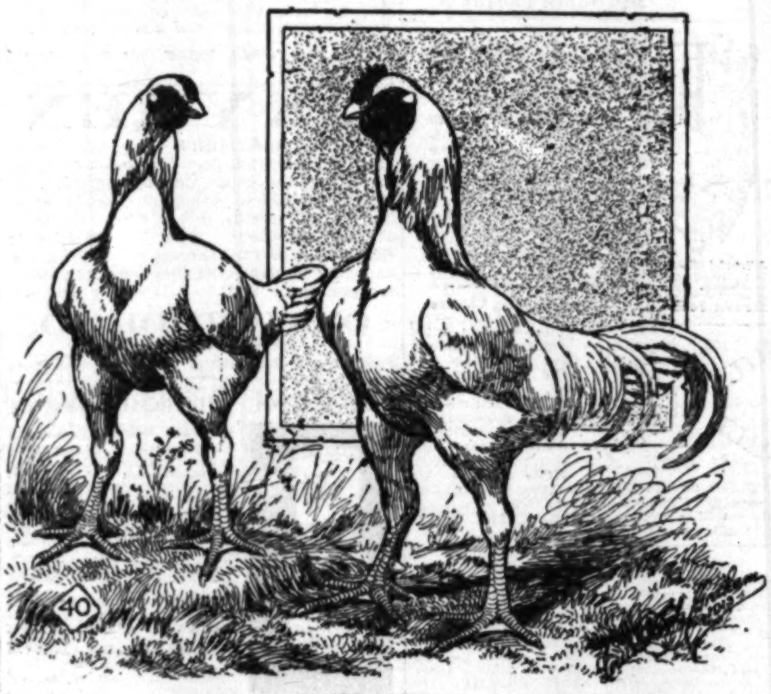
The White Cornish is just beginning to recover from the effects of this injudicious work. True fanciers of the breed have been striving for the past ten years to recover the massive frames, widespread short, thick legs and heavy skulls of the true Cornish. Their work is showing now. For the past two or three seasons magnificent specimens of the White Cornish have been exhibited in our best shows.

This is a good, husky, hardy breed. It is a particularly good one on range, and, in fact, it develops better and stronger if given plenty of range and obliged to "rough it."

The White hens have a reputation of being fairly good layers of large tinted eggs, and the chicks, when hatched, grow rapidly after they get past the first week or ten days.

When full grown these fowls weigh from eight to nine pounds for males, six to seven pounds for females and often exceed these weights.

From broiler age up, the White Cornish makes a table delicacy. Their full, heavy breasts are characteristic even in the chicks. They have rich yellow skin and legs, and as the plumage is pure white, the presence of the white pin feathers is not noticeable.



WHITE CORNISH.

This variety, formerly known as White Indian Game, is regaining some of its lost popularity, thanks to the present-day breeders, who are endeavoring to make it both a handsome and useful fowl. Mature specimens weigh from eight to nine pounds for males, six to seven pounds for females, and make excellent table fowls, either pure bred or crossed on other varieties. They have an immense breast development, and carry an extra amount of meat in that section. The White Cornish hen is a moderately good layer of large tinted eggs, and will become broody. The chicks when fairly started are strong, rugged growers. They do not feather rapidly, devoting most of their feed to making bone and muscle.

summarise: To get a good summer of eggs—

The hens must be comfortable— from the hot rays of the sun.

They must have cool quarters at so that they may get the needed rest.

They must be fed a ration that, in the is nitrogenous.

They must be plentifully supplied green stuff.

5. There must be a constant supply of pure, fresh water.

6. There must be several ages so that the broody fever and the molting process will be passed over.

This plan carefully followed will give the desired summer eggs, but it will be at a sacrifice of the winter crop. The next most profitable thing to do is to butcher and market them in the fall, at a time when the price of roasting poultry is good.

In short, every poultry farm should have a winter-laying flock and a summer-laying one, and every effort should be made to have both highly productive.

[Copyright, 1913, by the Eugene McGuckin Co.]

Scratchings

[New York Sun:] An adult Maline hen weighs as much as eight or nine pounds and the cocks eleven or even twelve pounds. The shape of the body, which is long, deep and massive, with a straight keel and prominent breast, favors the formation of flesh, though there is rather much meat on the thighs, and the bone is rather heavy for it to be regarded as a table fowl of the very highest order.

[Baltimore American:] Few owners of the smaller poultry plants know what percentage of profits their flocks do yield. Many of these may know how much they spend for feed during the year, and how many eggs the hens laid within the twelve months, but further than that they cannot give any figures of the cost of production or the actual profits from the sales. Adopt business methods in your poultry plant.

[Washington Star:] One of the ways to decrease your profit is to have your feed in a bin that is not rat-proof. Another is the scattering of grain all over the poultry yard, where, if not eaten, it becomes moldy, or is carried away by the sparrows. Still another way is filthiness in and about the coop, bringing on disease, sometimes the loss of a bird, and naturally a decrease in the laying. Then, too, there is improper feeding—the buying of feed in too small a quantity. Unclean nests should not be forgotten as a way to decrease, one's income.

[Portland Oregonian:] Raise pure-bred poultry. Pure-bred birds have been systematically bred for many years for certain desirable points. Largely they are bred for heavy laying. This heavy laying has become a fixed characteristic with them. Few people would undertake to improve their flock of mongrels along any particular line. Furthermore, pure-bred birds are often sold for $5, $10 or $25, and sometimes even for $500 each, while the mongrel sells for 20 and 30 cents.

Muscle Reading.

HAVING given, in a previous article, the subject of mind-reading due consideration, I purpose dealing briefly with so-called muscle-reading (lacking a better term) inasmuch as many professionals have endeavored to palm off this phase of their work as true mind-reading.

Muscle-reading is not, in reality, reading the muscle, but reading the mind (in a limited degree) by means of unconscious muscular action. The dictionary definition is: "The art of making discrimination between objects of choice; of discovering the whereabouts of hidden objects, etc., by inference from the involuntary movements of one whose hand the reader holds, or with whom he is otherwise in muscular contact."

Mind-reading Through Physical Contact.

THIS form of public entertainment, with the commercial side as a strong incentive to the entertainer, had its professional initiative in Chicago in 1873 by a newspaper reporter, J. Randall Brown. He had many followers, among the most noted being, Washington Irving Bishop, Stuart Cumberland, Paul Alexander Johnstone and Dr. J. Alexander McIvor Tyndall. Of these Mr. Bishop became the best known through his extensive travels and wonderful success.

In 1877, while Brown was giving exhibitions in Chickering Hall, New York City, a young man whose fame afterward eclipsed that of Brown and every other so-called mind-reader, made himself known to Brown and desired to be his assistant, declaring he had like powers. This was none other than the great Washington Irving Bishop, who saw the opportunity of gathering in the shekels from a gullible public.

In conversation Mr. Bishop in Chicago, in 1887, after he had made an international reputation, spoke very freely to me of the trickery or, more properly, perhaps, the delusion practiced upon the audience whereby all "mind-readers" performed their various stunts. He strongly indorsed the words of P. T. Barnum. "The American people like to be humbugged." I especially remember his remark in regard to the use of the wire which he placed to his forehead in reading the mind of the one at the other end of the wire. "The more mysterious you make the affair," said he, "the less likely are the public to unravel it. Anything that creates surprise or approaches the wonderful always proves attractive and entertaining."

When Bishop was holding forth in England, he secured the services of Charles Garner as an assistant. As Bishop left Brown as soon as the trick was discovered, in like manner, Garner left Bishop. In the same manner as Bishop invaded British territory, manner as iBshop invaded British territory, Garner sallied forth to "do" the Americans. However, unlike Bishop, he did not care to have his work bear the stamp of his name; therefore he came to this country as "Stuart Cumberland, the Great Mind-reader of London, Eng."

How He Did It.

IN HIS initial performance at a private seance held in the parlors of the Russell House, Detroit, Mich., I was an invited guest. A number of prominent citizens, including ministers, lawyers, actors and reporters were also present.

Cumberland announced that his tests of mind-reading would consist of finding hidden objects, giving names, dates of birth, places of birth, etc. He did all that he agreed to, and he did it well—under the guise of mind-reading. He failed in one instance only, (of this I shall herein after speak and that failure was unquestionable proof that results depend more largely upon the subject than upon the mind-reader, and wholly, in this case, upon physical contact.

Before leaving the room to be blindfolded he touched the hand of each, for an instant only. Why? Because all mind-readers by physical contact are sensitive to the touch and temperament to an unusual degree, and he did this he said "to ascertain the best subject for the most difficult test,"—that of locating three objects in quick succession. He was governed, in this preliminary, by both sight and touch. Therefore he would not choose one of a phlegmatic temperament in consequence of such a one having a sluggish circulation and being slow of action in mind and body. It fell to my lot to be chosen, inasmuch as I am of a nervous, sanguine temperament.

When Cumberland re-entered the room after having been blindfolded, he took the hand of the one who had hidden the object and, touching it to his forehead, found the object directly. He did this many times, each with a different person, and did it accurately—except once. It is this once to which I wish to call special attention, as it proves the correctness of my theory—that results depend upon the concentration of the subject with whom the operator is in physical contact.

Unfortunately for Mr. Cumberland, the subject—one of the reporters—had been imbibing too freely to concentrate his mind on the place of the hidden object. The subject's hand, which the operator held, was as limp and inactive as was his mind; therefore, as the operator depended entirely upon the muscular action of the subject to indicate the direction of his going, and as there was no action of either muscle or mind, he was wholly at sea—a ship without a rudder—and he was obliged to give it up. This, of course, was a natural consequence.

In the triple test with myself as guide—yes, unconsciously and unintentionally so at the time—he succeeded admirably. I held my thought on each separate article individually—each one, for the time being, to the exclusion of the two others. I purpose showing how I, unknowingly, was the leader instead of being led.

Mind-reading or Muscle-reading—Which?

UNDOUBTEDLY and undeniably muscle-reading. In order to do justice to the operator my mind was strongly concentrated on the three objects, each in its turn; so intent was I that I was not aware of a muscular movement on my part that was directing him.

Mind is indivisible. It is impossible to think of two things at the same time, objectively. The hand of the operator is guided, unmistakably guided by the hand of the subject as soon as the physical contact is established as he fully surrenders himself to the involuntary muscular leading of his subject.

It is true that the operator is usually in advance; therefore, it may be said that the subject cannot lead. But the subject can push as well as pull; the better word to use, however, is "direct."

When the operator, in his rush (which is done for effect) passes the point or place in the subject's mind, he is very quickly made aware of it by an involuntary movement on the part of the subject. This arrests the attention of the operator and directs his action.

The giving of names, dates, etc., as given by Mr. Cumberland was merely child's play. He had all the letters of the alphabet and the numerals (up to ten) arranged in regular order. Again he was blindfolded, and sat at a table. He took the hand of the subject and told him to think intently on the first letter of his name. He then passed the subject's hand slowly over the letters. When the right letter was reached the supersensitive "mind-reader," felt a slight involuntary movement on the part of the subject. Instantly the operator's hand darted down on the correct letter like a hawk on a chicken. In this slow and tedious way he gave names, dates, etc., and called it mindreading.

Not a Criterion.

A MAN may "sip regular booze when he likes, smoke cigars as big as a smoke stack and black as a pirates heart, and chew tobacco and swallow the juice;" he may do all this and still be an athlete, but "allee samee" he cannot be a clean athlete. And what is more, when nature presents her bill, the size of it will be as large and nature so persistent in its payment that the recipient will quite likely drop dead in his tracks.

"What ye sow, ye shall reap." Many a person is today reaping the consequences of over-indulgences and indiscretions. If, when you have the treasure of health you are foolish enough to squander it, you must eventually make a settlement and then you will come face to face with the inevitable—"the wages of sin is death." We are never punished for our physical sins but by them.

The Length of a Man's Leg.

WHEN Lincoln was asked: "How long should a man's leg be?" he said: "Just long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

As I have long contended the length of a man's leg does not determine his length of life. As a rule, however, the short leg and long body are indicative of longevity. Such a person will appear tall in sitting and short in standing.

Giants are short-lived. It is said on good authority that instances where men much above seven feet in height have reached the age of fifty years are almost unknown. Recently the tallest woman in the world—eight feet, three inches in height—died at the age of 38 years. A boy, eight feet tall, died soon after his eighteenth birthday anniversary.

Nature does not seem to have any use for freaks or abnormalities—except for purposes of exhibition or, possibly, to educate us by comparison and contrast to recognize the normal.

Foolhardy.

THE fools and cranks are not all dead yet. Every now and then one bobs up serenely and shows to what extent he can tempt nature. When a man swings Indian clubs continuously for 107 hours—four and one-half days—and then stops five hours short of what he intended to do because of merely falling off the platform asleep in consequence of exhaustion, it is, indeed, a pity—a pity that he did not get to finish the full 112 hours—and then drop dead.

Here's another—possibly some kin to the club-swinger. A member of a New York Athletic Club (I wonder some times what athletic clubs are for) successfully defended his title as the champion egg-eater by consuming sixty eggs at one sitting. It is hoped he is still sitting and will never rise again—not even with the rise in the market of the price of the commodity. Eggs—cuse me from being a member of such an athletic club. Athletic!!! Heaven save the mark.

The Perfect Baby.

THE word "the" is a definite article and in this case refers to one particular baby. When it comes to "a" perfect baby—well, as Kipling says, that's another story." Right here in Los Angeles are hundreds of perfect babies—in the eyes of the mothers; but in New York City "the" perfect baby has been found. He is fourteen weeks old and is said to measure up (and I suppose, down) perfect on every qualification of the thousand possible points specified by the foremost baby spceialist, Dr. L. Emmetholt.

I am sorry I cannot give the measurements and thus furnish the fond mothers enough data to ascertain whether their babies would qualify according to the prepared official score-card. This baby has the distinction of being the first perfect baby found in two contests in which hundreds of babies were examined.

The rules which the mother gives for the care of her perfect youngster are very simple. "No patent medicines, no solid food; nurse him whenever he is hungry and let him sleep when he is sleepy."

Touching the Fingers to the Floor.

SIXTY ministers in Pittsburgh became very enthusiastic when a Berkeley lecturer advised them to eat meat, beans, peas, eggs, apples, cabbage and onions. Not very definite this. The greater question is—When and How? Of this, having discoursed so fully in previous articles I shall merely call attention to the one exercise he gave them—touching the fingers to the floor without bending the knees.

This is one of the best exercises known for suppleness and the strengthening of the waist muscles. It should be taken every day by men and women of all ages. You may not be able to do it the first day, nor the first week nor the first month, but by and by you will succeed in touching the fingers, then the knuckles, then the flat of the hand upon the floor—without bending the knees. I would not feel the day well begun that I did not do the latter

This Human Body of Ours. Curious Things About It and How We Abuse It.

Timely Hygienics.

OTE: Nature cures; not the Physician.—[Hippocrates.

Cheerful Hygienist Anent Control.

"There is not one out of a good many of who knows what real self-control ," oracularly observed the Cheerful Hygienist. "Self-control does not mean tyranny. I have known individuals have gone entirely through life imagining that they had a corner on self-control, really did not have the fist conception it. Self-control means more than merely being superior to attacks of hysteria, temper, panic, tears, and passionate expression of all kinds. There class of individuals who by dodging experiences manage to live a life negativeness, and who therefore themselves with great self-control. them a jolt in among realities, and will quickly find the limitations of self-control. There are others who habitually overwork, and who, when thoroughly saturated with fatigue poisons, deny themselves a respite in which to recuperate. They may fancy that they are exercising a remarkable control over their and faculties. The refusal to yield physical weakness when the body is demanding rest is tyranny pure and simple. would become patent enough if one individual were to exercise it over another. we do not call it tyranny when we our jaded bodies to further efforts the physical cells are being torn faster than they can be replenished, the whole body is crying out for

"As a matter of fact, it is sometimes necessary to exercise a greater amount of self-control in abstaining from abusing one's body in an over-amount of exercise in work or amusement than is put forth in forcing the body into an excess of exertion.

"Listen, you who do not already know the real meaning of self-control, and learn. Before you start a rigid regime of self-control in the conduct of your physical body, ascertain some facts concerning the structure, constitution, and involuntary functions of that body. And remember always that one and the same rule will not fit everybody. There are some bodies equipped with a great fund of reserve energy; there are others which possess little, if any. The first step toward gaining self-control—which means control of mental, moral and social faculties, as well as those which are more particularly physical—is to seek to bring about and maintain a physical balance. Physical balance means perfect health. You will notice how comfortable you feel in the presence of a thoroughly healthy person. You are unconsciously quieted, and feel at your ease. Your own aches and pains disappear, and you become animated. You may not fully understand why you like that person and why you seek his society. He seems to express perfect balance, perfect poise. His movements are characterized by ease and precision. He does not waste his energies in nervous, meaningless motions. He has, consciously or unconsciously, acquired control over his body, and is therefore able to keep it in splendid condition which makes him a delight to his associates. That fluid which is shed from the surface of living bodies, healthy and unhealthy, to one is agreeable and stimulating, as it should be with every human being. The majority of human beings do not shed this health-pure and pleasant magnetism. There is almost invariably an unpleasant repulsion, sometimes pronounced, sometimes very faint, experienced in the presence of the person carrying about with him a concealed condition of ill-health, from whatever cause.

"The unhealthy person is not self-controlled. If he were he could not be unhealthy. There is no one who does not desire a healthy body, and having this desire and not being able to demonstrate it betrays a lack of self-control. The self-controlled person will not overwork any more than he will indulge in any other sort of excess—that is providing he desires health. He will stop when the [illegible] of fatigue are sent to the brain. There is the moment in which to exercise self-control. Ambition, or whatever the moving impulse may be, must be laid aside—controlled, and the subject must compel himself to rest until he is able to continue without inconvenience. Sometimes five or ten minutes of complete relaxation will be sufficient to renew the physical energies. Sometimes a sponge bath of cold water will do it. A cold sponge bath is similar in its effect to an electrical treatment; it does not merely stimulate, but also imparts actual building energy, producing a beneficial change in the cells of the body.

"When there is perfect self-control there will not be indigestion and defective elimination of waste material in the system, caused by indulgence in unsuitable food and drink. One may be able to control his temper perfectly, but not his appetites. When this is the case he may not boast of self-control, and he will not have a healthy body.

"Proper physical-culture exercises impart control. When every part of the body is brought into thorough activity each day it is strengthened and brought into more perfect co-ordination with every other part of the body. The lungs are forced into full, free action. Control is again increased

"Finally we come to the direct control mentally in the making of a perfectly healthy body. If we will experiment we will soon learn that the more persistently we refuse to dwell upon the thought of ill-health, the better chance the body has to build itself into perfection. And if conscious health impulses are sent from the mind through the body, a positive benefit must be experienced. The body is being controlled.

"All of this is what constitutes self-control. The idle in mind and body usually possess very little if at all."

Brain Exposed, Man Got Well.

Private P. E. A. Williams of the Palmetto Sharpshooters, aged 23 years, was wounded in an engagement near Petersburg, Va., June 19, 1864, by a conoidal ball which made a wound in the frontal bone on the left side one and one-half inches long by one inch in width, from the effect of which he made a successful recovery. The inner table of the skull was broken into numerous spiculae, some of them pressing upon the dura mater, and some of the smaller ones penetrating the brain. The loose spiculae of bone were removed and simple water dressing applied. His condition remained critical for weeks, accompanied by symptoms of coma. The spiculae were removed as soon as they became detached, and the wound was kept carefully cleaned. By August 14 his general condition had improved; most of the spiculae had come away, leaving a large orifice, with clean edges. The dura mater was exposed and perforated by small orifices. Two months after the reception of the injury, when all the circumstances attending the case indicated recovery, the cerebral substance began to protrude through the opening, but was not followed by any serious symptoms. Compress was applied, and in two weeks the hernia cerebri had receded and healthy granulation had sprung up. He was discharged from the hospital about the middle of September, though the wound remained open and continued to discharge more or less until December, 1865, when it finally cicatrized firmly. In March, 1866, the orifice was filled with bony or cartilaginous matter, slightly depressed in the center. His mind was unimpaired, but he occasionally suffered from slight vertigo on stooping suddenly, or after much mental exertion.

Standards of Sanity.

[Dallas News:] The insane committed to institutions make up about 3 to 5-10 of 1 per cent. of the population. Every town having 1000 inhabitants has about four insane who are being cared for by the government. The percentage is increasing continuously.

It is doubtful, however, that there is any increase in insanity. As one authority puts it: "Our standards of sanity are increasing, which means that many people are now regarded as insane who a generation ago would have been regarded merely as peculiar or eccentric."

Another reason suggested is that the standards of custodial care have advanced until now persons are willingly released to asylums where a generation ago they were kept at home by reason of the inhumanity of many of the provisions for custody.

Asylums were of the first eugenics agencies. By segregating the insane, it is claimed, they have always protected the stock, not perfectly, but fairly well, as the results show.

The insane, in a rough way, fall into three groups: the paretic, the dementia precox and the maniac depressive, an extensive medical treatise states. As a eugenic measure, asylums are quite effective in relation to the first two groups, but not as to the third.

Mott, in his paper, shows that of the children born to insane parents, 8 per cent. were born after the first attack of insanity. The maniac depressive group includes the emotional insane—the people who get worse and better, those who come and go in asylums, sometimes being sane about half the time and insane the other half.

It is from another standpoint that asylums as eugenic agents fail. The border line between sanity and insanity is hazy. Insanity is not inherited. A certain mental instability is inherited and environment pushes those of that group into sanity or insanity. Mott quotes Morel as follows:

"Nervous, irritable weakness, the neurotic temperament, neurasthenic predisposition may be the first evidence of degeneration of stock. The signs of degeneracy which may be exhibited are self-centered, narrow-mindedness in religious beliefs, fanaticism, mysticism, spiritism, an unwholesome contempt for traditional custom, social usages, and mortality, a vain spirit of spurious art and culture, a false self-loving vanity in the pursuit of a sentimental altruism, or by eccentricities of all kinds.

"Such signs of degeneracy are often combined with talent and even genius, but the brilliant intellectual qualities of a degenerate are invariably associated with either a lack of moral sense or of sound judgment and the highest control."

Memory Erased by Sandbag.

[Case and Comment:] Writing on "Confessions of Self-Robbery and the Retroactive Amnesia," Prof. E. B. Delabarre of Brown University tells the interesting fact that a concussion or blow from a sandbag will erase and drive from the brain or the memory occurrences happening within from three to five hours previous to the concussion, but will not disturb the impressions on the mind of previous occurrences. The author describes the effectiveness of this knowledge in securing complete confessions from "self-robbed" individuals as follows: "I talked the matter over with J. B. Hume, at that time chief detective for Wells, Fargo & Co. and he forced a number of self-robbed agents who were short and reported sandbagging robbery, to confess, because a sandbag would not show any marks, but as they in each case told all particulars up to the blow of the sandbag he made them own up."

Cold Cure for Leprosy.

[New York Times:] Prof. Raoul Pictet of Geneva, inventor of liquefied air, announces that he has discovered a "cold cure" for leprosy.

Recent experiments carried out in Hawaii by American doctors have been entirely successful. Lepers have been subjected to local applications on the diseased parts of liquefied carbon dioxide at a very low temperature—110 degrees below zero. The intense cold has gradually destroyed the microbes of leprosy, and the diseased flesh has regained its original health and color.

It is stated that many cases have been cured in Hawaii and that the American government is investigating the matter.

Dying Kiss May be Fatal.

[Kansas City Journal:] Carl Heckenliable, a young farmer of Ft. Scott, Kan., is near death in a hospital at Wichita as a result of kissing his dying mother good-by. The mother, Mrs. C. C. Heckenliable, lived on a farm near her son. She died of blood poisoning after two months' illness. When her physicians announced death was approaching her son embraced and kissed his mother.

The next day the young man was taken ill, eruptions appearing on his body. Physicians pronounced the case blood poisoning contracted by the farewell kiss and Heckenliable was hurried to Wichita for treatment.

Injury Ends Period of Aphasia.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] John Oliver, an aged man employed at the silica sand pit at Torpedo, Pa., was hurt under a fall of rock, and was taken to the Rouse Hospital. When questioned about himself he told the commissioners that he had a brother in Chicago; that he owned a plot of 120 building lots near Wheeling, W. Va., and that he had a valuable mineral collection in Lancaster, Pa. A telegram sent to his brother in Chicago brought a prompt reply and a confirmation of the man's story of wealth.

According to the telegram, Oliver has been missing for twelve years, suffering from a mental malady, and thousands of dollars have been spent in searching for him. The injury evidently cleared his mind and he has recovered his memory.

To Enlarge a Man's Skull.

[Kansas City Star:] Cornwall Ellis, the Kansas side barber, was struck on the head with a hatchet by Mrs. Julia Harris, but while the wound is healing the surgeon says the man's skull must be enlarged. The wounds cost Ellis small parts of his skull and as the fractures knit, the brain may be compressed. An operation to supply by some means the missing parts may be performed.

BROOKS AND BROOKLETS

[From "Brain and Brawn," edited by Harry Ellington Brook, published by the Naturopathic Publishing Company, Los Angeles:]

No Escape.

Why travel in search of health? You cannot escape from your brain or your stomach.

The Really Poor.

How many referred to by the unthinking world as eminently successful are really poor—poor in home and poor in friends, poor in reputation, poor in the power of enjoying life—poor and subjects for pity.

Blind Leaders of the Blind.

After reading the comments of the press on Friedmann's "wonderful cure" for tuberculosis, one is constrained to remark, with Shakespeare's Puck: "What fools these mortals be!"

Regulating Weight.

There is only one way to regulate body weight, and that is by the natural method—by diet, exercise, bathing, etc.—by alimentation and elimination. The nostrums advertised to take off flesh without change of diet are all dangerous. Be sure of that, and avoid them. The same diet that will put flesh on a thin man will take flesh off a fat one. In other words, a natural diet produces a natural condition of the body.

Why Not?

I have often wondered why those who have deciduous fruit orchards and find it difficult to market their crops, which sometimes go to waste, or bring them meager returns for their labor, do not put up brush huts—which are much better than tents—and invite campers to come and pick their own fruit, while taking an open-air rest cure. The orchardists would thus save the cost of picking, packing and shipping, and get a much higher price for their fruit than they could expect to receive otherwise, while the campers would have the great advantage of getting their fruit ripe and fresh from the tree or vine.

Fruit-eating.

Many say they cannot eat fresh fruit. That is because the linings of their stomachs are highly inflamed, and the fruit acids irritate them. The thing to do is to get into a condition where they can eat fruit as soon as possible. Another reason why some people say they cannot eat fruit is that they mix it up with other foods. This should never be done, because fruit is a medicinal food, and starts trouble when mixed up with other forms of nourishment. The only thing that may properly be eaten with fruit is nuts—olives, of course, being regarded as a fruit. Do not cook fruit. That is like painting the lily. To cook fruit and mix it with sugar is to destroy most of its medicinal qualities.

A Wrong Move. By Arthur W. Peach.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL.

WHEN Mrs. Ormond picked up the gray coat of her husband she saw a rent in the back. For a second it meant nothing to her, the next moment her mind leaped between the fact of the torn coat and a column in the day's paper which had rehearsed in detail a robbery that had taken place the preceding night in the home of the Delle family. Among the items was the mention of a bit of gray cloth caught on a nail where the burglar had wormed himself out to freedom.

Mrs. Ormond stared at the coat, and quickly in her rapidly fevering mind came three thoughts: her husband had the coat with the rip in the back; he had been out until early in the morning; he knew just how to get into the house of Delle's, for there, where she had served as maid, he had come to woo her. He had explained to her that in the chemical mills where he worked he had been offered double pay if he would stay and look out for mixtures that had developed rapidly.

The truth smote in upon her mind, leaving it in a frenzy. Young and girlish, she had but a narrow outlook on life; her home and her happiness had seemed certain, she had not thought that they were being founded merely on her husband's action; but it was so. She had known but little of him; she had learned to love him in a short time, and the marriage had followed swiftly.

That he should do such a thing seemed impossible, but she knew how he had been pushed to pay for the little home he had unwisely tried to purchase; and in his desperation he may have taken the step he did.

Her next thought was to protect him. To think was to act. She would go to Mr. Delle and try to win a promise of mercy from him. She knew him to be a cold, relentless sort of man, but the knowledge did not deter her from her mission.

When she found her way into his library she explained her errand. She had not intended to tell all, but to parley with him. He was a lawyer, however, and skilled in the beating down of human barriers, and he soon drew from her the whole truth. Slowly her defiance weakened, and at the end she was just a heartbroken girl, tangled in a net that only tightened about her as she struggled.

He was cold, firm, merciless. He called the station and asked that a detective be sent up, and told her she would be held as a witness. He then gave instructions for the arrest of Ormond.

The name of her husband gave her the last effort of will. She stopped him. "Wait; you don't need to ask for his arrest. I robbed you myself. I know this house from——"

He laughed. "Well, you ARE a green little girl! You can't save that young culprit by that sort of scheme. Don't be foolish. I know you didn't do it, though you may try to convince me you did. You see, you made a wrong move in coming here; some of my most valuable stuff was stolen, and I intend to show no mercy."

She sank back into her chair, dazed by the turn of events, feeling helpless and lost in the new situation, and longing for the only one she had to turn to—her husband, and he under suspicion.

The man who came for her from the station looked surprised when he saw her, but said nothing, simply listened to Delle, as men were in the habit of doing, and took her out to the car waiting for them.

He was gentle with her, and she heard him say to the driver: "There's something mixed up here. This girl back here doesn't look the part——"

She could hear no more, but when he came back he asked her many questions.

When they reached the station-house she was led in gently by the gray-eyed man who had come for her. She was ushered into a private room. The first person she saw was her husband; young, powerful in build, he stood back, the center of the group; his face was flushed with anger and the line of his jaws stood out white.

She started toward him, but the detective caught her. "Wait," he said. "It's best."

She obeyed; somehow she felt that he was friendly to her.

Her husband looked toward her and smiled as he went on answering the questions.

"I admit the gray coat is mine, and that the stuff you have there came from it, and from the tear in it; but how that tear got there I haven't the slightest idea," he was saying.

A few of the listeners smiled.

"Isn't that rather peculiar? You are out all night; return with coat torn, and the coat material corresponds with that found; you admit you know the Delle residence, and you admit that if you were going to rob the place you would do it just as it was done?"

Ormond's face became haggard, and he did look guilty. "The truth it I've been working like a dog for the last few days, and I can't think or answer straight; it's a big strain to be in my position here. I simply know I didn't do it," he said helplessly.

The gray-eyed detective stepped up. "How do you work—in shifts?" he asked.

Ormond lifted his tired eyes and went on to explain. The detective's questions were sharp. He turned to the examiner. "I'd like an hour on this case befor is committed."

When an Old Friend Runs Amuck.

By Frederick Roland Miner.

CARELESS CAMPERS.

IN THE summer in the Southwest there are many campers in the wild. Some of these prefer to pitch their tents in the canyons beside the running waters of the brook, where they can lie in the shade of the sycamores and the alders, and be lulled to rest by the low, silvery song of the stream; some make choice of the heights near the summit of the great peaks where the outlook is extensive and sublime; others go farther afield, not tarrying on hill or in canyon, until they reach the deep Sierra woods, and there make their camp amid the big trees where the pine, the spruce, the hemlock, the fir and their kin sing their low-pitched crooning songs, and where their fragrant breath fills the air through the days and the nights.

Two friends, always, campers have with them, in the wild, and though they are inanimate, they are of man's best friends, for without them he could not live, yet like even the best of human friends, they will at times turn against him, and when that occurs it is sad indeed, and often disastrous. Those friends that the camper has, in common with all mankind, are fire and water, and from the best of friends they can become the worst of enemies, as everyone knows. The fire cooks the meals of the camper through many days, it warms him in the chill evenings, it cheers him through the long, dark nights, yet many a camper at the end of his sojourn in the wild goes away leaving the camp fire alive to perish or to go its own way, should the opportunity offer—a sin of omission no camper should be guilty of, a thing no thoughtful camper will be responsible for. The fire lights the fragrant weed that cheers the spirits of the smoking camper as he sits resting beside the other fire, or as he tramps the hills or walks the woods, and this camper, if he be of the common brand of campers throws his still-lighted match away, and when through with his smoke drops the burning tobacco into the brush or on the dead leaves beside the camp or the trail. Gently blowing, the daily summer breeze leaves the ocean and journeys inland. It reaches the canyons and flows through them. It strikes the hillside and the mountain slope, and wanders over the brush. It proceeds across the deep woods and rustles the pine needles and the grass that is beneath the big trees. In its varied wanderings it comes upon the still-burning match, the smouldering tobacco, the abandoned camp fire. Quietly it blows away the accumulated ash and reveals the red eyes of the deserted fire, and they brighten with renewed ambition and with anticipated adventure. A thin column of blue smoke arises slowly, and floats away among the brown trunks and branches of the trees. Thicker it grows, and still thicker, fanned by the increasing breeze until presently a flare of flame licks at the dry leaves and the brittle twigs, and grows larger and still larger, constantly. Hurried by the increasing wind the flame shoots ahead and spreads rapidly. It reaches the dry brush at the edge of the camp clearing, and with an exultant roar devours it in wild gulps, and hurries on its devastating way. It has spread now and presents a wide and fiery front. It reaches the trees and leaps upon them like a wild beast at the throat of its prey, and seizes them in its blighting embrace and, devouring them hungrily, passes on to others and still others, until the whole woods are hot with flame and choked with smoke. On and on the maddened fire rushes, leaving death and destruction in its blackened wake. The creatures of the wild, terrified and panic-stricken, fly before it, or, losing their heads, race directly into it, to meet a terrible death. Campers in the path of the wildfire leave their belongings behind them and flee for their lives. Great columns of smoke rise high in the air and spread like gigantic thunderheads, and showers of sparks soar aloft and settle on other parts of the woods and the mountainside, there to start fresh fires that add their terror to the appalling scene.

If there be a forest ranger on duty near this region he will see the approaching holocaust or be told of it, and he will immediately send for help, for he will know that he will need much of it if this terrible advancing monster is to be destroyed or even checked. And so the fire fighters gather and with shovel and hoe and ax and mattock attempt to clear a space that the fire cannot cross. But it has gained too great a headway, and their work is unavailing. So they have to fight it face to face, beating at it with wet sacks if water is near, shoveling dirt upon it, tearing the brush away from it and, as a last desperate resort, try to beat it at its own game by back-firing. But the wind seems to have entered into a conspiracy with the fire, and backs it with increased strength, hurrying it on its destructive way and carrying it across open spaces that should have ended its mad career. Spreading to the region of habitation it licks up the settlers' hard-worked-for buildings, leaving only blackened ruins where but a brief time before was a valuable well-ordered ranch. On and still on it rushes, roaring up the dry canyons and over the drier slopes. The brush falls before it like grain before the reaper, and great trees that have withstood the storms and stress of many years, yield up their lives to its insatiable appetite.

After hours of this awful havoc, the red sun descends and night comes on. The wind changes, the sea breeze retiring, and the night wind taking its place. This night wind is not as strong as its relative of the sea, and so the fire dies down and in places goes out altogether. At this, the fire fighters gain courage and rest a bit and take such refreshment as offers, thankful for the respite, for it has been hard, gruelling work and fraught with much danger to themselves. But day finally arrives, and with it after a time the sea breeze, not yet satisfied with the havoc it helped to make on the day before. With the increased wind the fire again comes to life and once more continues on its blighting way. And so the terrible misadventure of the fire may continue for days, until exhausted with its endeavors the fire stays its mad career and dies a natural death. But what a path it has left! There are acres and acres, yes, miles and miles of barren, blackened ground where grew the old gnarled tall, stately pines, the fir, the many another grand old tree younger one that gave fine greatness. And acres and ashes lie where but a few purple sage grew, and the wild lilac and the manzanita, wood and the rabbit brush other bush and shrub that beauty and charm to the And when the waters of the come there will be no trees, brush in all that region to hold that they might sink into the they may be made use of in the stead of rushing off and wasting in the sea. And now all that ened space that once rejoiced session of thed eautiful trees the bushes and the grass, lies for those friends that are gone still rises from the scene of their If again the trees grow there many years before they can be as beautiful as those that ished.

And what of him who was all this terrible affair? If he observe the clouds of smoke a pall over the deathbed of probably scratched his head as he wondered who started he chanced to have gotten from it, he may have read about day and congratulated himself happen while he was there. to pay for a bit of easily-avoid ness!

HUMOR.

[Popular Mechanics:] The Cannibal King: See here, what was that dish you served up to me at lunch?

The Cook: Stewed motorcyclist, your majesty.

Cannibal King: It tasted very burnt.

Cook: Well, he was scorching when we caught him, your majesty.

The Money Guy: Your prospectus of the Wingless Airship Company looks very promising, but you don't say how you expect to overcome the law of gravity.

The Promoter: That's up to our legal department. We shall insist that the law is unconstitutional.

[Kansas City Journal:] "Do you dye whiskers?"

"Yes," answered the barber.

"Do they fool anybody?"

"Seem to fool the man that wears 'em."

Jimmie giggled when the teacher read the story of the man who swam across the Tiber three times before breakfast.

"You do not doubt that a trained swimmer could do that, do you?"

"No, sir," answered Jimmie, "but I wonder why he did not make it four and get back to the side where his clothes were."

[Tit-Bits:] Office Boy: There are two men out there, sir, who want to see you; one of them is a poet and the other a deaf man.

Editor: Well, go out and tell the poet that the deaf man is the editor, and let them fight it out between them.

[Illinois Siren:] A little car of the "road-house" type chugged painfully up to the gate at the Elgin races.

The gatekeeper, demanding the usual fee for automobiles, called:

"A dollar for the car!"

The owner looked up with a pathetic smile of relief, and said:

"Sold!"

[Farm Machinery:] Joe: That mare, when she was young, could beat the local train between here and town, which is eight miles away.

Henry: That's nothing. On my ranch in the West, I was five miles from the house one day when I noticed a heavy thunder shower almost upon me. Jumping upon my pony we started at breakneck speed for the house, and do you know, that pony during the last two miles raced the storm so closely that I didn't feel a drop of rain, while my dog, who was only twenty yards behind, had to swim all the way.

[Lippincott's:] Mrs. Hennessey, who was a late arrival in the neighborhood, was entertaining a neighbor one afternoon when the latter inquired:

"And what does your old man do, Mrs. Hennessey?"

"Sure, he's a di'mond cutter."

"Ye don't mane it!"

"Yes. He cuts th' grass off th' baseball fields."

Dr. Orison Swett Marden

Who is the Rich Man in America?

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN

RECENTLY an employee said to me: "I am only an ordinary mechanic and my employer talks as though I were a failure in life because I am not in business for myself, and have n't got rich. He tells me that anybody with an ounce of brains and pluck ought to be able to make a fortune in this land of opportunity."

To every one, from the immigrant, who comes here looking for dollars rolling along the streets, to business men all over the world, the American "opportunity" means the opportunity to get rich. We are all trying to live up to this idea.

But the sacrifices we Americans make, the price we pay for fortunes, is really appalling. Just take a look at the physical and mental wrecks we see on every hand. Does it pay to sacrifice everything for which we ought to live, to get together a little more money? How often we see hungry, cadaverous men with big pocketbooks. They have the money, but that is all they do have.

What is more common than to see men and women starving the soul, and paralyzing the growth and expansion of the finer sentiments, which alone make life worth living, for the sake of piling up material wealth? A few acres of dirt, a row of buildings, a place to live in, a few stocks and bonds, a little silver plate and fine furnishings, good clothes, are, after all, pretty poor sort of things to satisfy the longings of an immortal soul.

To be engulfed in one's occupation, swallowed up in a complicated life, harassed by the striving and straining, the worry and anxiety, which accompany a vast fortune—is this to be rich?

Opportunities in Service

I HAPPEN to know a wealthy American who, when asked what deed of his life had given him the greatest happiness, replied that it was paying a mortgage off a poor woman's home, which was being sold over her head. The probabilities are that this man had expected to find infinitely greater happiness in money-making, in trying to manufacture and to sell more goods than his competitors; but in helping to save the home of a poor woman he had actually gained greater joy and satisfaction than in any experience of his business career.

Now this man unconsciously stumbled upon the secret of true riches, and the real meaning of the American "opportunity." There never was before in any country such an opportunity for developing the riches of personality through unselfish service to others as in the American democracy today. The cause of Universal Brotherhood claims us on every hand.

The Oneness of Life

BENEATH all our different races or creeds, sects, prejudices, there is a oneness of life, a unity of essence which, if we were only conscious of it, would dispel all differences of race hatred or class prejudice. Time and opportunity, the inclination and the means to help others and to bring happiness into their lives, are the most valuable things in the world, and if you can not seize these, if you can not utilize them to your own enlargement, your own betterment, you are poor indeed, and can never know the joy and satisfaction of true riches, although you may have millions of dollars.

The more a man hoards for selfish ends, the more he wants. Instead of filling a vacuum, it makes one. A great bank account can never make a man rich. It is the soul that makes the body rich. No man is rich, however much money or land he may possess, who has a poor heart.

Only soul wealth, generous disinterestedness, the love that seeks not its own, and hands that help and hearts that sympathize constitute true riches and fill the possessor with the joy of one who knows that he is fulfilling the real purpose of his life.

The Wealth of the Poor Man

CAN you regard a man as poor who may not happen to have money, but whose character is so exuberant and whose career is so succulent with the sweet things of life and experience that he has enriched and made happy a whole community? Can you regard a man as poor whose neighbors feel enriched by his mere presence? Can you regard a man as poor who lives in an attic, but whose very existence enhances the value of every acre of land and every home for miles around him? Do you think of Phillips Brooks, Thoreau, Garrison, Emerson, Beecher, Agassiz, as poor men?

The men and women who would move the world, who would realize true fortune and power, must be a part of it; they must touch the life that now is and feel the thrill of the movement for social progress.

Only he who seeks humanity's good, humanity's welfare, to endow humanity with a fortune, can find his own.

Perhaps the richest American who ever lived was Abraham Lincoln, because he gave all of himself to his fellow people. He did not try to sell his ability to the highest bidder. Great fees had no special attraction for him. Lincoln lives in history because he thought more of his friends—of his countrymen and the cause of humanity—than he did of his pocket-book. He gave himself to his country as a wise farmer gives his seed to the earth, and what a harvest from that sowing! The end of it no man shall see.

MEXICO CITY, June 1.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Huerta government will be in possession of a war fund of $100,000,000 tomorrow, the proceeds of a national loan at last ratified by the Mexican Congress and successfully placed with European bankers, who have been assured that the recognition of the Huerta government by President Wilson is a matter of only a few weeks, and per-

MY PROGRAM IF MADE PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC

by GENERAL FELIX DIAZ

MEXICO, EMERGING FROM the throes of revolution, will elect a new Chief Executive within the next few weeks. Upon him will depend the resurrection and integrity, if not the salvation, of the Republic. Friends of General Diaz go so far as to insist that, if his life is spared until the July elections, he will be chosen to succeed the late President Madero.

Born forty-six years ago in the state of Oaxaca, in the south of Mexico, the prospective President entered the Military Academy of Chapultepec in 1883 and was commissioned a Lieutenant of Engineers in 1889. His first military service was on the Geographical Commission which prepared the great military map of Mexico. At its conclusion, he was in supreme charge of the work which is conceded to be a masterpiece of its kind. During the Spanish-American war, Lieutenant Diaz was made a Colonel on the General Staff of the Mexican Army, and later was twice elected to Congress from Vera Cruz. By 1902 he had already become politically formidable and was regarded as the most likely successor to his uncle, President Porfirio Diaz, who in 1905 made him Inspector General of Police in the City of Mexico. As such he earned a sinister reputation for severity, often tinged by cruelty. It is said that more prisoners were put to death under his administration than under any other police regime in Mexico, but this is emphatically denied by him. On the contrary, General Diaz points to the fact that no Chief of Police, under the Mexican law, is authorized to condemn or execute prisoners in his charge . . . . . .

Toward the close of the disheveled Madero regime, Felix Diaz automatically became the leader of the malcontents in the regular army, and last October made himself temporarily master of Vera Cruz. His revolt was a fiasco and he was imprisoned. The rest is immediate history. An uprising followed in which the prison was stormed and the General was released.

By the terms of his compact with Provisional-President Huerta, General Diaz has announced himself a candidate for the next Presidency of the Republic. Since making the announcement, he has taken no unnecessary chances, but has strongly entrenched himself at the Hacienda del Christo at Atzcapotzalco, some twenty miles from Mexico City. From this garrisoned retreat, General Diaz issued the following exclusive declaration of his political principles for publication in the SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE:

By Felix Diaz

Mexico, March 21, 1913.

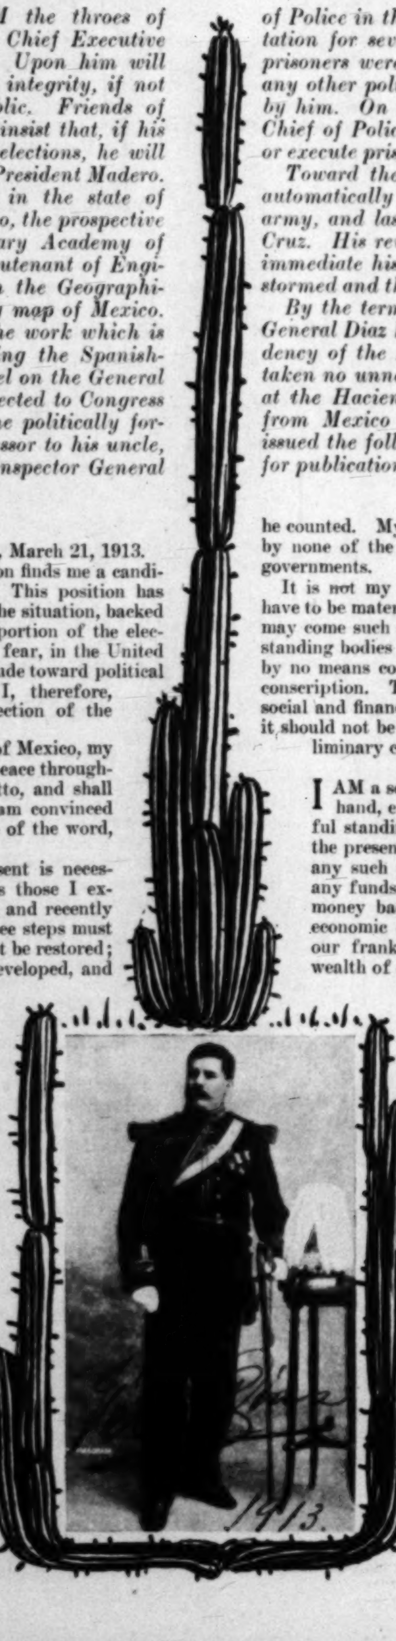
THE CLOSE OF A bloody but just revolution finds me a candidate for the Presidency of my country. This position has been forced upon me by the exigencies of the situation, backed by the unsolicited support of a large proportion of the electorate. But abroad — and particularly, I fear, in the United States of America — my aims and my attitude toward political preferment have been misunderstood. I, therefore, gladly embrace this opportunity to address a large section of the American reading public.

Should I have the good fortune to be elected President of Mexico, my first efforts will be toward creating conditions of absolute peace throughout the country. "Peace and Justice" has been my motto, and shall remain the guiding principle of my administration. I am convinced that only by dispensing justice to all, in the fullest sense of the word, can permanent conditions of internal peace be assured.

To enlarge on this proposition: My attitude at present is necessarily one of expectancy; but my aims are the same as those I expounded years ago in an address to the Military College, and recently in a manifesto to the people of the state of Oaxaca. Three steps must be taken in the rehabilitation of Mexico. First, order must be restored; second, the natural resources of the Republic must be developed, and knowledge diffused for the greater growth of these resources; third, perfect justice must be administered, so far as it lies in a human being to administer justice. The rest will come of its own momentum, based on the foregoing and a new rule of conduct which will decline to indulge in Utopian dreams, but which will appraise men and things as they are and as they may be used, not as one would like them to be but as they are never found in this world.

I recognize that peace must first be assured before we can obtain confidence abroad, and the confidence of other nations is necessary if this Republic is to be founded on a sound financial basis. It is my earnest hope that President Huerta's interim government may succeed in putting down the last vestiges of rebellion and disorder in Morelos, Guerrero and in the North, especially in Sonora. The active military measures that are now being taken in this direction ought to have good results. Should this task not be fully accomplished by the time the new government comes into power, it is my intention, should I be President, to bring about, with all the means at my disposal, the prompt and complete pacification of those states and of the whole country.

If the means I find at hand are not adequate, new means will be created. But I am convinced that it would be wise for me to adopt only some of the methods of pacification used by my uncle, Don Porfirio Diaz, at the time of his early triumphs. This is because I would lack the personal elements on which he counted. My principal strength must lie in the fact that I shall be bound by none of the compromises which often cause trouble to well-intentioned governments.



It is not my present expectation that the standing army of Mexico will have to be materially increased. According to the needs of the moment, there may come such especial measures as calling for volunteers, or incorporating standing bodies of rurales into the army for short periods of time; but I am by no means committed to the mooted plan of introducing general military conscription. This I feel to be a very large and momentous problem, from a social and financial point of view, as well as from many others. Therefore, it should not be rashly undertaken without the fullest and most earnest preliminary consideration.

I AM a soldier and I know that large armies can not be improvised off hand, except, perhaps, at moments of high patriotic fervor. Powerful standing armies cost money — a great deal of money. Mexico, at the present time, is in no financial condition for a vast expenditure for any such purpose. The late Madero government has left us without any funds in the treasury. We found only debts. Our country needs money badly; but she needs money for constructive purposes — for economic development and for internal improvements. With this as our frankly declared financial policy, and in view of the admitted wealth of our permanent national resources, I believe that foreign capital can be obtained; but I feel free to say that I doubt very much whether foreign capital could be readily obtained for purely military purposes.

Still, it must be clear to all that our country can not be properly developed without guarantees of complete pacification, and such pacification must necessarily require military methods and occasionally heavy expenditures. But in the solution of this problem I know that we shall have the hearty cooperation of all our political parties and of the people at large. In regard to Sonora and the menace of its secession — which I do not believe for a moment can be successfully accomplished, or is even desired by a majority of its citizens — I feel, like every right-thinking Mexican, that any loss of our territory, in this or in any other direction, is simply inadmissible.

Should I become President, it will be my aim to encourage in every possible way the influx of foreign capital and foreign immigration. Mexico is rich in minerals, in agricultural products and in timber, to name only three of our leading industries. We cheerfully invite the foreign investor to aid us in developing these resources.

It is planned to create a new Ministry of Agriculture and Labor, in addition to the existing Ministries of Mines, Hacienda, Fomento, Communications and the Interior. To this Ministry of Agriculture and Labor will fall the task of making a special study of a more equitable distri-

The COLLAPSIBLE HUSBAND and other MEDDLERS in THE CAXTON CASE

by EDGAR SALTUS

ON THE VERANDAH where I sat, I turned. Down the orange and lily hedged avenue a motor had come. At the door of the hotel it stopped. A fat woman alighted, a man followed. The woman, veiled from the glare of the California sun, ascended the steps. The hall engulfed her. Before I could speak, it engulfed the man.

"Mores!" I mentally exclaimed. At sight of him my thoughts shot back. As reporter, I was assisting again at the trial of Judith Caxton whom he had defended.

Judith Caxton was accused of murdering her husband. Both were known, by repute at least, in New York where Caxton, who was a scientist, had caused rather a ripple in the press. It had been announced that he was engaged on a work similar to Delormel's.

To the public generally that was so much Greek. To students it was refreshment. Delormel's work is unobtainable anywhere, at any price, and what is worse — or better, according to the point of view — Delormel was killed for writing it. That is history.

The announcement, therefore, that Caxton was engaged on something similar caused a ripple; first, because no one could imagine where he had obtained the data, yet chiefly because the original obviously belonged to the forbidden class; that is, it was supposed to have been based either on the Kájur which none but the Thibetian hierarchy may approach, or else on the esoteric sections of the Upanishads which the priests of Brahma guard.

These works are not for everybody. If rumors concerning them are true, they contain the lost arcana, the sciences that plutonian cataclysms engulfed, the secrets of the cosmos. Such things are not for nobodies who talk about nothing. Moreover, they are doubly inaccessible. Written in tinted word forms of which the words mean one thing and the tints another, a Champollion might perhaps decipher the text, but, unless he were initiate, he could not construe the colors. Then, also, apart from their difficulties, these works have their dangers. To get at them is one, to publish them is another. Delormel must have incurred both. His life was the penalty. So apparently was Caxton's.

But not to the district attorney. The latter, a ferocious person named Sherwood, contended that Caxton died of viper venom administered by his wife and he had experts to testify at least to the administering.

"Do you really regard these people as experts?" Mores, in a casual, condescending way asked of him; whereupon he proceeded to eat them up and, that done, he produced experts of his own who testified to just the contrary.

During the trial I got to know Mores rather well. Afterward I heard — yet what does one not hear? — that in a panic which supervened he had dropped a lot of money, that the loss had affected him, and that he had vacated the courts and the city.

Now, here he was at this California resort, where, but an hour before, after a stretch of work in San Francisco, I had come for an outing. November had come with me. But not as yet the usual tourist. Practically, the hotel was empty and I was glad that I had at least an acquaintance in the land.

At sight of him also, the trial, as I have said, returned. The vocation of reporter is not considered enviable, but there were not a few that envied it then. It took me, where they could not go, into the General Sessions where there is more drama than in all of Homer.

In this drama, as the curtain went up, a call resounded:

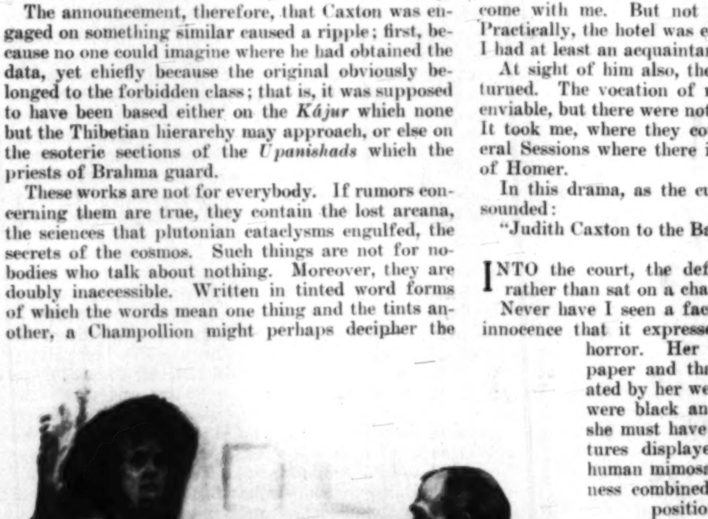
"Judith Caxton to the Bar!"

INTO the court, the defendant came and shrank rather than sat on a chair beside Mores.

Never have I seen a face so spectral. It was not innocence that it expressed, nor yet guilt; it was horror. Her skin was white as white paper and that whiteness was accentuated by her weeds and by her eyes which were black and yet burning. Normally she must have been beautiful. Her features displayed the sensitiveness of a human mimosa and it was that sensitiveness combined with the tragedy of her position that made her look like a phantom, not from Homer, but Dante.

But one gets accustomed to all things. The soul makes itself at home with what it must. As the trial proceeded the horror of it must have waned, for once she smiled. During the summing up, Sherwood described her as hysterical and passionate, a woman insatiable of pleasure and, in pursuit of it, hesitating at nothing, even at crime. It was then that she smiled, but her smile was as weary and as flickering as a fire about to go out.

"May it please the Court: Mr. Foreman and gentlemen of the jury."



A woman vulgar and obese, a face that time had coarsened and temper had marred

With three bows and these rituals, Sherwood opened for the State. According to him the defendant had grievances against the [illegible] ceased whom he described as a recluse occupied [illegible] the recondite, a man who never went anywhere, [illegible] saw anybody and who refused to have guests at [illegible] house. Many a woman has hated her husband to [illegible] death for less, and that fact Sherwood put before [illegible] jury. It constituted, he said, the motive for the [illegible] der of this man from whom the defendant had [illegible] planning to obtain a divorce. But to obtain it [illegible] Sherwood declared, a sojourn in Nevada, in Ida[illegible] exile from the smartness of upper Fifth avenue [illegible] There was a shorter way and that way she [illegible] Among her effects was a vial containing venom [illegible] the tic-potonga, or bora viper, and this venom, [illegible] she had given to her husband, was the cause of [illegible] death.

BEFORE he had finished, Mores was at him. [illegible] object to the District Attorney prejudicing [illegible] jury against this gentlewoman, my client."

The objection was not sustained.

"And I except to your honor's ruling," Mores, [illegible] a bulldog look, threw up at the Bench.

Sherwood proceeded. "There, gentlemen is [illegible] crime; there, too, is the motive. To finish the [illegible] evidence will be produced."

As I sat on the verandah, the Pacific before me [illegible] could see the picture, the frame as well — the [illegible] panoply of the bench, the fabulous beasts [illegible] climbed the fluted columns on the walls and the [illegible] room, high ceiled, close packed, filled with specta[illegible] who had begged and badgered their way there. [illegible] it is always great fun to see a woman tried for [illegible] life. Yet when you have known her, or known [illegible] her, when she has happened to be one of the [illegible] select whose names are recorded as "Among th[illegible] present," what more could any one decently [illegible] But public sentiment is a wave that thinks, [illegible] again, changes its mind. At the opening every[illegible] knew that the prisoner was guilty. As the trial [illegible] ceeded no one was quite so sure.

There was a reason for that. On the stand, [illegible] vants and experts succeeded each other. Among [illegible] experts, some testified that the venom of the [illegible] viper leaves no traces and that reagents employed [illegible] the autopsy had determined only slight discolora[illegible] superinducible as well by natural causes as the [illegible] verse. Of the servants, one told of finding the [illegible] and of going to the defendant who was in her [illegible] the door barred and bolted. That was at eight in [illegible] morning. Already it had been shown that Ca[illegible] had died at midnight.

WHERE was the defendant at that time? It [illegible] Mores who asked the question. It was [illegible] prisoner who answered it. Bending to her, [illegible] had asked her to take the stand.

The move, wholly unexpected, unusual, almost [illegible] ceptional in murder cases, created an impression [illegible] was excellent, one that increased when, hesitant [illegible] abashed at first, but presently with lifted eyes and [illegible] a clear, level voice, she testified in her own behalf.

In the direct, she denied of course that she had killed her husband, denied that she had ever contemplated such a thing, adding that though she had wanted to leave him, it was not for the reasons advanced but because she was afraid of him and that, at the [illegible] when it was shown he had

WHEN HUCKLEBERRY FINN went to the circus, he sneaked in under the tent when the watchman was absent. He had money in his pocket, but he feared that he might have other expenses to meet. "I ain't opposed to spending money on circuses," he explained, "when there ain't no other way, but there ain't no use in wasting it on them."

In spite of the fact that he had not paid for his seat and that he was thereby released from the necessity of getting his money's worth, he declared cheerfully that "it was a real bully circus. It was the splendidest sight that ever was, when they all come riding in, two and two, a gentleman and a lady, side by side, the men just in their drawers and undershirts, and no shoes nor stirrups, and resting their hands on their thighs, easy and comfortable . . . and every lady with a lovely complexion, and perfectly beautiful, and looking like a gang of real sure-enough queens. . . . And then, one by one, they got up and stood, and went a-weaving around the ring so gentle and wavy and graceful, the men looking ever so tall and airy and straight, with their heads bobbing and skimming along, away up there under the tent-roof, and every lady's rose-leaf dress flapping soft and silky around her hips, and she looking like the most loveliest parasol."

By the side of this passage from the Twain masterpiece may be set a passage from Mr. Hamlin Garland's best story, Rose of Dutcher's Coolly, in which we find recorded the impressions of a girl of about the same age, the daughter of a hard-working Wisconsin farmer. Rose had never seen a circus before; and even the morning street-parade fired her imagination, and gave her a new idea of beauty.

"On they came, a band leading the way. Just behind, with glitter of lance and shine of helmet, came a dozen knights and fair ladies riding spirited chargers. . . . The women seemed small and firm and scornful, and the men rode with lances uplifted looking down at the crowd with a haughty droop in their eyelids." Rose "did not laugh at the clown jigging by in a pony-cart, for there was a face between her and all that followed — the face of a bare-armed knight, with brown hair and a curling mustache, whose proud neck had a curve in it as he bent his head to speak to his rearing horse. . . . His face was fine, like pictures she had seen."

In the afternoon, Rose attended the performance in the tent and "sat in a dream of delight as the band began to play. . . . Then the music struck into a splendid gallop and out from the curtained mysteries beyond, the knights and ladies darted, two by two, in glory of crimson and gold, and green and silver. At their head rode the man with the brown mustache." A little later "six men dressed in tights of blue and white and orange ran into the ring and her hero led them. He wore blue and silver, and on his breast was a rosette. He looked a god to her. His naked limbs, his proud neck, the lofty carriage of his head, made her shiver with emotion. They all came to her, lit by the white radiance; they were not naked, they were beautiful. . . . They invested their nakedness with something which exalted them. They became objects of luminous beauty to her, though she knew nothing of art. To see him bow and kiss his fingers to the audience was a revelation of manly grace and courtesy." When at last the show was over and Rose went out into the open air "it seemed strange to see the same blue sky arching the earth; things seemed exactly the same, and yet Rose had grown older. She had developed immeasurably in those few hours."

SHE never saw this acrobat again, and after a little while, she knew that she did not want to see him. He lingered in her memory, a vision from another world than any she had ever dreamed — a world of heroic romance and of lofty idealism. "She began to live for him, her ideal." And while her soul was expanding under the influence of her poetic idealization of a manly figure revealed to her only for two or three hours, all unconsciously she patterned her movements upon his. She walked with a free stride and her body came to have the easy carriage of the athlete. Later, when Rose had matured into a beauty of her own, she confessed to an elder woman this sentimental awakening in her early girlhood; and it became evident to her friend that "the beautiful poise of the head and supple swing of the girl's body was in part due to the suggestion of the man's perfect grace."

To the realistic imagination of the boy, Huck, the circus was a fleeting spectacle of beauty; and to the romantic imagination of the girl, Rose, it lingered long as a dream of poetry. Young Americans, both of them, living in these modern days when the human form, male and female, is decorously dissembled and disguised by ugly and complicated garments, they had been allowed by the exceptional freedom of the circus to recapture something of the frank and innocent delight of the Greeks in the beauty of the body, in its beauty merely as a body, and not as the habitation of the mind and the soul.

ALERT as the Greeks were to admire the deeds of the mind — no race ever more so — they were no less keen in their appreciation of the things of the body. They were glad to crown the poet for his lyric conquest, but they bestowed the laurel wreath also on the athlete who had won to the front in the race. The lofty nobility of their tragedy testifies to the clarity of their intelligence; and the supreme power of their sculpture is evidence of their loving study of the human body, bearing itself in beauty, clad in few and flowing garments which allowed the eye to follow the free play of the muscles.

It is because the circus preserves for us this occasional privilege that it deserves to survive. The jocularities of the clowns, the intricate evolutions of the trained animals, the golden glitter of the gorgeous cavalcades; all these

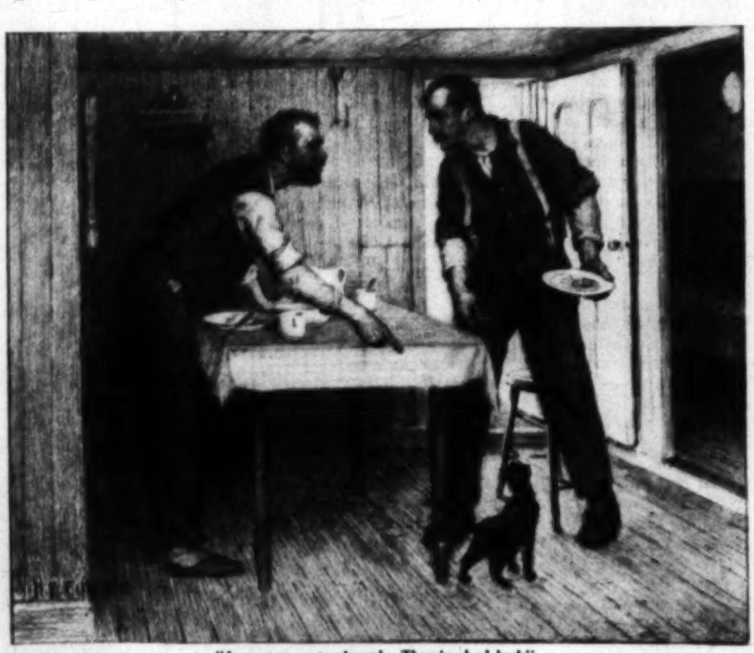
THE MOST CONVINCING lecture or lesson on morals is the one delivered by an immoral, or unmoral, person. I learned this early in life, when, with a crowd of other youngsters, I was trying to drown a half-grown puppy. We would have succeeded; but along came a tramp — a ragged, dirty, black-bearded derelict — who watched us a moment, then gave utterance to a villainous flood of billingsgate. I can not write down the names he called us, nor the adjectives with which he qualified the names; but his concluding speech, expurgated, ran something like this: "Any man or boy, who will illtreat a dumb and defenseless animal that can't talk back and explain matters, is mean, that 's all — just mean. He 's mean enough to steal the cross off a donkey's back."

Then, still storming at us, he reeled on his way, while we rescued the half dead creature and nursed it back to life. Later, we found it a home, and became an unorganized, unofficial Humane Society. We lied, stole, tickled the devil and played truant as before, but were a menace to other boys who, with the savagery of children, found pleasure in cruelty. The tramp's anger and disgust had done more for us than the behests of father, mother or Sunday school teacher.

With pity for dumb brutes my one moral quality, I grew up and went to sea, where morals are not taught — where nothing is taught or acquired but seamanship, navigation and an iron-clad stamina and endurance. These attributes came to me in time, as well as a mate's certificate; but in all else I remained at a standstill, or went backward. Sailors are children, it is said, and like all sailors, even when I berthed aft, I grumbled, quarreled, swore and drank, with no restraining influence or principle to curb me until I received my second lesson in morals — or ethics, if you like — and this time from a man I despised as heartily as a I might have despised the tramp had he not impressed me. Afterward I received other tutelage, and finally became the civilized commander of a passenger steamship; but my later development has no place in this story, which is concerned only with that second lecture and the events which followed — events that made me a teetotaler for life.



"I want no cats aboard. They 're bad luck"

This lecture came from Bill Edwards who, as second mate of my first ship, had kicked me off the poop and hazed me for the whole voyage because I had dared raise my voice in boyish protest at his "sprit-sail-yarding" of a shark that he had caught with a line and pulled aboard. I lacked the vocabulary and the superiority in size and strength possessed by the tramp, so my protest was ignored, and the shark, alive and uninjured, went overboard with a small spar lashed athwart its mouth, to die of starvation. Later, however, having attained my growth, strength and chest measurement, I met Edwards in a Rangoon boarding-house, and thrashed him within an inch of his life. Then we had gone our separate ways — he to the hospital, I to jail — not to meet again until Frisco Frank, a Honolulu boarding master, having taken my last cent for bed, board and bar, turned me out without my dunnage, without another boarding-house to take me in, and without a ship in port to sign in. It was then, sitting on a string piece of the wharf, staring at the water with aching eyes while I nursed an aching head, that Edwards approached from behind me and, stooping over my shoulder, peered into my face.

"It 's you, Jack," he said, not unkindly. "Heard you were in port; but what 's the matter? Lost your mother?"

"ON the beach," I answered, bitterly. I did not welcome his presence, but in my extremity I would have talked with a coolie. "Fired out when I 'd blown my last cent; and his bill was big enough to give him an excuse to hold my clothes."

"Frisco Frank, hey! He can't hold a sailor's clothes. Don't you know that?"

"Yes, but I don't care to fall back on sailor's rights. I 've had papers too long," I sneered ill-naturedly.

"You came in first mate of the Century, I heard. Discharged?"

"Quit, if it 's any of your business," I answered, savagely. "Did n't like her."

"Oh, don't get wrathy! I 'm not looking for scraps, for I know you can lick me. But I 'm older than you, and never having held any grudge, I feel like telling you something. You did n't quit that big ship because you did n't like her. You had a good berth, a good skipper, and good prospects. What you quit for was a run ashore, and a big drunk. You 're them, and now you 're paying."

"You 're a fine preacher," I rejoined.

"I 'm not preaching — that is, about right wrong. It 's the damfoolishness of it. I 've b called all kinds of a scoundrel; but no man called me a fool, even though I can just write name and can't read it in print. No man ever me drunk. In all my life I never spent as much dollar over a bar. I know the taste of the stuff don't like it. Do you like it?"

"No," I answered, dubiously. "Can't say that I It 's the stimulation I like."

"Dutch courage, that lasts about fifteen min then needs replenishing. Then you 're sleepy or qu-relsome, according to your liver — in either case danger of robbery or arrest. Who benefits, any The men behind the bar, but they don't drink. you ever see a saloonkeeper or bartender drunk?"

"I 've seen them drink," I replied, doggedly.

"Yes, for sociability or business, and then smallest drink possible. It 's the dam fools in f of the bar that take all they can decently get in glass, and then some more. And think of the cost the end of a year. Why, the price of one drink buy three loaves of bread, and three loaves of b will keep a big man alive three days. That 's foolishness of it. Poverty all over the world saloon keepers getting rich. Frisco Frank has house and horses. Where 's yours?"

"Oh, shut up! I 've got what he has n't got."

"An education and a mate's license. What does want of them? He has brains and money — all money. I tell you, if it was n't for the bar, board masters would go out of business and Fo'castle J could ship where he likes on his own terms. If men would swear off, saloon keepers, bartenders, every man connected with making or selling the would take to the ground and grow something th could be eaten. As it is, more grain goes into making of booze than of bread. Dead broke?"

I nodded.

"I 'm not, even though I never had your chance having any schooling. I never signed above sec mate because I could n't learn navigation. But I jumped above first mate and skipper. I 'm an own — I employ skippers and mates."

I looked at him in surprise. He certainly was w dressed.

"I 've made money," he went on. "Never m how. I 've made it, and taken a Chinese partner more. We bought a schooner from the underwri patched her up, and mean to make some more m with her. She 's up at the Carriage Drive. I skipper, for I can handle her; but I want a licens sailing master with papers to satisfy the law. You got 'em. Want the berth?"

"Want a drink more than anything else," I an-swered, abandonedly.

"YOU want your breakfast more than anyth else, I take it. But if you 'll ship with me I 'll buy you a drink of Frisco's grog to steady you get your clothes, but there 'll be no advance; I 'm short. FRESH FINDINGS FROM MARK TWAIN

BY ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE

Author of Mark Twain: A Biography

Illustrations by HORACE TAYLOR

By permission of Harper and Brothers, the authorized biographer of Mark Twain contributes to the SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE the following personal reminiscences and anecdotes gathered during his long and intimate association with the great humorist, selected from the recently published life of Mark Twain.

MARK for long had succeeded in concealing his profanity from his wife. But he sometimes confided under a pledge of secrecy, how one morning, when he thought the door was shut between their bedroom and the bathroom, he was in there dressing and shaving, accompanying these trying things with language intended only for the strictest privacy; how presently, when he discovered a button off the shirt he intended to put on, he hurled it through the window into the yard with appropriate remarks, followed it with another shirt in the same condition, and added certain collars and neckties, decorating the shrubbery outside, where the people were going by to church; how in this extreme moment he heard a slight cough, and turned to find that the door was open! There was only one door, and he knew he had to pass her. He felt pale and sick, and sat down a few moments to consider. He decided to assume that she was asleep, and to walk out and through the room, head up, as if he had nothing on his conscience. He attempted it, but without success. Half-way across the room he heard a voice suddenly repeat his last terrible remark. He turned to see her sitting up in bed, regarding him with a look as withering as she could find in her gentle soul. The humor of it struck him.

"Livy," he said, "did it sound like that?"

"Of course it did," she said, "only worse. I wanted to hear just how it sounded."

"Livy," he said, "it would pain me to think that when I swear it sounds like that. You got the words right, Livy, but you don't know the tune."

"I WAS never consciously and purposely irreverent in my life, yet one person or another is always charging me with a lack of reverence. Reverence for—what—for whom? Who is to decide what ought to command my reverence—my neighbor or I? I think I ought to do the electing myself. The Mohammedan and the Christian—each says the other is irreverent, and both are mistaken, for manifestly you can't have reverence for a thing that doesn't command it. If you could prove that you could digest what you haven't eaten, and do other miracles you'd get a reputation."

MARK TWAIN once received a letter from an author who had written a book calculated to assist inventors and patentees, asking for an endorsement. He replied:

Dear Sir: I have, as you say, been interested in patents and patentees. If your book tells how to exterminate inventors send me nine editions. Send them by express.

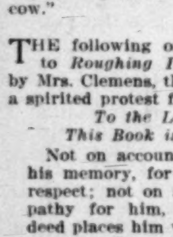
Very truly yours,
S. L. Clemens.

"I NEVER see any use in spelling a word right—and never did. I mean I don't see any use in having a uniform and arbitrary way of spelling words. We might as well make all clothes alike and cook all dishes alike. Sameness is tiresome; variety is pleasing. I have a correspondent whose letters are always a refreshment to me; there is such a breezy unfettered originality about his orthography. He always spells kow with a large K. Now that is just as good as to spell it with a small one. It is better. It gives the imagination a broader field, a wider scope. It suggests to the mind a grand, vague, impressive new kind of a cow."

THE following original dedication to Roughing It was suppressed by Mrs. Clemens, though not without a spirited protest from the author:

To the Late Cain
This Book is Dedicated.

Not on account of respect for his memory, for it merits little respect; not on account of sympathy for him, for his bloody deed places him without the pale of sympathy, strictly speaking, but out of a mere humane commiseration for him, in that it was his misfortune to live in a dark age that knew not the beneficent insanity plea.



I HAVE been received in a sort of tremendous way tonight by the brains of London, assembled at the annual dinner of the sheriffs of London; mine being (between you and me) a name which was received with a thundering outburst of spontaneous applause when the long list of guests was called. I might have perished on the spot, but for the friendly support and assistance of my excellent friend, Sir John Bennett.

This letter from Twain to a friend does not tell all of the incident or the real reason why he might have perished on the spot. During the long roll-call of guests he had lost interest a little, and was conversing in whispers with Sir John Bennett, stopping to applaud now and then when the applause of the others indicated that some distinguished name had been pronounced. All at once, the applause broke out with great vehemence. This must be some very distinguished person indeed. He joined in it with great enthusiasm. When it was over he whispered to Sir John:

"Whose name was that they were just applauding?"

"Mark Twain's."

Whereupon the support was needed.

"IT IS more trouble to make an original maxim than it is to do right."

Aerial Analysis

IF the late Wilbur Wright ever had a romance he managed to keep the secret, and no one seemed to know. However, he was not without views on the subject. A reporter once asked him why he had never married. "It's the easiest thing in the world to drive an aeroplane," he answered, "and it's just as easy to get married." Then he added: "Women and aeroplanes are so much alike that you can't analyze either until you get them going."

All Such Corns

Can be Ended in Two Days

Apply a little Blue-jay plaster.

Right from that moment the corn becomes comfortable.

Then the B & B wax begins to loosen the corn, and in 48 hours the whole corn comes out.

The chemist who invented Blue-jay studied corns for years. And his method is now employed on a million corns a month.

No pain, no soreness, no discomfort. The way is gentle and results are sure.

Don't pare corns. Don't apply liquids. Don't use ancient methods in these scientific days.

You can end the corn forever in this simple, modern way. Try it on one corn.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.

Three Sheets in The Wind

a port, I guess; but that's as you make it. Come on."

I was given a drink over Frisco Frank's bar, and after a few sharp words between Frank and Edwards, my chest was returned to me. Then, in separate rigs, we rode up to the wharf and boarded the schooner, shiny with fresh paint and varnish, but on close inspection showing unmistakable signs of age and decay.

SHE had been a yacht; but her long overhang, sharp lines, lofty spars and flush deck were the only yacht-like characteristics left her. Her original cabins, dining rooms and state rooms below had given way to cargo space, and all skylights and companions had been eliminated or turned into hatches — all but two of the latter. A companion just abaft the windlass led to a triangular forecastle in the bows containing bunks for five and a stove for cooking, and another, just forward of the wheel, led to an equally diminutive cabin that was nothing but a hall space at the foot of the stairs with a room each side — one for the skipper, the other for the mate. There was also a feature in this craft that I had never seen in any other. She was piped for gas lighting; each room in the cabin, the forecastle, binnacle, and even fixed side and mast-head lamps contained a wire enclosed burner, fed by a tank of compressed gas under the cabin floor.

"It seemed to work all right," explained Edwards when I had commented on the innovation, "so I left it rather than spend fifty dollars for an outfit of lamps and oil. And then, there are Pintsch gas buoys everywhere. We can always recharge the tank."

This, and his refusal of an advance, were not the only evidences of Edward's shortage of funds. The dinner he sat me down to was boiled rice and weak tea — the same as he fed to his five Coolies forward — and when he took me ashore in the afternoon to act my part as sailing master in getting out ship's papers, he would "clear" at the Custom House only for the run to Yokohama, and insure at Lloyds only for the one month which I assured him was ample time. But, with the egotism of an uneducated man and the pertinacity of a managing owner, he insisted that the monthly clause in the policy be changed to read for an even thirty days; so, as it was now the fifteenth of November, the insurance on the schooner was made out to expire on the fifteenth of December at noon. With the schooner's rotten condition in mind I thought at the time that he also ought to insure our lives, but did not say so; he might have repeated his paraphrase: "Any ship in a port."

I did not see the Chinese partner, nor did I see any more of Edwards until, having put in a dreary afternoon in familiarizing myself with the weakest spots in the hull, canvas and gear, and in getting acquainted with the five Coolies — one of whom was cook — he came aboard promptly at five and gave me the promised bracer, which I sadly needed.

At supper, which we ate on a small folding table in the hall space between our rooms, and which included, with the rice and tea, trepang or dried fish, a huge, emaciated, half-starved cat bounded down the stairs and into my berth where, like all cats in strange places, it voiced its distress in loud yowls. Pattering footsteps on deck indicated that it had escaped a real danger; for nothing is better in a Chinese stew than cat.

"Drive that brute ashore," he said, angrily.

"Sanctuary," I answered, calmly. "I'll feed it first."

"You'll do nothing of the kind. I want no cats on board. They're bad luck."

"I've always found them good luck. Strange cats come to me, and I always treat them well."

I picked up my half eaten supper and turned to my door.

"Do you want your berth here," asked Edwards, rising to his feet.

"Yes," I answered, facing him with the plate in my hand.

"Then you do as I say. Drive that beast ashore or go yourself."

"Are you ready," I asked, "to hand over a month's pay?"

"What? — for half a day's work?"

"I'm on the articles as Sailing Master. You've got the papers, but you'll have to produce them on demand. Ask the Consul, Mr. Edwards."

"Captain Edwards," he spluttered.

"Mister Edwards," I replied, emphasizing the prefix. "I'm Captain here. You're managing owner, and until you pay me off, either now or at Yokohama, your rights stop where mine begin. I'm going to feed that poor cat."

He stared blankly at me, and I entered my room with the food. A few soft words and gentle strokes quieted the frightened animal, and it greedily devoured my supper. Then it purred so gratefully that I had no heart nor mind to drive it ashore; so, leaving it stretched out in my berth for a sleep, I went out. But Edwards had sought the deck, and, as I could tell by the heavy thump of his feet, he was working off his rage by pacing to and fro. Having conquered him I felt no anger myself, and going up, asked him when we would sail.

"We tow down the first thing in the morning," he answered, much more civilly than I expected; and for a moment I regretted crowding so hard a man who had befriended me.

"I'm telling you that," he added, slowly, as though restraining his temper, "because you have a right to know. But as you claim other rights that I'm not sure of, I fall back upon rights of my own that I am sure of. Don't speak to me except about work while you are in this packet. I want none o' your conversation."

"Very well, Mr. Edwards," I answered, tartly, again emphasizing the prefix. "But I expect the same consideration from you."

THEN, as darkness was closing down, I went forward, lighted the port, or off shore, side light, as a warning to passing craft, inspected the mooring lines, set the night watch, and came aft in a mood to fight Edwards; but he had gone down to his berth.

I offer no excuse for my attitude toward him — only an explanation. All men, especially those that drink, are medically insane at times, yet never, perhaps, legally so. Though my nervousness and headache were gone, I was in the illogical, stubborn and short-sighted condition of mind that lasts a man long after he has stopped drinking. Edwards, as my owner and employer, was entitled to his own way in regard to the cat. But he had outraged my one moral commandment, and with this in mind I smoked myself into a sullen determination to meet him not only half way in his conversational inhibition, but to do my work beyond his criticism while with him, to care for the poor cat, to thrash him again at Yokohama, and to complain of the quality of the food. But, on going down to turn in for the night I lost my moral right to the latter, for at sight of his bottle of rum in a swinging tray above the table, I recklessly helped myself, not caring whether or not he heard me from his room. Then, lighting the gas in my own small closet of a room, I entered up the episode of the cat and the quarrel in the brand new log book, petted the wakened animal to sleep, turned out the gas, and went to sleep myself.

In the morning I left the cat in the closed room, until, after a silent breakfast with Edwards, I ostentatiously fed it; then, after the tug had taken us clear of the dock, I released it for a run on deck, at the same time warning the Coolie crew that if they harmed it trouble would come to them. I warned them collectively, because Chinamen, like babies, all looked alike to me, and I never could remember their names five minutes. I said nothing to Edwards, however, nor he to me. He had heard the warning and possibly was impressed.

I had a full navigating outfit — charts, books, sextant and chronometer — and when clear of the islands I took a departure and the voyage began, Edwards taking my courses and directions, and standing one watch while I and the cat stood the other. But the cat remained my watchmate only for a time. For when it had smelled at and become acquainted with every part and person of the old craft it manifested the feline disposition to do nothing that it did not want to do, and, not caring to waste sleep and dignity in chasing it to my watch below, I often left it on deck. Yet no harm came to Tom; he grew fat and sleek and handsome under the influence of the fresh trade wind and the diet of rice and fish, which I could hardly eat.

However, I needed no such sedative. The bottle of rum still remained in the swinging tray, and, resentful at the quality of food Edwards was serving, I never scrupled to take a drink every time I went down to turn in; and even though I noticed that the liquor — a particularly vile grade of fire water — always remained at about the same level in the bottle, I merely concluded that Edwards, in spite of his preachments, was also drinking it, and occasionally replenishing it. I might have found a different meaning to it had I not been thrown off my guard by Edwards's scrupulous civility, his occasional petting of the cat, and his stern orders to the crew, in my hearing, to let the animal alone.

AND so, having for the first time in my life free access to liquor — unrebuked by Edwards, whom I assumed was drinking his share — I gradually increased my sleeping draught until it was twice the size of an ordinary drink, though I was religiously careful not to touch the stuff as an "eye-opener" on turning out for my watch on deck. Thus, it merely gave me sound sleep, producing no other effect upon me than a continuance of the illogical mind state I have spoken of. But the time came — about half way across — when the trades gave way to calms, head winds, snow squalls and gales of wind that racked and ripped our old gear and canvas — I suffered so from worry and fatigue that I took a drink whenever I was near enough to the bottle. Still it did not affect my efficiency when on deck; I navigated, kept the log, oversaw the crew in patching and repairing, but would go soundly asleep the minute after stretching out — often while automatically stroking the cat.

But Tom, with the ingratitude of cats, deserted me soon, and I often saw him asleep in Edwards's berth, which possibly was softer than mine. As long as he was being kindly treated it did not matter, and, indeed, I now had serious troubles; I dropped my sextant, smashing the horizon glass, and unable to take sights of the sun, I was compelled to rely upon dead reckoning alone. This involved my being on deck a great deal in my watch below, keeping track of the course, speed and drift of the old craft, for plotting down on the chart. Edwards, too, had trouble on his mind, and, while he did not confide in me, it was plain that he was worrying about his expiring insurance: the month was nearly gone.

However, a fair wind came at last, and before it we scudded due west, while it rose to a gale that demanded the shortening of sail, and then to a hurricane that tore our remaining sails to ribbons. Edwards and I took turns at the wheel — for none of the Coolies could be trusted — and it was fatiguing work steering the light, unballasted vessel under bare poles. She was tossed about like an egg shell as the huge combers crept up astern, passed us and went on; but though she yawed two points each side of our course, fortunately we shipped no water, and as it was a dry, winter storm, there was no rain. Then we made a landfall.

It was at midday. I had been wrenching my muscles all the forenoon at the wheel while Edwards slept, and when he came up after dinner I called his attention to the thin blue line on the horizon ahead.

"It's the coast of Honshu," I said, "but I don't know what part. I suggest that we round to under a tarpaulin and ride it out until this goes down, and we can ask of some fisherman."

"Not until we drift ashore and go to pieces," he answered, taking the wheel. "Go down and enter up your log book. Enter that land we see, and take care of the date. This is the fifteenth of November. There's only one day left on the insurance."

"This is the fifteenth, according to the log," I said. "We jumped a day crossing the hundredth and eightieth meridian. The insurance expired yesterday."

"It's the fourteenth," he rejoined, angrily. "I've got a calendar. I can count days if I can't navigate. Rig that tarpaulin and I'll bring her up. Then get your dinner and get what sleep you can. We may have to depend on the anchors."

It was his first departure from the customary cool civility, and I did not try to correct his mistake. In crossing that meridian from the east to the west we had jumped a day to get into our time east from Greenwich, but I could not have made him understand. It was his vessel, his risk, and his foolishness in insisting on the month-instead of the thirty day, clause in the policy which would have given him the day that he counted on. However, I obeyed him; I rigged the tarpaulin — a square patch of canvas — in the port main rigging, and when he had put the wheel down the pressure of wind upon it not only steadied the craft, but kept her nose slightly into the seas, so that she bobbed up and down, merely drifting sidewise about three miles an hour. This accomplished I went down, entered up the log — being careful of the date, as I intended — and before sitting down to the wretched dinner waiting for me took a generous swig of his grog. When I had finished and opened my door to turn in, Tom, who had been sleeping in my berth, sprang out of the bunk and into Edwards's, no doubt to escape the chill draught from the open deadlight — now on the weather side. This angered me the more. I closed the deadlight, and before wedging my door partly open for ventilation, recklessly took another drink of grog, then turned in.

It was the last drink I have ever taken.

I wakened — or rather came to a consciousness — with the crashing of riven timbers in my ears, the [illegible] light of the afternoon streaming through the closed deadlight, and the pungent, poisonous smell of gas in my nostrils. I was not breathing, but with the exercise of all my strength, managed to roll out of my berth to the floor. There the air was a little sweeter, and after a half inhalation, I crawled to the door. It was closed and locked from the outside. I turned to the gas jet over my berth, noticing, even in this extremity, that the log book was gone. Then I saw that the thumb cock of the gas fixture was gone, too. It had been secured in place with a screw which had been removed while I slept. With a last effort of strength I managed to open the deadlight over my berth, but I did not reach it. Tom was in the berth, stretched at full length, and feebly moved as my hand fell upon him in lurching over the berth.

I wakened again, breathing fresh, sweet air, but with my whole body saturated with agony that centered in my face, neck and hands. My hair was gone, my skin blistered, but my eyes were not injured. Through my puffed lids I could see, as I rose from the floor, a thin pencil of flame extending above and below the hole in the gas fixture. And by this illumination — for it was dark without — I saw that the rotten door had been blown outward, and that the cat, its upper side denuded of fur, lay dead in the berth. Why I was not killed myself by that explosion of gas in a closed room I can only explain by the fact that my body received the pressure on all sides at once, and why my eyes were not burned from my head, by the wonderful involuntary quickness with which eyelids will close. As a boy I had shut my eyes against an explosion of powder six inches before my face.

First extinguishing a few smouldering sparks on the edges of my bedding, I went on deck, where the cold wind cut me like a million red-hot knives. It was black darkness, but I could see that the boat was gone, and that green seas were washing across the deserted deck. But the crashing of timbers had ended, and satisfied that the old hulk would not break up immediately, I went back and swathed my face, neck and hands with cloths drenched in paint oil. Then I gave poor Tom a sea burial, and put in the rest of the night thinking — for sleep was impossible.

Whether or not Edwards had planned an insurance job at the beginning I could not determine, but he must have squared away for the beach soon after I had turned in; for the vessel could not have drifted so far before dark. And whether or not he had purposely encouraged my drinking to my own destruction was beyond me; yet he certainly had taken advantage of my condition to remove my gas cock and lock me in to die of asphyxiation, trusting that the wreck would break up in that terrific sea before the locked door or the tinkered gas burner could be discovered. He had possibly placed the cat in with me to die as well, and his previous kindness to the animal, his civility to me, and his laxity about drinking were part of the general plan. I could only guess at these things; but what I knew for a fact was that, if he had reached the beach and saved his own life, he was impoverished. For he had lost his schooner and the insurance had expired. Yet what I could not even guess at was what had caused the explosion. Edwards could not have set it off from without, and I had struck no matches.

IT was in the hospital at Yokohama, where I was taken by fishermen who rescued me next day, that this last puzzle was solved. The American Consul, a white-bearded, well-preserved and well-spoken man, visited me for my deposition. And as he talked, and as I looked at him through my swollen eyelids, fleeting memories — half formed and intangible — came to me. I had heard his voice, somewhere. I had seen that face, and that beard.

"We've got him in jail," he was saying, as I grappled with these elusive pictures of the mind, "and he is putting up a great protest about a drunken mate and a falsified log book. But Lloyd's will prosecute him for attempted barratry, and I'll help — not so much on your account, for there's no doubt you were drunk, but on account of that cat. It's the meanness of it. A man who will illtreat a dumb animal is simply mean — mean enough to steal the cross off a donkey's back. That cat saved your life. I've puzzled it out. You must have struck a spark from its back."

The Art of The Acrobat

are but the needless accompaniments of the essential privilege of the circus—to present to us a succession of acrobats with their bodies in perfect condition, to exhibit to us that purely physical beauty which we are ever in danger of overlooking or even forgetting. These acrobats, slim and handsome, as Huck Finn found them, may display their daring and their grace, standing on a circling steed or swinging from a flying trapeze, revolving on a horizontal bar or building themselves up into human pyramids on the bark of the arena; but the way in which they may choose to exhibit their skill and to show themselves is unimportant.

While the Greeks had far more opportunities than are vouchsafed to us moderns to behold the human body exhibiting its strength and its skill in graceful play, we have the advantage that many of the most effective exercises are latterday inventions. It seems unlikely that the Athenians and the Spartans, even though they were horsemen, had attained to the art of bareback riding; they may have bestraddled a saddleless steed, but they had not learned how to stand on his back and to turn summersets in time with the stride of the horse. It is, of course, possible that they were familiar with this, but no sculpture and no vase-painting, no anecdote in the works of the prose-writers and no line of the lyrists, survives to authorize us to believe it. And it is pretty certain also that they lacked the horizontal bar, which affords limitless possibilities to the adventurous acrobat of our own times.

The trapeze has a name of Greek origin and it was possibly known to the Greeks. But the Greeks did not foresee the full possibilities of the trapeze, since its most startling utilization, the feat known as the Flying Trapeze, was invented by the French acrobat Léotard, only a little later than the middle of the nineteenth century. The Flying Trapeze is the ultimate achievement of acrobatic art, and it demands the utmost combination of skilful strength and of easy grace. It was a feat that the Greeks would have appreciated and enjoyed; since it demanded and disclosed the perfection of physical courage and of physical skill.

GRACEFUL mastery of the trapeze was the most marked characteristic of Léotard; and it may be doubted whether any of those who have followed the path he traced through the air and who have vanquished difficulties beyond those which he conquered, have been able to outdo him in the essential of grace. The overcoming of difficulty is one of the elements of the pleasure which we take in any art; part of our enjoyment of a sonnet, for example, must be ascribed to the apparent ease with which the poet is able to express his thought amply and completely within the rigid limitations of his fourteen lines with their prescribed arrangement of five or six rhymes. But our delight is diminished if we are made conscious of the effort it has cost the artist to attain his aim. Many of the later performers on the Flying Trapeze let us see that the feats they are attempting are so difficult that they can not be accomplished without obvious effort.

It happens that the present writer is able to bring his personal testimony to the fact that this was the principle which always governed Léotard himself. When the French gymnast paid his only visit to the United States, more than forty years ago, he used to practice in a gymnasium which the writer also frequented. He spoke no English and the writer had a little school-boy French, so that a certain intimacy sprang up. One day Léotard asked the writer to swing a trapeze for him and he sprang off and caught it with a single hand, and as the second trapeze returned he twisted and grasped the first trapeze again with one hand. This evoked an immediate exclamation of astonishment and admiration at the startling conquest of difficulty, and it was followed by the natural question why so extraordinary a feat had never been exhibited in public.

"Don't you see the reason?" he asked. "Watch me, while I do it again."

He repeated the feat; and when it was over he smiled and asked, "Do you see now?"

The writer responded that he could not help observing a certain awkwardness in Léotard's movements, a certain violence of effort, and a certain lack of grace.

"That's just it," Léotard replied. "The leaps from trapeze to trapeze with the aid of one hand only must be lopsided, since the body is inevitably more or less twisted. There is a sort of wrenching of the person which can not be avoided, even if it is ungraceful. That is why I have never exhibited this feat in public, difficult as it is. That is why I never shall exhibit it, for the quality I seek above all things is grace; which is possible only when I can use both hands, so that I can make what I do seem easy, no matter how difficult it may be."

It was in the same winter that Léotard was in New York about forty years ago that the Hanlon Brothers paid one of their welcome visits to America. They were then acrobats pure and simple, although later when they called themselves the Hanlon-Lees they had become pantomimists. As acrobats they held fast to the same principles which governed Léotard in his performances. They insisted upon certainty of execution; they never failed to perform the feat they set out to accomplish, and to perform it successfully, the first time they tried it.

The present writer was told at the time that there were two or three surprising and alluring feats which the Hanlons had invented themselves and which they practiced laboriously and faithfully all that winter, but which they wisely refrained from ever putting on their program because they were never able to assure themselves of a uniformly successful result. They could do any one of these feats four times out of five, but the fifth time there would be a miscalculation of energy, and the attempt would have to be repeated.

HERE again the modern acrobat, who is guided by a real feeling for his art, is in accord with the principles which the Greeks obeyed. In Attic tragedy, for example, there are no scenes of violence, no scuffles and no assassinations; and this is not because the Greeks shrank from scenes of blood, as some critics have vainly contended, but rather because the actors in their drama were raised on thick boots and were topped by towering masks, which made it almost impossible for them to take part in scenes of violence, in hand-to-hand struggles, in murders before the eyes of the spectators, without danger of displacing the mask and thereby distracting the attention of the audience from the immediate purpose of the dramatic poet. What could not be done gracefully the Greeks refrained from attempting. The exhibition of difficulty for the sake of difficulty, still more the failure to accomplish a "stunt" for the sake of calling attention to its difficulty—these things the Greeks abhorred. They would surely have disapproved of the continuous toe-dancing which evokes abundant applause nowadays from spectators ignorant of the true principles of the art of the dance.

THE CHILDREN had just returned from school, and all customary diversions failing to interest them, they took to arguing. There were three of them—Billy and Tommy, who were brothers, and Johnny, who lived next door. Billy started it.

"Tommy, what you goin' to be when you gets to be a man?" he inquired of his younger brother.

"I'm goin' t' be a sod'ger," replied Tommy, proudly.

"Go ahead, Tommy, that's a fair show. Wrastle 'im," urged his brother, eagerly.

Tommy hung his head and hesitated.

"Nope," he said in the end, "I won't wrastle, neither."

"Gee! what a 'fraid cat!" taunted Johnny.

"Ah, go on, Tommy, wrastle him! They ain't nothin' in that. Pop did n't say it was bad to wrastle."

Tommy shook his head, and all efforts to persuade him failed. He only shook his head the harder. "Nope, won't do it."

The boys were on the point of leaving him in disgust, when he said to them:

"Gee, you fellers is talkin' so much, why don't you wrastle? I'll be umpire."

"It's a go," said Johnny, eagerly.

"Come on, Billy, we'll show him that we ain't afeared."

They went at it like young tigers. They pulled and mauled each other, with brutal indifference to clothes. And all the while, Tommy sat on a nearby fence calmly surveying the conflict. At last, after much puffing and blowing, Johnny managed to seat himself on Billy's head. "Down?" he asked, in threatening accent.

"Duh-duh — duh-duh — oooooooon!"

Three times the combatants came together, and three times Johnny, who was the taller and heavier, downed his adversary. And when the test was over, both victor and vanquished gloried in Tommy's humiliation.

But Tommy was prepared to meet them with an invincible argument this time.

"Now I've gotcha both," he exclaimed, joyfully. "Gen'rals don't fight, they leads — See!"

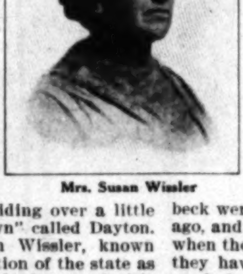
A Teacher in Spain

MISS SUSAN D. HUNTINGTON, an American woman, has the distinction of being Director of the International Institute for Girls in Madrid, Spain. This school is the first and only non-sectarian school in Spain to be incorporated and maintained for the sole purpose of the education of women. It is directed by prominent Americans, and the faculty is made up of instructors trained in American colleges, aided by excellent native teachers of Spanish, French, and German. The school was founded by a missionary in Spain, the late Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick.

Miss Susan D. Huntington

Miss Huntington began her service as Director in October, 1910. She is a graduate of Wellesley College, and holds the degree of M. A. from Columbia University, where her major study was pedagogy. To her theoretical knowledge of the art of teaching was added the practical experience of nine years in the Normal School of the University of Porto Rico, where she was first an instructor and later the principal of an institution known as the Practical School. In this field, Miss Huntington bore no small part in the establishment of an educational system which in ten years has diminished the amount of illiteracy in Porto Rico from more than eighty to less than fifty per cent.

Through her experience in this Spanish-speaking dependency, Miss Huntington learned to adapt American educational ideals to the Spanish temperament — a very important qualification in her present position. While still an under-graduate, Miss Huntington spent three years with Mrs. Gulick in San Sebastian and in Biarritz, where the Institute was at that time located. As an educational expert Miss Huntington has gathered to her support the leaders of the new educational movement in Spain, who regard the International Institute as an integral part of their plan for training the men and women who are to shape the political and social life of the new Spain.



Mrs. Susan Wissler

A Cow Town Mayor

THE SECOND woman mayor in America is presiding over a little Wyoming "cow town" called Dayton. She is Mrs. Susan Wissler, known throughout her section of the state as "Aunt Susan," by the boys and girls who went to the school that she kept for fifteen years. Latterly, they have been buying their dry-goods from her; for she has purchased a little notion store, adding dry-goods, millinery and shoes.

She is very proud of the fact that four-fifths of the votes that elected her were cast by men, though she appreciates the support of the Wyoming women. The latter, however, are greatly in the minority. Dayton business men believed that she could give the turbulent little town a good administration, and they forgot party differences to elect her.

Mrs. Wissler believes that the dry-goods business is a good one for a woman. "The buying is where merchants fail," she says; "but by being careful not to overstock and by paying cash to take advantage of all discounts, a practical woman ought to do well. I have always been on the best of terms with the business men, and many women in other parts of the state want me to come to their towns and open a store."

Educational methods she thinks need reforming, since the children now get too much help from their teachers and parents, and study simply to pass grades and not for the sake of any real progress. She approves of hard work and self-support for young people; and her son, who took a course at Wyoming University, is now a surveyor and cattleman, while her daughter is a teacher of music.

Forced by an early widowhood to be father as well as mother to her children, Mrs. Wissler feels that her political privileges came to her as a right and a duty; and she has taken a keen interest in them ever since her home duties ceased to absorb all of her spare time.

Colorado Women Miners

OCCUPYING seats at a Mining Congress recently held in Denver, Colo., were two women — Mrs. P. J. Thomas and her daughter, Miss Nettie Hornbeck. Both are practical and active miners, thoroughly understanding formations and the treatment of ores. They own the property which they operate. It consists of fifteen claims, comprising eighty acres of placer ground, located on Bear Mountain in the San Juan Valley, and known as the Copper Queen Group. Besides finding high values in uranium, they have cut a four-foot vein showing a trifle more than twenty-one per cent in copper. Mrs. Thomas and Miss Hornbeck went to this locality seven years ago, and aside from a very short time when their claims were under a lease, they have superintended every day's work, besides doing much work with hand drills themselves. Their home is a small cabin roughly constructed of pine logs, in Morris Gulch, on Mineral Creek, in the Tennessee basin, four miles from Silverton. Two thoroughbred bull dogs are their protectors, and the life of the wilds appeals strongly to both women. Mrs. Thomas had much experience in mining in Mexico before coming to Colorado.

The Coming Man of Mexico

tion of taxes and a more general distribution of the ownership of land. While I expect this problem to be worked out only after due study by the experts entrusted with so serious and important a phase of government, I wish to state in advance that I am in favor of taxing the undeveloped and unimproved lands of the large landholders. This will induce them either to improve their holdings, or to sell or lease them to others who will. This is the only method, in my opinion, by which the agrarian problem of Mexico can be satisfactorily solved.

And since it is this agrarian problem that, according to some of our thinkers, has brought Mexico to the brink of ruin, how necessary is it that it should be solved once and for all. It has been responsible for much of our social and revolutionary unrest. It swept into power the weak government of the last year or so. It is a specter that must be laid.

Let no one think that if I am elected, I shall try to bring back the old methods, much less the old men, that belonged to the great era of my uncle's administration of the government of Mexico. Those men and measures have performed their part and now belong to the past. The era of Porfirio Diaz is closed. The party which I lead has no program of restoration. We plan a new government, with new men and new measures. If for no other reason, I would be compelled by political expediency to take this attitude. The governmental methods of General Porfirio Diaz were strictly his own. They were justified by a series of events and circumstances so definitely associated with him as an individual that any one who might seek to use them would be foredoomed to utter failure. He would lack the record of the patriot who shed his blood in a hundred battles to preserve the independence of his fatherland. He would lack the profound love and respect of all the old generals, the officers and soldiers who accompanied him in his long campaigns. He would lack the blind faith with which the nation entrusted itself to Don Porfirio. Lastly, he would lack the admiration and respect with which foreign nations honored the exiled leader of the State, and whom they continue to honor as one of the greatest statesmen that the Nineteenth Century produced.

I must work out my own salvation and turn to my fellow countrymen for approval and support. The Mexican people are now ready for real democracy, in spite of the selfish efforts of some persons to persuade them to embrace anarchy instead. According to the information obtained by the organization that is conducting my campaign, adherence to our cause is coming in from all parts of the country. I certainly expect the cordial support from my native State, Oaxaca, and from other states where I am personally well known, such as Vera Cruz, San Luis Potosi,

Should my uncle, Don Porfirio, elect to return to Mexico, he will be received with open arms and with the consideration due to his great age and illustrious name; but, in that event, he will certainly take no active part in the government, except possibly as a counsellor in matters of grave importance to our country.

In the same way, Mexico stands open to all the members of my uncle's family and to his social and political friends, so many of whom left the country during the Madero regime. Furthermore, the amnesty bill that has been recently passed, extends to members of the Madero family and to all citizens without exception. I harbor no rancors against any one. The estates of the Madero family will not be confiscated, as falsely reported, provided the law is obeyed. We are anxious that all the adherents of the fallen government should return and take up their duties as good citizens.

In conclusion, let me say a few words about the personalities of some of the men who have been making history in Mexico.

Don Francisco Leon de la Barra, Provisional - President for several months after the abdication of Porfirio Diaz, is in the field for the Vice-Presidency and is the candidate who deserves to be elected. It has recently been proposed by de la Barra himself that the office of Vice-President be abolished; but this is a matter to be settled by our National Congress and by the State Legislatures, as provided by the constitution.

The late Francisco I. Madero, as President of the Republic, was lacking absolutely in tact, under the existing circumstances. This was due to his want of practical sense in respect to men and measures. He had dreams — dreams that were born of speculative study in the library; but he did not take into account that events happen as they will, and not as one would have them happen.

Pascual Orozco, as I take him, is an upright spirit, with the natural simplicity of the peasant. He has been fighting for ideals, the real significance of which has not, perhaps, been understood in all its sociological breadth. He is not a Presidential possibility, because he possesses in the highest degree the virtue of modesty. From this he could not free himself, even if he had a sufficient number of followers to bring him prominently before the public.

ZAPATA, of Morelos, offers a curious special case, which should be judged with care. He is an obscure peasant, without education; but he is hailed as a demi-god by his followers, who believe that he is fighting for the welfare of the Indians. They believed in him from the start, because he told them that the hour for their vindication had arrived. Nor can his tactics be blamed too harshly, when we remember that he was once applauded by President Madero, who visited him and greeted him with an embrace. Zapata is a reckless force unchained, and it is natural that he should decline to come to terms with the lawful authorities. His adherents would first demand that he fulfil the purpose for which he claims to have been called into action. I do not believe that the idea of becoming first magistrate of the nation has ever entered his head.

To the voice of the people, which will be expressed at the election early in the summer, I leave my own political fortunes. I can only say that, if elected, I shall do my best to restore Mexico to her former high standing among Latin American Republics.

Home Missionary Work

MAYOR Henry T. Hunt, of Cincinnati, was rusticating in a Kentucky village, in the feudist region, last summer. One evening found him enjoying a quiet hour on the hotel veranda. Suddenly two men running at top speed came into view — a tall mountaineer, barefooted and almost hysterical, closely pursued by a missionary chap. Hunt leaped up, believing murder was about to be committed.

"What's wrong?" he cried, as fugitive and pursuer swept by. The missionary shrieked:

"I've been a chasin' of that high-hipped, onregenerate gink since sunup for to put a pair of shoes on his onchristian feet." With a yell the mountaineer put on a new burst of speed and disappeared in the direction of a friendly mountain cave.

The Collapsible Husband

died, she was in her room, her door barred for protection against him.

Gently, insinuatingly, the direct continued: "Mrs. Caxton, you say that you were afraid of your husband. Now, among the exhibits here, is a vial said to contain venom, and which was found in your possession. Will you tell me please where you got it?"

"In Mr. Caxton's study."

"For what purpose did you remove it?"

"To prevent him from giving it to himself or, possibly, to others."

"You removed it then, not to administer it to him, but for his own protection. Now, will you tell the jury, please, what reason you had for taking that precaution."

"He acted as though he did not know what he was about."

"Yet it is true, is it not, that he was a scholar and engaged on some important work?"

"He was writing a book, yes."

"And concerning this book, Mrs. Caxton, do you recall anything unusual?"

"My husband received a letter signed Shri Shankara in which the writer warned him of the fate of another scholar named Delormel and said that if he did not abandon the book he would be killed."

"Quite so. And did Mr. Caxton say who this—er—Shri Shankara was?"

"The letter stated that. It came from Benares and said that the writer was a Brahman priest."

"Ah! And what effect, if any, did this letter have on Mr. Caxton?"

"He began to see and hear things, or at least he said so. He said that one evening on entering his study he saw a man seated at his desk. He said the man was dressed in silk and that he could hear the pen scratch on the paper. He also said that when he reached the man, the latter vanished."

"Leaving nothing to indicate that he had been there?"

"My husband said that on the paper was written 'Shri Shankara' and that the ink was still wet."

"Did he say anything else?"

"He said that if he caught him again, or caught him at all, he would stab him with a syringe of venom."

"And you feared that it was himself he might stab?"

"Precisely."

MORES bowed. "Thank you, Mrs. Caxton." He turned to Sherwood. "Your witness. And, by the way, let me beg of you, don't go at this witness, as you did the last, like a common scold." He turned again to the defendant. "I apologize in advance for any rudeness on the part of the District Attorney."

From behind the bar, meanwhile, objections had exploded like shell. But, through the running fire of them, Mores had held his own, held the witness to the point, extracting bit by bit this curious story which, I could see, amazed even the Bench. Then, eventually, through other witnesses, through the testimony of experts recalled, Mores demonstrated Caxton's neurosis and, the usual hypothetical question aiding, extracted their belief that he had died of cardiac paralysis induced by the fright which his hallucinations caused.

But were they hallucinations, I wondered?—a query which I was careful not to put in my copy. Yet during the proceedings that followed I could not but reflect that the impossible being a term which long since science has dropped from its dictionary, it might be that at Benares, where it is claimed that adepts are able to exteriorize and project themselves through space, it might be that, from there, some priest had astrally appeared to Caxton, gibbered at him, menaced him and, in his neurotic condition, had frightened him to death.

After the summing up, the charge followed and the jury filed out. It was idle to wait, perilous as well—at any murder trial one runs the risk of being talked to death if nothing worse—and I went on to the newspaper office where I was employed and where I later learned that Judith Caxton had been acquitted.

Now, as I looked out on the Pacific, I wondered what had become of her.

SHORTLY I was enlightened. After luncheon I found my way into a deserted billiard room and got a cigar from the waiter. During luncheon I had looked over the wine list on which was Sham Shoo. At the time I knew but by repute of this Chinese decoction which, while highly inspirational, as I was to discover, is, primarily, just so much art, music and verse distilled.

I told the waiter to send some of it to my room, but the man misunderstood. On the marble topped table at which I had seated myself, he put a glass and a full bottle, uncorked. Before I could correct him, Mores limped in.

I rose to greet him. As he approached, a hand outstretched, I saw that he was sallow and that he seemed unstrung. I asked him to sit, which, with a droop, he did; then, after looking furtively about, he looked also and with marked wistfulness at the bottle.

"Try it," I suggested.

Again he looked about, thanked me, helped himself, sighed a sigh of the deepest satisfaction and helped himself anew.

The effect was surprising. He threw off his invalid air. In the chair in which he had drooped, he sat up. His former bulldog look returned.

Appreciatively I nodded. "You don't seem to have changed much since that trial. By the way, what became of your client?"

At the question he nodded back at me and helped himself again.

"Mrs. Caxton," I resumed, "interested me greatly."

"Yes, yes," he replied. "She was an extraordinary woman, most extraordinary and most unfortunate."

"Not at your hands," I said and would have said more, but he cut me short.

"Particularly at my hands. I got her off, yes, and saw her live to regret it."

"What!"

"It is as I tell you. After the verdict—were you there at the time? Well, when it was rendered, she fainted. Afterward fever developed. Between death and life she hovered for weeks. Finally, because perhaps she had not suffered enough, the fever waned, left her, strength returned and she sailed for Europe."

"Did she?" I said. The denouement seemed a bit ordinary. I do not know why, but I expected something different.

"Yes, and I followed her. In London she put her hand in mine. She became Mrs. Mores."

At this, as though in surprise at her and at himself, he started.

I started also. "I never heard of that."

He drank again and nodded. "We were married in the quietest manner and succeeded in escaping publicity of which, as you may appreciate, she had a horror. It is for that reason you never heard of it. Few did hear of it and having changed her name, afterward, when she died, only those few realized who it was that had gone. Only those and myself."

At the climax, he looked down and away. The decent dejection moved me and I muttered something to the effect that if there were words of sympathy I would express them. "But there are none," I added.

"None!" he absently repeated.

It was a bit painful and I tacked. "What became of the book, the famous book which Caxton was writing?"

He looked up. "At her wish, I destroyed it."

"You did!" I exclaimed, all the journalist in me on edge. "Well, if it really was a reproduction of Delormel's I can only say it is a great pity."

He tossed off another glass. "No, Caxton had never seen Delormel's book."

"Then it was a translation of the esoteric manuscripts on which Delormel's book was founded?"

"No, Caxton had never seen them either."

"But," I protested, "if Caxton's text was not derived from Delormel's it must at least have come from the same source."

"So it did."

"Well, then!"

"But that source is the fourth dimension."

"Nonsense," I was sufficiently unnerved to exclaim. "The fourth dimension is merely a mathematical hypothesis."

He blinked at me. "To the mathematician, certainly. But not to the occult. To the latter it is an actual plane in which any one may function, only to do so presupposes a development of the inner senses which enables the percipient to respond to other vibrations and, in so doing, to perceive matters to which the rest of us are blind. That is what Swedenborg did, what Delormel did; Caxton as well. Caxton saw the past and the future. But it was too much for him."

It was too much for me. Steadily Mores had been drinking, quite as though the bottle were his own, and, though I did not in the least object to that, I wondered could the liquor have gone to his head.

"So," he resumed, "narcosis resulted and death ensued."

"You did not advance that at the trial," I got in at him.

[illegible]EDLY, with a gesture, he parried the thrust. "It would have been very foolish of me if I had. What jury would accept such a story? [illegible] otherwise I did not know of it. At the time I did not know what had caused Caxton's death. Afterward I learned that Sherwood was right. I learned that it was venom that killed him. In any event I know now that it was that which killed her, or rather I know that I was the viper. Yes, for my eternal perdition, that is the truth. A woman gentler than Judith never lived. At first to be but near her was rapture to me. But, as you may imagine, the trial had put its mark on her. Vibrant and supersensitive as she was, what else could one expect? The strain of the proceedings, the horror of them all, were such that when she put her hand in mine, it was as though she were a child, beaten and bruised, who turned to any one, even a stranger, for protection. But I! I misunderstood. I thought it was not only her hand but her heart she gave me. Yet what heart could she have had save one too battered and broken to respond to any throbs of mine? I did not appreciate that. What I began to appreciate was Sherwood's arraignment in which he pictured her as insatiable of pleasure and in pursuit of it, hesitating at nothing, even at crime. It seemed to me that if she did not care for me, she might treat me as perhaps she had treated Caxton. In my cups I said as much, and it was that that killed her. There are men who in their cups become [illegible], rascals do you hear me? In my cups, my conduct was such — such — my conduct — my cups —"

He turned away. Mores, his mouth open, was staring, not at me, but at me beyond, and in pitying him because of his unavailing remorse I pitied too the fair and fragile creature who had been harried, doubly harried, to her death.

"The motor has come," some one suddenly and sharply called. "Why aren't you ready?"

I turned. In the doorway behind stood the woman whom I had seen the first day. She was tall, stout, [illegible] before.

As she spoke, she strode toward us. I stood up, Mores did also.

"I will get my hat," he abashedly told her.

But the woman must have noticed the bottle, for at once she angrily addressed me. "You have been entertaining my husband and I had ordered, I had given strict instructions —"

"Your husband!" I exclaimed. I looked about. Mores had sidled away. "I thought — he told me —"

She cut me short. "He has been romancing as usual I suppose. That is your fault. Since the panic he has not been what he was and, if he drinks, he don't know what he says and does n't care. For that reason I had arranged that he was not to have anything."

"I am sorry," I said. "I did not know. I have not seen him for a long time, not since a trial in which —"

I got no further. She had raised her veil and at sight of her face I gasped. It was the face of a woman vulgar and obese, a face that time had coarsened and temper had marred, yet one which none the less instantly I recognized and it was then that I gasped.

There, metamorphosed, I judged, by Mores; deteriorated, I could but assume, by his atmosphere; transformed by association with him from phantom into ogress; there, with his own bulldog look in her eye, before me Judith Caxton stood.

A moment only. Abruptly the veil fell. With a toss of the head, she turned, while I, astoundedly, beneath my breath, exclaimed:

"O tempora! O Mores!"

I found but that. Yet later on, during the evening, when I had had a glass or three of Sham Shoo, slowly but surely I began to appreciate what visions may come, not merely from Benares and the fourth dimension, but also and particularly from the wines of Cathay.

LOOKING FORWARD — TO THE — NEXT NUMBER

A NEW kind of animal story is just about the rarest and most coveted thing that a magazine can obtain, and who but Charles G. D. Roberts could have made an enraged bull elk and an equally irate panther so tremendously funny as are the two dueling forest lords in Hoof and Claw — a thrilling serio-humorous feature of the next SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE? The author of The Watchers of the Trails and other animal story classics has fairly eclipsed himself with this stirring tale of the Great North Woods.

NOT so funny, but just as interesting and full of life, is a big-business article, Landing the Big Job, in which Cromwell Childe tells how $30,000 to $50,000 jobs go begging sometimes and how some of them are landed.

NO matter whether you read the first adventure of Clare Kendall, Woman Detective, entitled A Skirmish With the Occult, published in the SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE two weeks ago, you will simply revel in her second adventure, The Pearl Doctor, which Arthur B. Reeve contributes to the next number. That is, if you are fond of reading a real, live, rousing detective yarn, and who is not?

ALL the world loves a lover in a good love story — and Tudor Jenks has written for the next SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE just the kind of miniature love story to be appreciated by any man or woman who has ever fallen in love. A SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE cover is something original and distinctive — designed to tell a story after your own heart. And His Side Line, the cover title of the next number, is no exception to the rule.

Printype Is Owned and Controlled Exclusively by The Oliver Typewriter Company

Employment Department

We maintain in this and all other important cities of the country, thoroughly organized Employment Bureaus. The services of these bureaus are free to employers and operators.

Stenographers and typists are invited to use our facilities freely. Employers may depend upon prompt, discriminating service. It is a pleasure to us to serve both classes of clients.

The Famous Printype

No typewriter innovation has ever created so great a sensation as Printype—the new face in Typewriterdom.

This great invention makes book type available for typewriters.

Takes the place of the old-style "outline" letters heretofore used on all typewriters. Gives to business correspondence the beauty and readability of books and magazines.

If "outline" letters were used for books and magazines, the reading world would revolt. Printype conforms to the well-known Law of Optics, which demands shaded letters and numerals.

The coming of Printype has caused tens of thousands of typewriter users to revolt against "outline" letters. The revolt has become a revolution.

The Oliver is the only typewriter that successfully prints real print.

The popularity of Printype has been growing tremendously. The beauty of this type can only be appreciated when you see a letter written in Printype. It is impossible in a printed reproduction of this type, to convey a true conception of what it really is. It lends distinction and an artistic quality to typewriting that cannot be well described. It eliminates eye-strain—delivers its message at a glance. It costs us thousands of dollars to produce Printype—it's yours without extra charge.

The Incomparable Oliver Service

The Oliver Typewriter Company's branch office in this city is thoroughly organized in every department. Its facilities insure to Oliver users prompt service in every emergency. Repairs, adjustment and supplies instantly available.

You Can Rent The Oliver Typewriter
